Community Seeks New Gas Rate Schedule for Cisco

NO ACTION ON PLEA TAKEN BY COMM'N

Application of the Community Natural Gas company for a change in its present Cisco rate schedule was met without action by the city commission last night. The application, presented by Chester L. May, the company's vice-president and general manager, would substitute for the flat 67 1/2-cent rate now effective, a graduated scale, stepping down from $1.60 for the first 1,000 cubic feet to a low of 45 cents over 25,000 feet.

F. D. Wright, counsel for the city in gas rate litigation, vigorously opposed any favorable action on the community request as "the worst piece of business that this commission can do." He pointed out that the state railroad commission is now investigating utility rate bases with a view to determining what are fair rates and indicated that the city should hold in abeyance any action upon the question until the state has completed its object.

City Attorney Grantham advised delaying action upon the requested ordinance for the present. He explained that his company is proposing to apply this schedule generally over its properties, and has already done so in several instances, notably at Eastland where a test of the plan was made last winter.

High Flyers Take Notice

Balloonists will go straight up in the air when they see this, for if there's one thing that makes 'em soar, it's a basketful of beauty like the one pictured here. Shown above are five Omaha girls, selected as sponsors for the National Balloon Races at Omaha, May 27 to May 30. They are, left to right, the Misses Alice Foye, Jane Bliss, Clyde Butler, Jean Redick and Alice McDermott. The racing balloon basket is a souvenir of a national balloon race of more than a decade ago. It's done quite well since it's settled down, don't you think?

WILD SCENES AS DEMOCRATS ASK DRY VOTE

HOUSTON, May 25.—The Texas democratic party, before adjourning its convention sine die near midnight, asked congress to submit the prohibition question to the people of the United States for final expression in a national referendum. A roll call of counties gave the referendum resolution a vote of 851 to 564. Later it was adopted by an overwhelming 70-30 vote.

The scenes that preceded the roll call were the most disorderly of any state convention within recent years. A near riot was precipitated when the convention voted on a referendum resolution which had been substituted for an original resolution demanding repeal of the 18th amendment.

Regardless of the state party's action on prohibition the delegates will go to the Chicago convention next month instructed first, last and all the time to nominate Speaker John N. Garner of Uvalde, as the democratic candidate for president.

The convention also went on record as favoring re-election of J. C. Adams, Dallas, as national committee man.

Mrs. Clara Driscoll Sevier, Austin, committee woman from national convention, was unopposed for re-election.

The convention excluded negroes from democratic primaries in Texas by adopting a resolution making white electors only eligible for membership.

Preparations for opening the pool to swimmers Saturday are now under way at the lake.

TERMS OF AMUSEMENT CO. SETTLEMENT MADE PUBLIC

Details of the compromise settlement of the indebtedness of the Lake Cisco Amusement company, arrived at over a week ago at a conference of representatives of bondholders and stockholders, were made public today.

Under the terms of this settlement all past due interest payments on the bonded debt of $100,000 was remitted and the bonds themselves are to be cancelled in exchange for a refunding issue of $40,000.

The refunding bonds will bear interest at the rate of six per cent per annum after October 1, 1935. They will bear no interest until that date and the first interest payment will, therefore, not fall due until October 1, 1936.

Gas Rate, Amusement Company and C. of C. Considered by City Commission

In a session which ended on a note of dissatisfaction with the expenses incurred to the city treasury by the operation of the chamber of commerce, the city commission last night considered a number of matters of more than average importance.

The city took no action on the gas rate petition. But, without going into the formality of a vote, it indicated satisfaction with disposition made of the amusement company question and took no steps to invalidate a contract existing between the city and the amusement company.

Plans of the company to develop the resort and to beautify it were explained by F. D. Wright and F. E. Harrell. Mr. Harrell is president of the company. Both declared that the Lake Cisco Amusement company has "now become a civic proposition and no investor can hope to make a dime from its operation."

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

BETTER THAN LIFE: — Because thy loving kindness, O God, is better than life, my lips shall praise thee.—Psalm 63: 3.

COL. MCGEE ON BOND ISSUES.

Col. Mark McGee of Fort Worth is a widely known young Texas lawyer who wore the uniform in the World war. Now he has made the discovery that bond issues "hold a mortgage on the future." He addressed the members of the Federal Funeral Directors and Embalmers association and planted in the record of the association the following excerpt: "We must watch the men we elect to office for if we don't they will issue bonds to keep us in debt the rest of our lives."
 Col. McGee urged Texas voters to cease electing office-holders who like to build new schools and county buildings. He mildly insinuated that after so many new school buildings are built, there is no money left for educating the children. Regardless of this, he is for the new civilization. He announced the day of the multi-millionaire has departed, that he will be replaced by the average man in comfortable circumstances and predicted there will be very little poverty in the new civilization. Henry George told the readers of one of his famous books how to abolish poverty. Col. McGee sees its abolition on the way.

RAYBURN RECAPTURE BILL DOOMED.

According to Washington advices that portion of the Rayburn holding company recapture bill that would repeal the law requiring carriers to put into a federal fund half of their earnings over six cents is about to fall by the wayside for the time being." Rep. Sam Rayburn is a Texan. He is the chairman of the house interstate and foreign commerce committee. He is responsible for the proposal to repeal the recapture act. Is this another case of passing the buck?

CONSOLIDATION OF UNITS THE ONLY HOPE.

Oklahoma officials will be up in arms later along. A plan for reduction in the number of counties in that state from 77 to 20 through mergers with the result in saving of $24,900,000 annually in taxes has been outlined by the State Chamber of Commerce, and is said to have formidable backing the state over. According to the author of the proposal, consolidation of counties and townships and school districts offer the only permanent method for tax relief. Well, if the people are the masters they may put the proposal over by constitutional amendment or legislative enactment. If they are not the masters, they will drift along as usual bitter in their complaints of the cost of government and indifferent as to the use of a very effective ballot on election day.

SPEAKING OF THE "TWO MASTERS"

Tom J. Hunter of Wichita is a candidate for the democratic nomination for governor subject to the July primary. He has added another plank to his platform. He calls for the enactment of a statute forbidding state employees from receiving money from corporations. This is the new slogan of the Wichita man: "No man can serve two masters. Your state official is either your servant or the servant of the combine." This is an ancient war cry revamped as well as rejuvenated. It was heard under the skies of Texas loud and often when a distinguished servant of the people faced the accusation of critics that he was serving "two masters." What he had to say was plenty. Is there anything new under the sun?

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

A fair solicitor petitions Spectacles to invade against young vandals who maraud among the roses. The culprits plunder the choicest beds of flowers, their loot being dozens of buds whose cultivation has been a labor of love with the housewives. There are only two motives for stealing a rose—but in either case the stolen beauty loses the exquisite sentiment for which a rose endures. A rose is to be given. It cannot carry with it any of the charming graces it signifies if it is conveyed by the hand of a thief. A rose is nature's most perfect expression of virtue. The ethereal white of the lily may bespeak purity, but a lily is the flower of the transcendentalist, the symbol of the transmuted. One puts a lily upon the breast of the virgin dead, but the lover places a rose in the hair of his beloved and kisses her lips. A rose, a blushing, full-chaliced, perfect rose, is the symbol of life with red blood in the veins, the flower of reality. It is the blossom one wears for one's mother, the bud that brings a message of cheer and hopefulness into the sick room.

Who would think of sending a bouquet of lilies to a sick friend? We tell our secrets under the rose. So comes the expression "sub rosa," literally "under the roses" and figuratively meaning "in confidence."
 The rose is the flower of virtuous living, and its symbolism is expressed in a dignity as gracious as Aphrodite, for life lived virtuously has sublime dignity.

Oh, well, I have rambled entirely off the track. As I said there are only two reasons for stealing a rose. One reason is to possess it for the beauty and significance it has. The other is to destroy beauty, either because of malice, a desire for retaliation or from pure human cussedness and delinquency.

In the former event as I said, the virtue is blighted by the deed. A rose—the emblem of honor—must be honorably dealt with. If you steal a rose to give to your mother you are lying to her in your heart. If you steal to give to a friend you are by the act denying the very sentiment you endeavor to express. And if you desecrate beauty for malicious reasons you are worse than a savage, and that is all there is to it. I do not believe there was ever occasion for stealing a rose. They can so easily be had for the asking, because what normal human being doesn't respond to kindred emotions, and isn't eager to give a rose? The women whose shrubs were so shamefully vandalized would gladly have given the vandals a share of the buds if request had been made.

If there is any more of this thievery I mean to find out who is responsible and print their names in CAPITAL letters in this column.

There is another class of young mischief makers who deserve parental attention with a paddle or the old-fashioned but none the less effective switch. Unfortunately for the virtuous upbringing of the rising generation this country has gotten out of the hickory habit because of the comparative scarcity of trees. Back in east Texas where I was brought up in the fear of God and the wished, there grows a species of flora known as bois d'arc, as prolific a producer of switches as I ever knew. It was the custom in building a school house to select a site near a grove of these "horse-apples" and saw the trunks down. In a summer or two a virtual forest of long slender switches of second-growth radiates from the stumps, and bundles of these, seasoned to a toughness of whit-leather, invariably stood in the corner of the school room as a perpetual reminder of the swift retribution certain to overtake the unwary. Striplings around Cisco, who ring door bells at busy homes and then converse with laughter at a distance when the perplexed housewife, snatching off her apron and hastily tidying her hair, rushes to the front, would mend their ways were they but once acquainted with the shrill penitence that one of these wicks can induce. As an instrument for keeping order in the land, ladies and gentlemen, the hickory limb isn't a comparison with one of these wicks.

What I believe about this statement does not impugn his virtue but simply questions his consciousness. It is known that Elliott stays so closely to his store that the passage of night or day is hardly noticed. I am of the opinion that he planted the beans one day and slept on his feet for a week, and was amazed to find the beans had sprouted the next time he visited his family.

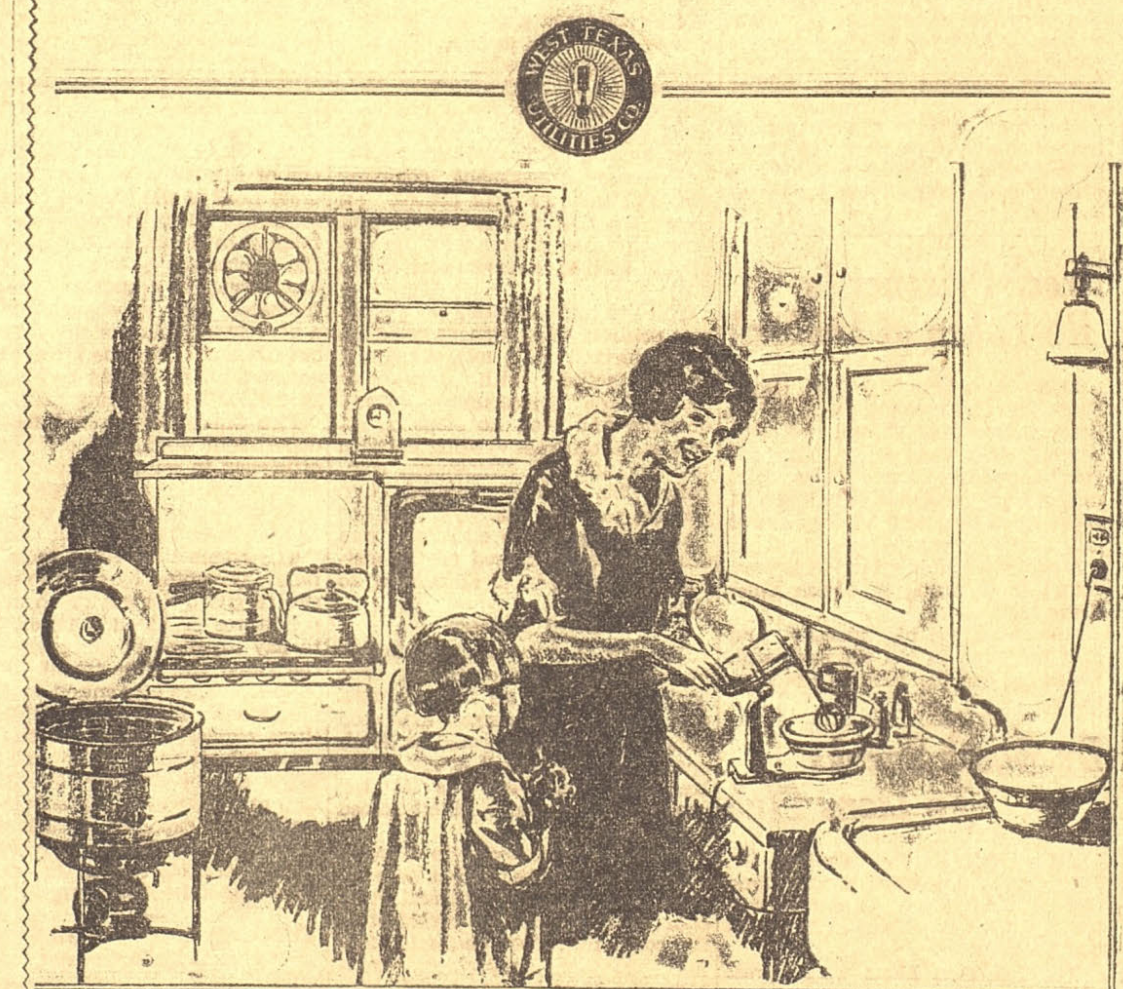

In the Political Arena

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD

South Carolina is the Palmetto state. In South Carolina a white

"Farm to Pharmacy" Elliott, democracy rules the roost. White democrats nominate and they elect. They refused to bolt in 1928. They backed the Happy Warrior and gave him the electoral vote of the commonwealth which gave to the American world in the long ago John C. Calhoun who was not in high favor at times with Andrew Jackson, known to history as the "Sage of the Hermitage". Indeed Old Andy threatened to hang Calhoun higher than Haman for a threat to secede from the Union on account of a tariff or some other tax that did not appeal to his Palmetto soul.

Well, the Palmetto democrats named an uninstructed delegation to cast the 18 votes of the state at the national convention in June. They did not instruct their delegates. They did "enthusiastically endorse Franklin D. Roosevelt, leading candidate for the presidential nomination." Vermont democrats chose eight delegates to cast the eight votes of that state and unanimously voted themselves on record as favoring the candidacy of Franklin D. Roosevelt. Vermont democrats declared for the repeal of the 18th

Lighten Your Kitchen Labors with Modern Electrical Servants

Just like every modern home-manager, you want... and deserve!... a modern, workless kitchen. In short, you need a completely electrified kitchen—for modern Electrical Servants actually take the work out of kitchen tasks!

An Electric Range will do your cooking automatically... an Electric Refrigerator will save money, preserve your foods safely and freeze delicious confections and salads... an Electric Mixer will reduce your time spent in preparing foods and eliminate all the hard work... an Exhaust Fan will keep your kitchen cool and comfortable during hot summer days... and invaluable little Electrical Servants—such as percolators, waffle irons, egg-cookers and many others—will make other kitchen duties easy and delightful.

Let electricity cut your time spent in the kitchen to a quarter of the hours now required. And, with Electrical Servants on the job, you'll spend your time merely supervising—not working!

Modern electrical equipment is inexpensive to purchase, and costs a surprisingly few pennies to operate. A modest down payment brings immediate installation—and your savings in money, time and labor will more than offset the small monthly payments. Start electrifying your kitchen... Now!

Do you know that your increased use of Electric Service is billed on a surprisingly low rate schedule... and adds only a small amount to your total bill?

amendment "and immediate modification of the Volstead Act to Permit the sale of light wines and beer until the repeal might be affected."

Sen. Thomas Pryor Gore of Oklahoma flew from Washington to Montpelier and made a speech. He attacked the republican party with responsibility for the economic situation and declared "that during the 11 years of republican power there had been 17 times as many bank failures as during the last lean eight years of democratic rule." Vermont republicans in convention assembled instructed for Herbert Hoover and demanded the nationwide referendum. Calvin Coolidge is a native son of Vermont, and the very successful adopted son of Massachusetts. Is Calvin for a referendum? Coolidge sent 18 Smith delegates. Of Roosevelt delegates and two neutral or undecided delegates to the national convention. But all the delegates are under the unit rule and instructed for the Happy Warrior of two national campaigns.

There is going to be a battle royal in Chicago in the sense of a fight for supremacy in the making of a platform. Alfred E. Smith has his program. It calls for light wines and beer heavily taxed. By an overwhelming vote the United States Senate defeated the beer proposal.

Incidentally, and to the point, the United States supreme court has ruled that dry states may remain dry even if the 18th amendment and the Volstead Act were discarded. Of course, the ruling was not news to the well informed. Texas has constitutional prohibition and the Dean Law. A repeal amendment would be necessary to remove constitutional prohibition from the ancient document of the vintage of 1776, and revision or repeal of the Dean statute would call for cooperative effort on the part of both branches of the legislature as well as the concurrence of the governor if the act be written into the books.

Facts are stubborn things. They speak louder than convention resolutions.

tions or political wind jamming speeches. A quadrennial cry for abolition of the rule requiring two-thirds of the democratic national convention vote to nominate a candidate for president was raised in the American senate by the veteran Ashurst of Arizona, who has been the wearer of a toga since statehood came. Sen. Ashurst branded the two-thirds rule as archaic, unAmerican and unrepresentative. He reminded his fellow democrat that the rule had cost the democratic party two presidents in recent years and he expressed the hope that the convention next month would have the courage substitute the majority rule for future conventions. Why not this year? Why wait four years? He contended that no good sportsman changes his rules in the middle of the game but he did insist that the rule could be abolished without any hard feelings. A Washington correspondent lets it be known the principal objection to eliminating the rule in a presidential year "has been based on the fear that it would weaken the candidate in the November election and possibly make enemies for the candidate among the members of his own party who might otherwise have a chance for the nomination themselves."

Really, the objection is not well founded! Texas democrats in state convention assembled abolished the two-thirds nominating rule for governor and other state officers more than a third of a century ago. It was a battle royal between the young democrats of that period and the old war horses. Charles A. Culberson was the youthful idol of the youthful braves of democracy. He was nominated. John H. Reagan and S. W. T. Lanham were contenders. They withdrew their names. They bowed to the wisdom of the majority. They gave Culberson loyal support.

CISCO DAILY NEWS

the MAN HUNTERS BY MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TODAY Susan Carey, 20 and beautiful, is secretly in love with Bob Dunbar, millionaire's son, Denise Ackroyd, who wants Bob for herself, plots to separate them. Susan has been engaged to her former employer, Ernest Heath, but Heath overheard a conversation between her and Bob and asked her to break the engagement. She finds Bob as he is hearing a train for New York and there is a reconciliation. Bob tells her he is going to marry Susan and the older Dunbar is furious. The father goes to see Susan and tells her it will ruin Bob's life if she marries him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLVI "That's exactly what I mean," said Mr. Dunbar. The faintest shade of regret flitted his voice. Susan sat silent, her hands locked in her lap. Her mind was in confusion. Yesterday had been clear sailing. It had all sounded so simple, so easy. Even Bob's report of his father's anger had had a far-away, unreal aspect. Older people were always troubling themselves about things that really didn't matter. Susan had thought. Stocks and bonds, houses and money. What did they count when weighed against her love for Bob?

Bob had agreed with her. They would be married very quietly. He had an offer of a job on a ranch in Montana. Some man he had known at college was experimenting with wheat and there was a little tenant house they could have. Susan had thought of herself simply and joyously as a farmer's wife. It had all seemed quite idyllic. Now this proud old man with his talk of inheritances had come to spoil everything. She felt a little sick as she listened to him. His voice rumbled on, smoothly and persuasively. "I know you wouldn't want to stand in his way—we all go through the puppy love affairs—"

She felt in a daze. Was it true that her love for Bob would bring him only unhappiness and ill fortune? Would he tire of poverty and of her with it? The poison of the older man's cunning words infected her heart. Perhaps she and Bob had been fools. Perhaps she had been wrong to think that life could be so simple and straightforward as they, in their rosy dream, had visioned it. Through her misery dawned the realization that her father had repeated a question. She looked up, her eyes clouded with painful resentment. "I beg your pardon, I'm afraid I wasn't listening."

He said, "I will make it worth your while if you let him go." "Oh!" All the pain and wounded pride of the girl surged to the surface. She stood up proudly and menacingly. She said in a voice that trembled, "I think you'd better go before I say something I'll regret. After all, you are Bob's father."

He was won to reluctant admiration but he could not leave without attempting to justify himself. His carefully moulded sentences flowed on. Susan stared at a point some inches over the man's head, expressionless. "Don't be afraid," she said bitingly. "I shan't do any harm to your son."

The man, a power in the downtown world of affairs departed feeling somehow humiliated and routed. Susan fought a battle with herself that morning. Bob was to come at eight and through alternate chills and fevers he tried to make up her mind what to say to him when he arrived. She had explained to Aunt Jessie who had remained singularly unmoved by the news of the girl's change of plan that the caller had been Bob's father. Aunt Jessie had tactfully refrained from asking questions. She had seemed gentler since her illness. Aunt Jessie was looking forward to making a long visit to her sister who lived in southern Illinois.

"I'm going for a walk," Susan told her abruptly a few minutes later. Scarcely conscious of the direction she was taking, she boarded a street car headed for the business district. She must do something. She must keep active. She stopped at a drug store telephone booth an called Ray Flannery. "Well, stranger, where have you been keeping yourself?" "I've missed you like the dickens." "Can you have lunch with me?" Susan asked. Ray agreed with enthusiasm. Half an hour later over the square, white-topped table in a sweet shop Ray stared at Susan with frank interest. "Come into money or something?" she wanted to know. Susan tried to explain. Her aunt had been ill, she said vaguely, and she had been needed at home. Ray seemed satisfied with this answer. "Say, the new girl in Heath's office sure is a lemon." Ray continued. "She looks like something the cat dragged in."

Susan smiled. She had heard about Miss Smith from Jack Waring but Ray's description seemed unduly harsh. "The old man's gone away. I hear," Ray rambled on. "What do you know about that?" Susan flushed. "He was talking about making a trip before I left," she said evasively. "I don't know. A always kind of thought he was buzzing around you," said Ray. Susan changed the subject but not feeling because inevitably with Ray the talk turned to men and romances. Ray was never interested in abstraction. After a little sparring Susan burst out with the question closest to her heart. "What do you think—I mean what would you do if you were going to marry a person and someone told you you'd be spoiling his life by doing it?" she floundered. Ray's shrewd eyes searched her face. "What are you talking about? I don't get you."

Susan began to outline little squares and triangles on the table's gleaming surface with her spoon. "It's this way," she said. "I'm engaged—it's a secret and you mustn't tell anyone—to a boy whose family is frightfully rich. His father is going to cut him off without a cent if he insists on marrying me."

the city and said the money could be raised among the business men if the commission saw fit to deny the request.

At the request of J. E. Caffrey, representing the Cisco Country club the commission voted fishing courses to visitors attending the Country Club's annual invitation golf tournament here June 17, 18 and 19. Many of the visitors will not play Golf, Mr. Caffrey said, and will instead, prefer to fish. The commission, voting this courtesy, requested the Country Club to provide visitors with cards or badges for identification, at Comm'r Elliott's suggestion.

Controversy Passed A controversy between two citizens of East Cisco, one of whom has a garden in an alleged "dead-end" alley was brought before the commission. One of the principals was present but the other declined to enter the room and the matter was passed by the commission for adjustment between the two, with the services of City Attorney Grantham requested in reaching a settlement.

Near the close of the meeting Mayor J. T. Berry injected the question of chamber of commerce expenses into the meeting with the statement that it appeared that some revision of the chamber's budget would be necessary. Expenses of about $550 a month have so far been incurred in maintaining the chamber, he said. Henderson asserted that "This commission came in here in three days and slashed expenses all down the line" and he was in favor of slashing the chamber of commerce budget also. "I am opposed to maintaining services that are not justified at this time by the expenses required," he declared. He criticized paying a secretary of the chamber of commerce "more money than we are paying the chief of police" and was for adopting immediately a reduced budget which it was indicated, had been prepared.

Comm'r Elliott took issue on this question, declaring that "we have already approved a reduced budget submitted by the chamber and we can't keep coming back every month or two and revising it."

"Go Down Together" City Attorney, pointing out that two mills of the tax rate has been set aside for the chamber's operation inquired if the two mills produced the amount of the present budget. Mayor Berry said that the tax reductions for 1930 totalled $4,500,000, which, Grantham said, would produce $9,000 for the chamber. Comm'r Clements declared that by ordinance and that "anything the commission has done it can undo."

Grantham advised that since the chamber has already submitted its budget and had it approved an unconsidered revision might would work a hardship. When Mayor Berry asked "What are we going to do when we can't pay it?" Grantham responded, "We just can't pay it, that's all," and Elliott said "We'll all have to go down together."

Comm'r Burnett reminded the commission that it was growing late and advised it defer consideration of the matter until another meeting when representatives of the chamber could be heard. His suggestion was adopted.

PARIS STYLES

By MARY KNIGHT United Press Staff Correspondent PARIS, May 25.—The underworld of Paris right now is filled with the palest, shortest, softest bits of chiffon, silk satin and triple-sheer fabrics imaginable, and every member of the "gang" exerts a powerful influence over the outfit-would, moulding its entire life! We've discussed this subject before but dress-makers and creators of the haute mode are fairly in a lather over the necessity of the modern woman's foundation being as slick as a gigolo's jet black tresses. "How can any woman in the world expect us to make her look well-dressed if there are humps and bunches in her underwear, or if she refuses to wear a girdle that is not long enough or high enough to take proper care of her diaphragm?" wailed one very prominent exponent of the dress fitting business here. "I just won't attempt to fit a frock on a woman who, purely because of carelessness, would ruin my reputation by misrepresenting the way my gowns are made to mould the body by refusing to shape herself properly underneath," was the flat statement of another.

By MARY KNIGHT United Press Staff Correspondent PARIS, May 25.—Rough looking creeps are taking new fashion tricks in the big game that is being played for 1932, and from all accounts, both visual and auditory, since the first few rounds, they are playing a winning hand. The only thing that keeps them from making a grand slam is the continued good playing of the woollens. The weather makes them indispensable to our comfort, and since they had already been deemed as indispensable to our beauty and awareness of the mode for spring, the rubber between these two materials is apt to go on forever. Spongy silks are kith and kin to the rough creeps and are both sheer and semi-sheer, being shot through expertly with all kinds and weights of strange threads that give it a look it never had before.

Gas Rate Increase--

of 7.18 per cent during the 12-month period ending February 29, 1932. "We cannot continue to operate at a loss," he said. "It is absolutely necessary that we secure more revenue."

"The Community," said May, "does not feel that the proposed rates will give it the fair return that it is entitled to receive, but with the advantages offered by such a sliding scale of rates, it hopes to sell more gas and thereby increase its revenue."

Operating Revenues.

Table with 2 columns: Category and Amount. Includes Revenue from sale of domestic gas, Industrial gas, Total operating revenues, Operating Expenses, Domestic gas purchased, Industrial gas purchased, Total paid for gas, Distribution expense, Commercial expense, New business expense, General expense, Uncollectible bills, Taxes—other than federal, Total expenses, Operating loss.

This does not include normal depreciation charges, he said, which figured at five per cent on a total investment of $130,995.50, is $6,549.77, making the total loss $9,399.38 or 7.18 per cent.

Dependable Supply.

Asked if the Community cannot purchase its gas from a cheaper source than the Lone Star Gas company, with which it is affiliated, May declared that it is possible, but that it buys its gas from the Lone Star because that organization offers the only assurance of a continuous and dependable supply, which he pointed out is as valuable an assurance for Cisco as for the Community. He minimized the contention that the Eastland county gas field forms a dependable source of supply and took issue with the claim that Cisco's proximity to that field entitles it to the benefit of lower rates. "It would be a fine thing," he said, "if rates could be predicated upon such a basis," he said, "but if nearness of a field is considered in shaping a rate structure the scale would quickly reach proportions that consumers at a distance could not afford to pay. In every case where this question has come up courts have held that rates all over the system should be uniform."

Gate Rate.

Responding to another question May said that under the contract between the Lone Star and the West Texas Utilities company, from which the Community purchased the local plant, the Lone Star received two-thirds of the gross revenue, standing leakage loss. This would place the Cisco gate rate at about 46 cents per 1,000 less leakage. He estimated that the Lone Star received about 40 cents.

Mr. Wright took the floor. After reviewing the history of the gas plant here and the basis upon which past rates have been made, he declared that a ruling by the United States supreme court has held that where two companies are affiliated as are the Community and the Lone Star, rate making bodies will be allowed to go behind the gate rate in determining the fairness of the proposed rates.

Under that ruling, Wright said, the courts "are going to hold that the Community cannot come here as it has done and say 'We are paying $42,926.72 for gas and we must have a higher rate if we are to make any profit.' They are going to determine, he said, whether or not the total rate provides a fair return.

R. R. Commission Survey.

He pointed out that the railroad commission's survey of the properties of the Lone Star showed an appraisal value of $47,000,000 for Texas properties, against the company's book value of $72,000,000. May declared, "That is the commission's estimate—we haven't had our say, yet." He also said that part of the Lone Star's properties are in Oklahoma and that the commission's appraisal covered only Texas properties. (Between 10 and 15 per cent is located in Oklahoma).

Wright pointed out that the railroad commission's survey was made for the purpose of determining what is an equitable gate rate. He reminded the commission that a number of men "whose knowledge of the matter and whose integrity are not to be questioned" had offered to make any kind of a bond to supply Cisco with gas at a gate rate of 20 cents.

"Say for the purpose of quick calculation that the gate rate would be 23 cents," he said. "The Community, instead of showing a loss here, would show a net profit of about $15,000."

City Attorney Grantham suggested that the commission take time to consider the proposed ordinance and this the commission agreed to do. May asked for a definite time but was assured that an answer would be given him within the next few days.
