WANTS PARTY TO MANAGE OWN AFFAIRS

AUSTIN, Oct. 1.—State Democrat in Charge, Henry Hughes, of Dallas, today called on the party executive committee assembled here to ask the next state legislature to repeal laws "if not the whole of the state election law so the party can manage its own affairs."

Referring to court suits to keep the name of Mrs. Hamilton Ferguson out of the books in the November election as the democratic nominee, he declared:

"I don't believe any court of justice in this state will ever be able to erase a name from the books, unless it has been written there by more than 500,000 voters. It is a matter from the ballot box is not the ballot box and it is the duty of every loyal democrat to write his name there."

The executive committee, of course, and the state party, are not going to be the party to manage its own affairs. Hughes said that he is authorized to employ lawyers to represent the executive committee in the election litigation, Hughes said.

"I want the party to go out and get the name of Mrs. Ferguson out of the democratic party and that is going to be the next step," he said.

Hughes had earlier, by announcing by appointing it was called to see that the will of the people is applied.

FARMER CAMPBELL FOR PRICE FIXING.

Thomas D. Campbell of Campbell, Inc., is said to be the largest wheat grower in North or South America. He has a plan for fixing values of crops. He believes in the setting of price for grain and cotton daily, based upon Liverpool quotations. He insists that we cannot have permanent national prosperity until the producer can operate at a profit. He holds this applies to the producer of raw products such as oil and copper as well as farm commodities. He stresses that the three major farm crops which give us or do not give us prosperity are wheat and corn and cotton. We export about one-fourth of our wheat, practically none of our corn and about one-half of our cotton.

He has convinced himself at least that if it were possible to give the farmers in the United States the same advantage in regard to tariff which other industries enjoy on their manufactured products and which labor enjoys through restricted immigration, there would be an immediate effect and national prosperity would soon return. He would have congress pass an act which will authorize the secretary of agriculture to determine each day an established price of wheat based on the Liverpool price plus 42 cents, the present duty, less the freight. He would control the acreage. That is, he would raise each year in the United States 800,000,000 bushels of wheat.

He would base the daily price of cotton on London price plus 10 cents a pound, less the freight, and the buyers of cotton throughout the United States would be compelled by law to pay the 10 cents extra on the 8,000,000 bales of cotton used in the United States, which would be approximately $400,000,000 more each year and this irrespective of the world's price. Thomas D. Campbell was employed by the Soviet Russian government to show the Russians how to grow the largest single crop of wheat in the world by any one nation. Dictator Stalin must have converted the American wheat grower to the price fixing and acreage reduction system to govern all staples of the American ranch and farm and orchard and garden.

It appears that a new civilization calls for drastic laws enacted by the congress to provide a foreign market for the surplus of American products and to reduce to a minimum the army of unemployed in the republic. Thomas D. Campbell was a republican. Now he is for the congress of the United States to go into business on a gigantic scale—for crop control as well as price fixing of all staples.

R. F. C. MAKES LOAN TO LOUISIANA.

Louisiana voters are reminded that the Reconstruction Finance corporation has granted a loan of $13,000,000 to the state of Louisiana and the Belt Railroad commission of New Orleans to construct a rail and vehicle bridge across the Mississippi river. There is a powerful republican politician on the banks of the Potomac. His name is Jahneke. He is assistant secretary of the navy. He is a native of the Pelican state. He is young and rich and ambitious. Did the republican warrior put one over the democratic kingfish?

TEXAS SPENDS MILLIONS ON SCHOOLS.

Houston led with $5,178,322; Dallas came second with $4,428,827, and next was San Antonio with $3,390,222. Fort Worth approximated

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

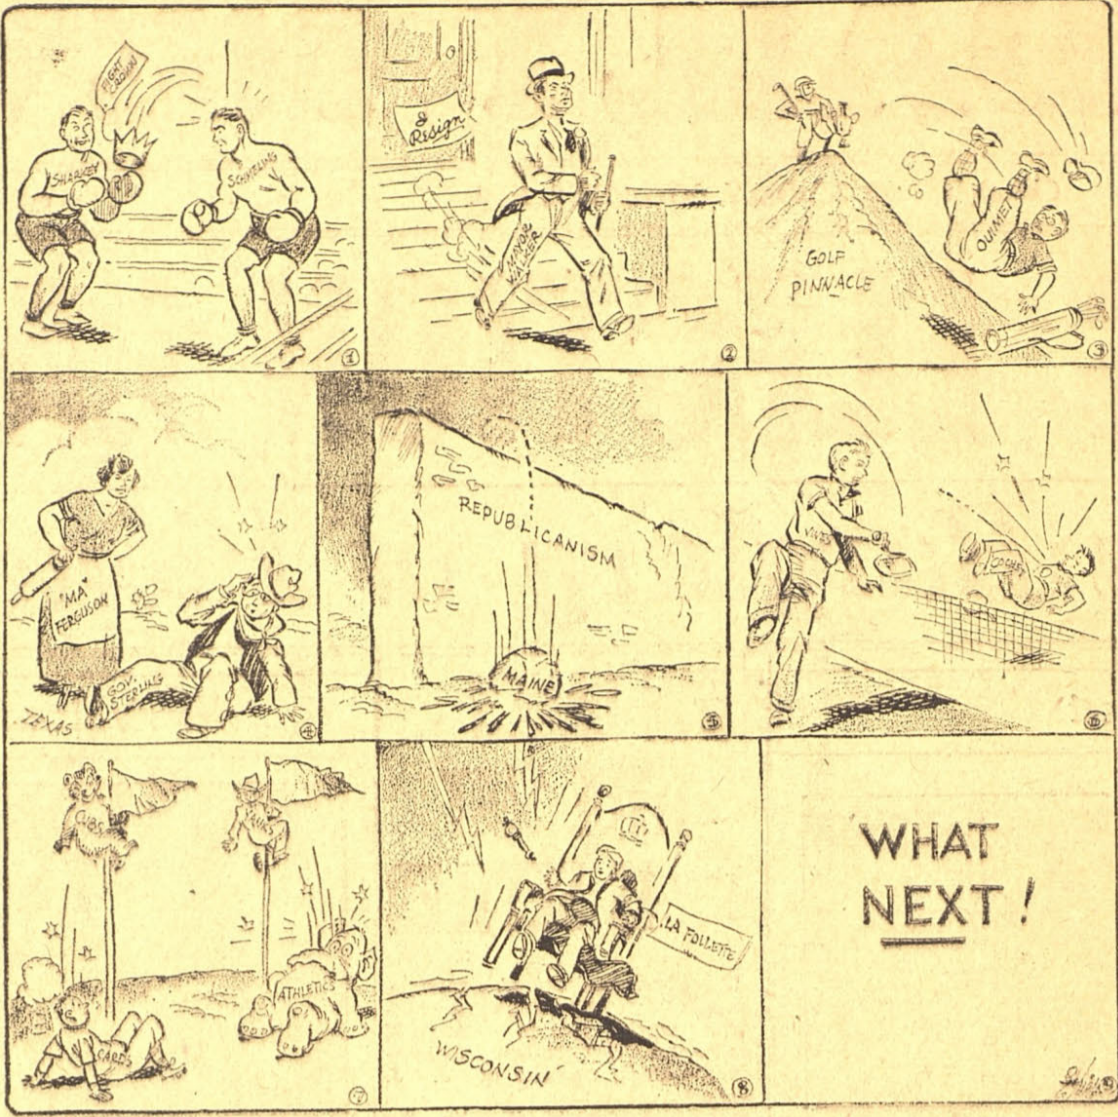

BY RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Although the progressives have been having some very bad luck, especially those who call themselves Republicans, they will be accorded a large share of the credit or blame in case Governor Roosevelt defeats President Hoover in the November election. If Roosevelt wins he will have won both his nomination by virtue of progressive support and his election by the acquisition of an independent vote for which the progressives in public office may be considered the spokesmen. His election will have been aided by the enthusiastic support of the Democratic progressives and the opposition of the Republican progressives to Hoover. There will be other factors, of course, but unless a landslide is in prospect the progressives will be an important one.

NEITHER the organization of an independent league of progressives for Roosevelt, to be headed by Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska, nor the defeat of Governor LaFollette and Senator Blaine in the Wisconsin primaries, following that of Senator Brookhart in Iowa, signifies anything decisive in the presidential campaign. The Republican conservatives carried Wisconsin in a campaign restricted carefully to state issues, ex-Governor Kohler having asserted after his 1930 defeat that Hoover had been too big a load, to carry. The LaFollettes lost their Democratic support because the Democrats voted in their own primary and there seems to be a real chance that Roosevelt will carry the state. As for Iowa, straw votes and farmer unrest have indicated such a marked trend to Roosevelt that President Hoover will make a special trip for a speech at Des Moines. Furthermore, the argument that the Wisconsin result augurs badly for Hoover simply because it demonstrates the voters are out to unseat those in power doesn't stand up for the reason that most incumbents are being renominated and re-elected this year even though a large majority is being booted out. BUT it does make a lot of difference when a dozen Republican senators refuse to campaign for the Hoover ticket and when some even denounce it. Norris, vigorously campaigning for Roosevelt, is likely to be the influence which will cost Hoover Nebraska. Johnson, attacking Hoover and praising Roosevelt without declaring for him, can sway enough votes to make California a doubtful state. And to the extent that you consider Wisconsin, Iowa, North Dakota and Pennsylvania doubtful states you must concede a large degree of temporary political potency to the LaFollettes, Blaine, Brookhart, Nye and Pinchot. Their failure to help Hoover may make "the difference."

It's a Great Year for Upsets

the $3,000,000 mark. All the major cities made a magnificent showing. In these 12 cities the school children, numbering some 272,000, put in more than 37,000,000 days at school, in the aggregate, during the year covered in the government report, which reminded Bascom N. Timmons that one child attending school the same length of time would be 10,000 years old when he finished. There is a slogan, speaking of highways, that those who use the roads should pay for their cost and upkeep. Another slogan should be coined and adopted: Those who use the schools, for the education of their children or their wards, should assist in paying the cost of education. There should be no dodgers or welchers permitted.

A JOB FOR LAME DUCK CRISP.

Rep. Charles R. Crisp of Georgia has been given an appointment to the tariff commission to fill the vacancy created by the death of Commr. Lincoln Dickson of Indiana. Crisp is a democrat; Dickson was a democrat. Having served more than 20 years in the house, Crisp became a candidate for United States senator. He met with overwhelming success as well as humiliating defeat. Richard Russell, the 36-year-old governor of Georgia, sent Crisp to his political grave. It was a sad finish. Crisp had acted as chairman of the ways and means committee during formulation of a new revenue raising bill. This committee originates all tariff legislation, and Crisp had been one of the ranking democrats on it for a number of years. He was for the sales tax. He believed and still believes that it is the fairest of all methods of raising the revenue to defray the expenses of operating the federal government and meeting the heavy demands of wars of the past and demands of the present. His father was speaker of the house as well as a noted democratic leader in the days when Grover Cleveland made history for the American republic and gave its people one of the cost efficient administrations that is recorded in the big book. Now that Pres. Hoover has made the appointment, there will be a statesman who is not a rubber stamp, a member of the commission.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

The weather appears to have the weatherman fooled as much as the depression has the republicans flabbergasted. The republicans, you know, have never been able to diagnose the slump. They have injected liberal doses of good old G. O. P. doctrine into the patient but all that this treatment has accomplished so far is a few feeble twitchings of the national toes, a circumstance that has added numerous grey hairs to the heads of Washington administration. It is quite exasperating, no doubt. Those remarks were inspired by the bad guess of the weatherman. Friday with cold sunlight filtering through slush clouds that resembled the brush-marks of a bad artist, the forecaster's promise of general rain over West Texas Saturday was a mighty dreary prospect. When one goes to bed obsessed with such a feeling and wakes up Saturday morning to meet bright sunlight and clear blue skies one feels like joining Mr. Webster in "Ain't it a grand and glorious feeling."

That is just one of the phenomena which gives life the zest of uncertainty. We can never be sure of what is going to happen the next moment, and while that may have its disadvantages it compensates with excitement we would not experience if we were always knowing instead of anticipating. For instance Carl Lowery did not know Saturday morning that the federal tax collector would appear at his place of business at the Red Front Drug store. If Carl had known no doubt he would not have disturbed the cobwebs that for months had draped a penny-game machine in the rear of the store. But he did not know when Friday afternoon he was seized with industry to attack the disable into which storeroom had fallen. The penny machine came to light and Carl dragged it into the front for the sake of the few loose pennies it might catch. Into the store Saturday morning walked a quickly insistent gentleman with one of those efficient, unsympathetic countenances so well known to federal tax payers. He noted the machine and offered to collect the annual fee. Carl offered to sell him the machine, but the Publican pointed out where it might cost Carl $50 and Carl succumbed. "I don't see anything funny about it," snapped Carl. He is raking his brain to boom the penny business.

The police department has a barrel of wine. Forty gallons of the fruit of the vine sets in a hogshead in the city hall headquarters, representing so much good grape juice and sugar wasted. At least the department thinks that it is wine. It is uncertain whether or not the potency of the content of the barrel brings it within the purview of the Volstead Act because, so far, Henry Stubbiefield has employed merely an ordinary sense in determining this question. Chief Daniels delegated Henry to establish the intoxicating per centum, a difficult assignment since Henry claims that it is denied the police to drink any spirits. He is seeking tasters.

It is news to me that the injunction of the Volstead act restrict an officer more than an ordinary citizen.

Anyone wishing to taste said wine may apply to Henry Stubbiefield. They can apply all they want to. There aren't any restrictions against wanting to drink.

Note—This was written Saturday morning. It isn't any prognostication of what will happen to the weather between Saturday a. m. and Sunday a. m.

In the Political Arena

By Hugh Nugent Fitzgerald California politicians, indeed the leaders of all factions of the political parties of the Golden Coast state, are staging a bitter contest involving the election of a United States senator in November. William Gibbs McAdoo won the democratic primary nomination by a very large majority. Tallant Tubbs, a republican ousted Sen. Samuel Shortridge from the leadership of the republican party and won the republican nomination. The Rev. Robert P. Shuler won the prohibition nomination. Tallant Tubbs is a native son and hails from San Francisco, which is the wet stronghold of California. McAdoo and Shuler are not native sons. They are adopted citizens and Los Angeles, which has been a dry stronghold in other years, claims the two distinguished political leaders as voting residents. Shuler in the nominating primary polled a tremendous vote. He ran as a candidate on all three tickets. He lost the republican nomination to Tubbs, the democratic nomination to McAdoo, but he won the prohibition nomination hands down. Now it will be a political fight to the death for the prize.

Jouett Shouse, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, created a nationwide sensation by the announcement that his organization will support Tubbs, republican nominee for the senate, against McAdoo. Mrs. Charles H. Sabn of New York is the national chairman of the woman's organization for national prohibition reform. She gave the press a statement that the California division of her association would not support the democratic nominee for senator. Jouett Shouse is a Kentuckian by birth, a Kansan by adoption, a New most interesting career. First, he was one of the most outstanding democratic leaders of the Kansas democracy. He served several terms as a congressional representative. He was floor leader for McAdoo in San Francisco in 1920. He was the floor leader for McAdoo at the Madison Square Garden convention in 1924. He was prominent in 1928 at the San Houston hall convention where Alfred E. Smith won the prize. He was chairman of the democratic national executive committee from 1928 until 1932. After the Chicago convention he became president of the Anti-Prohibition association and now he is directing the activities of that nation wide non-political organization.

Tallant Tubbs is an out-and-out repealer of the 18th amendment. He is young and rich and a most aggressive campaigner. He burned all his bridges behind him when he launched his campaign last summer. He has not changed since his nomination. William Gibbs McAdoo has been one of the drest of the dry leaders of democracy. He is said to have modified his views to a considerable extent this year. That is he is for submission but has not qualified himself as a repealer. It would be quite a joke to all concerned if the Rev. Robert P. Shuler, a native Texan and active for years in Texas as a preacher and prohibitionist to go from McAdoo and Tubbs and become the junior or side partner of Hiram Johnson in the senate halls of the United States. California advises indicate that party trademarks have been cast aside by a vast number of voters and there is no telling just what will happen on November election day.

McAdoo is one of the most aggressive of all American political campaigners. He has a tremendous following in the ranks of labor. Indeed, all rail employees in and out of California and this, too, regardless of political affiliation, have ever been partial to this former secretary of the treasury. He is a dry but a submissionist. He believes that the voters of 48 American commonwealths should be permitted to be heard, speaking through the ballot box on the repeal or non-repeal of the 18th amendment. Prohibition should ever be the test of the democracy of any man or woman voter. A president has no power to change the constitution or the statutory laws of the nation or state. It is for the American congress, the senators and representatives to make all the changes wherever changes are demanded by the American people along the lines of constitutional procedure.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

John Temple Graves II, lecturer, and editorial columnist of the Birmingham, (Ala.) Age-Herald, says: "Did you ever stop to think that truth does not change so much as it accumulates? All the talk of a new era to follow the depression may be very true, but other things are true as well and have been since the caves men carved their histories in stone. To forget the eternal verities for the verities of a particular era is to expose that era to some such explosion as blew the last decade to bits. Men were talking of a "new era" then, just as they are talking now, and in all the talk was a weird under-current of conviction that the old rules were repealed, that the old lads were lifted, that there was no longer any top to anything, and that prosperity was going to pour equally forever on the economic sinner and the economic saint of our scheme. That conviction was exploded in the bitter fall of 1929, and the detonations rang through three following years of the most frightful depression this nation has known. The forgotten verities made "forgotten men" of us all.

CALL of the WEST by R. G. MONTGOMERY

BEGIN HERE TODAY STAN BALL, an agent for enterprising investors, ASPEN DELO in his office. Ball accuses Delo of having men shot who are sent out to check his timbering activities at Three Rivers. Ball says he is making a personal check. Delo says he is personally sure that Ball does not make the check. Upon leaving Delo's office, Ball saves a girl from kidnapers. She proves to be Delo's daughter, DONA. When Ball learns her name he tells her he is STANLEY BLACK and slips away. DUDLEY WINTERS, in love with Dona, agrees to go to Three Rivers and get Delo to come back. Dona goes with him and at their first stop Dudley produces a marriage license and urges Dona to marry him, arguing that Delo will not go on a manhunt if they do. Dona barely misses the marriage by meeting Ball on his way to Three Rivers. At the camp, SWERGIN, Asper's timber boss, tries to make Dona stay in camp. She slips away from men he has ordered to watch her and rides. She sees her father attacked and shot. Swergin comes to her rescue. Dudley and Swergin both warn her not to ride alone. Ball will attack her as he has her father. Dona goes out again and when she starts back finds she is followed. Her pursuer proves to be Swergin, who takes her back to camp in spite of the fact that she lashes him across the face. Asper is much worse. The storekeeper is knocked out and his place robbed. Ball is blamed. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XV DUDLEY did not return with Swergin for half an hour. Dona sat where she could watch her father who lay pretending to be dozing. She was sure Asper was only pretending and that behind his half-closed eyes he was planning what he would do, once he was able to be up. Swergin appeared from the doctor's cabin with Dudley at his heels and Dona arose. She wanted to meet the timber boss far enough away from her father's room so that he could not hear what she had to say. Swergin did not offer any greeting but halted, grinning at Dona. His little eyes traveled over her with the same boldness that had made her shrink from him the first time they met. "I want to talk about Father," Dona began. Swergin's thick lips parted in a grin. "Not a word about yours?" He seemed to enjoy the furtive that rose in her cheeks. "Well, save that for later," Dona countered swiftly. "The doctor says Dad must not be excited. We are no to tell him the details concerning this affair with Ball. We may even have to tell him that we have captured Ball."

"You mean killed him?" Swergin cut in. "You have seen the doctor?" Swergin nodded. "And if you want my idea, I think all this is a bum bet. Don't know that I'll be able to do it." Dona flashed him a quick glance. "Why not?" She asked sharply. "Well," Swergin seemed to be enjoying himself. "I am just a hired man. Old Asper hires me and pays me. I report to him and to no one else. I ain't got the habit of lying to my boss." The big man clamped his mouth shut and waited for this thrust to sink home. "You must promise!" Dona softened her tone and took a step nearer the hulking boss. Her lips parted pleadingly. "For my sake as well as Dad's!" THIS turn made Dudley cut in. "You'll take your orders from Miss Delo." He spoke shortly and stepped forward aggressively. "Who asked you to put in?" Swergin growled. "You'll be lucky to keep a whole skin around you if you stay here." "Dudley," Dona laid a hand lightly on his arm. "Let me talk to Mr. Swergin. I think I can make him understand." "No use wastin' talk. I ain't promised nothing. If Asper gets me on the carpet and opens up on me I'm telling him facts and not a lot of rubbish." "But you would lie to save his life!" Dona pleaded. "I ain't saying; ain't making no promises," Swergin was firm. "You certainly have changed the bold front you made when we first arrived. You were willing enough to tell Asper Delo where to step off then!" Dudley could not withhold this sarcastic truth. Swergin did not flame up. Instead he grinned suddenly. "Old Asper was a well man then and able to take it. I ain't lying to him now that he's low."

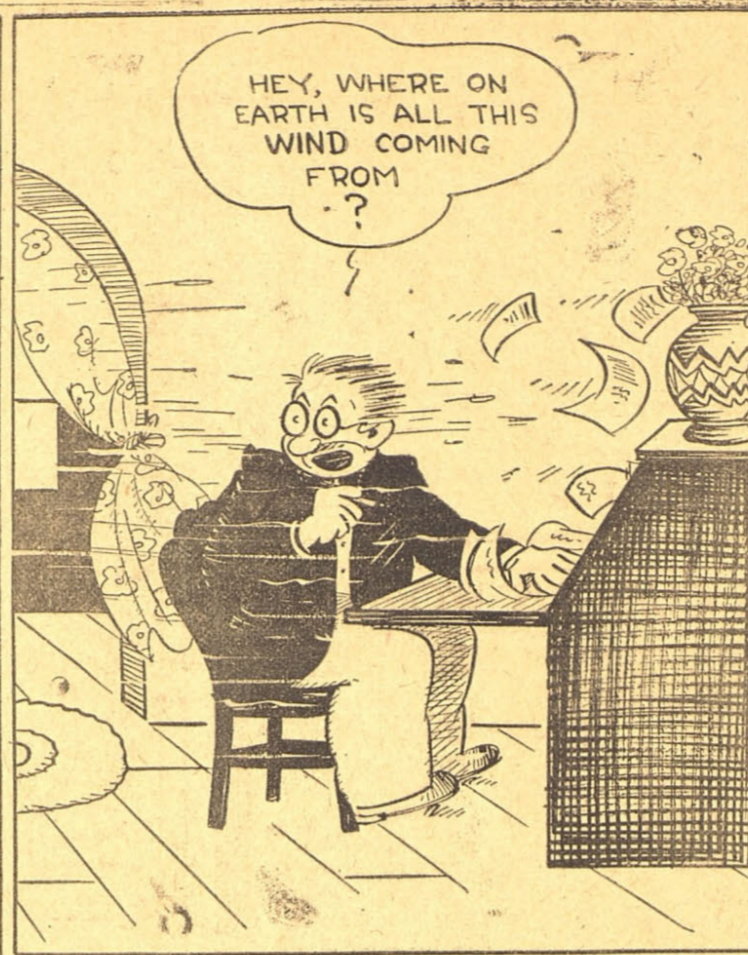

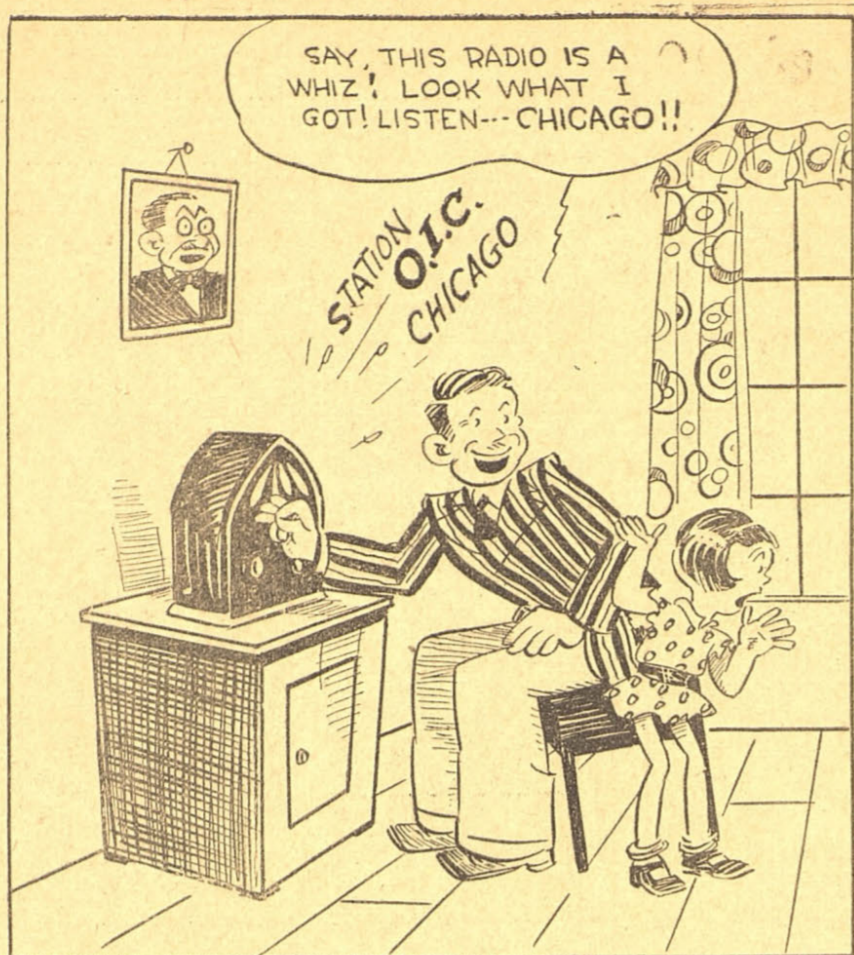

Dona caught Dudley's arm. "Come, Dud. I have to get back to Dad." With a melting smile she faced Swergin. "You will at least promise to see me first, so that I can be there when you report to my father?" "If you are not off chasing in the woods," Swergin grunted. "When do you expect to report today?" "I'm going out with two picked men and we figure to bring that pup in in a canvas tarp. We ought to be back by six tonight, if not sooner." Swergin squinted at the sun as he spoke and started off toward the corrals. "If you don't need me I believe I'll ride out myself," Dudley said slowly. "Still working on your secret clues?" Dona smiled. "I've gotten well enough along and may surprise you any hour." Dudley was serious. "Haven't you forgotten something?" The girl's tone was teasing. Dudley met her eyes and his lips parted in a grin. "Will you marry me this morning, Miss? If you will I can put off my plans for a few hours." He stepped close to her. DONA laughed and fled toward the steps. "I couldn't break in on such important business!" Her eyes softened and her lips suddenly drew together firmly. "Dad, please be careful." Dudley stood still, uncertain whether to leap after her and take her in his arms or to go on down to the corrals. The moment's delay decided the question in favor of the corrals. Dona was up the steps and inside the door. She waved him a goodby kiss and was gone. Dudley walked slowly down the pathway. He was torn between two courses of action. He wanted to go back and he wanted to go on. Had he known it, Dona's words had seemed more tender than her heart dictated. She was planning, guided by a woman's instinct, against a great need she feared might soon arise. Swergin's obstinate actions made her fear that she might have to ask a lot of Dudley Winters. She paused at her father's door and looked inside. He was lying just as she had left him, his eyes half-closed and his strong mouth a little slack. Dona hurried to her own room and began rummaging through her traveling case. From among a jumble of silk and lace garments she found a paper. It was the marriage certificate Sam Dean had made out and signed. She tucked it into the front of her dress. It felt cold and stiff against her soft skin and a little shiver ran down her spine as she faced the door. Darkness had settled as Dona returned from the cook cabin. There was a promise of a moon in a few hours. She heard voices in her father's room and ran up the steps. Swergin was standing in the middle of the floor, his feet planted wide. On his face was a stubborn expression and his massive chin was thrust forward aggressively. Asper Delo was sitting up and he was shaking with anger.

"You'll promise you won't try to get up?" Dona asked the question in the manner of an order. "Feel too lazy," Asper grunted and lay back among the pillows. Dona wandered down to the corrals where she found Malloy sitting on the top pole with his long legs dangling in the air. She greeted him with a smile and rested her arms on the fence. She was just tall enough to rest her chin easily on one shapely arm. "How is my room?" she asked. "He'll be needin' a stiff workout pretty soon. He's feelin' his oats," Malloy grinned. "Swergin will be in with Ball tonight and then I can ride without everyone in camp trailing me." "Don't plan too much on them birds bringin' Ball in," Malloy drawled softly. "You seem to think that murderer can't be taken." Dona's tone held an edge. "Not alive!" Malloy returned frankly. "Ball has turned out to be a bit of a killer and he ain't the kind to be taken by no timber punks with rifles. Ball uses a six gun and meets 'em close in." "I'm expecting him in with Swergin and his men," Dona repeated as though to reassure herself. She half-turned and instantly whirled to run up the path. Two men were riding down to the corrals while Swergin was mounting the steps of the main building. Dona was sure he was headed for Asper's room. She reached the steps well out of breath. Swergin had gone to his office instead of to her father's room. Dona sat down to catch her breath. She meant to stay right there until the timber boss came out. Swergin remained in his office through the supper hour. Dona carried Asper's tray of food to him and waited while he ate but the big boss did not come out of his office. Dudley appeared, looking fresh and rested. He sat beside Asper while Dona went to snatch a bite of dinner. It felt cold and stiff against her soft skin and a little shiver ran down her spine as she faced the door. Darkness had settled as Dona returned from the cook cabin. There was a promise of a moon in a few hours. She heard voices in her father's room and ran up the steps. Swergin was standing in the middle of the floor, his feet planted wide. On his face was a stubborn expression and his massive chin was thrust forward aggressively. Asper Delo was sitting up and he was shaking with anger. (To Be Continued)
