THEFT OF OIL IN EAST TEXAS.

East Texas is in the big picture again. Now Col. J. Lewis Thompson of Kilgore, speaking for a large number of producers, has requested the governor and the law-makers for a legislative hearing on charges of wholesale theft of oil in the East Texas field. This is the allegation of Col. Thompson: "This field is in the hands of racketeers who would put Al Capone of Chicago to shame."

"Yes, where there is oil there is hell. It is in the record that Gov. Ross S. Sterling saved the day by drastic measures in the not remote past. He made use of his rangers and national guardsmen in his famous cleanup and law enforcement act. He sent oil from a dime to a dollar a barrel. He placed increased compensation in the pockets of the landowners and lease owners. He caused to pour into the pockets of all concerned a million dollars a day or $365,000,000 a year. He swelled the revenues of the commonwealth.

TEXAS A PRODUCER OF COTTON.

There has been a forecast made by the federal-state crop reporting service. Texas cotton yield this year is placed at 141 pounds applied to 30,908,000 acres for harvest thus giving the state's production 4,092,000 bales. Commissioner of Agriculture McDonald predicts a consumption of 12,500,000 bales. He sees no reason why there should have been a slump in the price of cotton and charges it up to the manipulators. He didn't name the manipulators but he said with a lot of emphasis on his words that they were responsible for the slump. Really the goat crop is very large this year.

ARE WOMEN FUNDAMENTALLY HONEST?

Troy is a town in Illinois. Years and years ago a pioneer founded a bank. He passed on and two daughters inherited his fortune. Not long since there was a run on the bank. It was threatened with closed doors and financial loss to the depositors. Then what happened? Why the two daughters

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—No civil service employes have actually been discharged as a result of the government's economy effort. Savings are being made through a policy of not filling vacancies in the federal service, but the economy law prohibits dismissals and insists on extra furloughs in places where it is necessary to save on personnel to keep within appropriations. Thousands of employes are threatened with serious loss, however, as a result of the marked inequalities which Congress inflicted during its rather frantic, hysterical attempts to slash appropriations. The employes who, because he happens to work in one federal bureau instead of another, stands to lose a couple of months' pay instead of the loss of 24 days involved in the general legislative furlough is good and sore about it.

big departments—War, Navy, Treasury, Postoffice and Agriculture—which spend 94 cents of the government's expense dollar. These departments exerted such pressure, with cabinet officers leading the assault, that they staved off the 10 per cent cut and made the whole business rather ridiculous. THE "administrative furlough" is the only legal means the five reduced departments have to get by on the available money unless they can eliminate expenses otherwise. In some branches, including the Civil Service Commission, it is said that the two furloughs will make employes go 72 days without pay. Some are trying to get through the fiscal year without imposing the second furlough, but it is too early to tell whether they can. The Commerce, Justice and State Departments are making desperate efforts to economize—using old paper and clips, cutting travel allowances, eliminating publications, and everything else feasible. Labor and Interior probably will have the extra furlough, along with Civil Service. But they all hope that Congress will have a heart when it comes back after elections and votes a deficiency bill. It obviously was unfair to hit the little fellows with their 6 per cent of expenditures so hard and it is hoped that Congress will be in a reasonable frame of mind next December.

THE FEDERAL FARM BOARD was hit hardest of all, its appropriation being cut from $1,900,000 to $900,000. If it was to keep its employes on it would be all out of money by Jan. 1, so it devised an elaborate furlough system under which 140 employes were placed on an "indefinite furlough" which amounted to dismissal. But Comptroller General McCarl made a ruling which would have taken part of the furlough savings for the Treasury so the Farm Board changed the furloughs to dismissals, which was made possible by putting them in the "expert" group not subject to civil service. The board's research activity has been especially curtailed. There is difference of opinion whether much of that work wasn't duplicated by the Department of Agriculture.

of the founder of the bank went to the rescue. They turned in voluntarily $80,000 to protect the depositors. There was a liquidation. All the depositors received dollar for dollar. Then the bank closed its doors and was as dead as the founder of the institution. There are millions of honest men and honest women in this land of ours. There are two in the town of Troy, in the state of Illinois, who build a monument to a father and his daughters that will endure for years and years to come. They had no interest in the bank. They were not officers or stockholders but they saved the day when the crash came and they saw to it that the name of their honored sire was protected. Why not a large place in the picture for doers of good as well as doers of evil?

SPEAKING OF THE FLAME AND THE MOTHS.

It was the old, old story of the flame and the moth. Paul Bern, an outstanding and brilliant figure in the movieland world, shot himself to death. Jean Harlow the platinum beauty and a bride of two months is wearing the weeds of a widow. Paul Bern was 42. He had climbed the Alpine heights of moviedom. He was an intellectual. He was a shadowy figure. He never mingled with the gay revelers of Hollywood. He was one of the geniuses of the screen world. Jean was 22. She met the flame. She circled about the flame and he led her to the matrimonial altar. There was another woman in the case. Dorothy Millette, and not Jean Harlow, was the moth in the life of the flame in his earlier years. She was known in stageland as Mrs. Paul Bern. The flame and Dorothy never married. Why? Well, a sister of Bern said, "They were both individualists and never believed in marriage." There was a will left behind. Dorothy was the beneficiary. Jean is the owner of the family residence, a present from the flame. He is in his grave. He was known among the personages of Hollywood as "the little confessor."

He must have confessed to Jean. A tragedy followed. The flame shot himself to death. Jean appeared at the funeral "a tragic figure in black." Dorothy mysteriously disappeared from the picture. Those in the know imagined that the first moth was in a sanitarium in the city of New York—a mysterious figure and the victim of a deranged mind. It is evident they weren't in the know. Dorothy had been flitting in and out of Hollywood. She was sane and sure. She disappeared after the flame had passed on. Now it is said that she embraced the river route to that other world.

Moths always get their wings singed. As there is a law of compensation the flames for the most part die violent deaths. Hollywood furnishes its own material for sensational screen winners. Scenario writers should get busy. The story of "The Moth and the Flame" should be resurrected and rescreened. It had been told in a thousand different ways on the talking stage before the coming of the screen stage and its numerous flames and moths.

There is nothing new under the sun. From the beginning the lives of men and women have been replete with tragedies and comedies and joys and sorrows and tinsel and paint and pomp and poverty and—then the journey over the river. Conrad Nagel furnished an epitaph for the slab of The Flame. "Insincerity is the besetting sin of Hollywood but Paul Bern never bowed down to that false god." Well, let the dead sleep in peace.

It begins to look as if the city commission started something serious enough when it announced intention to submit three amendments to the city charter some weeks ago. It looks, in fact, as if the old charter is going to be amended out of countenance. There are the three amendments proposed by the commission to separate the chamber of commerce, the bank and the zoo and support them by separate appropriations out of the general fund of the city. Then there is the amendment proposed by petition to limit the compensation of a city commissioner to $150 annually. Last night the commission received another proposed modification of the charter—an amendment to incorporate the referendum and recall principle in the organic law of the city. It was announced at the same time that someone else had in preparation an amendment separating from the commission its power to appoint a chief of police and elect that official. It is, in fact, the open season on amendments and by the time we get through pot-shooting the old charter the poor thing will look but a tread of its former self. There won't be any laws that the commission can pass and we might as well dismiss the commission and let the city run itself automatically, so to speak.

Coach Wilken Elkins is between the devil and the deep blue sea. He has a game scheduled with Decatur Baptist college here Friday evening but there is a great, big question mark in his mind as to whether or not he can go ahead and play the game.

You understand the Lobes are not in the league but it isn't decided yet whether or not they will continue to be a pariah team. While outside the affections of the state school organization they can play whom they please when they please. But inside the governing arms of the scholastic body they must bow to certain rules and regulations among which is the injunction "that shall play no games before September 30."

Suppose the coach goes ahead and sends his hopefuls against the invading collegians next Friday. And suppose further that Roy Henderson, who reads so excellently between the lines, should relent and shelter the Lobes within the benignity of his forgiveness. What would be done about the game in which the Lobes violated the rule of the League?

Could it be successfully argued that since the Lobes were outside the League when it was played they were not subject to its authority and no prior act could be held against them. Here again, however, we run upon the acumen of the League secretary whose incisive vision enables him with impunity to go beyond the fundamental of law that only proximate causes can be considered in a case at issue.

By playing the game the Lobes may entangle themselves in such a maze of technicalities that they would be unable to extricate themselves.

If any football coach ever faced a problem Coach Elkins faces one. At the very outset he is in a fine-hole. His team, through no fault of his own, is out of the league. The squad that reported to him for his first coaching experience is the smallest that has started a Cisco season since 1922. There are no galleries at Chesley field these practice afternoons. One rarely hears football prospects mentioned on the streets. Truly "Bull" is up against a proposition. He has some splendid material, it is true. But behind that material interest is flabby and there is no enthusiasm. I am not saying that in a spirit of pessimism. I am simply pointing out to the folks that you have asked a young man, just beginning his coaching career, to take the hardest kind of a job and if you lay down on him now you will be to blame. He is tackling the problem with a will. He knows football, sound, solid fundamental football—not this frothy, effervescent, spectacular stuff that resembles a wild tumbling act, but the sort of football that wins consistently and gets stronger as it goes along. If he has even a minimum of cooperation Elkins I'll venture to say, will give Cisco a real football team—a team that will be smart, rugged, victorious, a team that will provide both thrills and the solid satisfaction of winning crucial contests.

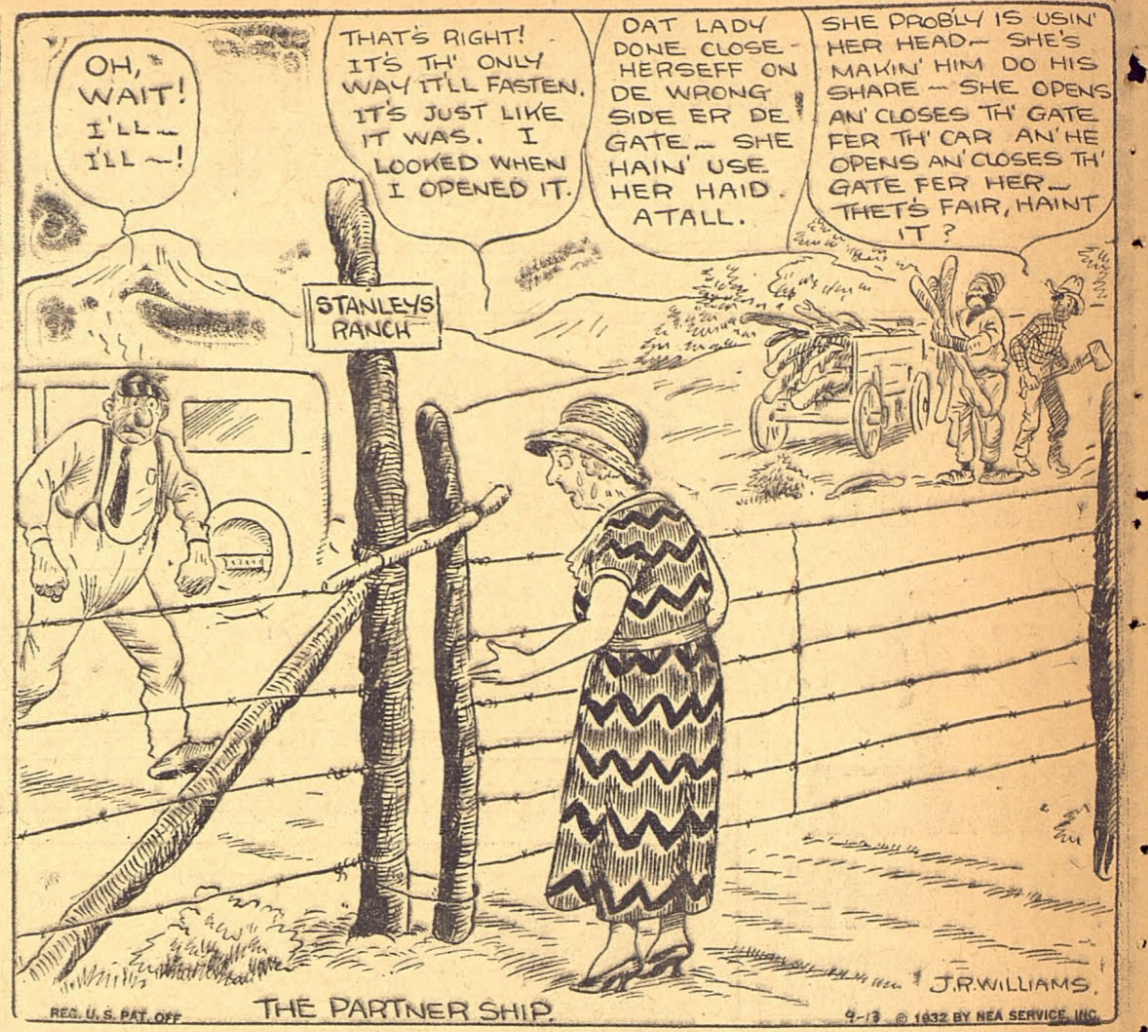

Cisco may be out of football this season. Chances are we will. But there is next year to consider. By talking advantage of "this year's opportunities we can make next year a season of red revenge."

P. L. Ullott, chairman of the rodeo and trades day committee, refuses to take all the responsibility for the success which with plans for the entertainment next Saturday are meeting. Remarkable he:

"I at one time, saw a scrawny little burro plodding up a long steep mountain trail. He was loaded with milking tools, groceries, bedding and ore samples. The load seemed much larger than his spindly legs would carry up so steep and hazardous a trail. I could not help but admire the sturdy little creature as he slowly but surely wended his way between huge boulders and along the narrow edges of precipitous canyons. "On second thought, however, it occurred to me that the most of the credit was due, not to the burden bearer, but to the one who had the foresight to secure the burro and the ability to so arrange the burden that it could be borne."

CAUGHT PASSING CHIPS

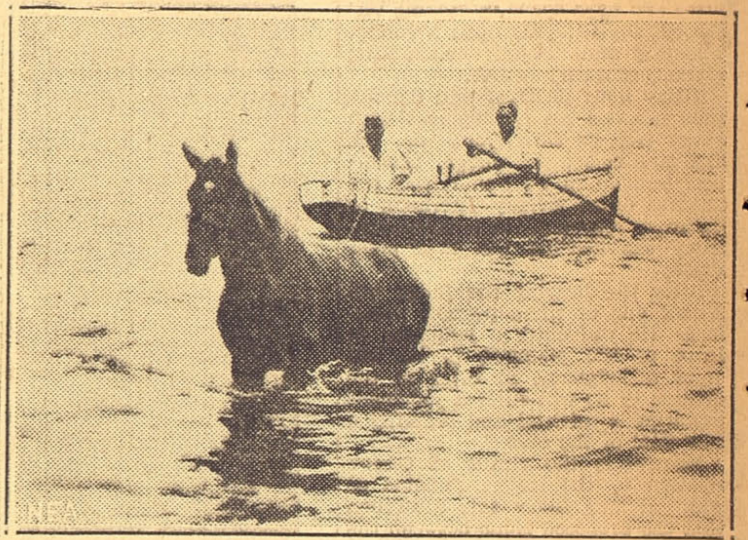

BOULOGNE-SUR-MER, France, Sept. 14.—A crozier at the Casino of Steila-Plage was caught passing chips to an employe of the establishment, who in turn gave them to a third accomplice before the trio were trapped. All three admitted to the theft, but declared it to be their first offense. They will be brought before the court at Montreuil-sur-Mer.

FIRST GIRL BORN

Meadow Grove, Neb., Sept. 14.—More than usual excitement was caused by the birth of a girl at the John Kampe home here. The child was the first girl born to a Kampe family in 175 years. Records in the family Bible show that all Kampe children had been sons since the time of George Washington.

CHAPTER XLVIII The tall man turned sharply 'Miss Morar—that is to say, Mrs. Townsend! And Barry! Why, this is a piece of luck! I wonder how it happened?'

'We were shopping,' Mona explained. Then, feeling rather foolish, she asked, 'You came on the Helena?'

'Yes. Let's go somewhere where we can talk,' said Mr. Garretson, swinging a cane at a mule team the driver of which was affably waiting for the three to move before attempting to proceed.

The luggage was on board the Helena and Barry said he would go for it. 'Just give me your checks,' he said. 'Well then, if you haven't checked, your cabin key will do.'

Instantly she knew what she had really recognized and had refused to recognize—that she would marry Barry on his own terms.

Blindly she followed him to the jetty, clambered aboard the motor launch and seated herself while Larry adjusted the wheel.

Mr. Garretson, across from Mona, smiled as the cooling breezes struck him. It was as though he, too, had a secret.

'Are you near here?' Mr. Garretson asked. 'Not far. It's three hours by boat, 15 minutes or less by plane.'

The boat sped onward silently. Before they reached the harbor at Holiday Mona's mind was made up. Dinner was served on the veranda. Steve, leaning on a cane out in excellent spirits, came to join them.

said, pointing to the chain of lights along the horizon. 'She's due at Barbadoes in the morning,' responded Barry. Presently he rose to go for tobacco.

'You'll lose the money,' he reminded her dully. 'We'll be as poor as church mice.'

'I had a letter today from Foster,' he went on. 'Things aren't going any too well. We need another Empress.'

'Oh, the Empress!' She would tell him that she owned the Empress and that she was about to sell it.

'I thought you might like to have tea,' Barry said, hesitating. 'It's going to be dark soon. We'll have to shove off before long.'

'Oh, tea can wait,' agreed Mr. Garretson and Mona in the same breath. It was as though neither of them cared to be left in the company of the other just then.

'She doesn't want to be alone with me,' the lawyer decided. 'Maybe she thinks I'll interfere if she knows Barry wants me to marry him.'

'I'll tell them tomorrow,' he announced to himself aloud. 'I'll tell them tomorrow!'

'I have come many thousands of miles, south from Kimberly, South Africa, to be specific—'

'I wonder what she'll say when I tell her that she can marry him after all. Marry him and keep her fortune! She'll be surprised to know the will reads: 'My loved wife, Mona Townsend, must not change her name by giving herself in marriage.'

'I asked you a question, Barry. Will you marry me?' 'You'll lose the money,' he reminded her dully.

'I'll tell them tomorrow,' he announced to himself aloud. 'I'll tell them tomorrow!'

office, according to the rules regulating the election of such officers shall be declared elected.
"At such election, if some other person than the incumbent receives a majority of all votes cast for such office, the incumbent shall thereupon be deemed removed from office upon the qualification of his successor. In case the party who receives a majority of all votes cast at said election shall fail to qualify within ten days after receiving notification of his election, the office shall then become vacant. If the incumbent receives a majority of all votes at such an election he shall continue in office and shall not be subject to any other recall for any grounds existing prior to said election.

"Section 10. District judge may order election. Should the commission fail or refuse to order an election as herein provided for the recall of such an officer when all the requirements for such election have been complied with by the petitioning citizens, in conformity with this charter, then it shall be the duty of any one of the district judges of Eastland county, Texas, upon proper application being made therefore, to order such election, and to enforce the carrying into effect of the provisions of this charter."

Twin Lakes Case.
The commission instructed City Attorney E. E. Grantham to confer with plaintiff in the suit of W. H. Craddock for title to the city land on which the Twin Lakes are located and to see whether or not an agreement can be reached whereby the city may continue indefinitely to use the settling basins on the land or until such a time as new basins are completed at Lake Cisco. In the event no such agreement is reached the commission directed that the case go to trial.

Water Commissioner Winston was instructed to make collection of all delinquent water bills or "bring back the meters" except in such cases considered as charity. In these cases he was instructed to bring a list of the delinquents before the commission for action.

A number of water consumers are far behind with their bills, and the body determined that action should be taken in connection with these cases. J. C. King, agent for the M. K. T. railroad appeared before the commission with a request that the Katy renditions for city taxes be reduced on a percentage comparable with reduction of the T. and P. renditions. The Texas and Pacific railroad cut its renditions from $39,000 to $30,000, he said, whereas the Katy's was cut only $5,000 from $50,000. These renditions were voluntary he admitted, but the Katy feels that it should be given the same consideration that the T. P. is given and asked that the same percentage of reduction accepted from the T. P. be accepted, also from the Katy.
The commission referred the matter to the equalization board which has not yet finally discharged.

Out of the Sky!

ON WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY NIGHTS...

Music in the air... bewitching music. "Blues" or ballads... sad songs, glad songs... old favorites or latest hits... Chesterfield's Girl of Song sings them all. Hear in Chesterfield's Radio Program, "Music that Satisfies," every Wednesday and Saturday night—Columbia coast-to-coast Network.
