

FORMER CISCO ATTORNEY SHOT TO DEATH

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Roger Babson has been seeing prosperity around the corner—with reservations—every year since the depression started. It has been a trying time for Mr. Babson and all other prophets. Before 1929 the elements that went into predictions were fairly simple and consistent in their influence, but lately two and two haven't been adding up to four, and it has been failing to achieve this normal result with persistent perversity. The reason is, of course, that two hasn't been two. The figure has been colored with governmental chemistry which produced a subtle change in its atomic construction. It is often difficult to detect such changes in appearance. But it is easy to recognize them in operation.

Mr. Babson and his contemporary predictors long ago recognized this change in their elements, and hedged against it with reservations. Their reservations in most cases have been admirably correct. Now, however, Mr. Babson announces that he is predicting better business for 1939 without any reservations. He explains that the republican gains in the congress during the last election and the unsuccessful purge efforts of the administration insure against any more damfool legislation and counteracts the governmental chemistry which has been messing up the economic ingredients of past predictions. So he says flatly that business volume for 1939 will be as good or perhaps better than in any year since 1929. He estimates about a 20 per cent increase over 1938 at the year-end. Various reasons are given, and from a statistician's point of view, unadulterated by the governmental paternalism mentioned above, these elements are sound.

We hope, naturally, that they are correctly estimated and that the effect predicted will be realized.

But of one thing we are certain. The new year brings opportunity to Cisco, and it will be a splendid opportunity for organized community assault upon our particular economic problem, the most important part of which is the extension of our retail trade influence.

Garner Talks Farm Program With Wallace

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 30 (AP).—Vice President Garner talked over the administration's farm program today with Sec'y Wallace. High C's Sailed High Seas of 1938 News

Six C's flew high into the news during 1938. Here they are: Chamberlain, by his flight to Munich. Corrigon, by his wrong-way flight to Ireland. Coster, by his frenzied financial flight—and crash. Cunningham, by flying faster around the running track than any other human. Ciano, Italian foreign minister, by flying around Europe on Il Duce's missions. Codreanu, Iron Guard chief, by his fatal flight from a Rumanian prison.

Freezing Weather Over Most of Northern States

(By Associated Press) Freezing weather prevailed today over most of the northern states, with the mercury near or below zero in many states. Weather observers promised a rise in temperatures for much of the cold belt tomorrow but said there was no prospect for very mild weather.

A severe cold wave chilled Illinois, Indiana and Michigan. At least 90 deaths from exposure and accidents attributed to the cold were reported.

Quin said that the grand jury action was a "well devised but poorly concealed political plot to elect Maury Maverick or his nominee as mayor."

Texas Ranch Country Balances Books In Black

By Associated Press The Texas ranch country balanced its books in black ink as prosperous 1938 ended.

Bank accounts bulged with cash from sales of last year's surpluses and this year's crop of livestock, wool and mohair. Christmas rains had revived dry ranges. Livestock prices were higher generally on firm markets.

While ranch receipts of the United States fell 6 per cent below 1937 figures during the first 10 months of the year, the U. S. department of agriculture estimated Texas receipts rose 12 per cent to total $159,277,000 in the like period of 1937 when markets nose-dived with the business recession.

The total cash receipts for Texas ranch products during 1938 are expected to run well above $191,000,000.

Fort Worth livestock commission men helped swell this total by paying during 1938 an estimated $59,204,556 for cattle, sheep and hogs.

Northern buyers paid West Texas wool growers an estimated $15,500,000 for 65,000,000 pounds of wool, and goatmen got about $6,000,000 for 15,000,000 pounds of mohair. Unsold in West Texas were about 3,400,000 pounds of wool and 3,000,000 pounds of mohair. Markets for these products were in the doldrums last New Year's and the carryovers were several million pounds greater.

"Livestock producers and feeders in the Southwest have had a good year," said W. L. Pier, vice president of the Fort Worth National bank. "Unusually large numbers of cattle and lambs have been sold and shipped to other states at prices which have held steady on cattle and have gradually increased on lambs since early fall," Pier said.

Misses Helen Raye and Frances Edwards, and Evatt Horne and Cecil Edwards spent Thursday in Moran.

Miss Margie Williams of Moran is a guest in the Earl Edwards home.

Christmas Gift Is Talk With Son in Alaska

A telephone conversation with her son, Carl Tom, in Alaska was one of the Christmas presents of Mrs. W. W. Moore of Cisco. The conversation was carried over the U. S. naval radio station between Alaska and Seattle, Wash., and at the latter point was transferred to regular telephone lines. Arrangements for the call had to be made some time in advance with the permission of the naval radio station.

George Grasty, who is with Carl Tom in Alaska, and who is a former science teacher in Cisco high school, also talked with Mrs. Moore, Joe Lea, a brother of Carl Tom, and other members of the Moore family. Grasty and Carl Tom went to Alaska nearly two years ago on a vacation. Carl Tom remained, obtaining employment with a gold mining company. Grasty came back to Cisco, taught a year and then returned to Alaska, where both are now working in the mill of a gold mining concern at Juneau.

Weather in Alaska now, the two former Ciscoans said in their long distance conversation Christmas day, has about the same temperature as Cisco is now experiencing, but it is very misty and cloudy. This is the rainy season there. The warm Japanese current, swinging down the western Pacific coast after striking the North American continent at Alaska, has a great influence upon climatic conditions along its route.

War Threats Shake Pound, Franc Values

NEW YORK, Dec. 30 (AP).—The flight of capital to the United States during 1938 is vividly sketched by the rising trend of the dollar in terms of principal foreign currencies.

The French franc, for example, crashed from a January peak of 3.40 1/4 cents to 2.57 cents at the time of the Munich settlement in September, a slump of 25 per cent. This stemmed partly from the "revaluation" carried out by Premier Daladier's decrees, and partly from the hurried departure of nervous capital.

The British pound suffered a smaller setback, in terms of the dollar, by slumping from a February top of $5.03 1/2 to $4.60 in September, down nine per cent.

Weakness in this instance resulted from the unbalanced trade position and an accompanying flight of skittish funds.

BIG US ROAD SUM TO TEXAS

Federal Aid Divided by Wallace

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 30 (AP).—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace apportioned $126,000,000 to the states and territories today as federal aid for highway improvement and the elimination of grade crossings during the fiscal year beginning next July 1.

Texas apportionment included: $6,227,084 for principal highways; $334,063 for secondary roads, and $1,088,862 for grade crossing projects.

Ickes Reports Billion and Half PWA Funds Placed

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 30 (AP).—Secretary Ickes reported to President Roosevelt today that the Public Works administration had put a $1,574,769,686 program "completely under contract" in the last six months, to the accomplishment of "constantly accelerated recovery in business and industry."

The report went to the president amid speculation that he might support a movement among congressmen to make the PWA a permanent agency.

The deadline for this year's program is tomorrow midnight.

Record Amount of Gold Flows Into US

NEW YORK, Dec. 30 (AP).—Gold imports this year are expected in financial circles to reach a new record high of around $1,850,000,000. This would compare with $1,600,000,000 in 1937 and $1,740,000,000 luring the previous peak period in 1934.

Back of the huge inflow of yellow metal, of course, lies this country's record-breaking export balance — which foreign countries must pay for — and the unsettled condition of markets abroad. Despite the recession, foreigners found investment here more attractive than at home.

Henderson Well Anticipates Sand at 1165

The Sam Henderson No. 1 Strickland, 1,200-foot test two miles south of Cisco, this morning was 10 feet off the expected pay horizon, bailing and expecting to top the formation sometime this afternoon.

The sand, expected around 1,165 feet, is that which was drilled in a deep test sunk in 1926 by the Root interests and reported to have shown for a production in excess of 25 barrels daily. No effort was made to produce the stratum in the Root well, however, that well having been aimed at deeper horizons.

If the Henderson well is successful a virgin shallow area would be opened up to play south of Cisco.

Meanwhile west of Cisco in the new Putnam area opened up with the successful completion of the F. E. Clark No. 1 of Warren and Kleiner were drilling ahead in their No. 2 Williams, offsetting their No. 1 Williams 300 feet north.

In the Andrews deep area 16 miles northwest of Cisco and in the corner of Stephens county, the Rich-McNabb No. 2 Andrews was underreaming to lower 7-inch footer pipe was stuck and pulled loose 36 feet off bottom at 3,629 feet. Operators expected to set the pipe on top of the Lake sand late today. The well offsets the Andrews No. 1, original producer which is good for better than 80 barrels daily from only one foot in sand. The Andrews No. 1 has maintained its original rate for months.

MIDLAND, Dec. 30 (AP). Donald D. Traynor, 27, Midland attorney and former University of Illinois track and tennis star, was shot to death late last night on the rear doorsteps of his father-in-law's residence.

Colonel John Perkins, widely known west Texas attorney and reserve army officer, was charged with the slaying and released under $5,000 bond.

The charge was filed in Justice of the Peace J. H. Knowles' court. Traynor, a graduate of the University of Texas law school, was slain as he attempted to gain entrance to the Perkins residence at a rear door, officers said.

His wife and the mother of their one-year-old daughter was residing in the Perkins home.

Traynor came here in 1936 and joined the Perkins law firm, but resigned on December 1.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

The Lord will bless His people with peace. In the time of trouble He shall hide me in His pavilion.—Ps. xxxix. 11; xxvii. 5.

O way, through which our souls draw near
To yon eternal Home of peace,
When perfect love shall cast out fear,
And earth's vain toil and wandering cease.
In strength or weakness may we see
Our Heavenward path, O Lord, through Thee.

If you are "in Christ," you are in a fortress, and God's own peace, the greatest of sentries keeps watch and ward at the gates of this all-glorious stronghold.

America Gets Ready to Tackle a Big Job

LOOKING at industrial and business recovery figures day after day, we are apt to get into the position of the chap who couldn't see the forest because there were too many trees in his way.

These figures trace the outlines of something big—but we're so close to them, we see so many of them and they are such dry and unexciting things anyhow that it's easy to miss the point.

But what is really going on is worth looking at, if we could only see it under all the statistics. America is coming out of its long coma. In one way and another—maybe by luck as much as anything—it is on the road back to good times again, and that is as significant a fact as any in the world today.

For it means, first of all, that the land which is best-equipped and best-disposed to exploit to the full all of the marvelous possibilities of this age of super-production is about to resume its destined job.

It is altogether too easy to forget what that may involve. The one great fact about this era in history is not the war-peril, the rise of dictatorships or the general breaking-up of old codes and old social organizations, but simply the fact that the human race at last has it in its power to produce so much of everything that everybody can have enough.

That has never been possible before. Until now, poverty was in truth inevitable, and hunger and want were the destined lot of many. There was never quite enough of everything to go around, and there was no conceivable way of making the deficiencies good.

That is no longer true. The machinery that will end scarcity forever is at last available. We haven't learned how to use it yet, to be sure; but what does industrial prosperity in America mean, if not that the world's most skilled and productive land is hard at it finding out how this new possibility of abundance can best be developed and exploited?

And if returning prosperity has that significance, it also means that the grave doubts and questionings about our freedom, our form of government and the organization of our social system—doubts that have been so disturbing in the last half dozen years—will presently cease to bother us.

PEOPLE do not surrender their liberties or overthrow their institution when times are good. They do it only under dire pressure of want. Remove the pressure, and the danger automatically vanishes. And an American that is truly prosperous again will be able to forget its worries about the isms of the right and the left alike.

These are the things involved in this story of returning prosperity. It is hard to see them in the dry figures about freight car loadings, retail sales, steel production and the like, but they are there just the same. The nation has a tremendous job to do, and it is getting back into shape to do it. In the long run, that may prove the most important fact in the history of this generation.

Arthur Gerhke, of Watertown, Wis., who for 27 years has gone to bed for the winter, is staying up this year, has bet $25 he'll be "up and around" New Year's Day. That's more than a lot of us would wager on ourselves.

For those of you who expect to be boxing a shark pretty soon we pass along the information that the fish is easily killed by a blow on the snout where the brains are close to the surface.

to obtain an able educator. The last president received $10,000.
Bucknell President
Before becoming director of the youth commission, a non-governmental agency to plan for the care and education of youth, Dr. Rainey was president for four years of Bucknell university, at Lewisburg, Pa., and also was president of Franklin college, in Indiana, for four years. At Bucknell his plan for a modern type liberal education program giving greater prominence to the arts attracted national attention among educators.

He was a professor of education at the University of Oregon, a professor at Austin college, Sherman, Texas, his alma mater, and a special lecturer on summer school faculties of the Universities of Texas, Chicago and Minnesota. His bachelor of arts degree was received from Austin college and the degree of master of arts and doctor of philosophy from the University of Chicago. Three colleges have awarded him honorary degrees.

Born in Clarksville, Texas, Dr. Rainey married Mildred Collins of Lovelady, Texas, in 1920, and they have two children, Helen, 14, and Lenore, 11. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Rainey of Eliasville, Texas. Mrs. Rainey is a graduate of the University of Texas.

At Austin college, Dr. Rainey was a sensational baseball pitcher, a brilliant football halfback and a fine tennis player. On graduation he played professional baseball with the Galveston club of the Texas league but gave up baseball later to take up education studies. While director of the youth commission Dr. Rainey supervised extensive surveys and inquiries concerning problems of youth, including more than 50,000 personal interviews with young persons.

Will He Be a Shovel-Leaner?

SERIAL STORY SKI'S THE LIMIT BY ADELAIDE HUMPHRIES

CAST OF CHARACTERS
SALLY BLAIR—heroine. She had everything that popularity could win, her except.
DAN REYNOLDS—hero. He might have had Sally but while he was king on skis.
COREY PORTER was king of the social whirl. So... But go on with the story.

Yesterday: Corey returns without Dan, explaining he went home since it was late. Little does Sally know that her chance to tell Dan the truth may be lost forever.

CHAPTER XVIII

Sally thought it was rather odd, the day after that near-accident, that Dan did not telephone. Of course he had sent his excuses for not rejoining the party through Corey. But Sally rather expected him to make them in person. She kept listening for the phone, hoping each call would be one from Dan. But the day wore on without this hope being realized. Perhaps he would wait and come out to the house in the evening. But the evening, which seemed longer than usual too, dragged by and Dan did not put in an appearance. Sally still felt depressed. The following day, somewhat reluctantly, she kept a luncheon appointment in the city with Babe, though only after leaving strict instruction at home to have every telephone call marked down that came in for her. Babe wanted to look at new fall fashions which were being temptingly displayed, even though the late August sun was still so persistent, in shops and windows. Sally's mind was anxious, only to return home for fear Dan might have telephoned during her absence. She thought once or twice of calling him, but she did not like to call his office. If there was no message from Dan when she got home she decided she would put pride aside and call him at his cousin's. "Were there any calls for me, Alison?" she asked, even before she had pulled off her white hat and shed her gloves and purse. The maid replied that there had been two calls for Miss Blair. "Yes?" Sally said, her heart lifting eagerly. "Was one from Mr. Reynolds?" Oh, dear! why hadn't she stayed home, instead of going shopping with Babe?

"Did he leave any message, Alison?"

"I'm sorry, Miss," Alison returned, for she knew by this time what young man her young mistress was most interested in. "Both calls were from Mr. Porter. He said to tell you he would be out this evening right after dinner. About eight-thirty, I believe he said, Miss Sally."

"Are you sure there wasn't any other call?" Sally persisted. That lift had let her heart down now completely.

"Yes, I'm sure, Miss Sally. I took all the calls, myself, just as you asked." Alison's look was faintly reproving. Her young mistress ought to know her orders would be carried out faithfully.

"That's all right, thank you, Alison," Sally made up for that moment's doubt by a sweet smile of apology. But she just could not believe that Dan would not have telephoned her. Probably because she did not want to believe it. She asked the maid to run her bath, slipped out of her street clothes into a cool negligee. She would get freshened up and choose one of her prettiest frocks for the evening. Not because Corey was driving out. But because, even though he had not telephoned, there was still the hope that Dan would come out, too.

But no, she would not—could not—wait or hope any longer. She would put in a call at Dan's cousin's house. She asked Alison to lay out her things for her, the cowbeby silk and lace underthings, the lovely coral organza frock with its rows and rows of tiny ruffles. Once Dan had told her he thought she looked more like a princess than ever in that lovely dress. She wished, though as she put in her call for Dan, that he would not think of her as a princess. Goodness knows she wasn't; she was only a mortal maid. When love stepped in one girl was much like every other.

It was a girl's voice that answered Sally's request to speak with Dan.

"I'm sorry. Dan isn't here," this unknown girl's voice said. It was a pleasant voice, young and gentle.

"Do you expect him this evening?" Sally inquired. Her heart hammered so loudly that she wondered if it, too could be heard over the wire.

"Why, no..." the voice seemed to hesitate a moment. Then continued, "Dan isn't staying here any longer. He left the city yesterday."

"Left the city!" Sally's voice was incredulous. Her heart no longer hammered; it stood still, seized once more with that chill premonition.

"Yes," the other girl's voice held a note that might have been sympathy.

"Do you know where he went?" Sally asked.

"No, I'm sorry. He didn't say where he was going, he didn't leave any forwarding address."

"Oh, I... I see." Sally's voice did not attempt to hide its hurt, its disappointment. "Thank you, very much." She did not know that she remembered to say that, out of innate politeness, before she slowly replaced the receiver. She scarcely knew what she said, or what she did, or what she was thinking.

Dan gone—without any word—without telephoning to say he was leaving. Without coming out first to say goodby to Sally. But she couldn't—she simply wouldn't believe it! It was too impossible. Too fantastic. It was not like Dan at all. He could not have done this to her.

But then Dan would not know what it did to her. The weight it placed on her heart, the aching sense of utter loss, hopeless futility. For of course Dan did not know that Sally Blair was in love with him.

He knew, though, Sally thought, hours later, dressed in the lovely coral frock, looking her prettiest for Dan who would not see her, he knew that he was leaving. Surely a friend would not go away so suddenly, without any word or message. Not if friendship meant anything at all. And she was sure her friendship with Dan had meant a great deal.

There must be some explanation. Dan might have been called away suddenly, unexpectedly. He might have received word of an illness in his family back home. He might have been sent away by his firm on some business matter.

Of course there was a reason. A good reason. Sally told herself this emphatically, almost sternly. She would not listen to that small inward voice that insisted something had gone wrong, that persistent premonition.

She would receive some word from Dan yet. Maybe a letter in the morning. Maybe a telegram before the night was over.

But the girl who had answered the telephone at Dan's cousin's home had said that Dan had been gone since yesterday. Why! that meant that he must have left on the day following the smash-up in Corey's car, on the day after that evening when Dan had not

About Our Friends

By STEP A. LONG

Well, the merchants and clerks are beginning to speak to us now... the strain of counting what was left... which one merchant says was "too much"... is now easing up and sales people are beginning to look at customers when they come into the stores... we are sure it would be safe to come shopping now if there is something you very much desire... Why even Altman was all dressed up looking like a window model of a men's store this morning... a smile, and even offered to buy us a cup of coffee... They are really getting back with human feelings again... that could make them machines for a few days.

And Mr. Sheinberg of the Boston store chatted us a long while... has plans for the new year which if carried out will be good for him and for the town as well... Henry Drumwright is looking into 1939 with a determination to make it mean more to Garner's than did 1938... That's fine... A. D. Anderson has one of the very popular colds... but he seems to have a bulldog look on his face as if he was going to put up a mighty good fight next year... and Steve Nance... still going dressed up... can't get off his Christmas clothes, perhaps, but from the snappy way he answered the telephone, we really believe he and Pete have plans that are going to be pushed pretty hard... L. C. and Dewey Moore and Mrs. Evans are smiling like Santa Claus might have treated them pretty well during 1938... And Wightman Moore had a very pleasant smile which perhaps means satisfaction...

A. L. Clark, the barber man, seems to be rather well satisfied since returning from Austin... Saw Mr. Williams, of Williams Grocery on Eighth, down town... he looked as if he was enjoying the world and was ready for whatever might come... Talked with Asa Skiles, who has just returned from a visit to Homer, La., to visit with his son Elwin... seemed ready to go to work on the new year's business...

rejoined them. Had he known then he might have to leave the city? Had that been why he had thought he had better not return? Had Dan felt it would be best to go away without saying goodby?

But all of these questions were too much of a riddle for Sally's pretty head. Especially with such a heavy weight pressing against her heart.

A car turned in the driveway—her heart leaped to her throat. Then she remembered, that would be Corey, not Dan, who had telephoned he was driving out this evening.

She was glad Corey was coming. Perhaps he would know where Dan had been, and why. Perhaps he could help her solve this bewildering riddle.

Sally jumped up eagerly, hurrying to greet him. Corey had seen Dan last; he had been with him during that last evening. He was sure to know something. (Continued)

FRUIT SALAD BRIGHTENER

Here is a new dressing for fruit or vegetable salad: Mix one tablespoon of French dressing until smooth with three tablespoons peanut butter, add two tablespoons of some tart jelly, and then one-third of a cup of French dressing. Beat with a fork. A good dressing for fruit or lettuce salad is made by adding one-third cup diced raw apple to half a cup of French dressing.

Peter Called to Serve

Text: John 1:40-42; Luke 5:1-11

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D., Editor of Advance

THE lessons for the first quarter of 1939 deal with the life and work of Peter, and in the second quarter with the life and letters of Paul. In the third quarter we turn to the Old Testament for a series of lessons from Israel's leaders, beginning with Solomon and ending with Isaiah. Then, in the last quarter, we come back to the New Testament for the first half of a six-months' course that will carry over into 1940 on the kingdom of heaven, with studies in the gospel of Matthew.

Peter represents the most picturesque and dramatic figure among the apostles. John may have been a greater character, large and steady, in the domination of his life by a great ambition to be first, inspired by his mother, and in the richness and magnitude of the love to which this ambition gave place. James, his brother, may have shared this forcefulness of a man able for any contingency in seeking his ambitious goal. But Peter—in some inspiring moment emphasizing a magnificent courage, at other times a braggart and a weakling, impassioned and ready for any service, protesting his devotion and his willingness to follow his Master everywhere only shortly to be in the depths of the most ignominious denial—is a figure much nearer to our ordinary human nature and more essentially in line with the contrasts in the drama of life.

It was the glory and salvation of Peter that Jesus understood him. Jesus knew how sincere was the devotion that he professed, but He knew also how weak was the man at certain points and in certain moments. It was in the light of this deep understanding that He said to Peter, "Simon, Simon, Satan hath desired to have thee that he may sift thee as wheat, but I have prayed for thee that thy faith fail not." And He added, "When thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren," for He realized what a man like this impulsive Peter, brought under the full power of the Gospel, could achieve.

The circumstances of the calling of Peter to discipleship are interesting and instructive. It was Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, who heard the testimony of John the Baptist to Jesus, and it was Andrew who went and brought Peter to Jesus. We know comparatively little of Andrew, but the fact that he brought his greater brother to Jesus emphasizes the largeness of service that every man may render.

A man little known may accomplish mighty things if he brings some greater man to the right or stimulates him into action. This incident has become the foundation of a very practical movement in the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip, which has as its aim and purpose the bringing of men to Jesus in much the same way that Andrew brought Peter to Jesus long ago.

We can understand the outburst of Peter when he saw what Jesus had accomplished in the draught of fishes—"Depart from me; for I am a sinful man, O Lord." Peter was to learn that the Lord never departs from a sinful man. All men are pursued with the grace of God. Jesus came not to repel the sinner, but to bring him to repentance.

Would Circle Earth 9 Times

NEW YORK, Dec. 30 (AP).—Imagine a freight train more than 230,000 miles long, nine times the circumference of the earth, and covering nearly every mile of track that has been laid in the United States!

This gargantuan train-load would be the result of coupling all the 30,200,00 car loads of freight during 1938, and would require thousands of locomotives (adding countless miles to the imaginary train) to pull it.

Tahiti Welcomes Only Oceanic Natives

PAPEETE, Tahiti, Dec. 30 (AP). A large party of refugee Jews from Germany stopped here on the S. S. Eridan, en route to new homes in Australia and New Guinea. Permission to investigate the possibility of settling in Tahiti was denied them.

This, officials explained, was no discrimination against the German Jews, but part of a studied policy of preserving French Oceania for the natives. Purchase of land by foreigners is forbidden, and certain islands may not even be visited by white persons without government permission.

Start Off 1939 With a Mental House Cleaning

By JOAN DURHAM
AP Feature Service Writer
Start the new year right by getting done those little extra things you usually put off.

Begin by writing all your thank-you notes for holiday gifts and invitations. The sooner you get them written, you know, the shorter you can make them.

Check over your Christmas and new year's cards. There are bound to be some addresses you didn't have on your list. Get out your address book. Make the necessary changes and additions. Sit down and write short notes to the people you'd forgotten or neglected. You'll be surprised how good you'll feel once it's done.

How About Manners? Check up on behavior problems you haven't been sure about. Do a little rehearsing by yourself—while they're on your mind.

How are your table manners, for instance? Do you falter over which napkin to take, what salad plate to turn to, whether to use a fork or a spoon for certain dishes?

Your napkin—unless it's folded neatly on an empty service plate in front of you—will be the one to the left of your plate. The salad just above it is yours. Dishes with a large liquid content should be eaten with spoons, others with forks. Some hostesses, however, serve both a fork and a spoon for such things as ice cream, sauce and cake combinations. In such cases you may use the fork—for the cake and solid portions of the ice cream—and the spoon for the liquid. (It is permissible to use the spoon to redistribute the liquid over the cake.)

About Introductions Then there is the matter of introductions. Did you fumble over the introductions you made during the holiday season? Just remember that you always present the less distinguished to the more distinguished, the younger to the older. You may say, for instance, "Mrs. Social-leader, may I present Mrs. Newlywed?" or "Mr. Town-leader, John New-resident." You announce the name of the person to whom you are making the introduction first, the name of the person being introduced last.

Human and Other Nature

By W. F. BRUCE

One of the traits that psychologists are fond of making fundamental to character is the acquisitive instinct, the tendency to get hold of things and hold on to them. The tenth commandment seems to recognize the abuse of the desire to have as one of the leading weaknesses of man's make-up and one of the leading evils of his practice. And yet it is only an excessive degree of a normal impulse that is at the base of human progress. Somewhere a line is drawn that defines the extent to which the desire is a virtue. The commandment draws the line. "I had not known coveting," said Paul in Romans, "except the law had said, 'Thou shalt not covet.'" So the limit is in an envious desire for what someone else has that we discontentedly wish for. Allowed to grow this motive may lead to most any sort of crime and has often completely congealed "the golden current of the soul."

But the best remedy is not an attempted repression of the urge to get which might destroy even its worthy effect. Jesus gives us the way out in Luke 12. For He not only warns against covetousness, and minimizes the value of those things that are its object. But He proceeds to picture graphically its consequences in life by his parable of the rich man. Not only that but He goes on in the following verses to relieve the anxious state of mind that puts so much value on these things. On and on He leads us into a realization of the untold blessings that lie within reach of every one, and that no one needs to enjoy meagerly. The wonders of God's works around us that speak of His care, and the riches that we may lay up where moth and rust cannot corrupt and thieves cannot break through and steal. If one kept himself abounding in appreciation of these great riches the insignificant looks of these minor things would drive out his covetousness.
