Loboes Battle Ranger Here Friday Afternoon

By GEORGE

Whoever broke into the tool house at Sandy park WPA project Monday night and made off with four and a half pairs of boots and a 24-inch Stilson wrench should either return the odd boot or go by the police station and pick up its mate, said Joe Clements yesterday afternoon. A split pair is of use only to one-legged men, said Joe, and neither he nor any of the men employed on the project are one-legged.

Today is the day for the English elections and it has looked as if Prime Minister Baldwin and his "armaments to preserve peace" will win. On first glance that means little to us American folk over here whose first business is to keep out of war and let Italy and Great Britain settle their quarrel. In reality it means a great deal, for whatever Britain does affects international trade and relationships to such an extent that the United States, down to every man, woman and child, is touched. The amount of wages or salary you may be drawing today, the price you pay for bread or clothing, the money that cotton, wheat, corn, livestock and even eggs command, is governed to a great extent by what some foreign nation is doing. The world can't be thrown out of kilter without affecting every country involved in international trade.

A. Grist and I were talking about the election this morning. Mr. Grist, you remember, is a native of England. He remarked that the British government remains in power only so long as it has the confidence of the people. In contrast, he said, the Americans elect their officials when they have the least confidence in them. A public official here is elected for a definite term and he serves the term, regardless of whether or not his actions meet with the approval of the electorate. In England, however, the government is constantly before parliament and when any act of the cabinet fails to obtain a majority in the house of commons, the cabinet either resigns or calls a parliamentary election. Thus the issue is "taken to the people."

Over here, said Mr. Grist, the government does not provide for that instant appeal to the citizenship, but the president and congress serve their terms regardless.

I told him that whenever Tom Blanton and Tom Connally and the rest of the congressmen didn't know what the people back at home wanted all along that Tom Blanton and Tom Connally and the rest of the boys in congress would resign and take up practicing in the justice courts. So, after all, it makes little difference about the system. What works well for England is good for the English, and what works well for America is good for the Americans.

The deer hunting fever is developing into the proportions of its annual epidemic. Cisco parties are already being formed and within the next few days they will be trekking southward and southward toward the deer country.

Charles Brown was to go today, joining a party of Fort Worth and Midland fellows at Midland tonight and going on to the range early tomorrow. His brother, Paul, will be a member of the group. There will be George Harper of Eastland, Jim Rowe of Fort Worth and a Midland doctor.

What might have been a serious accident was narrowly averted on the Bankhead highway east of Cisco last night when J. E. Spencer, chairman of Eastland county Red Cross chapter, and R. T. Bridge, west Texas field representative,

GAME WILL DECIDE WHO GETS CELLAR

Neither Team Has Won Conference Victory This Season

Now that the complexion of the top of the district high school football standing has been determined, we shall gather at Chesley field Friday afternoon at 3:30 to determine who shall occupy the district cellar, Ranger, whose top-heavy victories in winning the district championship last year make their present slump almost unbelievable, will come here to battle the Cisco Loboes, equally ineffective in previous play, for the honor of keeping off the bottom.

Neither team has won a conference game. Cisco came near to accomplishing the feat with a nothing-all tie with the Eastland Mavericks, conquerors of the Bulldogs. But even then Eastland outplayed the home talent. Since the Mavericks defeated Ranger with great difficulty, the comparison gives the Cisco team little, if any, superiority over the Bulldogs.

The game was postponed from the traditional Armistice day date on Monday afternoon because of rain. Prospect of a much bigger crowd that would have been attracted then is seen in the fact that the clash will be the only one in the district tomorrow afternoon.

Both teams were reported in fair condition. The Lobo spirit is good, despite the long record of reverses, and hopes for a victory over the Bulldogs are high.

WORK BEGINS ON HATCHERY

Work on the WPA fish hatchery project began this morning with 30 men employed. This number will be increased as rapidly as possible, to the maximum, Supt. S. B. Wright of the hatchery said. The first work is that of rebuilding the water and drainage system serving the ponds.

The work, calling for a total expenditure of approximately $35,000, is in two WPA projects.

PHILIPPINE ACT SIGNED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14. (AP)—President Roosevelt today signed the proclamation establishing the commonwealth of the Philippines, and sent congratulations to Manuel Quezon, its first president.

The proclamation will become effective tomorrow on the promulgation of Secretary Dern at Manila, where today the Philippines are celebrating, awaiting President-elect Quezon's inauguration, marking the first step of the Philippines toward complete autonomy.

Mrs. Spencer Is Chairman for Red Cross Roll Call

Mrs. J. E. Spencer has been named Red Cross roll call chairman for Cisco, and will direct the local campaign with committees to be named this afternoon.

Mrs. George P. Fee, first named chairman, was unable to serve because of the illness of her mother.

Mrs. L. H. Flewellan yesterday was chosen chairman at Ranger. Eastland committees were being organized this morning by J. E. Spencer, county chapter chairman, and R. T. Bridge, west Texas field representative of National Red Cross.

Chinese, Fearing Jap Attack, Flee From Shanghai

SHANGHAI, China, Nov. 14. (AP)—Reports of an impending Japanese attack on the Chinese quarter, promptly denied today by Japanese authorities, created a condition of near panic among the Chinese. The Chinese quitted the quarter in vast numbers, taking refuge in the international and French settlements.

JAP EMBASSY WARNS NANKING.
NANKING, China, Nov. 14. (AP)—The Japanese embassy today warned Nanking authorities of the necessity for a more thorough carrying out of China's for suppression of anti-Japanese activities throughout the country. Japan insisted that recent incidents in Shanghai is regarded as a breach of the Nanking government's mandates of suppressing anti-Japanese organizations.

HOUSE ADOPTS SAFETY DEPT PROBE MOVE

Hickman Charges high Official Tipped Off Raid

AUSTIN, Nov. 14. (AP)—The house today adopted a resolution authorizing a committee investigation of the department of safety, including the charges that "said that department officials had impeded law enforcement by giving advance information as to the actions of the department in law enforcement efforts."

This action followed the dismissal of Ranger Captain Hickman. Hickman is quoted as saying that a high state official tipped off the raid he was ordered to make on a resort near Fort Worth. The resolution was pushed through quickly, the proponents cutting off debate.

Rotary Is Called "Aristocracy of the Best in Men"

The genius of Rotary exists in its ability to lift men above their environment into a peculiar aristocracy, R. H. (Dick) Wells, past-governor of District 5, comprising Utah and Idaho, told a joint meeting of Cisco and Eastland Rotary clubs today noon.

It is neither an aristocracy of wealth, nor an aristocracy of birth, he said, but an aristocracy that means exactly what the word implies—the rule of the best in men.

The speaker, enlivening his eloquent address with numerous humorous stories that sharpened the thoughts he brought, divided this "aristocracy" into four applications:

1. An aristocracy of fellowship. Rotary, he said, does not imply the convivial sort of fellowship, which aims purely at a good time. But it implies an educational fellowship, a companionship that gives its members "an understanding attitude toward many things." The intimacies that are created among the men of different vocations, different beliefs and ideals and, often enough, different nationalities and religions, solve many problems by simply changing points of view, he said.

2. An aristocracy of fair dealing, commonly termed "vocational service." Rotary, Wells told the clubs, teaches a member to take pride in his profession. "Selfishness isn't profitable, either commercially or spiritually," said he.

3. An aristocracy of citizenship, known in Rotary parlance as "community service." "The genius of this Rotarian aristocracy is in the fact that it makes 'lifters' out of 'leaners'."

4. The aristocracy of goodwill, known as "international service." This, said Wells, is purely and distinctively Rotary. In twenty years Rotary has grown from one club to nearly 3,700 scattered over 74 different nations and political subdivisions. "Our mission is not to prevent war. But our mission is to bring about between people and nations of widely separated nationalities and race and creed a common and sympathetic understanding. Rotary has never had a paid organizer. It has spread itself because one neighbor gives to another."

Wells was introduced by President O. J. Russell of the Cisco club, who presided. His address was the only feature of the program, which was held on the roof garden of the Laguna hotel.

Mrs. Jack Elam of Lufkin arrived last night for a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. LaRoque.

J. H. Reynolds is spending a few days in Mineral Wells.

Woman Taxi Driver to Rescue

Mrs. Lillian Botkin, Washington, D. C., taxi driver (above), is trying to convince Mt. Ranier, Md., police that Aubrey Hampton, held for questioning in the murder of Corinna Loring should be released. She said she had known Hampton for five years. (Associated Press photo).

Needy Cisco Families Depend on Welfare Ass'n for Clothes

Many needy Cisco families have received clothing, bedding, shoes and other items from the Cisco United Charities and Welfare association during the old clothes campaign which will continue through the winter months, according to H. L. Dyer, president. While the response from the citizens in the matter of donating usable garments has been exceptionally generous, there is still need for more bedding and clothes, he said.

WILL PUNISH FOR BEATINGS

MOSCOW, Nov. 14. (AP)—Informed sources said today that Italy had promised an investigation and to punish guilty persons in response to the soviet protest against the alleged detention and beating of Russians in Italy.

Two incidents the newspapers cited concerned the alleged refusal of Russians to buy Italian goods. The detention and beatings followed.

House Adopts Fee Bill Written By Conference Group

AUSTIN, Nov. 14. (AP)—The house adopted the conference report on the bill removing district, county and precinct officers from the fee to a salary basis, today. Only the senate's concurrence is needed to send the bill to the governor.

Fate of other major legislation, including taxes for old-age pensions, and automobile drivers' licensing hung in the balance as the two houses moved toward adjournment tonight.

The conference-written liquor control bill, restricting whiskey sales to unbroken packages by licensed private dealers, was completed for submission to both houses later today.

The disagreement of the automobile license bill in the committees reduced the prospects for the bill.

The conferees on the tax bill to pay the pensions made a little progress.

INTEREST OF PEACE AIM OF PONTIFF

British Officer Shoots Anti-English Rioter at Cairo

(By Associated Press)
Pope Pius, ecclesiastical sources said today, is striving to postpone the application of sanctions in the interest of peace.

At Cairo, Egypt, a British officer shot and killed a rioter and wounded three others, making four dead and 150 injured, during the two days of anti-British rioting.

British authorities said the situation did not call for action by the government, and no consideration is given as to the possible use of British troops for police work. Ethiopia charged that the invading Italian soldiers violated Ethiopian women at Aduwa, Aksum, Adigrat and Abbagarina. They said wives of Ethiopian priests were violated and that Italians entered convents and violated young sisters.

A Rome communique said that 300 natives and an unidentified white man, were killed on the Ethiopian side, and 17 Italians were killed and 63 wounded in an engagement in the upper valley of the Fafan river.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul; the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple; the statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart; the commandments of the Lord are pure, enlightening the eyes.—Psalms 19:7, 8.

The wilderness and lonesome moor
 Offer glad psalms of praise to thee,
 And deserts drear rejoice, and pour
 At love's dear shrine, their symphony.
 —MINIFRED M. CANN.

Unity is the ultimate aim of the Christian religion. But it must be predicated upon a unit of spirit—a spirit devoid of meanness and rivalry. It must be a spirit filled with the desire for helpfulness toward his brother irrespective of his approach toward God and Christ.—Rev. Dr. Roelif H. Brooks.

Killing Hopeless People

THE plea of the young woman, suffering from what seemed hopeless hurts, to be put out of her misery by a scientific death illustrates the unnatural length to which despair will prompt a person. The woman does not wish to die. She wishes to be out of her pain, which is quite natural. In the calm and unbiased moment of relief she would regret the wish to be "blotted out," just as the suicide, hurtling over the awful divide of death spends his final, fleeting second of consciousness, no doubt, in a terrible remorse. We are sure that the poor girl, being wheeled into an operating room to experience this "scientific" demise, would be so overcome with the terrible thought of it that the physical pain she feels would be allayed by the mental reaction and the resolution to die rescinded.

THE idea of killing people who suffer from incurable diseases or from pain that cannot be assuaged or from other ailments that make them either a burden to life or a social danger, has long been tinkered with among some of the more pragmatic or, shall we say, inhuman scientific thought. The idea is one of race purification and is closely associated with the sterilization of the insane or habitually criminal which is practiced with legal blessings in some sections but can hardly yet be said to be in good standing. In the days of ancient Greece defective babies were exposed to inhuman deaths in the mountains with classic heartlessness, while cripples and people of deformities whose babyhood escaped that inhuman treatment were the objections of open derision.

BUT the fact is that many of those who begin life under such handicaps develop into adults of great achievement. Some of those whose contributions to the world have been the products of genius have been men and women who overcame adversity that seemed almost hopeless. "Incurable" diseases have been cured. Even insanity has been overcome to contribute a great mind to the eternal problem of human advancement.

DR. FISHBAIN, medical journal editor, rebuking the suffering girl for her wish for death, expressed the human responsibility that applies to her case. Her injuries are not "necessarily incurable" he said. To admit that an inhuman problem of life cannot be solved is to admit defeat. To take away deliberately a life that is struggling against adversity is to admit human defeat, and worse than that, the defeat of human courage and will and resourcefulness in the battle with the forces these must overcome to make life better and better and its conquest over the forces that oppose it greater and greater.

IF WE must kill every person who comes up against such an apparently hopeless obstacle of life we shall certainly always admit that such particular obstacles are hopeless. And, after all, who is to say here what is hopeless and what isn't?

Interests Eastland County

WHETHER or not a precinct in a legally dry county can vote wet is a question that has been put up to a commission of the supreme court at Austin. Walker county voted against legalization of 3.2 per cent beer. One precinct of the county voted wet. The county judge refused to issue a beer license to a dealer in the precinct and the matter has been taken before the highest state tribunal for its decision.

ON first assumption one would think that the dry vote of the county-at-large nullified the wet vote of any subdivision of the county. The trial court sustained the opinion of the attorney-general and county judge on the issue but the court of civil appeals sustained the right of the precinct to act wet as well as vote wet. Now the matter is before the supreme court and due for a decision before long, no doubt.

EASTLAND county will be interested. Two precincts of the county—normally dry under local option—have voted for 3.2 per cent beer and are permitting its sale. The situation involves an interesting point of law.

ed delegation of executive authority. He freed an indicted narcotic dealer because he thought the federal government besmirched its majesty in permitting agents to "make a $60 buy." To his mind this was entrapment. He held unconstitutional the new law under which handlers of alcohol ingredients—sugar, corn, molasses—must report on their sales. If upheld, his two rulings will cripple the administration's publicized war on the criminal and economic underworld.

JURISTIC—In the second case, a grocer in a town of only 300 population did an enormous business in sugar. Internal revenue agents discovered—or claimed to—that he had sold 603,000 pounds of sugar within a few months, and they suspected it didn't all go to sweeten tea and coffee. Acting under the new commodity act the field supervisor demanded that he file a list of the purchasers so that the government could ascertain whether the sugar was legally consumed. The grocer refused.

Although the jury convicted the grocer, Judge Hamilton immediately set aside the verdict with a four-page, star-spangled-banner opinion. Funny part of it that two New York jurists—Hand and Moscovitz—have upheld the law. Judge Hamilton made a great point of the fact that the field supervisor demanded the sales report, whereas he contended that congress vested this authority only in Secretary Morgenthau or Internal Revenue Commissioner Helvering.

Under this learned theory of delegation of power cabinet members and commissioners would have to become coppers.

has quietly settled in Washington to file congress into line for his old age pensions plan at the next session. The dynamic, engaging Californian claims a majority of the next house will vote for his $200-a-month subsidy to 60-year-olds. He got 56 votes at the last session.

The Townsendites have been going strong in the west. But now they plan to penetrate the middle west and the east. They are bringing local pressure on individual congressmen regardless of political affiliation. In 1936 he says his gang will endorse the party which underwrites a platform declaration in favor of his program. Claims he has millions of backers, though he hesitates on numerical or political details.

Dr. Townsend resents charges that his is an old age pension movement. He says it is an economic plan for stimulating consumption and therefore production. His weekly newspaper gloats because the 7,000 delegates to their recent gnoacChio ofeb SH SHS recent Chicago convention didn't require the attention of a nurse or a physician, "although Dr. Townsend was present every moment." That seems to prove it's an economic rather than an elderly crusade. But the weekly teems with ads for cures of rheumatism, indigestion, baldness, loss of teeth and lumbago.

AIR—"Gene" Vidal has quietly revised his campaign for promoting the manufacture and sale of small, cheap planes. The federal aeronautical director emphasizes safety and simplicity of operation instead of low cost.

Despite official secrecy, Vidal is sticking tenaciously to his every-man-an-aviator program. The second experimental plane was delivered to the commerce department last week. Engineers are flying both ships almost 24 hours a day to discover new ways of simplifying costs and operation. Vidal has received aid from private manufacturers in lieu of missing government funds. An unnamed Detroit firm has promised that when he hits upon a model suitable to popular fancy, it will guarantee to turn out bodies at the rate of one every 14 minutes. They will be stamped into shape as many automobiles are now. Once the stage is reached Vidal figures he won't have to worry about volume production and chain store prices.

RECORDS—Although official smoothers-out appear to have taken no notice of judicial criticism of the legal chaos produced by countless and conflicting New Deal regulations, they are unobtrusively making amends.

Every executive department is assembling copies of all administrative decisions and executive orders issued since their establishment. In some cases it requires the assignment of 40 people to do the job. The treasury, for instance, is codifying customs, banking, currency, health and income tax proclamations dating back to 1709. They are searching cellars and attics for "the papers." When the batch is complete it will be shipped to the new $17,000,000 Archives building. Citizens and counsel may then get the bad news of what they can't do by making application to the Keeper of the Archives.

It was the comic aspect of the Panama Refining company suit which forced this codification. In that case the court discovered that the corporation was being prosecuted under a "hot oil" regulation which had been repealed months before the oil operators were hauled before the bar.

SIMPLER—AAA lawyers are betting that the reversed processing tax will stick legally, even though the original system of levy may be thrown out by the supreme court.

The twist from illegality to legality sounds so simple as explained by the legalites that they can't understand why they didn't think of the trick the first time. Under the first act the processing taxes were paid into a separate fund and straightway distributed to the farmers. It is possible the court might construe that to be taxation of a class for the benefit of a class.

Under the amended act processing receipts are paid into the general fund of the treasury and re-appropriated by congress in the form of farm benefit payments. That scheme is supposed to comply with the constitutional provision conferring two primary powers of government on the legislative branch—namely, the levying of taxes and appropriation of money. Boiled down, that's the broth of the most serious economic and political issue at Washington these days.

NOTES—Jim Farley's crowd laughs at the idea that Farley is to lose his fieldmarshalship because of the New York setback. Farley has all the strings leading to control of many state delegations. . . . A fresh effort will be made to put through a national lottery scheme. . . . Just as soon as FDR scraps the Sequoia and chooses the Electra yacht the wise-crackers crackle "Mourning Becomes Electra." . . . Twenty-three coal operators from as many districts are coming to advise the Guffey coal board.

NEW YORK. MASTER—New Yorkers in close touch with Washington interpret Secretary Cordell Hull's advocacy of closer cooperation with the League of Nations as designed primarily for Italian consumption. They point out that Hull knows his senate too well to have any illusions that that august body would confer any such powers on the administration as would be necessary to carry out such a policy. Besides, the popular will is clearly on record against ANY intervention in European affairs.

But Italy isn't likely to realize the inherent weakness in Hull's position. After all, he occupies the highest post in the United States government directly concerned with foreign affairs. Inferentially at least he reflects the views of the president. In his present harassed economic position, Mussolini may well forget what an earlier senate did to Woodrow Wilson's foreign policy and notice only that a responsible American official implies a possible future course of action which might have serious consequences for Italy. His reaction to this might help to influence him into paths of greater discretion. If it does, keen observers figure that Hull will have achieved his purpose of chilling an aggressor nation's zest for war without committing the United States to lift so much as a military or economic finger.

Comment runs that in that case he would certainly rate as a true M. D.—Master of Diplomacy. New York was amused by the timing of his speech when Senators Nye and Wheeler—most ardent senatorial advocates of strict neutrality—were busy with other matters in the faraway Philippines and therefore unlikely to jump him for it.

GESTURE—Financial insiders credit Germany with a clever maneuver last week in her announcement—even though it was subsequently denied—that she would refuse to ship arms to Italy and would ban purchases of war materials to be resold to Italy at a profit.

There are two excellent reasons why she won't sell war materials to Italy. One is that she needs all of these she can get for her own purposes. The other is that Italy has practically nothing to use for money. Germany has no more desire to extend credit to Italy than we have. Nor does she wish to become a dumping ground for Italian commodities—so payment in kind is out of the question.

Naturally she doesn't mention these points out loud. So she gets credit for a moral gesture that cannot help but appeal to Britain—and one of the cardinal points in Hitler's foreign policy is to make sure that Britain stays neutral when Germany is ready to step out.

TEST—The legal principles set forth in Judge Coleman's adverse decision on the holding company law would—if upheld—automatically invalidate the Guffey Coal act. But the coal companies will not follow the example of their utility brethren and refrain en masse from registering under the new code. For one thing, they aren't at all sure that the same reasoning does apply to their case. For another, the northern mines really welcome the law as their only hope of offsetting the competitive advantage which the south enjoys because of a lower wage scale.

All the important Pennsylvania companies but one have already signed up. The exception is Andy Mellon's Pittsburgh Coal—always a lone wolf. But Andy is on both sides of the fence—as his Kopper's outfit lost no time hopping on the band-wagon. Insiders estimate that corporations representing between 65 and 70 per cent of total bituminous tonnage mined will eventually register without an argument.

Shrewd observers figure that coal—as a commodity produced intrastate and largely used by interstate carriers (over which the federal government admittedly has jurisdiction)—offers the best possible legal test of federal power to regiment industry under the constitution as it stands.

BURDEN—Desperate financial conditions in the states stand in the way of any plan to shift the relief problem to their shoulders. Lawmakers are forced to have regard for the situation in their respective states when passing upon any program that Roosevelt may propose.

The states have more than $1,000,000,000 due them in delinquent taxes—and no method has been found to collect. More than half of Florida's acreage is delinquent. Interest charges on old bond issues are piling up, making sales taxes and other impositions necessary.

New York figures it a safe bet that lawmakers will balk at allowing the president to shove off any added burdens on their respective states. Their home folks feel they are overtaxed already—and are saying so.

WARDED—Financial men foresee that this parlous situation in the states will complicate FDR's budget-making no end. If he could transfer relief to the states he would be able to show a marked reduction in federal emergency appropriations.

He could then present an encouraging prospect of budget-balancing, in view of increased revenues and proposed retrenchments. Last January he said: "This business of federal relief must stop." That remark was applauded by lawmakers who now squirm when they realize that stopping it would mean a heavier load upon their debt-ridden states.

The easiest way out is to continue federal borrowing. Legislators can then go home and assure their constituents that they ward off added taxes which would have loomed as high as the Rockies.

QUESTIONS—New York employers are in a dither about the state's old age pension law, which goes into effect on January 1, 1936. There are a thousand and one questions they want answered—but, with the deadline less than two months away, they can't get any answers from state authorities. There's nothing they can do but mark time and make as few additions to payrolls as possible.

SQUEEZE—Ex-Chairman Kingsland Macy remains a thorn in the side of the state GOP organization. He just won't stay dead. There's renewed talk of squeezing him out entirely—but that won't be any cinch. He still has enough faithful followers to raise plenty of Cain if the regulars want a battle.

Human and Other Nature

By W. F. BRUCE

Now look at those tomato vines, will you? Somebody's been fooling with them. I didn't think Ray would do that. He acted a great deal fiercer last summer and things never looked that way. Then he has seemed so much gentler in the last few weeks as he plays around between clouds through the shorter days.

I don't think Breeze did it, for I haven't noticed him cutting up much lately. Things did look a little brown when he got on a tear last spring. He whipped around then till everything inside and out showed it; I thought what was in the garden and field would give up and that nothing else would dare come out of the ground. I never saw such actions. But even then things did not look quite so dark.

ROAD TO ADDIS ABABA CROWDED WITH NATIVES

Thousands of native warriors, answering the call of Emperor Haile Selassie, are swarming into Addis Ababa to give homage to the "Lion of Judah," whose country is being invaded by Italian armies. Bob 'Tree Toad' Davis Tells Tale of His Boyhood With Brother Bill

By JOHN SELBY.
NEW YORK, Nov. 14. (AP)—The unmistakable flavor of boyhood, the flavor that makes Huck Finn and Tom Sawyer live through war and famine, has been captured again.

The new boy is named Tree Toad, although he is known more formally as Robert H. Davis of the New York Sun, probably the most widely traveled newspaper man in the world. The total is 700,000 miles, and the man is known the world over as author, editor and raconteur. Tree Toad is "Bob" Davis himself, 60 years ago.

The very young Bob Davis became Tree Toad one afternoon when the sickle pears were ripe in Nebraska, he explains in "Tree Toad," just published. It began when the young man's mother stepped out on the porch, a bright green toad dropped into her lap, and she explained the mysteries of protective coloring in nature.

Invisible Bob.
Brother William, a year or so older than Bob, waited until kitchen duties called Mrs. Davis inside. Then he informed Bob that he had "a great dear." And Bob followed him under the porch. When he emerged a short time later he had been stripped, painted a beautiful green even to his eyelids, and persuaded that he was actually invisible.

Brother Bill pointed to the sickle pear tree:
"Go and help yourself . . . climb up and eat your fill . . . no one can see, you cannot be seen . . . God is takin' care of you . . . bring some back to me, ripe ones."

On the way to the tree Bob indulged one desire he had had for a long time—he thumbed his nose at his father, who was an Episcopal clergyman. Mr. Davis did not notice, which proved that the green-painted boy really was invisible. He climbed into the tree.

Father Could See.
Once there Bob decided to hiss his father, and that was fatal. This dialogue ensued:
"Can you see me?" I inquired, hoping to clear the atmosphere.
"Plainly."

"Where am I?"
"There you are!" Somewhat bewildered he prodded me with the grass rake. "Right there!"

The feeling of security along with my faith began to ooze out of me.

"Father, will you please see mother about this?"
"Yes, my son, later. Come down."

The young man came down, was tubbed with various paint removers, given other significant treatment, and put to bed. The next day was Brother Bill's birthday. He gave Bob a present, which was the nickname Tree Toad. It stuck through prank after prank and page after page.

Man About Manhattan

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK, Nov. 14. (AP)—The old pre-repeal ruse of transporting liquor across town in faked funeral processions, employed by gangsters to throw prying coppers off the scent, now has its counterpart in this always bizarre metropolis.

But, it's more of a gag than a racket, although rumblings from down City Hall way indicate that our forthright Mayor LaGuardia intends to wage war against the practice any day.

The nuisance currently irking the city fathers is the hiring of private ambulances by fun-loving Rover boys or tardy voyagers who face the possibility of missing a boat. Rushed for speed, as everyone is here, the wonder is that the ruse hasn't been employed before.

This is the way you do it: You are sailing for Rome and have five minutes to get from your apartment to the pier, normally a 20-minute taxi ride. Even with the best of luck the liner will be past the Statue of Liberty before your jehu can drop you at the dock, traffic snarls being what they are; so you call a private ambulance and presto! you are careening crazily through town, sirens screaming, pausing neither for traffic nor lights. The cops, of course, have unwittingly assisted in this. For they, humanitarians all, have visualized some mangled wreck-victim in the ambulance and have given the driver carte blanche.

Then there is the practical joker who thinks, and rightly, that it would be amusing to gather some plas and arrive at the home of his hostess of the evening en masse, in an ambulance. The poor woman rushes pell-mell into the street when the ambulance roars up to her address, wondering who on earth has been killed. Then the fun-makers shriek their merriment, pay the driver, and the ambulance returns to await another call.

Headwaiters who take pride in the ability to call guests by name ought to take some notes on memory work from the traffic cop at Park avenue and 50th street. He speaks to half the town, using first names only: "I've been fooled only a few times," he told me the other day. "Once I thought I saw an engineer by the name of Red-der Robertson, and when I hailed him as Red you can imagine my astonishment when Colonel Lind-bergh turned around. It was the only time I ever saw the Colonel wearing a hat, and I guess that's what threw me off stride."

Incidentally, as he told me this, he punctuated his remarks with little interruptions, necessitated by countless greetings of Avenuers out for their morning stroll. It was "Hello, Frank; Hi Al; Good morning, doctor; How do you do, Mrs. Perry" and so on through the day.

Pearl White, who made thrillers for the screen in 1910, is financially interested in a casino on the Rivera. . . . She is now one of the foremost women real estate-ers in California. . . . Another of those interesting fellows you meet around New York is Frank Star-rell (adopted name), an Armenian who fought with the Arabs on the side of the English during the war: Coming out of one battle he discovered himself permanently maimed. A Turk had whacked off his left ear.

'Goose Frolic' Above Niagara Not Alarming

By SIGRID ARNE.
 WASHINGTON, Nov. 14. (AP)—Just as the navy was offering the biological survey a seaplane to save the lives of the 10,000 geese seemingly caught in a death trap above Niagara Falls, the geese pulled out for the south.

"Well, that's the goose of it," commented Dr. W. B. Bell, chief of wild life research.

Old Habit of Geese.
 Bell and his staff evidently knew their geese too well to get as excited as the crowds which watched the flock riding precariously above the falls in the Niagara river.

"It's just an old goose habit," Bell protested even as he talked of using the navy's seaplane. "They always ride the current of a river when they want to rest on migrations. They rest as they ride, and they feel safer on water because they know that land is infested with two-legged enemies carrying guns."

A migrating flock usually will choose a safer river and the public hears nothing about it. For a hundred years, however, birds have been known to ride the Niagara river to death in the falls. But in such instances there usually have been only a handful of birds and they have attracted little or no attention.

Maybe a Hunger Strike.
 There is a comparable, but less dangerous, scene enacted occasionally in the St. Lawrence river above Montreal, says H. C. Oberholser, expert on bird migrations.

The birds float downstream until they approach the bridge at Montreal. Then they seem to become frightened, rising from the water and flying upstream to repeat the ride.

The one disturbing element in the reports reaching the biological survey about the birds at Niagara was the fact they seemingly had not eaten the first day of their ride above the falls. And geese, say wild-life men, are modest enough to want only one meal a day, but they should have that.

If the fast of the 10,000 had continued the survey staff planned to dispatch the navy plane to the scene to frighten the birds out of their foolishly chosen lounge above the thundering falls.

Just as Army is gaining power and momentum with each new start, Charles (Monk) Meyer, the Cadets' durable little backfield star, acquires polish and poise. His passing, amazingly accurate and effective for one so small, has given the West Pointers a most dangerous weapon on the offense. It was his deadly forward-passing that enabled Army to score over Harvard and Yale on successive week-ends. With the poise and finish he has flashed this season when he worked up from the role of substitute to the enviable po-

MUSTANGS RIP U. C. L. A. LINE TO WIN, 21 TO 0

Finley, Southern Methodist University fullback, is shown ripping through the University of California at Los Angeles line for the second Mustang touchdown in the inter-sectional game on the coast. sition of a real star Meyer has displayed an unexpected amount of ruggedness. Against Yale this little 159-pounder took all the boys in blue could hand out for the full 60 minutes of play. And when the final whistle blew he danced off the gridiron the freshest looking man in uniform.

Native Son
 Yale tackles did not spare Meyer because of his size. On the contrary, he was bounced off the turf hard, harder than seemed necessary, time after time. But if it had any effect on Monk it was not noticeable in either his passing or ball-carrying.

No wonder the entire cadet corps stood up and cheered him to an echo when the game ended. Meyer is a particular favorite at West Point. He is a real Army man and a native of West Point. The son of an Army officer, he was born at the post.

Against Harvard, Meyer earned tre headlines with his accurate passing but against Yale he blossomed out as a triple threat. Not only did his passes find their mark but he carried the ball effectively as well. The skinny Meyer surprised every one by actually driving through the line for long gains. Imagine a 159-pound line smasher! But Monk turned in gain after gain off tackle and as long as he picked up precious yardage that is all that counts.

On other occasions he skirted Yale's great ends, Train and Kelley, for substantial gains. Meyer carried the ball over for a score around Kelley when the Eli line presented too compact a defense.

Expert Wingmen
 It was Meyer who bobbed up in the final minutes to intercept the pass which proved to be Yale's final bid for the touchdown which would have turned an Eli defeat into an eleventh-hour victory. And when it was all over there was Meyer ready to punt the ball out of the danger zone.

True to Army tradition, Coach Gar Davidson has developed a fine set of ends in Shuler, Janzan and Stromberg. It was Russell Janzan, substituting for Capt. Bill Shuler, who made a spectacular catch of Meyer's pass against the goal post to give the Cadets their second score and break the Bull Dog's back.

Army has a grand line, one that will improve as the season progresses and is likely to hold its own against any foe—and that includes Pittsburgh, Notre Dame and Navy.

"Thank you, sir, and my daughter shall sing one of her best ballads for she and I both love all anglers, they be such quiet, honest, civil men. In the meantime will you drink a draught of red cow's milk? . . ."

In the manner of Isaac Walton, that was a day well spent along the streams of England in the seventeenth century. A new edition of the classic Compleat Angler, reviving for twentieth century readers its simple, entertaining dialog and pastoral beauty, has just been issued by the Oxford University Press (New York).

"Now, friends, as we cross this meadow I will tell you why you lost that great fish at the brook's turn. Yes, that was the grand sire of all trouts in the middle country. . . ."

"'Twas a good fish indeed. If I had had the luck to have taken up that rod then he should not have brake my line by running to the rocks as you suffered him; I would have held him with the bent of my rod—"

"On my word, the maid and her mother do be a-milking again. I will give her a fish and persuade them to sing us a song. . . ."

The volume is small enough to be carried in a coat pocket.

The quotations in the foregoing are the old master's own composition and a sample of the pleasant reading which you will find mixed with the scientific lore of angling and homely philosophy. Many old songs and verses are included.

The old gentleman who left his literary mark on the page of time wasn't a fishing crank. He used worms, grasshoppers and various kinds of bait when pursuing his favorite sport, but he seemed a bit partial to the dry fly.

For instance, he notes that "there are 12 kinds of artificial made flies to angle with upon the top of the water." One is a "sad yellow-flie in June, the body is made of black wool with a yellow list on either side, the wings of a buzzard feather, bound with black braked hemp."

The writer sums up at the end of his fly-making chapter: "Thus you have a jury of flies likely to betray and condemn all the trouts in the river."

Walton was a true fisherman and sportsman at a time when such creatures were scarce. He enjoyed the simple pleasures of life among company of his kind. The so-called great men who lived when he was casting "for trouts" are names in history now.

HIGH COURAGE

by Jeanne Bowman

SYNOPSIS: Anne Farnsworth calls herself Nikki Nielsen, for want of a better name. She knows she is not the daughter of the late Luke and Lucinda Farnsworth, and that unless she can learn more of her past and of Luke's intentions she cannot inherit his large fortune. She is living in the Finnish colony of Union Town, beloved of her neighbors and deserted by her "relatives" and even by Rob Crocker, her fiance. But John Neuman, with whom she is on a picnic, has proved helpful and kind.

Chapter 28 New Future

"Tomorrow I sail," John said at length. "And how long will you be away?" Anne asked. "About three months." "That means you'll return early in August?" "Yes," he was silent a moment, then he turned to Anne and looked at her anxiously, "You'll be careful while I'm away?" "Careful?" she repeated and laughed. "Goodness, John, you make me think there are goblins 'bout to get me."

"There may be," he retorted. "Things have been quiet lately because there's been no fishing, but... did you notice the water as we crossed the channel? The season opens soon and the fish are running in hordes."

He picked up a flat round pebble and skimmed it across the water, watching it skip along as though that were the most important thing in life. Anne watched him, not realizing the tenderness in her smile. She wanted to ruffle the glinting strands of his hair, to smooth the opened collar of his shirt.

"You know you're very precious to me, Nikki," he said as the rock dropped with a plop. "I... why, thank you." "Going away I had to tell you. You might not be here when I get back. You're the one I told you about that day I came back from Crescent City. I've known it since the first movement I saw you. I'll never forget that, Nikki, that football dance. I was feeling pretty good, had some fine luck on the field that afternoon and folks were treating me grand. I staggled it to the dance, just as I always did, because I could never find a girl to suit me."

"Duke Lansing and I were standing in the door, when you came in. You were looking very serious. I liked that. I was tired of giggles. You came on up the steps, you remember that short flight, and then you smiled at Duke. It was like the sun rising."

"There you were, everything I'd dreamed about in one girl. And Duke knew you. He introduced us, and wangled the dance for me, forced your escort to give it up. I won that dance and those three encores with my touchdown that afternoon. I'd have made a dozen, Nikki, if I'd thought there was such a prize waiting."

"After I'd given you back to that chap who brought you, I sailed over to Duke to ask who you were, where I could meet you. Oh, I remembered your name all right. I just hadn't associated it with the fisheries. But when Lansing said you were Luke Farnsworth's daughter that finished it."

"But why?" "Nikki, don't you see the difference it made, me a fisherman, and your father the cannery owner? Oh, I know this is America and there is only democracy and the char-woman's daughter marries the merchant prince... in stories." Anne looked at him in growing wonder. She was the girl who gave life a meaning to him. And she'd never suspected it. But hadn't she? Hadn't she known that that peculiar magnetic attraction he had for her couldn't have existed unless it was mutual? "And now?" The words left her lips of their own volition. "Now?" he looked at her. "Now I'm just where I was when you jumped from the Ahti that day. I couldn't believe my eyes when I saw it was you, and that I'd been privileged to hold you in my arms for that brief moment."

"Then John—" "I'm still afraid, Nikki. You don't know yet, who you are, Nikki!" he cried, for Anne had jumped to her feet and after one quick intake of her breath, had fled into the shelter of the woods. Running blindly, cut to the quick by her interpretation of John's words, Anne carried with her two astounding facts. She loved John Neuman. She never had loved Rob Crocker.

Checked in her flight by a barrier of hazel bushes, she pushed their branches back with her hands and slipped through to a tiny dell, carpeted by short grass and cut through by a small stream which trickled along over moss-grown rocks.

Anne sat down and stared before her in dismay. She, who had thought herself cured of all love, had repeated her mistake in a scant fortnight. Could she depend upon her emotions? Perhaps she was merely fickle at heart, spinning like a magnetic needle to the nearest point of attraction.

With characteristic honesty she faced herself. She had been fascinated by Rob Crocker. Her pride had been satisfied by his obvious preference for her when so many other girls and women were bidding for his favor. And she had wanted a home of her own, a place she might tend with her own hands.

Her emotional nature, unstirred by the passing flirtations at school and abroad, had responded to the clever touch of the man of the world. But now she knew the difference.

"Nikki!" John was calling. "Nikki, where are you?" She heard footsteps on the other side of the thicket, then the branches parted and John stepped through, strode across the grass and gathered her into his arms.

"Nikki, forgive my blundering way of saying things. You don't understand, dear. It's you I love, you're worth all the names in the world."

"But you were right," Anne didn't fight against the blissful comfort of his arms. "I don't know—"

"Let me finish what I was going to say. You don't know that you're not Anne Farnsworth. You have only Tom Farley's word for it. If I dared think he was right, that you were just Nikki, I could tell you all I've wanted to tell you."

But, John, he is right. I know. Judge Kellogg knows. Do you think the judge would let them do what they've done if he wasn't sure? John, I am just Nikki!" The pathetic loneliness in her dark eyes broke down Neuman's last reserve. "And does a name mean so much to you?" "It means belonging to someone," she answered. (Copyright, 1935, by Jeanne Bowman.)

Their leavetaking, tomorrow, is both sad and happy.

The World of Stamps

By QUINTON JAMES

Three sets of stamps, all commemorative, have been prepared by Russia for issuance within the next month or so. One group will appear simultaneously with the birth anniversary, the sixtieth, of M. I. Kalinin, president of the central executive committee of the Soviet. Bearing a reproduction of Kalinin's autograph, the stamps will picture him at various times in his life, as follows:

Three-kopec lilac, as a workman in Revel from a photograph taken in 1901; 5-k green, in the country during the haying season; 10-k slate, making a speech, and 20-k brown, his latest portrait. The second set is to commemorate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the death in 1910 of Tolstoi. It will contain three values, all bicolored. The 3-kopec lilac and black will have his portrait at the age of 60, the 10-k brown and blue his portrait in the later years of his life and the 20-k brown and green, his monument in the museum bearing his name at Moscow.

The final group of three is to pay tribute to "men of the revolution," such as 2-kopec violet, Soviet army leader, M. V. Frouse, who died in 1925; 4-k lilac, N. E. Baumann, slain in Moscow in 1905, and 40-k gray and brown, S. M. Kirow, killed at Leningrad last December.

Andorra Change Finding the need of further 20-centime stamps, the small semi-independent state of Andorra in the Pyrennes mountains on the Franco-Spanish border has used the overprint to create that value from the 50-c denomination in the current set. This issue is inscribed "Valleys of Andorra," the government of which is under the joint control of France and the Spanish bishop of Urgel.

The first Andorra stamps on 1928 were issued under Spanish administration, but since 1931 they have been classified as under French administration.

The new surcharge bears a reproduction of St. Miguel d'Engolasters.

New U. S. Uncle Sam's next venture in new postal paper is to be a 25-cent air-mail, to come out simultaneously with the start of transpacific airmail service. At the same time it will introduce a new value for air postage in this country.

First day sales have been set for November 8 in both San Francisco and Washington, with first-day covers to be handled by the San Francisco postoffice. The rate of postage is to be 25 cents to Hawaii, 50 cents to Guam and 75 cents to the Philippines.

The new stamp, the size of a special delivery, is to be horizontal and printed in blue. Its central design shows the sun rising over American shores with a seaplane in flight. On the water are four different types of ships to show the development of Pacific transportation. In the upper left-hand corner is the U. S. shield and other upper corner that of the Philippine islands.

Quezon Philippine President in All But Name Since 1916

By FORD WILKINS WASHINGTON, Nov. 14. — Manuel L. Quezon, president-elect of the new Philippine commonwealth, has been president of his country in everything but name for more than 19 years. Even by name he has been called "President" Quezon ever since he returned to Manila from Washington in 1916 to become president of the Philippine senate. Many Filipinos admit that the title was a sort of compensation for lack of long-desired independence, while some have frankly used it in full confidence that he would be president some day.

Dapper, confident Quezon and Vice President-elect Sergio Osmena, his tall and suave political running mate, have held almost uninterrupted leadership of the Filipinos longer than any contemporary political chieftains in the world. Together they have fought for Philippine independence since the first Philippine mission came to Washington to ask for it.

Political Team As a political team they have been compared to partners in law, one of whom appears in court to sway juries with inescapable logic, while the other remains unassuming in the background to pour over legal tomes and work out a winning case. Quezon, the spectacular, is the one to sway the people with oratory, while Osmena, the student and philosopher, pursues his course more quietly. To the quieter Osmena it never would have occurred to pitch an audience into frenzy of acclaim with the line that made Quezon famous years ago: "I would rather have a government run like hell by Filipinos than one run like heaven by Americans!" Divergence in political thought has split them asunder more than once. Twice these breaks have come close to permanency. Only by adroit maneuvering was "Quezon able to lose a breach caused by his rejection of the Hare-Hawes-Cutting independence bill which the Osmena mission brought home in 1933. Quezon campaigned against it. The Filipinos turned it down. Quezon went to Washington and helped put through the Tydings-McDuffie law, which he considers more favorable to the Filipinos. It was accepted. Os-

Big Ten Campaigns Against The Bottle-Toting Grid Fan

By ROBERT WALTON. CHICAGO, Nov. 14. (AP) — They're taking the "hic-hic, hooray" out of the Big Ten football. The familiar gurgle of the hip flask that threatened to develop into a roar last year is being reduced to a mere trickle.

The well-known inebriate who used to liven things up until he became obstreperous is missing. He doesn't get by the ticket-taker any more.

It is a painless operation—this matter of separating the nip from football—says Maj. John L. Griffith, commissioner of Big Ten athletics.

The campaign got under way as long ago as last December following years of discussion without much action.

Take "Drastic" Action. "Last year," says Griffith, "drinking during games increased so much that drastic action became necessary."

So far, however, the "drastic action" has consisted merely of warning cards enclosed with tickets, and announcements over loud-speaker systems at the games, urging spectators to desist.

Some schools have stationed extra guards at stadium entrances with instructions to ask bottle-toters to keep their flasks under cover.

That system was tried at Illinois on Dad's day when the Illini played Iowa, but it was hardly necessary, reports George Huff, director of athletics.

Only three persons were refused admission to the stadium because of drunkenness; only seven were cautioned, and no one—once in—had to be ejected, he says.

At Purdue, drinking during games has passed out almost entirely. A party of Chicagoans attending the Purdue-Carnegie Tech game admitted afterward they had a bottle with them, but were afraid to bring it out. "Dead-Soldier" Check-Up. One good way of measuring the drinking during a game is by the number of empty bottles found in the stadium afterward.

"This year there haven't been enough empties to constitute a problem," says Major Griffith. The big Michigan stadium, once one of the favorite "spas" in the Big Ten, is almost as dry as a temperance meeting these Saturday afternoons, says Griffith.

"They're waiting until after the game to celebrate victory or drown their sorrow," says Griffith. One of the things that puzzles Griffith is how drinking ever got a hold on football crowds in the first place.

"You never see any drinking at a baseball game," he says, "and I can't think of any other sport where you see it."

mena, discredited, broke away and formed a new political party. The battle was furious. Quezon won, as he always has when he went to the people, and the final result was a coalition ticket in the recent presidential elections which swept both Quezon and Osmena into office by enormous majorities.

Quezon has been called a political genius of the tropics. Students of Philippine politics say his great power lies in his thorough knowledge of the temper of his people. Emotional himself, he knows how to sway his people into pure hero-worship.

But as Washington politicians know him, he is astute in politics, far-seeing in governmental affairs and scrupulous in his devotion to the Philippine people.

British Eyes Are Turned on Lloyd George in Vote

By HAROLD P. BRAMAN.
LONDON, Nov. 14. (AP) — The three liberal groups in parliament have been heading toward a bitter fight at the November 14 general election, the rifts in the party apparently being as wide as ever. David Lloyd George, war-time premier and now a rabid new-dealer, is largely responsible for the rebirth of the war within the party for he is out once more to capture a party leadership.

Sir John Simon and Sir Herbert Samuels, chiefs of the main liberal groups in commons, are maneuvering both against each other and against Lloyd George.

Tariff Divides Party.
Simon heads the wing which remained in the government through the liberal tangle over the tariff. He leads 36 "Simonites," and the group is represented in the cabinet by four ministers. The "Samuelites" number 31, and form what is known as the real liberal opposition in the house. Samuel, then home secretary in the cabinet, led them out of the government in 1932 as a protest against the tariff, demanding a continuance of free trade.

Lloyd George Real Threat.
Samuel and his group have not been a particularly active opposition, their protests being mild in comparison to the labor opposition. Often Samuel has given strong support to the government. Efforts have been made from time to time to woo Samuel back to the cabinet, but without result. There is always the possibility, however, that Samuel might throw his strength to the government if it appeared that labor had a chance of winning.

Lloyd George stands out as the big factor in the liberal ranks. His sudden ascent to new political prestige on his new deal proposals might endanger the positions of both other leaders. What Lloyd George has been seeking is Samuel's backing, or at least the backing of a majority of Samuelites in parliament, for his program. He seemed less concerned with the Simon faction, regarding it as too firmly attached to the government.

Lloyd George also has been stumping the country, trying to build a personal following not only of liberals but of disgruntled government supporters and laborites. If he gets sufficient backing, he would regard himself as the real liberal leader.

Live Penguins With Marine Exhibit

Here we see "Ike and Mike" members of the penguin family that accompany the monster 68-ton whale to be seen here Monday, Nov. 18th.

Penguins to Be Here Monday With Exhibit of Whale

One of the most remarkable creatures of the animal kingdom is the proud, strutting penguin from Little America.

When Admiral Byrd and his party landed in Little America, countless millions of these funny little fellows were the only reception crowd. Having never before seen a human being, they came up and were very friendly with the entire Byrd crew, the reason they had no fear was that nothing had ever scared or tried to hurt them, and they were the pets of every man at the Antarctic base.

When the Eureka whaling company brings their mammoth marine exhibit of sea life here Monday, November 18, on a specially constructed railroad car over 100 feet long, which will be located near the T. & P. freight depot, the exhibition will include among the many attractions, a family of penguins from Little America. Other features of the exhibit are a monster 68-ton whale, man-eating sharks, a giant octopus, Seattle sea-monster, black widow spiders and others. Madam Sirwell and her troupe of trained fleas are also a feature with the exhibit.

The exhibit car will remain here for one day only and will be open to the public from 2 p. m. until 11 p. m. daily.

representative of the Red Cross, were returning from Ranger where they organized that community for the annual Red Cross roll call. Mr. Bridge, driving his own car, ran suddenly into a bunch of young cattle on the highway, damaging the machine. Another car, passing them at the time, came near disaster.

The near accident illustrates sharply what can occur from the presence of livestock on highways used by fast cars. There is a state law against this menace. Yet there appears to be such laxity of enforcement that the law is not respected. Next to drunken drivers, a loose animal on the highway is about the worst menace imaginable. The law ought to be enforced with a strictness that will incur the greatest respect for it.

Politics At Random

By BYRON PRICE.
(Chief of Bureau, the Associated Press, Washington.)

The political aspects of the unemployment problem are so numerous and so crucial that it is no wonder party leaders find even the most complicated statistics on that subject thoroughly fascinating.

One of the most widely-accepted assumptions about 1936 is that the economic situation of the country—the degree of recovery—will have a most important effect in the election. Just now the one really difficult factor in that situation is unemployment.

Industrial activity manifestly is picking up. Credit is expanding. Agriculture is finding less to complain about, land values are better. All along the line, the economic indices—all except one—point toward improvement.

No completely reliable figures are available, but all sources of economic information agree that reemployment has failed to keep pace with the general trend of recovery. Some even question whether there has been any real expansion of employment at all in the last year.

Without such an expansion, real and recognizable, political arguments that the depression is over run into immediate difficulty.

Spending Program.
That, however, is only a part of the story. Another prime topic of political discussion is the spending program of the Roosevelt administration. With that, too, the unemployment situation is linked directly.

So long as a disproportionate percentage of workers remain jobless, relief demands on the treasury will be heavy. Even if the administration does not ask for large appropriations, it is certain that the states and municipalities working through their representatives in congress, will initiate and vigorously press such appropriations.

It is plain that Mr. Roosevelt does not desire to enter the 1936 campaign as the advocate of another top-heavy annual deficit, but many of his supporters see only one way out. That is why the works administration is trying so feverishly to save its program from failure. That is why new methods are being considered to boost private pay-rolls.

What these new methods will be is not yet certain. The effort to induce business to move ahead confidently continues, but the results hardly are all that Washington desires. The alternative may be new legislation at the next session of congress for the one purpose of spreading employment.

Peanuts Worth More Than Cotton to County

18,000 ACRES ARE PLANTED TO PRODUCT

Peanut farms in Texas will average around $100 more income this year due to the peanut program which includes the important feature of diverting surplus peanuts into oil, E. A. Miller, extension agronomist in charge of the Texas peanut program, has estimated.

"This should bring about $1,000,000 more into Texas this year," Miller declared. "It is estimated that Texas growers are receiving at least one cent a pound more for their peanuts as a result of the program." Texas producers raise one-tenth of all the peanuts grown in the United States or about 100,000,000 pounds a year. This year's estimate of Texas peanuts is 117,000,000 pounds.

Miller explained that peanut adjustment payments, including the diversion payments to peanut oil mills are having a strong effect in maintaining a fair price for peanuts in spite of the fact that commercial estimates place this year's total United States crop at 200,000,000 pounds more than the 1934 crop.

Price Jumped. "Last year the peanut market opened at 60 cents a bushel, but when diversion plan became effective, the market price immediately jumped to 80 cents a bushel and even higher," the extension agronomist said. "The market opened this year with much better price."

"Besides the good peanut prices, as a result of the program the 1935 Texas contract signers of about 8,500 will receive approximately $375,000 in benefit payments."

According to Miller, details are now being prepared by the AAA for a production control program for 1936 and 1939 similar to the 1935 adjustment program. He pointed out that the peanut program is based more on acreage stabilization than on reduction of acreage. The contract signers of 1935 were allowed to plant a total of 5,000 more acres in Texas than in 1934.

The secretary of agriculture, following the first diversion plan which will close November 15, invites the peanut millers to submit offers to purchase, on or after November 16, on a second diversion plan, a specified quantity of farmers' stock peanuts of the 1935 crop, for which producers will receive not less than $65 per ton for No. 1 Spanish peanuts which have at least 70 per cent sound meat.

The Humble Peanut. "The humble peanut is a more profitable crop than the yield of cotton in Eastland county, on the same acreage," according to C. Metzger, county agent. "There are about 18,000 acres planted to peanuts in the county," Mr. Metzger said, "and the crop will sell for more money than the same acreage planted in cotton with much less labor for production and harvesting."

"This 18,000 acres should, at 20 bushels to the acre, produce 360,000 bushels, which at 90 cents per bushel, will amount to about $324,000, plus 15 cents per bushel benefits under the peanut program, equalling $54,000. Add to this the value of the hay at $4 per ton for 18,000 tons, will bring the farmers of Eastland county the neat sum of $420,000. Making a grand total of $450,000, approximately, for the peanuts, diversions and hay should be worth $450,000 to Eastland county farmers this year, or nearly one-half million dollars.

"By the peanut program our farmers will be paid this $54,000, not for reducing the peanut acreage, but for maintaining the normal acreage. Eastland county was allotted 25,500 acres, but only a little more than 18,000 acres was planted."

"This same land planted to cotton would bring the farmers only about $125,000. So, by these figures it will be seen that the humble peanut is a rather profitable crop, at that," he said.

Needy Cisco Families Depend on Welfare Ass'n for Clothes

Many needy Cisco families have received clothing, bedding, shoes and other items from the Cisco United Charities and Welfare association during the old clothes campaign which will continue through the winter months, according to H. L. Dyer, president. While the response from the citizens in the matter of donating usable garments has been exceptionally generous, there is still need for more bedding and clothes, he said.

"We are particularly in need of clothing and shoes for children," Dyer explained. "The number of children supplied has already drained our stock and we expect the demand to be greater as the weather grows more severe. Old sweaters, dresses, shoes, overcoats, undergarments that have been outgrown will be most welcome. In fact any article of clothing that is serviceable enough to help some child from suffering will assist the work. Canned fruits and vegetables could be used to a good advantage, also."

Mrs. Alex Ward, secretary, is at the association office and store room, 607 D avenue, each Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoon from 1 to 5. She will receive donations during these periods or will arrange to have some one call for articles that are available to the organization.

Withdrawal of government agencies from direct relief work has placed an added responsibility on local relief organizations throughout the country. The old clothes campaign is the local movement to shoulder the responsibility of caring for needy families. The Cisco United Charities and Welfare association membership is made up of one member from each fraternal, civic, and religious organization in the city.

Leach Accepts Rogers Memorial Chairmanship

W. J. Leach said Thursday that he has accepted appointment as chairman for Cisco of the Will Rogers Memorial Fund campaign.

Within the next two or three days, he said, it is hoped to have a definite plan in shape by which Cisco may discharge its obligations to this campaign.

Through Vice Chairman H. Brandon the campaign will be carried to the schools and every child given opportunity to express his or her affection for the late humorist by means of a small contribution to the fund, Mr. Leach announced.

HOUSE ADOPTS SAFETY DEP'T PROBE MOVE

AUSTIN, Nov. 14. (AP) — The house today adopted a resolution authorizing a committee investigating the department of safety, including the charges that "said that department officials had impeded law enforcement by giving advance information as to the actions of the department in law enforcement efforts."

This action followed the dismissal of Ranger Captain Hickman. Hickman is quoted as saying that a high state official tipped off the raid he was ordered to make on a resort near Fort Worth. The resolution was pushed through quickly, the proponents cutting off debate.

Rotary Is Called "Aristocracy of the Best in Men"

The genius of Rotary exists in its ability to lift men above their environment into a peculiar aristocracy, R. H. (Dick) Wells, past-governor of District 5, comprising Utah and Idaho, told a joint meeting of Cisco and Eastland Rotary clubs Thursday noon.

It is neither an aristocracy of wealth, nor an aristocracy of birth, he said, but an aristocracy that means exactly what the word implies—the rule of the best in men.

The speaker, enlivening his eloquent address with numerous humorous stories that sharpened the thoughts he brought, divided this "aristocracy" into four applications:

1. An aristocracy of fellowship. Rotary, he said, does not imply the convivial sort of fellowship, which aims purely at a good time. But it implies an educational fellowship, a companionship that gives its members "an understanding attitude toward many things." The intimacies that are created among the men of different vocations, different beliefs and ideals and, often enough, different nationalities and religions, solve many problems by simply changing points of view, he said.

2. An aristocracy of fair dealing, commonly termed "vocational service." Rotary, Wells told the clubs, teaches a member to take pride in his profession. "Selfishness isn't profitable, either commercially or spiritually," said he.
3. An aristocracy of citizenship, known in Rotary parlance as "community service." "The genius of this Rotarian aristocracy is in the fact that it makes 'lifters' out of 'leaners'."

4. The aristocracy of goodwill, known as "international service." This, said Wells, is purely and distinctively Rotary. In twenty years Rotary has grown from one club to nearly 3,700 scattered over 74 different nations and political subdivisions. "Our mission is not to prevent war. But our mission is to bring about between people and nations of widely separated nationalities and race and creed a common and sympathetic understanding. Rotary has never had a paid organizer. It has spread itself because one neighbor gives to another."

Wells was introduced by President O. J. Russell of the Cisco club, who presided. His address was the only feature of the program, which was held on the roof garden of the Laguna hotel.

J. H. Reynolds is spending a few days in Mineral Wells.

PILOT KILLED IN AIR CRASH AT FT. WORTH

FORT WORTH, Nov. 14. (AP) — Cliff Maus of Waco, pilot with the Braniff Airways, was instantly killed early Saturday when the Waco-bound mail plane crashed in a street of a Riverside suburb and was demolished.

It was believed that Maus became lost in a heavy fog and flew the ship into the ground. The plane fell in a vacant lot, narrowly missing a residence, and bounced 15 feet in the air.

It was estimated to be travelling 200 miles an hour at the crash. It was carrying no passengers or mail. The ship did not burn.

The proclamation will become effective tomorrow on the promulgation of Secretary Dern at Manila, where today the Philippines are celebrating, awaiting President-elect Quezon's inauguration, marking the first step of the Philippines toward complete autonomy.

Mrs. George P. Fee, first named chairman, was unable to serve because of the illness of her mother.

LOBOES AND BULLDOGS TO MEET AT 3:30

Now that the complexion of the top of the district high school football standing has been determined, we shall gather at Chesley field this afternoon at 3:30 to determine who shall occupy the district cellar. Ranger, whose top-heavy victories in winning the district championship last year make their present slump almost unbelievable, will come here to battle the Cisco Lobos, equally ineffective in previous play, for the honor of keeping off the bottom.

Neither team has won a conference game. Cisco came near to accomplishing the feat with a nothing-all tie with the Eastland Mavericks, conquerors of the Bulldogs. But even then Eastland outplayed the home talent. Since the Mavericks defeated Ranger with great difficulty, the comparison gives the Cisco team little, if any, superiority over the Bulldogs.

The game was postponed from the traditional Armistice day date on Monday afternoon because of rain. Prospect of a much bigger crowd that would have been attracted there is seen in the fact that the clash will be the only one in the district this afternoon.

Both teams were reported in fair condition. The Lobo spirit is good, despite the long record of reverses, and hopes for a victory over the Bulldogs are high.

WORK BEGINS ON HATCHERY

Work on the WPA fish hatchery project began Thursday morning with 30 men employed. This number will be increased as rapidly as possible, to the maximum. Supt. S. B. Wright of the hatchery said. The first work is that of rebuilding the water and drainage system serving the ponds.

The work, calling for a total expenditure of approximately $35,000, is in two WPA projects.

SHANGHAI, China, Nov. 14. (AP) — Reports of an impending Japanese attack on the Chinese quarter, promptly denied today by Japanese authorities, created a condition of near panic among the Chinese. JAP EMBASSY WARNS NANKING

NANKING, China, Nov. 14. (AP) — The Japanese embassy today warned Nanking authorities of the necessity for a more thorough carrying out of China's for suppression of anti-Japanese activities throughout the country.

Japan insisted that recent incidents in Shanghai is regarded as a breach of the Nanking government's mandates of suppressing anti-Japanese organizations.

Says Nation Future Rests on Character

Neither preparedness, nor the lack of preparedness will prevent the United States having a war, the Rev. J. Stuart Pearce, First Presbyterian church pastor, told the Cisco Lions club Wednesday in an address on "The Future of America."

America's destiny, in the end, he said, rests upon the character of her people.

A spiritual foundation underlies the material and political strength of the nation, he said. This spiritual foundation must be strengthened if the nation's continued peace and strength are assured.

POPE SAID TO DESIRE DELAY IN SANCTIONS

(By Associated Press) Pope Pius, ecclesiastical sources said Thursday, is striving to postpone the application of sanctions in the interest of peace.

At Cairo, Egypt, a British officer shot and killed a rioter and wounded three others, making four dead and 150 injured, during the two days of anti-British rioting.

British authorities said the situation did not call for action by the government, and no consideration is given as to the possible use of British troops for police work.

Ethiopia charged that the invading Italian soldiers violated Ethiopian women at Aduwa, Aksum, Adigrat and Abbagarina. They said wives of Ethiopian priests were violated and that Italians entered convents and violated young sisters.

A Rome communique said that 300 natives and an unidentified white man, were killed on the Ethiopian side, and 17 Italians were killed and 63 wounded in an engagement in the upper valley of the Fafan river.

Fort Worth and Cisco exchanged ministers in appointments announced at the concluding session of the Central Texas Methodist Episcopal church conference at Brownwood Sunday. The Rev. Frank L. Turner, for two years pastor of the First Methodist church here, was sent to Hemphill Heights church, Fort Worth, which is preparing to build a large edifice in the Texas Christian university sector of Fort Worth. To fill the vacancy created by this transfer, the Rev. W. H. Cole, for two years pastor at Trinity Heights church, Fort Worth, will come to Cisco. The Rev. Preston Broxton was returned to the pastorate of the Twelfth Street Methodist church.

The Rev. Mr. Turner, who came here two years ago from Missouri Avenue Methodist church in Fort Worth, will begin moving his family Thursday of this week.

Honor Rogers by Supporting Red Cross in Its Mission of Relief, Says Writer

By MRS. P. P. SHEPARD

To quote Will Rogers: "The Red Cross is the only thing I can think of in America that we couldn't possibly get along without. If the people only knew one-half of its worth, we could raise any sum of money in 24 hours. My membership this year is already bearing fruit. I've booked twelve benefits and I hope I won't disgrace the organization."

In 1927 Will Rogers was made a life member of the American Red Cross by vote of the central committee, and every cent raised by his programs and special trips in aiding stricken districts was turned over to the local Red Cross organizations, which were struggling to rehabilitate the farms and city homes. It was well known that Will Rogers shouldered all his own expenses as well as those of his flying pilot when touring any of the stricken districts in the Mississippi flood area last year. In his intimate contact with the Red Cross organization, he came to a fuller realization of the value of the Great American Mother in times of destitution, sickness and despair. He passed on his knowledge thus gained to the people who were not able to know of the vastness and completeness of floods, fire and famine disasters. He gave himself, his money, his talents. Can you honor him by carrying on these deeds of mercy?

Old Stereoscope May Show Way To New Movies

By SIGRID ARNE.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 14 (AP) — Grandmother's old stereoscope with its colored picture post cards soon may set off a revolution in the motion picture industry comparable to the one which happened when sound equipment was introduced.

Those stereoscope pictures had a depth and reality at which moving picture research men are casting a jealous eye. They would like to transfer that quality to their films and they begin to see a way to do it.

They gathered for a program here which forecast to their minds the manner in which movie fans will be viewing their favorite stars in a few years.

Bespectacled Audience.
The most obvious difference was the appearance of the audience. They all wore glasses which looked like dark sun glasses. The pictures, they said, were so round and real they found themselves craning their necks from one side to another to see around objects in the film just as people in a legitimate theater crane their necks to see around a pillar in their line of vision.

The pictures they viewed were just stills of pieces of sculpture and buildings prepared by Dr. Clarence Kennedy, of Smith college, for his classes. But motion picture engineers believe they can be duplicated in film for moving pictures.

If motion picture films are made to take over the old stereoscopic magic, research men foresee a change in technique. Two pictures will have to be made of each scene through camera lenses set as far apart as the eyes of the average human being.

How It Works.
Those films could be superimposed on each other, and that's where the glasses worn by the audience come in. They are made so they can pick out the two images on the film sending the one meant for the right eye to the right eye, and the one meant for the left eye to the left eye. That would duplicate the manner in which human beings see, since the eyes actually get two slightly variant images when one looks at an object.

There were amusing angles to the discussion of the new methods. Homer G. Tasker, a research engineer of Long Island City, and president of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, voiced the practical question: "Will movie fans consent to wearing glasses?" If they do the glasses probably will be handed out at the door in separate paper envelopes. They will have to be sterilized between each wearing, and it may be that the more particular fans will want to purchase their own pair.

Maybe the individuals with unusually wide set eyes or those with unusually narrow heads will have to select their theater seats with more care, Kennedy said. Those with wide set eyes seeking seats in the back of the theater, and those with narrow heads in the front.

Lou Gehrig Recalls Time Will Rogers Imitated Judge Landis at Banquet

Will Rogers loved baseball—and baseball loved Will Rogers: A year ago Rogers attended every game of the World series between St. Louis and Detroit. He spent all of his time with the players of both teams and the newspapers covering the series.

He wrote much about them then, but now Lou Gehrig, star of the diamond, tells about Rogers.

"I had met Will Rogers several times casually, but the first time I had the opportunity of receiving the full benefit of his rare wit and personality was at an affair given by the Baseball Writers of New York during the winter three or four years ago. This annual affair is an exclusive stag dinner attended by approximately seven hundred baseball luminaries, including players, managers and all executives. The baseball writers act as hosts, and during the dinner a show is given, and believe you me, it is a razzing contest from start to finish.

"On this particular evening, after much revelry (it was a festive occasion—you can imagine), Will Rogers arose to speak. Judge Landis was seated next to him. From somewhere Rogers had obtained an old battered hat, the duplicate of Landis', also a cane. He put the hat on, leaned his chin on the cane, a characteristic pose of the august high priest of baseball.

"His caricature was so utterly amusing that the entire audience was on the verge of panic. I only wish I could remember each and every witticism he uttered that night. The outstanding burlesque was his take-off of the judge handing down his decision on the twenty-nine million dollar Standard Oil case, in which Landis had gained prestige some years previous. He held his audience for one hour straight, and needless to say, the one who enjoyed it most, being almost steadily convulsed, was Judge Landis himself.

"This is the night that will always remain in my memory of Will Rogers; a night when I was fortunate to be among those present when our most typical American was his most lovable self—and in rare humor."

Theodore Roosevelt Among First to Realize Influence Rogers Later Had

Ex-President Theodore Roosevelt was among the first to realize the influence Will Rogers was to play in American life.

Albert D. Lasker, advertising genius, recalls an episode in the life of Will Rogers, indicating his honesty of opinion which was so definitely recognized by the American public.

Mr. Lasker says: "The first time that I had the pleasure and privilege of meeting Will Rogers was in the last days of October, 1918—just 17 years ago. It was at that time assistant to Will H. Hays, chairman of the republican national committee.

"Late one afternoon, ex-President Theodore Roosevelt phoned me to come to his office. Arriving there he took me aside and said: 'I have in one of my rooms a man to whom I wish to make you known. I met him but a few days ago. He is an actor who is performing in a midnight Ziegfeld show on the roof of the Amsterdam theater. His turn consists of a monologue wherein he makes comments on current events. The man has such a keen insight into the American panorama and the American people that I feel, in the course of time, he is bound to be a great factor in the political life of the nation.

"I have told him of the work you are doing. I want you to meet him, because his good-will can prove a great asset to our party."

"He then took me into the adjoining room, introduced me to Will Rogers and retired.

"I told Mr. Rogers what Colonel Roosevelt had said. We had a half hour together and as he was leaving Mr. Rogers said: 'I shall be glad to have you consult with me at any time, but I want you to know that I consider that I must ever hold myself an unbiased commentator on public affairs. I cannot permit myself to let my reactions become prejudiced. Even though, personally, I am a democrat, wherever I consider it in the public weal, I will be glad to cooperate with you; but when it seems to me that your party should be lambasted, I will join with the democrats against you as quickly as I would criticize them, if I felt they had it coming'

"Will Rogers was little known then outside of certain circles in Manhattan. He was just coming. He had the courage in Colonel Roosevelt's office to candidly say what his attitude toward the republicans would be under certain circumstances. And he showed that he meant to keep himself unbiased in so far as a man could. To that resolve he adhered throughout his life.

"It was the honesty of his opinion that was one of the greatest holds he had on the American people.

"What he said to me that day was not said in bombast, but with the modesty that always characterized him. At that time neither he nor I dreamed of the extent to which his voice would some day carry—but Colonel Roosevelt prophetically appraised it.

"Only a week after Will Rogers' death, I was dining with Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, the second, and when Will Rogers' name came up he said to me: 'I want to tell you an interesting thing. I spent the evening with Will Rogers a few weeks ago and in talking of my father he told me of an incident that happened when he first met you.

"Colonel Roosevelt then repeated to me, word for word, as coming from Will Rogers to him a few weeks before, what I have here recorded that Rogers said to me in 1918."

CISCO PEOPLE MAY CONTRIBUTE

Cisco people have an opportunity to contribute to the memory of Will Rogers. Famous friends have organized the Will Rogers Memorial commission. The First National Bank of Cisco will be glad to accept contributions to this fund so that the donor will have assurance that the contribution will be safely received by the proper authorities. Every cent subscribed will be used for memorials to be selected by Henry Ford, Herbert Hoover, Alfred E. Smith, Will H. Hays, Jesse H. Jones, Owen D. Young, Vice President John H. Garner and other men and women of national prestige and respect. The memorials will depend upon the number who contribute—but they will be used for charitable, educational, and humanitarian purposes. There will be no cold shaft to honor the memory of this warm, friendly man. They will be living, continuing memorials.

"Path" for Canal Thru Florida Is Being Cleared

OCALA, Fla., Nov. 14. — Driving ahead at top speed, relief workers are quickly clearing the way for the huge Gulf-Atlantic ship canal across Florida—the largest waterway undertaken by the United States since the Panama canal.

Within a few weeks relief workers drafted at war-time speed have cleared a considerable portion of the way and laid preliminary plans for the tall bridges to span the $146,000,000 waterway. Contracts have been let for excavation work on a 14-mile strip of the route and the war department engineers estimate more than 5,000 persons will be employed on the entire project soon.

Lieut. Col. Brehon Somervell, army engineer in charge of the work, said he could work more than 25,000 persons if given sufficient funds to continue working at top speed. President Roosevelt made an initial allotment of $5,000,000 in September.

Opposition Met.

A small wooded spot near here has been converted into a bustling little city where canal operations are directed. The beginning of work has brought a business boom to Ocala, city of 8,000 persons.

Determined opposition to the project has come from a group of central and south Florida farmers and growers, who see in it a live danger to their water supply.

Recently the Central Florida Conservation association of Sanford has led the anti-canal fight, claiming it would be nothing more than a great "drainage ditch" which would draw off underground water and contaminate what is left by allowing salt water to seep into the ground.

Members claim ruined farms and groves would be too great a price to pay for the two and one-half days' sailing time proponents say the canal would save between Atlantic and Gulf ports.

Idea of Philip II.

Sidney Paige, government geologist, declares the damage would be confined to a narrow strip along the right-of-way. Lieut. Col. Somervell promises every effort will be made to prevent any water trouble.

Back in the 16th century Philip II of Spain first conceived the idea of an artificial waterway across the Florida peninsula to save ships a voyage around the Florida Keys, then infested with pirates.

Most of the canal route is along natural streams, many of which must be deepened.

From the Atlantic ocean ships would enter the canal at the mouth of the St. John's river near Jacksonville. They would follow the river to a point just south of Palatka. From there the waterway would be cut westward across land to the Oklawaha river. More digging would be required to join the Oklawaha and Withlacoochee rivers. The canal would follow the Withlacoochee to the Gulf.

The sea-level canal, 30 feet deep and with a bottom width of 200 feet across land, will be 200 miles long.

Bob 'Tree Toad' Davis Tells Tale of His Boyhood With Brother Bill

By JOHN SELBY.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14. (AP)—The unmistakable flavor of boyhood, the flavor that makes Huek Finn and Tom Sawyer live through war and famine, has been captured again.

The new boy is named Tree Toad, although he is known more formally as Robert H. Davis of the New York Sun, probably the most widely traveled newspaper man in the world. The total is 700,000 miles, and the man is known the world over as author, editor and raconteur. Tree Toad is "Bob" Davis himself, 60 years ago.

The very young Bob Davis became Tree Toad one afternoon when the sickle pears were ripe in Nebraska, he explains in "Tree Toad," just published. It began when the young man's mother stepped out on the porch, a bright green toad dropped into her lap, and she explained the mysteries of protective coloring in nature.

Invisible Bob.

Brother William, a year or so older than Bob, waited until kitchen duties called Mrs. Davis inside. Then he informed Bob that he had "a great dear." And Bob followed him under the porch. When he emerged a short time later he had been stripped, painted a beautiful green even to his eyelids, and persuaded that he was actually invisible.

Brother Bill pointed to the sickle pear tree: "Go and help yourself . . . climb up and eat your fill . . . no one can see, you cannot be seen . . . God is takin' care of you . . . bring some back to me, ripe ones."

On the way to the tree Bob indulged one desire he had had for a long time—he thumbed his nose at his father, who was an Episcopal clergyman. Mr. Davis did not notice, which proved that the green-painted boy really was invisible. He climbed into the tree.

Father Could See.

Once there Bob decided to hiss his father, and that was fatal. This dialogue ensued:

"Can you see me?" I inquired, hoping to clear the atmosphere.

"Plainly."

"Where am I?"

"There you are!" Somewhat bewildered he prodded me with the grass rake. "Right there!"

The feeling of security along with my faith began to ooze out of me.

"Father, will you please see mother about this?"

"Yes, my son, later. Come down."

The young man came down, was tubbed with various paint removers, given other significant treatment, and put to bed. The next day was Brother Bill's birthday. He gave Bob a present, which was the nickname Tree Toad. It stuck through prank after prank and page after page.

Gus Dorais Says Quarterback Has Tougher Job Now

DETROIT, Nov. 14. (AP)—There's one college football coach today—and he played in the old days—who says that the old-time quarterbacks had a soft snap compared to the task of present day signal-callers.

The coach is Charles E. (Gus) Dorais, of the University of Detroit, considered one of the best quarterbacks Notre Dame ever produced.

"In my day," recalls Gus, "the quarterbacks didn't have manifold duties. We had a certain set of plays—not too many—and we knew before each game what sort of defense we were going to meet. What I mean by that is that opposing teams usually lined up with an orthodox seven-man line and played its backfield in either a box or diamond. All a quarterback had to do was to find a weak spot and keep hammering away."

He listed these reasons why the job is harder now; the quarterback has so much more to work with, shift plays, pass formations, sneak plays, lateral passes, trick combinations; he is faced with a lot more on defense, with a constantly changing style of six or seven-man lines and changing secondary defenses; the quarterback of today has so much on his mind that "he's four times busier on offense and six times busier on defense" than the old-time signal barker.

"The real proof of this," continued Dorais, "is that you haven't heard of any great quarterbacks within the past four years. The job is much more difficult."

Gus Picks Best Backs.

Dorais listed these backs as the greatest of the game—in the order named:

Walter Eckersall and Wally Steffen, both of Chicago; Shorty Miller, Penn State; Sprackling, Brown; Friedman, Michigan; Stuhldreher, Notre Dame; Costello, Georgetown; Mt. Pleasant, Carlisle Indians; Carideo, Notre Dame and Drury, Southern California.

New Policy for Fish Hatcheries Is Undertaken

AUSTIN, Nov. 14—All nine state fish hatchery superintendents were called last week to the office of the Game, Fish and Oyster commission by Executive Secretary W. J. Tucker and formally placed under the direction of Dr. A. H. Wiebe, who outlined a program for stepping up production of fish.

Policies Changed In line with a policy announced at a former meeting of the commission, a new method of fish distribution was explained. The policy of stocking and restocking private waters is to be abandoned on the theory that the fish once supplied by the hatcheries are intended as brood stock and not to meet all the demands of fishermen.

Overstocking of lakes was pointed out as an evil to be avoided because overcrowding means an exhaustion of the food supply in the lake, with the result either of starvation or little growth of the fish.

Vegetation Control The problem of controlling an excess of vegetation in the hatchery ponds was discussed with the recommendation by Dr. Wiebe of certain remedies. One of the evils of too much vegetation is that in the later summer there is an excess of decomposition with the production of carbon dioxide and its twin sister, a depletion of dissolved oxygen in the water.

Fish parasites were discussed and control measures recommended. In the case of bass, tapeworms which are acquired when the bass happen to eat a small fish so infested, it was suggested by Dr. Wiebe that a test be made by using artificial feed with only enough live food for conditioning purposes. The fish tapeworm, not the kind that afflicts human beings, takes up its abode in the liver and ovaries of the fish, rendering it sterile and useless as a breeder.

Another fish enemy, a parasitic protozoan, afflicts most warm water fishes. The scaleless catfish in particular falls an easy victim to the parasite and this is most apt to happen in stagnant water. Thus, to provide an artificial current, which is more sanitary than still water, a small circular pond, twenty to thirty feet in diameter, has been installed at three of the hatcheries to observe results. It has been found that the flowing water is not only more sanitary but that the current tends to wash away the protozoans.

ENSION BILL TO GOVERNOR

AUSTIN, Nov. 14. (AP) — Gov. Red Saturday received the first part of the second session, the old-age pension administrative bill which will be impotent without new taxes to pay the cost.

House dries last night forced the governor to control bill into conference in a majority of conferees pledged to permit the sale of liquor in broken packages only.

The dries kept the membership behind locked doors while sergeant-at-arms searched the city for several wets who, seeing their cause apparently lost, bolted from the hall.

WORK BEGINS THURSDAY ON ONE OF TWO HATCHERY JOBS

Work upon one of the two state fish hatchery WPA projects here was to begin on Thursday with a force of 20 men, Fish Hatchery Supt. S. B. Wright announced. The force will be increased as rapidly as possible, he said. Employment of the men is through the NRS office at Eastland.

Cecil Prickett will be project manager, representing the WPA. The first project to be undertaken is that for rebuilding the water system of the hatchery. The second provides for prevention of erosion of hatchery lands by Sandy creek and the creek that follows the state park canyon.

Although work is starting upon only one of the two at this time, the second will be undertaken within a short time, Wright said. Together they call for an expenditure of $35,000 approximately.

Supreme Court May Act Soon On Cotton Law

By WILLIAM S. WHITE. WASHINGTON, Nov. 14. (AP)—Toward a life or death verdict in the United States supreme court, the beleaguered Bankhead cotton act is moving with gathering speed.

Already having consented to review one case challenging the law on half a dozen major grounds, the court has directed the government to offer, by November 11, arguments why another and more far-reaching assault on the measure should not also be heard. There is a prospect that if the nine justices decide to open the door to the second suit—that brought by the state of Georgia through Governor Eugene Talmadge—both may be heard together in December.

What Act Is. The act, over which a legal storm for months has been brewing, represented the first effort in American history for federal government control of production of a major crop and upon it is based a law for the control of tobacco, another great "money crop."

The Bankhead measure empowers the secretary of agriculture to allocate to cotton growers, upon the basis of past yields, an allowed quota of production. He issues certificates representing this quota to each farmer, who may grow and sell that specified amount without the payment of any tax. Let him get above the quota, however, and a tax representing half the market value of the cotton is slapped on. Criminal penalties are authorized for handling uncertified cotton—a maximum fine of $1,000 and a six-months' jail sentence.

The first of the suits to reach the court, a challenge to the constitutionality of the measure made in the course of an action by Lee

Moor, a Texas cotton grower, against the Texas and New Orleans railroad company, embodies most of the assertions made in the Talmadge action, but the latter covers broader constitutional ground and is regarded as affording a more direct test.

The Geogit suit comes directly to the court, whereas Moor's complaint went by way of U. S. district and circuit courts. On no less than eight constitutional grounds does Georgia attack the act. It is claimed to be:

An effort at production control contrary to the 10th amendment, which reserves to the states the powers not delegated to congress. (It is contended thus that if any power exists for controlling production it is in the states and not in Washington.)

In violation of provisions authorizing the levying of taxes only for revenue. (It is claimed that the Bankhead tax is punitive in purpose, merely an "assessment" as a lever for controlling production and price.)

Not authorized under the clause giving congress the right to regulate interstate commerce. (The assertion is that production and even primary marketing of cotton is wholly intrastate, or local.)

In violation of clauses providing taxes shall be uniform. (It is asserted that the secretary of agriculture is allowed under the act to make different tax exemptions in different states.)

In violation of other clauses providing no direct tax may be laid except in proportion to census figures.

Contrary to provisions vesting all legislative power in congress.

In violation of other provisions in that it delegates to farmers the right to decide whether taxes shall be levied in future.

Contrary to the fifth amendment, in that it brings about deprivation of property without due process of law.

The Moor case brought up the issue in a rather curious way. The railroad declined to ship Moor's cotton from Clint, Texas, because it did not bear the certificates. He sued for an injunction to force acceptance of the cotton. The processing tax, keystone of the AAA voluntary farm programs, is not at issue.

SANITATION PROJECT FOR COUNTY READY

Funds for an Eastland county WPA sanitation project for pit toilet construction were made available by the San Antonio state WPA headquarters yesterday, according to an Associated Press dispatch to the Cisco Daily Press. Federal portion of the expenditure would amount to $4,614, while the county would contribute $4,176. Twenty-one men would be employed.

The project was one of 58, calling for an expenditure of $728,000 of federal money.

The release of funds came as a surprise to the county, the commissioners court having some time ago passed a resolution expressing preference for the money to be spent on "farm-to-market" roads, County Judge Clyde Garrett said. It was the county's understanding, he said, that the transfer would be agreeable to the WPA.

Hunting Party Will Go to Mason County

Off on their annual deer hunt Floyd Cooper, Charley Kleiner, Dr. D. Ball, Yancey McCrea and L. C. Moore will leave Friday for Mason county. This promises to be a most pleasant outing, as well as a hunting expedition. They will go prepared for a stay of at least a week, and are carrying plenty of camp equipment, provisions, etc.

Deer hunting is Floyd Cooper's annual diversion, and he generally brings home the meat. The others, too, are hunt fans, and enjoy the sport as much as Cooper, but they can hardly be said to be in Cooper's class for they sometimes fail to go—Cooper never fails.

'SILLY' SAYS STATE DEPT

TOKYO, Nov. 14. (AP)—The Japanese press prominently displayed Wednesday stories saying a secret military agreement between the United States, Russia and China, providing for each of the contracting nations to place armed forces in the Orient to preserve peace there, was reported to be imminent. The Washington state department said the reports were "silly."

RIGHTS ARE VIOLATED, PLEA SAYS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14. (AP)—Bruno Hauptmann appealed to the supreme court Tuesday to save him from the death chair for the kidnaping and murder of the Lindbergh baby.

Egbert Rosecrans, Hauptmann's counsel, asked the court for a new trial, claiming the conviction was after a trial resembling a "circus," and that Hauptmann's constitutional rights were violated.

The attorney alleged that the presence of Colonel Lindbergh, and the "inflammatory summation" by the state, caused an "hysterical mob spirit" that unduly influenced the jury.

It is believed probable that the court will announce December 23 whether it will review the conviction. If a review is granted arguments will probably be heard in February or March, with the final decision a few weeks thereafter.

Bewildering Mineral Variety Revealed in Geological Exhibit

The windows of the Cisco Gas Corp. offices are attracting large numbers of curious. Thousands of items of a geologic collection belonging to Noyes B. Livingston, Fort Worth geologist, and collected from almost all over the world are on display there. Fossils of life 200,000,000 years ago are included among exhibits of quartz, iron, lead, zinc and mercury minerals, lodestone, fantastic and beautiful formations of crystal, diamond-bearing rock from Arkansas, sharks teeth and fish fossils deposited when this country was said to have been under water 40,000,000 years ago, and an innumerable variety of other interesting rock and mineral exhibits. An explanation of how diamonds are recovered from diamond-bearing rock in Pike county, Ark., is typed beside the exhibit. Similarly, typewritten notes explain other features of the display. For instance: a lodestone, with numerous metallic articles sticking to it, explains that the mineral is a natural magnet and that it always points north.

Agates From Germany. There are beautiful agate quartz stones from Germany, harder than steel; delicate alabaster limestone from which statues of angels and other interior decorations not exposed to weathering, are carved; water clear silicates; sections of cores taken from wells in Winkler county; petrified Elberta peaches; fossilized progenitors of the scorpion family who passed from existence a hundred millions of years ago—a great and bewildering variety of forms and colorings. There are black stones as smooth and as brilliant as glass. There are rows upon rows of tiny boxes each with its different exhibit set on cotton. The more one looks, the more one sees.

Mr. Livingston, outstanding geologist who has done much work in this part of the state, said that many years were represented in the collection.

PRO-JAPANESE LEADER SLAIN

TIENTSIN, China, Nov. 14. (AP)—A woman assassin yesterday killed Marshal Sun Chuan-Fang, opponent of the Nanking government, mentioned as a possible choice of Japan to lead the independence movement in north China.

A well dressed Chinese woman, who shot down the former war lord at a Buddhist meeting, emptied her revolver and calmly surrendered to the police.

Penguins to Be Here Monday With Exhibit of Whale

One of the most remarkable creatures of the animal kingdom is the proud, strutting penguin from Little America.

When Admiral Byrd and his party landed in Little America, countless millions of these funny little fellows were the only reception crowd. Having never before seen a human being, they came up and were very friendly with the entire Byrd crew, the reason they had no fear was that nothing had ever scared or tried to hurt them, and they were the pets of every man at the Antarctic base.

When the Eureka whaling company brings their mammoth marine exhibit of sea life here Monday, November 18, on a specially constructed railroad car over 100 feet long, which will be located near the T. & P. freight depot, the exhibition will include among the many attractions, a family of penguins from Little America. Other features of the exhibit are a monster 68-ton whale, man-eating sharks, a giant octopus, Seattle sea-monster, black widow spiders and others. Madam Sirwell and her troupe of trained fleas are also a feature with the exhibit.

The exhibit car will remain here for one day only and will be open to the public from 2 p. m. until 11 p. m. daily.

CCC FOREMAN IS MURDERED

RIPLEY, W. Va., Nov. 14. (AP)—J. Fulton Gunnoe, war veteran and CCC camp foreman, was hanged Tuesday night after an unidentified assailant had poured gasoline over the body, and wrapped a heavy wire around his neck and then set the body on fire.

A farmer, James Elliott, seeing the blazing body from his window, at first thought it the body of a negro. No reason was found for the horrible tragedy, as Gunnoe had no known enemies.

MOB HANGS 2 NEGRO YOUTHS AT COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS, Tex., Nov. 4. (AP)—County Attorney O. P. Moore said yesterday he believed the lynching of Ernest Collins, aged 15 years, and Bennie Mitchell, 16 years of age, on a farm near here last night for attacking and murdering Geraldine Kollman, Columbus high school honor graduate, was an "expression of the will of the people."

The town is quiet after the sullen mob of 700 citizens, including several women, jeered pleas of the Episcopal minister, Rev. E. B. Marrison, to allow the law to take its course, and hanged the negroes.

The minister leaped on the top of a car and pleaded to no avail. The negroes were taken from two officers returning them here from the Houston jail, for trial.

SIGNS AUTHORIZATION. WASHINGTON, Nov. 14. (AP)—President Roosevelt said yesterday that he had signed authorization for the government's signature on the Canadian-America reciprocal trade treaty.
