China Takes Its Flood Loss

Startled America read this morning that 10,000 persons were killed yesterday as the Chinese river Han burst through its dikes and flooded the countryside.

For days now the Yangtze and Yellow rivers, with their tributaries, have been a constant menace to the country. But China has gone forward, the patient people repairing their losses as best they could, hoping for better fortune in the future, but expecting at the same time, more great floods from "China's great sorrow."

Recently in Texas there has been a devastating flood which did less damage than the rains that broke the drought-did good. In the east now the rivers are threatening and occasionally taking lives.

How different is our reaction from that of China. The East thinks in terms of centuries, the West in terms of days.

China accepts its losses and begins rebuilding, but knowing that there will also be future losses. America raises a great hue and cry over its losses, but once they are repaired, apparently forgets them and the danger of them until future floods wash away more land and take more lives.

Bastille Day Celebrations

One hundred forty-six years ago a mob stormed a prison in France and took it from the hands of terrified royals.

The building was said to have had only 70 or 80 cells, but was dreaded by all but the nobility of Paris. It was there, in the Bastille, that political prisoners especially were kept. Especially terrible were said to be the cells under the towers, on a level with the moat, where prisoners lived out their deaths instead of receiving a merciful blow from the headman's ax.

Yesterday Paris celebrated Bastille day with parades through the city. The day, which compares roughly with the American Fourth of July, was a signal for political groups to proclaim their own particular brands of liberty.

The day was fairly peaceful, outwardly, however. There were no major clashes between rival political factions, although leftists claimed that 400,000 marched in their processions, and other groups also reported large demonstrations.

Whisperers Are Busy Again

There is "a whispering campaign on in America" concerning the health of the president of the United States, and the whisperers are men who would like to see a change — or vacancy — at the White House, Franklin D. Roosevelt knows the tactics of the whisperers. He knows the game as has been played in bygone years. According to his physicians, physically speaking, he is one of the most remarkable men that the republic has known. His bodily health is said to be magnificent. He is not dead—mentally or physically. He is the president of the United States. There is no deputy resident. His patriotism has never been questioned. His in-

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—The new NRA set-up may be considered safe, sane, and unlikely to cause any trouble.

There isn't a prima donna in the lot, a fact which presents a marked contrast with the NRA you used to know and indicates Roosevelt's desire to bury the Blue Eagle's carcass as quietly as possible in case it seems wise later on to forget all about it.

Representatives of industry, labor and consumer in the higher posts are all placid souls, if not shrinking violets, and none will be aggressive.

James L. O'Neill, the acting administrator, is a product of a big New York bank, popular in NRA, whose job will be to liquidate the large majority of personnel.

Dr. Leon Marshall, head of the Division of Review, is a retiring fact-finder who abhors limelight.

George L. Berry, assistant representing labor, and the labor men on the new advisory council—William Green and Philip Murray—are easy-going leaders who never make any fuss.

Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, the remaining consumer representative, has taken her job seriously, but was a Democratic politician long before she was made head of the Consumers' Advisory Board.

THE most conspicuous thing about the new list of NRA top jobs is the absence of Leon Henderson, who was expected to rate high, because he was chief of the Research and Planning division and the main function of NRA now is a job of research into the effects of codes during the last two years and developments in the forthcoming codeless period.

But Henderson, if he stays on, will do so only in a subordinate position—he was a member of the National Industrial Recovery Board—because he must be punished for his sins.

Secretary of Commerce Roper, Donald Richberg, and others of conservative hue decided he was too dangerous to be in power. Henderson, you see, had built up a strong division of economists which undertook to find out and tell just what was wrong with NRA.

ONE of the last jobs done by the NRA researchers under Henderson, results of which presumably won't be made public, was compilation of the latest dope on wages and dividends. It will be considered vitally important by those who believe that maldistribution of wealth causes depressions by simultaneously providing too much in profits for investment in capital equipment and not enough in wages to provide a market for the products of capital equipment.

Labor income rose only 29 per cent from 1925 to 1929. It is shown, while dividends and interest from all corporations rose 65 per cent. Labor income began to go down at once in 1929, while capital's drop followed very slowly.

BY 1933 labor income was only 65 per cent of its 1923-25 average, while dividends and interest stood at 93 per cent. The Henderson report points out that capital has been spared from bearing a proportionate share of the risks of business ups and downs. Nevertheless, labor was benefited—in comparison with capital—in 1934. Its income rose from an index figure of 65 in 1933 to an estimated 73 in the last quarter of 1934, while dividends and interest are estimated at 93 for both periods.

He is for the rule of the people—the plain people—the growers of things, the makers of things who do not want it all and the millions of toilers who are wealth makers for their families and for their country.

BROOKS

AUSTIN, July 15 — The smiles of world-renowned men of war and of politics, and the miles of Texas friends beam down on Chairman Ernest O. Thompson from photographs upon the walls of his office in the Texas capitol. Many personal autographs attest the friendship of men in varied public affairs. All of one side of Thompson's office walls has been covered with photographs with others scattered in profusion over the rest of the room.

One of the groups includes autographed pictures of Gen. Pershing and generals and admirals of France, England and Italy. An autographed picture of Marshall Foch addressed to a friend of Foch and Thompson, was presented to Thompson, and is included in the list.

A fine photograph of President Roosevelt, bearing a cordial personal message to Thompson, in the president's handwriting, is on Thompson's desk. Near it is a picture of Vice President Garner and Thompson taken together at Ovalde.

Thompson has pictures of Gov. Alfred and the governor's son, of Gov. Neff and others and of Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson and James E. Ferguson with him when an oil-control bill was signed.

One panel of historical pictures includes George Washington, Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt.

Above his desk is a group of family pictures, including that of his late father and of Mrs. Thompson who is May Peterson of the operatic stage.

Another group includes Will Rogers and Col. Thompson, and pictures of Sen. Ben G. Oneal, Capt. E. N. Stanley, Federal Judge Randolph Bryant, Robert Lee Bobbitt, Sen. Gordon M. Burns, an ink sketch of Paul Wakefield; Beauford Jester, Jack Blalock, Tom Pollard, Albert Hooper, Palmer Bradley, Leslie McKay, George Hill, Charles I. Francis, Raymond Buck, Dean Ira Hildebrand, H. A. King, his graduating law class, and fellow officers of the 34th machine gun battalion at Camp Travis.

One group includes members of the interstate commerce commission and the Texas railroad commission in a joint rate hearing.

chuckles when he recalls the temporary discomfort he caused a Williamson-Burnet county house member when he was in the senate. Even then, they were talking of dams in the Colorado river. The house members passed a local fish bill. "Please pass my bill in the senate," he requested McGregor. "No," was the surprising answer. "But I promised my people I would provide fish ladders over those dams. I've got to get it passed," the member insisted. "No, sir," the senator responded. "For the size fish I want to see in the Colorado, a ladder would be undignified. I'll provide an elevator."

OLD TREES STILL GROW

clown who made a running jump over eight horses' backs. And they were far from unattractive. Acrobats Rated At Par The acrobats used the immemorial mannerisms of acrobats the world over. Their tights weren't silk but their act was as good as you'd see anywhere.

MOSCOW CIRCUS SUCCESS WITHOUT PINK LEMONADE

MOSCOW, July 15. — It doesn't take pink lemonade to make a Soviet circus a success, but otherwise the all-Russian product is a replica of the old American institution. Other observations of a United Press correspondent:

Clowns go through with their traditional tricks — and get the usual laughs.

Ring masters in gaudy uniforms put trained horses and dogs through their paces.

Acrobats use the same mannerisms known the world over, but their tights are not silk.

The "girl show" puts on a "strip act" and struggles through a dance in a valiant effort to duplicate a show at any American burlesque house.

The dogs became so intent on scoring that several fights ensued when the burly dog goal-keeper deflected good shots. In one melee the human referee was knocked down, to the delight of the spectators.

One reason for the hit the dogs made, I was told, was because dogs are a rarity in Moscow. I don't recall seeing a dog in the streets.

Fashions Take Eye

The smartly dressed, well-groomed, American women in our party attracted nearly as much attention from the spectators as the circus. Russian women stared with polite but undisguised interest at their long, fashionable dinner dresses, shoes and hats.

Sitting three rows behind us was Robert Nathaniel Robinson, the American negro recently elected to the Moscow Soviet Council. He is a gold-spectacled, scholarly-looking negro, an expert toolmaker by trade.

Robinson's companion was a comely white woman. In the Soviet Union racial prejudices are frowned upon. That point is emphasized in a play now showing in Moscow. The heroine is a foreign white woman who becomes the mother of a negro baby. The Soviet hero, who confounds the machinations of the white foreign villain, tells her there are no racial prejudices in Russia and she is at liberty to have babies of any color without damaging her social standing.

Ice Cream Is Missing

There was no ice cream, pink lemonade, peanuts or pop-corn at the Soviet circus. But the general atmosphere of the place reminded me of circuses I had seen in my boyhood in Michigan.

The circus was a one-ringed show in a regulation tent with semi-permanent seats and rindside boxes which cost 10 rubles a seat. There was an excellent 20-piece band, ring-masters in gaudy uniforms, educated horses and ponies and somersaulting dogs, but no elephants, camels or exotic animals.

The featured performer of the circus, whose picture was on billboards all over Moscow, who is honored as "Peoples' Artist" was a flop so far as we were concerned.

He was a portly middle-aged chap with buck teeth, dressed in a clown-like costume. He indulged in some windy back-chat with a stooge, which didn't seem to be funny. He fulsomely praised his son who assisted in the act by playing a zylphonon off-key, praised the new Moscow subway, then jumped over eight horses.

Girls Appear Awkward

After their dancing act the "cuties" (some of whom were pretty and all of whom displayed attractive curves) draped themselves in reclining attitudes on a red-draped bench which ran around the ring just outside the spectators' boxes. The poses were intended to be seductive but the girls were obviously unaccustomed to exhibiting themselves halfnaked before crowds and succeeded in looking merely awkward and self-conscious. This in the land famed for nudist bathing.

Life has been real and life has been earnest in the Soviet Union these last years. The rations of amusement have been scanty. So anything amusing gets a great hand.

It was an all-Russian cast. Toddy Hamilton might have improved on the ballyhoo and Flo Ziegfeld on the girls and their costumes. But the crowd liked it.

BEGIN HERE TODAY JO DARIEN, finishing her first year in college, learns her father is out of work. Jo gets a job as bookkeeper in a small marine supply house. She is engaged to BRETT PAUL, athletic star.

DOUGLAS MARSH, handsome, wealthy, comes to the store to buy equipment for the summer colony he is establishing at Crest Lake. Jo works overtime, assisting with the order, and Marsh asks her to have dinner with him. She agrees. When Brett telephones Jo tells him she has extra work to do that night.

Marsh takes her to a fashionable restaurant. He tells her about his summer colony at Crest Lake and offers Jo the job of hostess there. Scarcely able to believe such good luck, she accepts.

Dancing with Marsh, Jo sees FAYE MONTGOMERY, a school acquaintance. Jo is sure Faye will tell Brett about seeing Jo with Marsh.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER VII WHEN Douglas Marsh's car had been brought to the curb of the Olympic Bowl and he and Jo had stepped inside, Marsh asked "Would you like to ride around a bit before I take you back to the apartment?"

"It's a heavenly night for it," Jo admitted. "But—the truth is, I'm just a little tired. I think it's from the shock of being appointed the hostess at Crest Lake Inn. I know, I won't believe it when I wake up in the morning!"

"In that case I'll telephone just to reassure you. Say about 9?" Jo nodded. "I'm afraid I'll need the reassurance, Mr. Marsh."

They were soon before the Fendale, and Marsh hopped from the roadster to see Jo to the door. "Really," Jo said, "I can't thank you enough for a delightful evening—and for the opportunity at Crest Lake."

"I didn't mean to make a business conference of it," Marsh laughed. "But I'm leaving for the lake tomorrow afternoon and I thought I'd better arrange everything tonight. Do you suppose you could come down day after tomorrow?"

"I think so." "I'll see that your ticket is delivered to the apartment by tomorrow afternoon. And I'll make arrangements at Lytzen's for things to be charged to Crest Lake Inn. If they don't have just what you want I'm sure they'll get it for you." He held out his hand. "Good night, Miss Darien—but couldn't I call you Janet?"

"Janet?" "Janet?" "Isn't that it?" he laughed. "I noticed the initials 'J. D.' on your hand bag at Brown's this morning, and I'm just guessing. Suppose you give me the right name?"

"It's Jo." He smiled. "I like that . . . Jo." Once again he took her hand for the fraction of a moment. "Good night, Jo. I'll see you at Crest Lake day after tomorrow."

"Right," said Jo. "Good night."

NEXT morning she awoke with the first pink streaks of dawn, and lay abed reviewing the events

Tarleton Seeking PWA Building Loan

STEPHENVILLE, July 15 — Application to the federal government for a PWA loan of $205,000 for the construction of a dormitory for men students at John Tarleton college was announced this week by J. Thomas Davis, dean. A definite answer to the proposal is expected within two months. The building as proposed would be one of the most modern and completely equipped of its kind in the state. It would meet the needs of men of substantial incomes, just as the Boys' Barracks and local rooming houses satisfy the demands of students of more moderate means. Building already underway at Tarleton includes construction of the second unit of the science building. Work on the final unit of the women's dormitory is expected to begin soon. If the requested appropriation is granted for the boys' dormitory, Tarleton's building program for the year will total approximately $300,000. Daily News and American and Roundup want ads are a good investment.—Phone 80.

Don't Expose Your Property to Loss

If you were carrying $10,000 in cash in your machine, you'd want to have it insured. But are you not driving your machine with anything from $1,000 to $25,000 of your property exposed? If you injure a man, and he obtains a damage verdict against you, you've got to pay it. If you haven't the cash, your property can be sold to get it. Don't risk your home, your bank account, your business. Let a Travelers Automobile Policy stand between your worldly goods and the result of that possible accident.

"THEY DON'T GET YOUR WIND" ATHLETES SAY

JENNIE ROONEY, famous circus aerialist, says: "I have to guard my wind. It means a lot that Camels, being so mild, don't upset my nerves or get my wind. And Camels never give me any throat irritation."

WILLIE MACFARLANE, former U.S. Open Champion, adds: "You hear a lot about mildness. Camels are mild. I smoke steadily. They don't get my wind or make my nerves jittery. I'd walk a mile for a Camel!"

BRUCE BARNES, the tennis champion, says: "Camels are so mild! They never cut my wind—and I smoke a lot, too. Their flavor? Always rich and good. And when I'm tired out, a Camel eases the strain."

J. A. BROOKS, '32 and '33 All American Lacrosse Team: "I smoke Camels—and have for 5 years. No matter how many I smoke, Camels never upset my nerves or get my wind. That's real mildness!"

HEALTHY NERVES—physical fitness—sound wind—help to make life more enjoyable for you, too. Enjoy Camel's mildness—smoke all you wish! For athletes have proved that Camels don't get their wind...or jangle their nerves.
