Boy, Leg Lost Under Train Here, Is Recovering

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Back in the days when Gov. Hogg made his famous response to inquiries as to whether or not he would announce for governor again, west Texas played a rather negligible part in the selection of a chief executive of the state. The population in these parts was too comparatively small to encourage any serious candidacy and its voters were left to choose between east Texas rivals in the race for the gubernatorial mantel. Hence the "When the dogwood blooms" were sufficiently pro-

There is no dogwood in west Texas that I know of. I mean wild dogwood. Its habitat is the woodlands and forests of east Texas where in early spring its exotic white flowers star the arboreal green with sprays of

It is a truly beautiful blossom, the more beautiful because it blooms right after the winter and therefore gives more immediate comparison with the bareness of the cold season.

But it is not so fortunate a signal for west Texas where citizens, don't like for their information to come second hand. It indir cates that the same old tradition of east Texas hegemony in the matter of choosing who shall gov, ern Texas is still recognized and that west Texas must accept the other half's decision in the matter of who shall be governor.

There are plenty of wildflowers in west Texas. As a matter of fact it nourishes about the finest crop of wildflowers to be found anywhere, including the state flower, the bluebonnet. Some politician ought to be diplomatic enough to choose the bluebonnet for his political indicator.

This from the Ladies Home Journal:

When Mark Twain, in his early days, was editor of a Missouri paper, a superstitious subscriber wrote to him saying that he had found a spider in his paper, and asking him whether that was a sign of good luck or bad. The humorist wrote him this answer and

"Old Subscriber: Finding a spider in your paper was neither good luck nor bad luck for you The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant is not advertising, so that he can go to that store, spin his web across the door and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever afterward."

They said they had invited Arthur Seysz-Inquart, minister of the interior, who was appointed upon the insistence of the German chancellor, Adolf Hitler, to come to Graz and had promised to show

Federal troops in the Graz garison were under arms ready for New Treason Trial instant call.

In the upper part of the province, nearer Vienna, garrisons were strengthened and units shifted to stragetic points.

The government apparently was determined on no more concessions mier of the Soviet Union, and to nazis and was prepared to go to any length necessary to halt the nazi march or the seizure of the province the more radical nazis were advocating coastal lands is a rightful and brave gesture but there is a strong probability that it is eventually doomed to failure. The basis upon which Texas protests its title is so different from that upon which the other states of the union maintain their relationship to that union that the power of national opinion and the ultimate pressure of circumstance own salary from the loan company for $5. very likely will force the state out of its right asserted in the resolution of annexation adopted in 1846. Texas, it will be remembered came into the union as an independent nation reserving to itself various prerogatives of an independent nation. Because congress did not wish to assume the debt of the Texas republic it refused to accept its public lands but regarded itself as having made a good trade in allowing the new state to keep title to its domain in return for not passing on its obligations to Washington. Had congress realized the potential value of what opposite.

it was refusing to accept, it doubtless would have accepted these lands with alacrity. But oil was a valueless commodity in those days and no one dreamed of the vastness of the petroleum resources which underlie the state soil. Now that oil has become such an indispensable resource, and one so vital to national defense, the odds against Texas remaining in undisputed possession of its offshore real estate while other states of the union have no such privilege become increasingly greater. With regard to lands within the state proper there is little likelihood of federal expropriation, since these have in the principal amount passed into private ownership or to the ownership of state institutions. But with regard to submerged land a different situation is presented. For a time Texas may secure its asserted rights, but encroaching federal dominion propelled by increased national responsibilities and the pressure of public opinion in the other 47 states in the face of the program of national defense is a serious handicap to the maintenance of this item of Texas rights claimed under the annexation agreement. No provision of law, constitutional or statutory, and no treaty provision can long endure against an adverse public opinion. And Texas is hopelessly in the minority in this case.

OTHER OPINIONS

Buying Salaries

JUST hearings in St. Louis have disclosed some of the lengths to which loan sharks will go to avoid the state laws and squeeze fantastically high interest from small borrowers.

One victim testified that he borrowed $5 and paid the loan company $97.50 in five years as a "fee" for the loan. At the end of the five years he still owed the original $5.

If this deal had been a loan the interest would figure out at approximately 380 per cent-$19 interest yearly on $5. The Missouri loan law permits a maximum charge of but two and a half per cent a month. But this was not a loan. It was, loan company attorneys explained to the judge and jury, "salary buying." For the sum of $5 the lenders purchased 75 cents of the borrower's salary each two weeks. The purchase right continued until the borrower "bought" back his

I do not see how so small insignificant a thing can have so much effect. A succession of scenes passes in review as if they had arranged themselves for a procession. An unpainted, weathergray cottage at the north end of a lane from the public road; a row of cottonwoods bending and rebounding bordering the lane on the east with an orchard behind it; a paling fence inclosing a garden at the back of the house. Or again a mother hen with her brood swept almost off their feet whenever they emerge from behind the coop; the henhouse door first shut with a bang then open with no visible hand to open it; while a meadow lark holds his position on a nearby post long enough to repeat a few times his inspiriting whistle. Or yet again a tumbleweed breaks away from a drift of them and retraces its winter path leisurely at intervals across field; the carpet of green wheat ruffles and rumples and stirs up a green fragrance where the cattle are cropping it of. And or indefinitely the picture might keep coming. And yet the only maipulator of this changing series a brisk southerly breeze that has turned some crack about the nouse into a wind instrument that keeps rising and falling in a melancholy strain, so like one of the ong ago when the spring breezes oughed through the row of cotonwoods and set the paling fence creaking; hurried the spring atching about the barnyard and ruffled the field of green wheat and played its melancholy strain about the loose weatherboarding of that humble western Kansas
