

ROGERS WITH TOPPER PANICS FILM CAST

Maybe an old dog cannot be taught new tricks, but there is no law that prevents him from adopting them.

This was convincingly demonstrated by Will Rogers during the filming of "Young As You Feel," his latest starring picture for Fox Fox Films which opens Sunday at the Palace theatre, and in which the popular comedian portrays a modern, well-dressed man. For the first time in his long stage or screen career, Rogers was called upon to wear his hair nicely combed.

After the first sequences of the film were made with Rogers in the role of an old-fashioned, crochety, set-in-his ways widower, Frank Borzage, the director, notified his star that filming of the dressed-up scenes would begin the next day.

The following morning, Rogers appeared on the set in a neatly tailored dress suit, with pearl-headed cane, silk hat, and all the usual accessories.

"You'll have to dress your hair, Will," Borzage told the famous comedian.

"What, me slick my hair all up? Not on your life," Rogers replied. "I've got by all my life with my bangs hanging natural, and I don't see why this is any occasion to change my ways." Then after a moment of thought, he added with a shrug, "But if you insist I'll try it. Bring on the pomade!"

Here is where Terrance Ray, who with Donald Dillaway has an important juvenile role in the film, playing one of Rogers' wilful sons, earned Will's everlasting gratitude.

"You might try the stuff I use, Mr. Rogers," Ray said. "It'll make your hair shine so the flappers won't recognize you."

"Yeah," Rogers drawled. "I don't mind what reaction it has on the flappers, but I do hate to cut in on the Prince of Wales and Eddie Lowe. They'll be thinkin' I'm stealing their stuff. Imagine me putting grease on my hair!"

"Why, Mess-tair Rogers! Fifi Dorsey exclaimed after she saw the effect "you look like Maurice Chevalier."

Fifi and Will are again united in a hilarious sequence of events in "Young As You Feel" that makes their famous escapades of "They Had To See Paris" appear tame. Their so-called wild parties are staged entirely as an object lesson to Will's sons, and in the end prove to be just the "Cure" necessary to make them marry happily and settle down to business.

Prominent in Rogers' supporting cast is Lucien Littlefield eminent character actor, who portrays the role of Rogers' old-fashioned and crabbed office manager and who like his employer becomes rejuvenated just previous to the final fadeout. The other players include Rosalie Roy, Lucile Browne, C. Henry Gordon, John T. Murray, Brandon Hurst and Gregory Gaye.

"Young As You Feel" is the screen version of the well known stage success of George Ade, "Father and the Boys," as adapted by Edwin Burke. It marks the fifth appearance of Will Rogers in talking pictures and advances reports from critics and fans alike who have seen it credit it as being more hilarious than any of the previous Rogers hits. His last Fox picture was "A Connecticut Yankee," previous to which he was starred in "Lightin'," "So This Is London" and "They Had To See Paris."

COUGARS FACE HARD PROBLEM TO FILL GAPS

PULLMAN, Wash., Sept. 4.—The task of developing a football team strong enough to defend the Pacific Coast conference championship, won last fall, is a problem that will tax the ingenuity of Coach O. E. (Babe) Homingbery and his assistant A. B. (Buck) Bailey, of Washington State College.

Seldom does a school in this region lose as many outstanding stars in one sweep as the Cougars lost through graduation. Carl Elmgren, the punting halfback whose well-placed kicks had so much to do with victories; Capt. Eimer Schwarz, plunging fullback and a power on offense; Mel Hein, center mentioned for all-American honors; Lyle Maskell, end whose educated toe booted place kicks that defeated the University of Southern California and the University of Washington; Porter Linnhart, halfback; Bill Tonkin, quarterback; John Hurley, end, and Harold Ahlskog, tackle, were the outstanding stars who will not play this year.

As a result of the Cougars losing so much power, their 1931 eleven will be lighter and faster, and will have to rely upon a more open style of play.

The weakest spots, according to present indications, will be at center and in the backfield. The crucial jobs should be well taken care of by George Hurley, Frank Mitchell, Jack Parodi, Fred Garrett and Clement Senn, lettermen of last year. Hurley and Parodi probably will be the regulars.

Glen "Turk" Edwards, 240-pound tackle, will be back. Walter Camp, Virgil Jackson and Frank Wallins are other lettermen tackle candidates. Several likely end candidates have appeared. Homer Hein, brother of Mel, weighs over 200, is more than six feet tall, and will undoubtedly land one of the wing berths. Stanley Shaw, a letterman, and Ronald Kelly, Eugene Stagnaro, Frank Willard, John Byers and Charles Klawitter are candidates.

Frank Ingram, 192-pound sophomore, hopes to replace Mel Hein at center. To replace the star backfield players are lettermen George Sanders, Mike Davis, Emmet Schroder and Howard Moses, halfbacks, and Mentor Dahlen and Wilbur Luft, haven't much competition for the quarterback job.

Stanley Colburn, 190 pounds, looks like the best bet at fullback. John Eubank, 185, and Henry Bendel, 179, are other possibilities.

The Cougars will have only one

Five Sought in Egging of Preacher

EXARKANA, Sept. 4.—Authorities today sought five persons who last night applauded with rosten eggs the remarks of Rev. Leo Jackway, "divine healer."

The eggs were hurled at close range as Rev. Mr. Jackway was leaving the meeting place where a crowd of 500 heard him preach. He fled to his automobile, but the egg tippers apparently four men and a woman, stepped into another and the barrage continued until the eggs apparently were exhausted.

SOUR MILK MAY AID EXPERTS IN CANCER WAR

PARIS, Sept. 4.— Sour milk contains the natural acid which world radiologists hope may curb and eventually cause cancer to disappear.

Since the conclusion of the International Radiology Congress, European scientists have been experimenting with lactic acid in cancer treatment, as advocated by the discoverer, Dr. Boris Sokoloff of the Medical School of St. Louis, Mo.

For two years, Dr. Sokoloff has experimented with lactic acid on mice and made his first public announcement at the Paris congress. European scientists were prompt to take up the work and will make the first announcement of their experiments in December.

The lactic acid is known technically as "ethyl-l-lactate." Thus far, the treatment has been by injection, and Dr. Sokoloff doubts whether it would be effective if absorbed as food, or in any other way. However, scientists agree that persons accustomed to taking sour milk and sour milk cheeses might be aided in cancer prevention.

30 Per Cent Absorption
In an interview before starting for a holiday on the French Riviera, preparatory to returning to St. Louis in October, Dr. Sokoloff declared that this new departure in treatment of cancer growths has resulted in 30 per cent absorption of the most malignant form of cancer-tumor, "Sarcoma 180," common in mice, and that the remaining 70 per cent of cases saw the growth stopped and the disease remain stationary.

Dr. Sokoloff explained that cancer is a strong multiplication of cells.

"It long has been known in medicine that the body eliminates lactic acid through all its parts, but the biological significance of this fact was not known," Dr. Sokoloff said. "These recent experiments showed that lactic acid is a preventative element in the body, in that it discourages the multiplication of cells. "A very small quantity of it placed on yeast prevents this unusually rapidly growing organism from developing at all. The same is true in the case of protozoa or unicellular organisms."

Mice Aided
"Applying this inhibitive influence of lactic acid on cellular growth proved to be extremely satisfactory, and when the most resistant form of cancer tumor in mice was given an additional treatment of radium the cures reached 70 per cent."

"Further experiments showed that mice, treated to subcutaneous injections of lactic acid during a period of 20 days, were rendered immune to cancer. The great advantage of this treatment is that lactic acid can be introduced into the body in great quantities without any detrimental effects, thus facilitating the treatment. Another interesting discovery was that subjects afflicted with cancer have less lactic acid in their blood than the healthy being."

Dr. Sokoloff pointed out that the results of this discovery in the treatment of cancer tumors in the human being can not yet be stated definitely, as this part of the work is still in the experimental stage.

Lindberghs Plan To Fly to China

TOKIO, Sept. 4.— Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh plan to fly to China when they resume their "vacation tour" about September 10.

Aviation authorities announced the Lindberghs had received permission from Tokio to fly from Tokio to Kagoshima. From there they will fly to China across the eastern sea.

It was understood that Col. Lindbergh definitely had decided to visit Nanking, the Chinese capital, although the exact route to be followed after reaching China was not revealed.

BOMBS ARE TORN OPEN TO SEE "TICK"

Little negroes who used to sit on steamboats on the Mississippi river compared with the members of metropolitan police forces who are specialists on the disintegration of bombs.

These experts are indispensable to the police in running down makers of bombs and infernal machines. The bravest officer may prove himself absolutely fearless snuffing out a fuse leading to a bomb and examining its makeup for possible clues, he may wish himself elsewhere.

The responsibility of dealing with bombs in an intimate manner is the special duty of the bomb expert, according to Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Every unexploded bomb is carefully examined for characteristics which are expected to reveal the identity of the maker. Most bombs are of dynamite—simply constructed affairs, consisting of two or more sticks of surface-blasting gelatine tied firmly together.

A study of 145 bombs revealed that eighty per cent of them were made by the same group of persons.

Few persons engaged in this work ever escape uninjured. The dean of them all is the late Owen Egan, of New York, who was inspector of infernal machines. In his twenty-two years of uninterrupted duty, he furnished clues that run down the makers and places of 7,000 bombs. Only once in that long period of service did a bomb explode in his hand. That one was a cunningly contrived instrument of death.

Egan was called to the apartments of Judge Otto Rosalsky, in New York. On the judge's library table lay a neat package wrapped in yellow paper, about five inches square and three and a half inches high. It looked like a box of candy and was handed to one of the maids of the house by a young man who made no comment. The judge was about to open it when his better judgment told him not to.

After Egan had looked at the box intently and had pressed his face close to it to smell it and listen for any mechanism that might be at work, he cut the string and unwrapped the paper. Within, there was a box of white pasteboard.

With caution he lifted the cover and noticed that it resisted a little. This sticking of the cover on so frail a box aroused his suspicion.

"It acts like a real one," he said. "You'd better get out."

Leaning backward with his face partly turned away, he stretched out his arm and gingerly lifted the cover. Little by little he raised it until he could slide it off.

The opened box revealed a piece of iron pipe an inch in diameter with an elbow in it. On each side of it was a small dry battery connected by wires with a fulminating cap. Lying on top of the apparatus was a small package done up in tissue paper.

On the underside of the cover, near the center, was glued a small piece of cork, apparently a buffer. Another buffer was glued to one of the corners of the cover.

Carefully picking up the small package of powder, he laid it on the table. Then he took out a jackknife and cutting down the edge of the box, he started to cut down the edge of the other side. Instantly there was a blinding flash and explosion. He lost the index finger of his left hand and four fingers of his right hand were rendered permanently numb. Particles of steel were imbedded in his right cheek and eyelid, and he carried them to his death.

French Bread Isn't Enough

PARIS, Sept. 2.—The tough, thick crusted bread, which is almost the national diet of France, is not enough to keep French teeth white and healthy, according to dentists who met recently in the Eighth International Dental congress.

A systematic plan of instruction has been launched, which it is expected will reach every peasant and soldier.

During the dental congress, Dr. Jacques Guinat, head of the dental clinic of the Paris School of Dental Surgery, started an educational campaign by the use of carrier pigeons, to whose legs were attached instructions on how to keep teeth from decaying.

The instructions were printed in simple language, briefly, and distributed not only by pigeons, but were tied in packages to toy balloons, which floated over the city and dropped their messages among people in every walk of life.

The carrier pigeons were mostly trained birds belonging to various garrisons and when released from the Grand Palais, they sped overland to their various stations, delivering the message of clean teeth.

French teeth of normally good because of the antiseptic qualities of wine and the gymnastic endeavor required in chewing French bread.

EX-KAISER IS STILL ACTIVE AND VIGOROUS

BERLIN, Sept. 4. — Ex-Kaiser Wilhelm is not the old, worn out man that many people think him to be.

Quite on the contrary, he leads a very active life, according to the Doorn correspondent of the Berlin "Tempo." His household consists of some 60 persons, and he continually receives visits from members of the former royal family.

The ex-Kaiser relies to a large extent on physical exercise to occupy his time. He arises at 6 a. m., and often takes a brisk walk before turning service, which is held in the palace chapel at 8. Breakfast is at 9. During the remainder of the morning he either plays tennis, indulges in the famous wood chopping or again strolls through the woods adjoining the palace.

Works for Neighbors

He is accompanied on his walks by his pack of dogs—three dachshunds, a Russian wolfhound and a German shepherd dog. He has completely cleaned out his own park of fallen and dead wood that he is forced to rely on his neighbors, who "give" him work to do.

Luncheon at 1 o'clock is over quickly, for the former emperor is a very fast eater. Even the evening dinner is not a long affair. The ex-Kaiser always appears at that time in dress uniform, most frequently in that of a Grand Commander of the Knights of St. John.

Studios Reader

The afternoon is devoted to reading. The former emperor religiously reads a large number of German newspapers and one or two published in Holland. He is particularly interested in books dealing with history and politics, and in humorous literature. Herbert Jenkins and other British authors are among his favorites. In the cool of the afternoon he likes to walk through the rose garden which he has planted. Visitors may enter this part of the grounds, and the ex-Kaiser often enters into conversation with them, speaking in a light, humorous vein.

If there are guests for dinner, there is often a moving picture presentation in the evening. The ex-Kaiser prefers films of an educational nature. He retires at 1 a. m.

Italian Town Honors Saint

VITERBO, Sept. 4.—A quaint and impressive religious procession, with a folk-lore background of the kind common in Italy, took place today here in honor of the town's patron, St. Rose.

Something like the "lilies" of Nola in South Italy, or the "candles" of Gubbio in Umbria, Viterbo has its "machine," an imposing structure decorated with over a thousand candles and bearing an image of the saint.

The "machine" was, according to the old custom, carried in solemn procession through the streets of Viterbo to St. Rose church.

The "machine," which is something like an enormous reliquary, was so high that its top reached to the upper windows of the houses as it was carried through the streets by 50 men. It has been carried in procession every year since 1663, when the procession was originated to invoke the saint's aid in warding off an epidemic.

Kansans Seek Colorado Gold

ROLLINSVILLE, Colo., Sept. 4.—With wheat at 30 cents a bushel, gold ore at $50 a ton looked pretty good to two Kansas farmers.

The two Joe E. Swindell and Herbert B. Calkins, both of Dodge City, Kan., admitted they failed to extract the gold from their fields of golden grain; so they came to Colorado.

They bought an interest in the old Mother Jones mine. Their first "strike" was a four-foot vein, eight feet below the surface, yielding gold ore worth $50 a ton.

That encouraged them. They stretched out the daily working shift made other surface investigations and prepared for "big time" shallow mining activities.

John H. Dubois, veteran Boulder miner, owned the property. There hasn't been a lot of interest in mining in Colorado since the war, when prices in other commodities skyrocketed.

But Dubois figured depression days some day would come along and rekindle interest in his properties. So he held out.

His first disposal was an interest he wouldn't sell the entire property—in the Mother Jones mine. He has two other mines, the Pine Grove and the Boulder Girl.

Many years ago, Dubois said, a 40-foot shaft was sunk at the Pine Grove mine and was worked just enough to expose a main 12 inch vein of high grade ore.

The Kansas wheat farmers plan to reopen this vein on a lease. And if there's gold, they won't have to go back to wheat farming.

INDIGESTION

Take a Pinch of Black-Draught After Meals

If bothered with indigestion after meals, try taking a pinch of Black-Draught just after you leave the table. Many people do this to avoid indigestion. Mrs. H. A. Goff writes from Sherman, Texas, to say: "I suffered with bloating—a full feeling. I would almost lose my breath. My food disagreed with me. I began taking a pinch of Black-Draught after each meal, and I found that was the best way. I soon was relieved of so much gas, and the smothering spells did not come on so bad. I soon began to feel much better. Since then, my health is much improved."

GUILTY LIPS

by LAURA LOU BROOKMAN Author of "MAD MARRIAGE"

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Pretty Norma Kent, 20-year-old secretary in a law office, sees Mark Travers for the first time when together they rescue a puppy from downtown traffic in Marlboro, middle-western metropolis. Norma refuses Travers' invitations and her indifference spurs his interest.

Bob Farrell, young lawyer, asks Norma to marry him and she refuses, though she is fond of him as a friend. Norma shares an apartment with Christine Saunders. She fears Chris is falling in love with her married employer, Bradley Hart, proprietor of an advertising agency.

Natalie Price, popular debutante, is trying to win Travers as a husband but her efforts fail when Norma at last allows the young man to take her to dinner. She does not know he is the son of F. M. Travers, real estate magnate, but thinks him a clerk in the real estate office. Within a week Mark has launched a whirlwind courtship. Norma finds herself deeply in love but thinks she must send Mark away because of some secret of the past. Chris declares if Norma loves Travers all else is unimportant.

Norma is alone in the apartment one evening when Mark's father arrives and demands she must end the affair with his son. Mark overhears the conversation. Father and son quarrel and Travers declares he will disown Mark if he marries Norma. After his father has gone Mark begs Norma to marry him at once. Chris and Bradley Hart accompany the couple to a little town in the next county where the marriage takes place. Mark takes his bride to the palatial Hotel Marlboro. He discovers next morning that he has only $13 in his wallet. Mark departs, saying he will return soon but by 3 p. m. he has not come.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XIV
At 3 o'clock Norma was still waiting. She was still alone. What had become of Mark Travers? Could this be his father's work? The door flew open and Mark Travers, beaming, boomed a greeting from the threshold. In three steps and a leap Norma was in his arms. She was laughing, touching his cheeks with reassuring fingers, raising her lips for his kiss all in one instant. She was aware there was film before her eyes.

"Oh, Mark! I've been such an idiot. I was afraid something had happened—!"
"Happened? Well, I should think there has. I'll tell the whole something's happened. What do you suppose I've been doing all this time? Listen, baby, we're starting on a honeymoon in exactly two hours. Look—!"

One of Mark's hands dived into a pocket and came out with a dangling inlaid strip of green paper. Railway tickets. He tossed them toward Norma. A second dive and he was displaying more paper. Greenbacks. More of them than the girl had ever seen. They were folded into a huge roll.

"What? Why, where in the world—?" Norma floundered for the words.
Before she could go on Mark had caught her arms and was whirling her into a crazy whirl-gig pirouette.

"Don't you hear me, Norma, darling? Don't you understand? We're going places! Come on—we've got just two hours to make the train to Blue Springs, Mrs. Travers! How does that strike you? Blue Springs, where the sun shines and skies are almost as blue as your eyes. Riding and bathing and lots of golf. Oh, you'll love it! Blue Springs is the grandest place to play in these here United States. You and me, Norma! Why—why, what's the matter?"

"He could not understand the expression in the girl's eyes.
"What's the matter?" Mark repeated. "Don't you want to go to Blue Springs?"

"Of course—only, Mark, do you think we should? I mean do you think right now—?"
"Right now? Say, when it is customary to go on a honeymoon? After the ceremony or 15 years later? If there's some place you'd rather go than Blue Springs I suppose I can change the tickets. I was sure you'd like it there!"

"No, no! It isn't that, I'd love it, of course. I'd— I'd love any place with you."
She could not endure to see the light of enthusiasm fade from his face. Norma went on, laughing. "Did you say we start in two hours? Oh, I'm glad I packed things before you came. We'll have to hurry, won't we?"

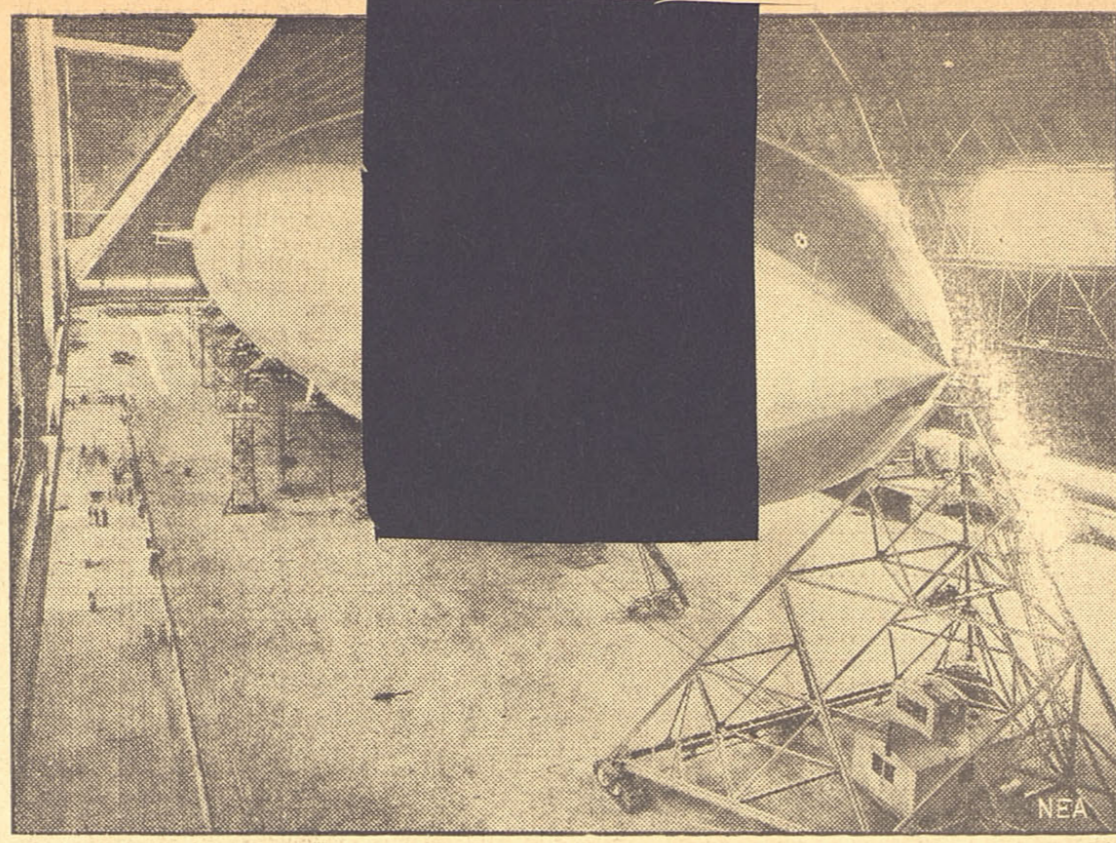

Travers was not satisfied. He put a hand on her arm, studied her face searchingly.
"Tell me why you don't want to go to Blue Springs," he said.
"I do want to go, Mark! I guess—well, all the time I was here alone I was thinking we'd have to find some place to live that doesn't cost too much. You— you aren't going back to your father's office, are you? I thought we'd have to save our money until you'd found another job—"

"So that's it!" Mark's laugh was a shout. "But were not poor, darling. We've got money—lots of it! Here! Take a look at this, wad again. There's $145 in the fistful of filthy lucre. Enough for a fair sort of honeymoon, don't you think? That's the kind of a man your new husband is, Madam. Walks out without a single penny in his pockets and comes back with $145!"

He had not answered the question about returning to his father's employ but Norma did not notice this. Her eyes were dazzled by that tremendous roll of bank bills.
"Oh, Mark, it's such a lot! You wouldn't spend all that just on a trip?"

"Would I? Lady, Mark Travers' wives always get the best. Look—"

World's Mightiest Airship Preens for First Flight

The U. S. S. Akron, world's largest airship, is shown here on its mobile mast in the huge hangar at Okron, O., being groomed for its maiden flight. This portable contrivance, electrically operated, will be used in taking the giant ship in and out of the dock.

Dirigible Gas Made in Texas

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—The Navy's new giant dirigible Akron depends for the helium used in its navigation on the government plant near Amarillo, Tex., which was designed and constructed by the Commerce Department's Bureau of Mines.

Although the Amarillo plant has been in operation about two years, it has produced more than 22,000,000 cubic feet of helium at an average net cost of $11.47 per thousand cubic feet.

Sixteen years ago, when helium was a rare gas—hardly more than a chemical curiosity—there wasn't a cubic foot of it in this country. Small amounts had been sold at $2,500 per cubic foot. At that price the government would spend more than $16,000,000,000 to fill a ship like the Akron.

Hydrogen, an inflammable, explosive gas, formerly was used for the advent of lighter-than-air craft. After lengthy experiments, the Army and Navy decided there were favorable possibilities for the use of helium.

The Akron, because of its use of helium, will be able to attain a greater speed than most dirigibles. Its motors are in the body of the ship instead of being suspended below in power cars. Thus there is less wind resistance. This also obviates the necessity for the crew to climb up and down ladders from ship to gondola when the watch is changed.

aboard! All aboard!" for the last time as they swung onto the car. Breathless, they floundered to seats in their compartment. The boys dropped the luggage and made a swift retreat. The train had begun to move, was gradually gathering speed.

Norma looked at Mark. "We—we got here?" was all she could manage to gasp. She raised one hand to straighten the little black hat that had been pushed back at a foolish angle in the run for the train.

There came a tap at the door. Mark, answered. It was the conductor. Something about the tickets needed to be settled. Only a moment and the couple were alone again.

Norma had discarded the troublesome little hat. Mark helped her out of her coat. Somehow this led to slipping his arms about her, whispering precious nonsense. Norma's hair became badly disarranged but neither of them noticed that.

"Happy, kid?" It was to become a habit of Mark's during the next few weeks to make that inquiry. As habitually and with emphasis the girl was to answer as she did then: "Of course!"

Without talking they watched the landscape stream past. Mark's arms were about his bride. Her head rested on his shoulder. They had passed the suburbs now and were flying through wooded ravines. The foliage, touched by the frost of October, had begun to show gorgeous tones of old and scarlet.

"What time is it, Mark?" "Nearly six. I'll have the porter bring a menu. You'd rather eat here than go into the dining car, wouldn't you?" She nodded. Instead of summoning the porter, however, both preferred to prolong that perfect interval. The shadows on the countryside grew longer.

Why at that moment of all times should memories she had relentlessly put behind suddenly reappear to plague Norma? She turned away from Mark. What was he saying? She heard the words dimly: "Oh, there's something I forgot—something important!" (To Be Continued)

MURRAY IN WAR AGAINST LONE STAR CO.

WAURIKA, Okla., Sept. 4.—Gov. Wm. H. Murray today has loosed another broadside in his war for cheaper living costs in Oklahoma with the filing in district court of a suit against the Lone Star Natural Gas corporation and three subsidiaries.

The governor, recently victorious in forcing lower rates from the Oklahoma Natural Gas corporation through threatened court action, demanded in the petition filed by his attorneys, a receivership of the Lone Star company, revocation of charters of the company and payment of $305,000 in back fees and penalties as well as court costs. He also asked a restraining order against interference with activities of the requested receiver. The suit named seven causes of action against the company, which was charged with violation of state laws.
