By GEORGE

The Boosters are preparing for a big time this evening as they entertain Cong. Thomas L. Blanton at their regular monthly dinner on the roof garden of the Laguna hotel. Blanton will make the principal address. The principal topic for the dinner, whether it is much discussed or not, is the state park site of more than 500 acres north of Cisco and between the city and the lake. This rugged canyon area, gift of the city and patriotic-minded citizens to the state park board, is said to be one of the most promising areas for park development in the state, its location so near two important highways increasing its recreational value to a great extent.

There should be no doubt but what recreational opportunities form one of the biggest resources that Cisco has, and there should be no hesitation in the fullest development of these opportunities. Besides its nearness to main-travelled highways, the site is happily situated with respect to other advantages. Lake Cisco, the swimming pools and pavilion, the city zoo, state fish hatchery and other institutions already developed in or near the park site blend perfectly into the setting. The Cisco Country club property provides another great opportunity for broadening the park program with attractions for visitors.

If once the state park board with the help of the government agencies can be prevailed upon to undertake development of the park in earnest, the program will move forward with quick and beneficial results. Tonight's dinner with its emphasis upon the desire of Cisco people for this development can be made an effective starting point for a positive community demand on this score.

Thanksgiving day recalls the beginning of the Citizen-Free Press as a semi-weekly taking the place of the Cisco Citizen, weekly which had been in publication for five years. The first issue of the semi-weekly and the first issue of the paper under new management, appeared on Tuesday, November 27, a year ago.

The time does not seem long, but since that event the Citizen-Free Press has grown into the Cisco Daily Press, with a rural edition. The 12 months have brought much accomplishment. We look back upon the record of those months with a great deal of pride. We believe that we have stood square with the principles that were enunciated when the new ownership took over the property, and we believe that we have accomplished much of value to the civic spirit and material growth of Cisco.

If, as a home enterprise devoted to the welfare of whatever benefits Cisco, we can continue to receive the splendid support that has been given us during the year, we shall continue to grow in influence and value to this community. We appreciate sincerely and deeply the support and the business we have received. We sought and received that support on our merits. It has been mutually helpful.

We solicit its continuance.

Twenty-five counties in Hopeh and Chahar provinces of North China today declared their independence, and asked Japan's assistance. League Sanctions Group Meeting on Oil Is Postponed

(By Associated Press)
The League of Nations today postponed indefinitely the meeting of the sanctions committee of 18, to consider the oil embargo. Great Britain and France, worried over Mussolini's stand, and doubting that the United States could halt oil shipments, decided to seek delay of the sanctions committee meeting.

NOT THE SAME ANTEATER
The anteater, belonging to the zoo last year, was a rather playful kitty, and offered no objections to visitors reaching through the bars and rubbing his fur. In fact, the kitty rather enjoyed the operation.

Being a lover of pets, Bill Joiner was one of those who frequently fondled this pet. Last Sunday, in taking a number of small children to the zoo, he again attempted to fondle the anteater. To his surprise the animal resented this display of affection by seizing his middle digit and taking a piece out of his finger. No one had told him that a new animal had replaced the old one. It was another anteater.

Turkey Tackles Waif Problem

Round-Ups in Cities Yield Thousands of Young Vagabonds

ISTANBUL, Nov. 25 (AP)—Thousands of vagabond children, daring and self-sufficient little nomads of the streets and alleys, are being rounded up in a determined campaign by authorities to eradicate this problem from Turkey's cities.

Special institutions are being opened for the education and care of these children, boys especially, who roam the streets, begging and thieving for their living, in the larger cities.

Thousands Arrested Yearly.
In Istanbul more than 5,000 of these children are arrested yearly, and as many more are being dealt with by the authorities of other important urban centers.

Born for the most part in homes where poverty, discord and drunkenness reign, the children seek the free life of the streets as a refuge from their families.

Their life in the past has been unusually vicious. They have been found by police in opium dens, gambling houses, and vice resorts.

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 25 (AP)—Government fiscal leaders, Sec'y Henry Morgenthau, Budget Director Bell and Mark Shields, clerk of the house appropriations committee, arrived here today to join Chairman Buchanan, Texas, of the house appropriations committee for a discussion of next year's budget with the president.

BERLIN, Nov. 25 (AP)—Keen-eyed and spry at 85, Field Marshal August von Mackensen, one of the few remaining German army chiefs of the World war, has, like Cincinnatus, returned to the plow. He has been presented by Adolf Hitler with an "Erbhof," a country estate, in recognition of past services.

The property, called "Bruesow," is a Prussian state domain near Prenzlau. It is more than 3,000 acres in area, and was conveyed to the new "hereditary farmer" tax and duty free.

No Stranger to Plow.
"In my youth I knew well how to handle a plow," the field marshal said in response, "and, having served the fatherland with the sword, I am ready to go back to the land."

Mackensen's vitality is proverbial. He misses few patriotic or regimental gatherings, dressed for preference in his picturesque uniform of the imperial death's head hussars. He is out on horseback several hours daily.

The old marshal has celebrated two silver weddings. His first wife died in 1903 and he married five years later, Countess Leonie von der Osten-Jannowitz.

He has three sons and one daughter. His eldest, Hans George von Mackensen, is German minister at Budapest, Hungary.

FIND BODY IN AREA BURNED BY KEROSENE

Lamp Explosion When Retiring Believed Cause

Lying in a flame-seared area of linoleum covered floor, her clothing burned off and a broken oil lamp beside her, the body of Mrs. M. A. Buchanan, aged Cisco resident, was found this morning in the bedroom of the home she occupied alone on East Tenth street. The chimney of the lamp was some distance away, and oil that had gushed from a hole in the lamp had all been burned. A rug on which the badly burned body lay had been partially consumed by the flames. The linoleum prevented the flames from destroying the house, it was believed.

The tragedy occurred early last night, it was established, probably as Mrs. Buchanan was preparing to retire. The body was found by Mrs. Jack Reeves and Mrs. Earl Ayres, neighbors who visited Mrs. Buchanan frequently.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Ayres and Mr. and Mrs. Reeves said they heard a disturbance about 8 o'clock Sunday evening but each family took it to be noises from the other and did not investigate. Mrs. Reeves went to visit Mrs. Buchanan this morning, however, and failing to arouse her, called to Mrs. Ayres and together they entered the house and discovered the tragedy.

Justice of Peace Joe Wilson this morning returned a verdict of accidental death from burning. He said that the lamp either had exploded or Mrs. Buchanan had fallen with it. Most opinion held to the theory of an explosion.

Mrs. Buchanan had lived in the house for the past five years. Funeral arrangements were awaited arrival of a son from Rising Star and other relatives.

Father of C. C. Clarkson Dies at 11 p. m. Sunday

Death of M. L. Clarkson, 80-year-old father of C. C. Clarkson who was stricken while on a visit to his son's family here, occurred at the Clarkson home at 11:08 last night. Mr. Clarkson, a native of Indiana who had lived for the past ten years with a daughter, Mrs. C. A. Dunn, in California, came to Cisco about four months ago and was stricken on the first of September. He received treatment at Dallas at one time.

The body will be shipped at 10:55 Wednesday morning to Dupont, Ind., his birthplace, for burial. It will lie in state from 2:30 this afternoon until that time at the Green Funeral home. Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Clarkson and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wright will accompany the body. Mrs. Wright is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Clarkson.

Mr. Clarkson was 80 years of age on October 21.

Survivors include three daughters, Mrs. Eunice Bateman of Spadara, Cal.; Mrs. Dunn of Patton, Cal., and Mrs. Phoebe Ricketts of Vernon, Ind., and five sons: Harvey and Andrew of Indianapolis, Ind.; C. E. Clarkson, formerly of Cisco, now of Murray, Utah; Lewis Clarkson, of Buenos Aires, Argentina, S. A., and C. C. Clarkson of Cisco. His wife died 22 years ago.

BRAZIL GOV'T IS DEFIED

BULLETIN
RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Nov. 25 (AP)—President Getulio Vargas asked congress today to declare a two months' "state of seige" throughout the nation as alleged communists battled for power in northeast Brazil.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Nov. 25 (AP)—An army group, which officials said was composed of communists, held Natal today, defying the national government.

Federal authorities said the sympathetic uprising in the states of Pernambuco and Alagoas was stifled yesterday.

It was believed the revolt was undertaken by non-commissioned officers in an effort to gain power, and appeared the opening drive in a socialistic movement.

The government dispatched land, sea and air forces to quell the uprising.

It was reported that the cabinet might declare a "state of seige," effecting virtual martial law.

Insulator Plant Is Ordered Closed

AKRON, Ohio, Nov. 25 (AP)—Sheriff James Flower, facing the threat of a general strike, and warned of possible violence after 6 o'clock tonight, when truce expires, ordered the Ohio insulator plant closed.

The strike broke out when the plant reopened to former employees who desired to return.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Peace, peace, to him that is far off, and to him that is near, saith the Lord; and I will heal him.—1st. 57: 19.

 "The waiting days of those that hope,
 Are days of quietness,
 The praying days of those that trust,
 Are days of perfect peace."

Life is often likened to an inn in which we lodge for a day and night on the road to eternity, and so it is. Our dwelling place is not here: the true home of the soul is told in the secret of the psalmist, "O Lord, thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations."—Oliver Huckel.

More Cotton Income

THE increase in the allotment of tax-exempt cotton to Eastland county growers under the Bankhead plan will add a nice sum to the income of the farmers. The allotment has been hiked to 60 per cent of the allotment basis.

ALTHOUGH the Bankhead plan of restricting cotton production coupled with the guarantee of 12 cents a pound for the staple has helped the market the restrictive features have had the effect of slowing up the process of getting money out of the crop. The amount of income obtained from the reduced allowable moreover, has not been gratifying in volume. It was felt, particularly in west Texas where drouthy conditions over the base years had reduced the allowable far below what it should have been to compare with other sections, that some liberalization of the restrictions should be allowed.

Appeal has been made by the west Texas chamber of commerce joined with other interested groups that this be done. The Cisco chamber of commerce last week passed a resolution urging an increase in the allotment for west Texas counties so unfairly affected by the regulations.

ACTION of the state allotment board in issuing additional tax-exemption certificates to this county may be a response to this appeal. The Eastland county agent and agricultural workers have insisted upon this additional allotment for a long while, their efforts in common with those of agricultural leaders elsewhere substantiating the appeals of the organized groups. While the increase will not mean a great deal of new income, it will mean a great deal to the farmers whom it affects.

His Influence Lives After

DEATH of Dr. Randolph Clark at Dallas removes a figure of great significance in the educational history of the state. His life spans a period of amazing accomplishment in this country, accomplishment in which he had a great part as the inspiration of great things. It began in what was but little more than a wilderness, without roads, without schools, with few churches and with practically nothing of civilized living except the plow and the means of combatting the constant border dangers. In his vision the need of educational opportunities was paramount in the building of a great state, and he was one of that courageous band of pioneers of enlightenment who planted school houses with the outposts and inspired among a free people the desire to learn and to know.

THE progress that education has made since those humble beginnings is a tribute to the genius of the citizenship, as well as a wonderful justification of the vision of Dr. Clark and his co-workers. The great Texas Christian university at Fort Worth is the direct outgrowth of Dr. Clark's adventure with his brother, Addison Clark, into the realm of educational service in a new and undeveloped country. The influence that this great school has upon the civilization in which it is being developed will be, in a large measure, the continuing influence of Randolph and Addison Clark.

THIS influence, without direct connection with the larger school, has been felt in Cisco. Randolph college, named for Dr. Clark, has drawn, will continue to draw, inspiration from the life and work of the late educator. But the Cisco school is but typical of the good that one great character can exert, a good that extends to many branches and extremities of life, inspiring and equipping men and women of the future and giving them the opportunities of self development that turn them into right and useful paths of living.

Man About Manhattan

By GEORGE TUCKER

By GEORGE TUCKER
NEW YORK—Where are they—those doll-like creatures with chrysanthemum faces and hair like cornflowers tumbled into a sun-bathed brook?
 Where are the Helen Lee Worthings, the Faith Bacons, the Jessie Reeds, the Beryl Halleys, the Gladys Glads, the Mae Daws, the Imogene Wilsons, all the others of those fragile butterflies who glorified by Ziegfeld, went on to pursue careers of stary dizziness or slip into melancholy obscurity?

Before her career fell into the ruins of the Frank Tinney scandal, Imogene Wilson was, and still is, known as the loveliest girl Broadway ever knew. A Kentucky lass, she left her Louisville home in 1923 for a career in the "Follies" and seemed assured of certain stardom until she became engulfed in the unsavory publicity of the Tinney case. Then she went to Europe, but turned up in Hollywood several years later as Mary Nolan and made a comeback. For a while it seemed that she might climb to the top, but, ironically, the fates still hounded her. The movie career that began so auspiciously came to a pause and nothing now has been heard of her or several years.

It was the notoriety accruing from a fan dance and a ride in a police wagon that won Faith Bacon a job in the "Follies." Her costume was said to have consisted of only a couple of ostrich feathers when Earl Carroll had her, but the gilded raiments of the Ziegfeld revues didn't win her lasting prominence, and finally she returned to dancing in a supper club.

Beryl Halley was another who leaped from obscurity via the fig leaf route. After she was featured as Eve in a revue, wearing nothing but a leaf, she went to the "Follies" billed as the girl with the most perfect figure in the world. I don't know where she is today, but for a while, after her brief hour before the footlights she earned her living in New York as a stenographer.

Helen Lee Worthing, a promising kid in the line, started the town by going to Florida and appearing on the bench in a red silk bathing suit so daring that over night she became a page-one celebrity. Then a wealthy negro doctor fell in love with her and devoted himself to engineering her career in pictures. Later she married him and her career came to an abrupt end.

But not all "Follies" girls ended in disaster. Marion Davies went on to films and today is an outstanding star.

Honey-haired Jean Williams abandoned Broadway to become Sonia Karlov, billed as a star of the Moscow Art Theater. She was born in Syracuse, New York, and lived there all her life until Ziegfeld beckoned her to Broadway. Gilda Grey, a Milwaukee girl, became a famous "shimmy" dancer. Ruth Etting, a farm maid at heart, is still a front ranking chanteuse. Lora Foster, an extraordinarily lovely brunette dancer, grew tired of the rah-rah and retired with her playwright husband (John MacGowan) to a Connecticut farm. Llyan Tashman, Claire Luce, Lupe Velez, Marilyn Miller, Billie Dove, Phoebe Lee—I thought I could get them all in a column, but that is my error. You'll find them, if you seek, in the glamor-studded pages of the Ziegfeldian album, where they belong and are best remembered.

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25. (AP)—Tucked away in one of the vast corridors of the department of commerce building is a mystery unit of the "new deal" about which the general public knows scarcely anything, but an agency of tremendous importance to new dealers themselves.

It is the Press Intelligence service—one of the largest government-sponsored newspaper clipping bureaus in the world.

Louis Howe, the president's secretary, is credited with originating the idea. First set up as a part of NRA, Press Intelligence service since the demise of the Blue Eagle has been supported by the National Emergency council.

More than 50 trained newspaper men and women daily pore over some 400 newspapers from all parts of the country in an effort to keep government officials informed as to the country's reaction to the policies pursued in Washington.

Reactions Digested.
 Every morning there is placed on the desks of 400 high government officials mimeographed bulletins enabling each to tell at a glance what the reaction of the country's press is toward the policies he announced two days before.

A telegraphic style is employed in the bulletins. Digesting a story, for example, of the government ending direct relief, the bulletin will say—Mayor B... condemns end of dole." A short summary is included along with the name of the publication and its date-line.

Press Intelligence is even more efficient. Suppose Secretary Wallace desires to know the reaction of a particular section of the country to one of AAA's production control programs. He calls Press Intelligence. Immediately all the routine clipping ceases and a well-organized corps of news hunters begins snipping through all the newspapers in the locality of concern to the secretary. Within a few hours there is placed in his hands the information he desires.

Racks of News.
 The working quarters of Press Intelligence are cluttered with old newspapers and clippings. Racks reaching to the ceiling contain nothing but the news of day before yesterday. Other racks contain nothing but cartons filled with the news of two days before yesterday.

One group of men does nothing but digest editorials. Another condenses news stories and turns them into headlines. Others do nothing but clip.

On the floor above, a battery of typewriters clicks out the pages which tomorrow are read by the president and his executive officers. Mimeograph machines whirl out hundreds of copies of the bulletins. Messengers scurry over town to deliver the views of the press to the officials who made the news.

Press Intelligence prefers to remain unseen and unknown. Although it has been in existence for more than two years, a mere handful of people in Washington are aware of its existence.

HIGH COURAGE

by Jeanne Bowman.

SYNOPSIS: Anne Farnsworth has been cheated of her position as Luke Farnsworth's heir by Tom Farley and his gang. In spite of that, she has gone to try to keep a group of angered fishermen from injuring the Farnsworth properties. Her uncle, Lee Farnsworth, has been shot in the quarrel, and she is accused of the murder. But she has been terribly ill, and is only now convalescing — surrounded by guards. Her old nurse, Tecla Sorki, is visiting her.

Chapter 37 THE TRIAL BEGINS

"John," Anne spoke his name timidly, "how is he?"

"Better now."

"You mean he's been ill?"

Tecla looked at Anne in surprise. "What do you should know?"

"What do you mean?"

"Why," Tecla threw her hands out as though the gesture would explain. "at your bedside he stayed until you were safe, then away he went, nobody knows where. I t'ing maybe he tell you."

"John, here at the hospital?"

"Yes, you call for him."

A faint flush tinted the pallor of Anne's cheeks. Had he come unwillingly? If not, why had he gone away?

"I must have been delirious!" she murmured and thought, that presence I felt must have been John. What could he have thought of her? "Tecla, you said he was better, what did you mean by that?"

"Worried he was. He t'ink your trouble and sickness all his fault. He say like I do, he would keep you from all hurt, then he do this to you."

"And he's gone away? Don't you know where? Doesn't his mother know?"

Tecla shrugged her shoulders. "She say something about he go for a boat."

Anne nodded. Yes, he had thought of buying a trawler with his Alaska money. The nurse interrupted here and Anne, questions begging to be answered at her lips, was forced to see the little woman led reluctantly to the door.

Anne lay staring at the wall. John had gone away. He hadn't waited to see how her trial had come out. He, he had been loyal, standing by her during her illness, but the moment she was past the danger line he had gone on with his life, forgetting her.

Suddenly a sharp pain caught at her heart.

John thought she was guilty. John, who knew everything from the way the Lee Farnsworths had treated her to the very details of the will, thought she had sought revenge in this way.

Did Tecla and Liisa think this too? Even Orvi and George couldn't be sure; they weren't outside with her, in the boat. They didn't know whether or not she had carried a gun.

Dusk swept into the room; through the open window came the far rumble of traffic in the street below, the dank, sweet odor of river willows, the salty tang of the sea. The window was an oblong of blue, in which hung a single star.

Gaze concentrated on that star, Anne reached the lowest point of her life. There was nothing left, nothing but the courage which sprang from belief in herself.

Days passed, each one fraught with fresh worries. There was the lawyer her Finnish friends had retained, but she knew she could not depend upon him, because he didn't believe her.

Judge Kellogg's partner wrote that her $100 allowance was being held up pending her trial. There seemed to be some law which excused the payment of such money to persons found guilty of a felony, and they were waiting for the verdict. If only Judge Kellogg were within traveling distance.

Discharged from the hospital, Anne left the friendly care of the nurse and the hospital for the jail. The first night she couldn't sleep because of the clang of the iron door, the turning of the key in the lock, the stifling realization of bars, iron bars, holding her away from the world she loved.

And then the morning of her trial, sunshot, high-piled clouds edging the horizon, seagulls wheeling low over blue waters, Anne took fresh heart from the view. She dressed with care in a plain blue suit. She had to do nothing with her hair but comb it shoulder length, Garbo style.

And then the court room. She heard subdued Finnish greetings, words of cheer, as she entered the crowded room. Her heart caught as she saw Charlotte and Sharlee Farnsworth seated by the district attorney, and Farley as special prosecutor. And then, just as she started to sit down, she met the gaze of Rob Crocker.

She felt her gaze lock with his. There was stony disregard for her in the dark eyes which once had laughed with her; tense line about the lips which had told her so often of his love for her.

She didn't know she was staring at him in frank amazement. Was this the man she had loved? This the man she had almost defied Luke and Lucinda to marry? Had she really ever seen him before?

Lenholm, her attorney plucked at her sleeve and she sat down. No, she declared, she hadn't seen him before. She had been a child, delighted with the attentions of a handsome man older than she, desired by other women. Character had meant nothing to her, because she had thought it possessed by everyone. This man she was seeing was a stranger with cruel lines about his mouth, hard lines about his eyes.

A rare smile crossed her face. To think she had hesitated over marrying John, for fear her love of him might change like her love for Rob had changed. She felt suddenly free, confident. John, surely he would be there some place. She believed in him, in his love for her.

Two days passed before the jury was chosen, and on the third the trial began.

The district attorney, close friend of the man who had been killed, presented his case. The defendant, known as Nikki Nielsen, had been reared to believe she was the daughter of Luke Farnsworth, and it was only after the accidental death of her foster parents that she had learned she was not their child.

The fortune she had believed hers, he continued, was to be turned over to an estate to be divided among the Farnsworth kin.

The girl had refused to live with the Lee Farnsworths. She had denounced them bitterly, then rushed away to hide.

Economy Halts Foreign Tutoring of Selassie's Son

PARIS, Nov. 25. (AP)—Prince Makonnen, 12-year-old heir to Ethiopia's throne, will be unable to continue his studies until the war is over because his father cannot afford it, says his ex-tutor, Captain Funks Cigli.

"The emperor said he had to reduce household expenses," said Captian Cigli, a retired French naval officer who spent 18 months at Addis Ababa teaching the prince history, foreign literature, French, fencing and boxing, "and even the meaning of various religions."

Emperor Advises 'Vacation.'
"The emperor advised my wife and me to take advantage of the one year vacation clause provided in our contract and leave Abyssinia before hostilities broke out," he said.

This was two weeks before Mussolini's legions crossed the Eritrean frontier. The Ciglis then returned to Paris.

Prince Makonnen lived with the Ciglis. The captain found his charge and apt and lively student.

Boy Prince Good Boxer.
"He excelled in mathematics and showed skill as a fencer and boxer," he said. "He would listen for hours to stories of Napoleon."

"Movies developed his spirit of adventure, a taste for danger and a desire to become a hero," said the French schoolmaster. "Ben Hur" was his favorite film.

Daily Schedule Rigid.
"Makonnen would rise punctually every morning at 7:30. At eight he would breakfast, save on fast days prescribed in the Coptic religion. At nine he would take a walk and return in time for his French lesson between 9:30 and 11:00. Between eleven and noon, he would box, fence or shoot."

"After luncheon he would amuse himself planting or tending flowers. Then from 2:30 to 3:30, he would take another French lesson, while from 3:30 to 4:30 he would study Amharic, official court language of Ethiopia."

"At 4:30 he had tea. At five, dressed in his princely garments, he would attend the royal court receptions. His bath was prepared at six. Dinner took place at seven."

"After dinner was playtime until nine which hour was devoted to physical culture. Ten o'clock was bedtime."

SPORT SLANTS

By PAP

Spanish way will hardly press the leading money winners in turf history nor will the B. B. Stable's stout-hearted old gelding win undying fame by scoring in famous stake races, but right now there isn't a more popular plater racing in this broad land.

So consistent is Spanish Way that thousands of race-goers dubbed him Old Honesty. Only two or three times in the past two seasons has he been out of the money. And this despite the fact that he goes to the post frequently. This season alone he has started more than 20 times. In 14 races Spanish Way was first under the wire.

One thing you can depend on is that the old patched-up gelding is always giving the very best that is in him.

"Old Honesty" Has Courage

When Spanish Way stepped up to try his racing luck in Yorktown Handicap at Empire City late in October, it looked as though he was about to move out of the plater class. The gelding cut out the pace until the field came into the stretch and looked like a winner until Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Good Harvest, under a powerful ride by Sammy Renick, challenged. Spanish Way held on doggedly, but Good Harvest had a bit too much in reserve and managed to win by a head. The time, 1:51 4-5 for the mile and a furlong, indicated that there is plenty of speed left in the old boy yet.

Horses like Discovery, King Saxon, Satin, Below Zero, and Omaha undoubtedly possess more class than Old Honesty but the trouper doesn't have to take a back seat for any thoroughbred where consistency and courage is concerned.

The most consistent winner of all American iron horses was Exterminator, another gelding. "Old Bones," as Exterminator was affectionately called, went to the post about 100 times and scored 50 victories. Kingston, too, was a most consistent winner whose record shows 89 victories in 138 races.

There were plenty of other war-horses which brought cheer to the form players of the past. Race-land scored 70 times in 130 starts while King Crab was first under the wire 85 times in 310 trips to the starting post.
