Bondholder Representatives Reach Here for Parleys

SURVEYS OF CISCO AREA TO BE MADE

Three representatives of a New York committee, said to hold between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000 in face value of Cisco municipal bonds arrived in Cisco about 10 o'clock this morning prepared to conduct a survey of the Cisco section with a view to gaining information for negotiation toward a settlement of Cisco's debt difficulty. At a preliminary conference with city officials at the municipal building shortly before noon the trio expressed their intention of remaining here for two days. They desire no formal conference until they have "visited about", they told Mayor J. T. Berry.

The three are C. P. Bullard, of New York City; Henry E. Poor, of Cincinnati, O., and H. W. Pitkin of Des Moines, Ia.

They drove from Dallas to Cisco after arriving in Dallas yesterday.

First Hand Information
Their visit to Cisco is the result of negotiations which went on for some time between the city officials and the New York committee, via the Texas legal representatives of the New York group at Dallas, for bringing together about the conference table members of the city commission and the bondholding group. The city commission first accepted and then declined an invitation to send a representative to New York City for a conference there. Later, before the commission's act of rescinding its acceptance of the invitation had become known to the New York group, that committee experienced a change of mind and decided to send a representative to Texas.

Desire of the committee to get first hand information with respect to conditions which affect the desired settlement prompted the visit. No probable basis for adjustment of the city's financial affairs was taken up at the preliminary conference this morning. It was not indicated when the commission would be called into formal conference with the committee.

The bondholder representatives indicated that they would not confine their survey to Cisco, but would visit adjacent areas in an effort to secure a bird's eye view of general conditions before approaching the question of a settlement.

DIVIDENDS IN BANK PAID TO DEPOSITORS

G. B. Kelly, one of the stockholders in the Commercial State bank, today pointed out that the Daily News was in error in its statement yesterday that the dividends in liquidation of the guaranty fund resources of the bank had been paid to stockholders. The dividends were paid to the depositors in the bank, the stockholders receiving nothing.

"We turned the bank over to the state banking department for the protection of the depositors," said Mr. Kelly. "We felt sure that our object of protecting these depositors would be realized and we are gratified that this has finally been done through the distribution of the last dividend checks to depositors just recently."

"Stockholders in the bank have not recovered any dividends in the liquidation of the guaranty fund resources, it should be made clear."

WARTIME SHIPS AWAIT FATE IN GRAVEYARD

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 15.—Anchored in mud and rusting into decay as they face an abandoned age, 56 steel ships, part of a once mighty fleet that had a direct bearing on the ending of the World War, lie in the Mississippi river here.

The ships, designated by a signboard as the "U. S. Laid-Up Fleet", were part of the bridge of vessels that America rushed to completion near the close of the war. They were to have been used to transport 2,000,000 more American soldiers to foreign soil; to carry foodstuffs and munitions to the greatest expeditionary force in the history of the world.

After the Armistice, the fleet quickly was turned to carrying foodstuffs to stricken European countries and returning unused munitions to the United States. Foreign tonnage mostly was destroyed in the war and this reserve fleet gave America unchallenged supremacy of the sea. American wheat and cotton was moved to all parts of the world. America was independent and wealthy.

Soon foreign ships began to appear again and trade began to slacken, so the less desirable of the American ships were laid up. Some were sold and transferred to services under foreign flags. The superior craft were left in the service, but the weaker ones were sent to "marine graveyards," to be stripped.

Many of the vessels here have been partly stripped. A lone watchman rules supreme on each but he guards his charge even from cameramen, who might reveal the condition of the boats. Some of the ships easily might be reconducted.

CISCO PEOPLE ARE INVITED TO SCRANTON

Citizens of Scranton will hold their annual community fair Wednesday, W. B. Starr, of that community, was in Cisco yesterday and issued through the Daily News an invitation to the people of Cisco to visit Scranton during that day.

He said that Scranton expects to have an even better fair than that of last year which was excellent.

Appearance Day In County Court

EASTLAND, Sept. 15.—Today is appearance day in county court and Judge C. L. Garrett was busy this morning calling and setting cases down for trial. A number of out-of-town attorneys, including R. L. Pearson and W. S. Adamson of Ranger, R. E. Grantham of Cisco, and Jake Alfred of Rising Star.

ANCIENT VIOL FOUND
CAMAIORE, Italy, Sept. 15.—A historic and well preserved double bass violin, made about 1540, has been found here.

Here is a view of the waterfront of Belize, Honduras, where food supplies and medical aid will be landed for the benefit of hurricane victims. A tropical windstorm was reported to have devastated the town, and dispatches said that 700 persons had been killed.

PLAN COURSES IS ADVICE TO NEW STUDENTS

Dean E. B. Isaacks, of Randolph college, today issued a statement in which he urged students contemplating entering the college when the institution opens September 22, to carefully plan their courses before registering for them.

His statement follows: "More students from Cisco are planning to attend Randolph this year than ever before. Many of you do not realize the importance of planning your schedule so as to meet future requirements. Our requirements are made with the idea that students when they finish here may enter any college or university without loss of credit, but most all colleges have their particular requirements, and it behooves you to study the catalogue of the college you desire to attend after finishing here and build your course here to fit you for it. That is only reasonable and would be necessary even if you spent your freshman and sophomore more year in the college where you expect to get your degree. All instances in recent years where students have lost credits when they have transferred from Randolph have been when the student did not plan his course to fit the requirements of the senior college. A. & M. college is the only college in Texas that I know of which will not accept credits in Bible yet we had a student take Bible with us who did not know the requirements of A. & M. until he finished here and transferred his credits. He lost his Bible credit, but he had nothing except his own lack of foresight to blame for his loss.

"I am stating the above things to warn you so that you will take time to plan your course intelligently. I am not here waiting to help you. Let me suggest three things.

"First, mail me your high school credits today in order that I may check it before you come out. I understand your high school principal placed in your diploma this transcript of credits and gave it to you when you graduated. If you have lost it, it will be necessary for you to secure another one as no one can enroll without an official transcript of his high school credits.

"Second, come out Friday or Saturday morning before the rush of enrollment and let me help you plan your schedule. I have catalogues of most of the colleges of the state and we can check their requirements and enroll you for the subjects you will need later. I will be too busy next week to go into detail with you about these things.

"Third, enroll Monday instead of waiting till Tuesday. Tuesday is regular enrollment date but the schedule will be ready Monday, and I will be out ready to enroll anyone desiring to matriculate then. We will have more time and you can get more help."

REMOTE NORTH SEARCHED FOR OCEAN FLIERS

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 15.—The remote sections of the north were searched today in an effort to locate the trans-Atlantic airplane Efa, now long overdue at New York on a non-stop flight from Lisbon, Portugal.

Since its departure the plane has been sighted only twice, first over the Azores and again, at 2:40 p. m. yesterday 395 miles east of here.

The plane carried gasoline sufficient only for a 45-hour flight. It left Lisbon at 4:30 a. m. Sunday, New York time.

DIRECTOR FOR TRADES DAY IS EMPLOYED

T. R. Smith, of Dallas, was selected from a field of more than a dozen applicants yesterday afternoon to direct Cisco's Trades Day campaign. His experience in this line of work and his success in numerous similar campaigns were the factors determining his selection by the committee.

He has already entered upon his duties, with headquarters in the chamber of commerce building, and plans are actively under way for a campaign which includes Trades Day programs each Saturday with free entertainment between 7 p. m. and 8 p. m. and a big "master" program at 4 o'clock each first Monday afternoon.

Announcements of the plans will be made in a short while.

Falling Girders Kill 2, Hurt Many

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 15.—Two workmen were killed, three were expected to die, two more were severely injured and 35 others less seriously hurt today when more than 100 quarter-ton steel girders fell into a jumbled heap when a cable broke.

The dead were Andrew Zernich and Patrick Corcoran.

PEDDLER LAW IS ADJUDGED TO BE INVALID

FORT WORTH, Sept. 15.—The recently enacted state peddler's law was held unconstitutional in an injunction handed down today by District Judge Bruce Young.

The injunction was granted to C. F. Souter, secretary of the Texas Coin Machine Operators Association, against Co. Tax Collector L. P. Card to prevent the taxing of vending machines.

Judge Young's opinion stated that in the law the legislature had attempted to set apart and exempt part of the class, telephone and gas meters operated with coins.

CHARGES ON POLICE DEPT. ARE AIRED

The regular meeting of the city commission yesterday afternoon was convulsed by investigation of a charge brought against the police department that the department had been negligent in its duty through failing to suppress the sale of beer and similar vices. Chief of Police Miller defended his department against allegations personally brought by C. D. Phillips after Commissioner Donovan, in charge of the police and fire departments had asked for a hearing on the matter. Comm'r Donovan asserted that there had been complaints but that most of these bringing them had declined to permit use of their names, in which instances he asserted that he treated the complaints with contempt.

Mr. Phillips appearing before the commission was sworn before being permitted to make his testimony. He declared that he had heard some time ago that the town had been "cleaned up" and decided to investigate. He said he was gone from his home one hour and 15 minutes and during that time had found four places in the colored section of the city where he could have bought beer and had encountered other vices. He charged that the police department was not doing its duty in raiding these places and suppressing conditions which he said were hazardous for the young people.

Defends Department
Chief Miller asserted that his department had made numerous raids about which nothing had been said. He pointed out that many of these had resulted in seizures of beer in vacant houses in which no charges could be filed and that others had resulted in failure to find any beer at all. The attitude of

BELIZE DEATH TOLL MOUNTS TOWARD 2,000

BELIZE, B. H., Sept. 15.—Further clearing of streets and wreckage of homes today revealed scores of additional bodies and lent strength to the fear that the total dead in the hurricane horror of last week may reach well above 2,000. In some quarters it is believed as many as 2,500 lost their lives.

Concern for the living threatened with disease and lack of medical supplies and water was relieved today by the distribution of supplies brought here by a British warship. Reports from outlying villages beginning to filter into Belize say hundreds now face starvation unless relief comes at once.

Day and night the monotonous burning of the dead continues. Refugees were fleeing the city in constant streams.

About 100 small boats tossed on the land were being recovered from unbelievable places, some from far inland and are being salvaged in case an epidemic should force the remaining population to leave the city.

A severe squall hampered relief last night but inhabitants hope it will prevent a famine in the drinking water supply.

Theater Bombed in Chicago Union War

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—A bomb tore a hole in the roof of the New Regency theatre while police stood guard front and back today.

It was the third theatre bombing in 24 hours and the sixth since trouble began between theatre owners and the motion picture operators union over employment of out of Chicago operators. The bomb was thrown from a second story porch.

HORN ANNOUNCES BREAKS
BOSTON, Sept. 15.—Convicts who try to escape from Massachusetts state prison will cause a lot of noise hereafter. A bull-horn has been installed at the institution to broadcast a warning to authorities of surrounding districts when a prisoner escapes.

Principals In "Holy War"

Here are the principals in the Jonesboro, Ark., "Holy War" which has divided the town into two camps, and state guards parade the streets to preserve order.

Rev. Dow H. Heard, (1 col.) is the pastor of First Baptist church. His character was as sailed by "Fighting Joe" Jeffers, sensational evangelist leader who is conducting a revival at Jonesboro.

Jeffers refused to stop his use of personalities in his lectures and told city officials he would take orders only from God. This comes to you from the Memphis Bureau of NEA Service Inc.

LOCAL MEETINGS PLANNED TO AROUSE BROADWAY INTEREST

The Broadway of America needs to be sold to its own people, Grady Bell, secretary of the Odessa chamber of commerce, who was here yesterday in the interest of the association, told a meeting of Cisco Ranger and Baird chamber of commerce and hotel men. He declared that he has found a lax interest in the development of the route and asserted that this lack of interest has been largely responsible for the loss of traffic that the route is entitled to.

"We must make the people along the Broadway route Broadway-conscious," he said.

The value of the tourist traffic was clearly illustrated by Mr. Bell through statistics gathered from towns where tourist traffic has come to be a principal industry. Figuring the cost of touring at five cents a mile, the ordinary run of tourist traffic through a community in this section will average between $1,000 and $2,000 per day per town, he showed.

The program of the Broadway of America highway association for the present year was read by Mr. Bell. It is aimed first at arousing sufficient interest of the public along the route and the proper designation of the road for the convenience of the public. Adequate means of advertising the route at points where other popular highways join with it is an important feature of the program. The lack of this advertising has been felt in the dissipation of large volumes of tourist traffic which would otherwise follow the route.

Advantages Neglected.
He also pointed out that practically nothing has been said of the scenic advantages of the Broadway including the famed Davis mountain region, which it touches, and where can be found some of the most beautiful natural scenery in the country.

"The tourist travels to see," he said, "and if he knows of the attractions that the Broadway has to offer he will visit them."

He blamed the lack of interest of the towns along the Broadway route for the fact that the highway is losing large volumes of travel to which it is entitled. The tourist and the other routes that are attracting him are not to blame, he said. "They are entitled to exert their efforts to secure this travel."

The meeting, following a discussion of the proper means of arousing the necessary interest, determined to inaugurate a series of local meetings throughout the section and to invite to these meetings every person who is interested in the Broadway. A meeting of the character will be held at Cisco next Thursday, the hour to be announced later.

Mr. Bell pointed out during his discussion that this section of the highway is the most affected by "drainage" lying as it does in the heart of the route, and that it is vital to the interest of cities in this locality that they arouse to the fullest extent the interest of local people in the proper development and advertisement of the road.

Those present at the meeting yesterday were: Mr. Bell, Secretary Asbury, of Baird; Secretary Wayne C. Hickey, of Ranger; Secretary J. E. Spencer, of Cisco; J. J. Collins, president of the Cisco chamber; Bill Dorsey, of Ranger; L. E. Campbell, of Cisco, and B. A. Butler, of Cisco.

EDITOR'S HOME RAZED

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Sept. 15.—The home of Cheyenne's first newspaper editor recently was torn down to make room for a new fire station. The house was built in 1880 by E. A. Slack, who edited this city's first paper. He died in 1907. His widow lived in the house for a number of years, but in recent years it had been a rooming house.

LOUISIANA GOV. SCORED FOR CHARGE

AUSTIN, Sept. 15.—Gov. Huey P. Long of Louisiana was denounced as "that arrogant ass who brayed from Louisiana" while the Texas house of representatives applauded today. Rep. P. H. McGregor, of Austin, scored the Louisiana executive for the charge made today by Gov. Long at New Orleans that large sums of money are being spent in Austin to defeat his cotton holiday plan.

Long said "It would be hard to understand why the Texas legislature would refuse to heed the request of Arkansas, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Louisiana and other cotton states as well as the people of Texas were it not for the fact that we know large sums of money are being lavishly used in Austin to sway the Texas legislature."

Rep. McGregor said "His statement is not true and it necessarily follows he is a liar."

Charges that advocates of cotton reduction bills do not want them enforced flew in the house today as members by overwhelming vote tabled a proposal to make the state commissioner of agriculture chief enforcement officer for the proposed cotton acreage law.

Former Speaker Lee Satterwhite, of Odessa, author of the proposal, asserted that unless there is a centralized enforcement agency some counties will enforce the law and others not.

No vote had been taken at noon today in either house directly on any cotton bill. The senate failed to vote on any phase of it.

HOOVER ASKS CREDIT FOR FOREIGN BUYING

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—The administration has asked bankers to facilitate credit to foreign sources as a means of making possible foreign purchases of cotton now held by the farm board, it was learned today.

The bankers are working out arrangements in connection with banks abroad, it was said.

This effort to develop private credit for disposing of the farm board's cotton surplus is the plan upon which President Hoover spent much time last week, and about which he conferred with Gov. Eugene Meyer, of the federal reserve board, and W. L. Clayton, Houston cotton broker.

"TRADES DAY" BANQUET IS CHURCH PLAN

A Trades Day by the Cisco merchants will be the fun program at the first fall banquet for men at the First Methodist church Monday night, Sept. 28th.

It was decided at the board of stewards meeting last night that the banquet would be held at this time. Tickets will be on sale next week by the women of the church who will serve the banquet.

The committee to arrange the fun program is composed of H. B. Hinkleman, O. L. Stamey, B. A. Butler, S. H. Nance, J. E. Proctor, H. G. Bailey, Dr. F. E. Clark, Wm. Reagan, Jake Leach and Rev. H. D. Tucker.

Quite a number of other features will be announced for the program one of which will be broadcasting a radio program for Cisco.

Prizes will be given at this banquet by the Cisco merchants among these being a new sedan by one automobile dealer and one thousand gallons of gasoline by a local gas dealer.

The banquet will be designated as a "Prosperity Banquet" and will be the first of a series of such programs to be held at the First Methodist church during the fall and winter months.

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

A CRY OF DISTRESS:—Save me, O God, by thy name, and judge me by thy strength. Hear my prayer, O God; give ear to the words of my mouth.—Psalm 54: 1, 2.

MOHAMET COMES TO THE MOUNTAIN.

The mountain could not come to Mohamet so Mohamet obligingly went to the mountain. The mountain, in this analogy, is Cisco's bonded debt difficulty and Mohamet those members of the New York committee which holds the power of attorney over a pool of Cisco municipal bonds variously estimated from one million to two millions of dollars in face value.

The coming of the committee to Cisco is auspicious from the standpoint that it demonstrates the desire of the committee for a settlement, and their further desire to accomplish this settlement by amicable means. This is naturally so since a quicker settlement is possible out of court than in, and also because such a settlement will be inexpensive as compared with resort to adjustment by litigation.

The necessity of an immediate settlement is as pressing from the bondholder standpoint as it is from the standpoint of Cisco people. As long as the bond situation hangs fire, the possibility of an equitable adjustment, and in equitable return to the holders of the city securities, diminishes in probability in the ratio that Cisco's prospects for meeting its obligations further diminish.

Creditors of Cisco may profess to see in its location and its environment resources which promise support for a future development that will enable it to meet its present staggering obligations. They are correct to the extent that they have failed to take into consideration that the debt itself is the one thing that will prevent this happy consequence.

Our city commission realizes this essential and after two years of intermittent effort, most of which appears to have consisted of a hedging against outside moves, it seems today to have gotten its feet on a stable road toward solution. The vigor and determination with which it prosecutes a program for settlement will determine its success in bringing about such a settlement.

Just what attitude the commission will adopt toward the visiting bondholder representatives is a question within its own province. It realizes, of course, that the committee does not represent even one-half of the total bonded indebtedness of the city and is therefore not in a position to speak for the bondholders as a unit.

SCRANTON'S FAIR.

Scranton will hold its annual community fair tomorrow, and W. B. Starr, a leading citizen of that always progressive community, came to the News office yesterday and invited Cisco people to visit and fraternize with the Scranton folk at that time.

The News feels somewhat embarrassed of the necessity of asking Cisco people to attend community fairs in the neighborhood of this city. It sincerely hopes that the man selected to promote our Trades Day campaign this fall will have the ability to stimulate our business and professional people to a renewed interest in the very vital matter of becoming acquainted with the people who reside within trading distance of Cisco.

ASLEEP ON THE JOB?

Grady Bell, secretary of the chamber of commerce at Odessa, who has been temporarily "loaned" to the Broadway of America highway association, was in Cisco yesterday doing missionary work in behalf of the association.

In spite of the campaign that has been made in behalf of the association among the towns along the Broadway route, Mr. Bell encountered extreme apathy, in many places approaching an actual lack of interest. Meanwhile the flow of traffic that should be moving along the great transcontinental route was being diverted at points of intersection with other important highways or otherwise dissipated in directions that promised no more advantage to the tourists than to the towns through which they failed to pass.

It is a true adage that promises us no more than we pay for. Depending upon other towns to look after our interests is about the surest means of divesting ourselves of any interest at all. It is quite possible that the demands sometimes made upon us in causes of this character are beyond our ability to meet, but that provides no excuse for not doing to the extent we are able.

OTHER OPINIONS

REPUDIATED?

Whole sale desertions from the ranks of Sterling's political supporters are by far the most significant political development of recent weeks. It is a movement that involves many of the newspapers that successfully carried the governor through the first and second primaries.

The reason is that Ross Sterling is not the sound-thinking, fearless leader some half million voters thought him to be. With a cargo of opportunity the like of which no other commonwealth ever carried, the Texas ship of state drifts aimlessly in threatening economic seas. The hull is strong and sound, an able crew of men stand alert and eager upon her decks, and engines throb to the head of steam that is ready to propel her to havens of security.

Governor Sterling has done nothing dishonest. He has done nothing for which a voice may be raised against him. And that, perhaps, is just the trouble. To avoid blame, he has evaded any display of initiative. He has made himself putty in the hands of a vociferous, half-hysterical group who demanded ice-cream when they needed castor oil. It seems that he possesses every qualification for leadership except the divine spark of leadership itself.

No stronger indictment of the administration's hesitant and irresolute tactics could be penned than the Houston Chronicle's masterful editorial, "Drifting": is thereby stopped from again supporting the man it drafted into the governor's race. The Dallas Journal administered no gentle rebuke when it contrasted the actions of Grover Cleveland and Ross Sterling under comparable circumstances and concluded with the observation that Texas needed a Grover Cleveland today. The other member of the influential News and Journal combination asserted that "nothing but results" could justify the governor's resort to martial law in the shutdown of East Texas oil fields, leaving the inference that the governor's only defense must be that the end justifies any means.

All of which, probably, proves that in trying to displace none, the governor has succeeded in alienating the support of many. Had he adopted a policy and adhered to it, the chances are he would have retained the support of most of them. The people expect more of a governor than compliance; they demand a type of leadership that compels respect even if it create opposition.

Months before Mr. Sterling announced his candidacy, the Abilene Reporter said: "It would be too bad to lose a fine chairman of the highway commission to sacrifice a rich man on the altar of political prejudice." Now the handwriting on the wall suggests that this dire prophesy is about to be fulfilled. — Editorial Digest.

OIL FOR A STATESMAN!

After all the states of the cotton belt have had their legislatures to pass different laws on the cotton situation, and each state having a proviso that its statute does not become effective unless all of the other states pass similar regulation, then the real statesmen of the South will be able, probably, to get something really substantial done for the cotton farmer. But not by legislation.

Senator Joe Robinson of Arkansas has proposed a plan that is far more sensible than the drastic and unworkable schemes of the Longs and Carrarays. The Arkansas Senator follows the most intelligent opinion that has been delivered upon the subject by suggesting a 50 per cent acreage reduction beginning next year and continuing three years. He would pass no law to bring this about, but would have the United States Agricultural department and the Federal Farm Board co-operate in each county, to serve without pay; the organization members to work with their fellow farmers and through agricultural credit corporations, banks, merchants and others supplying the farmers.

Use moral suasion as much as possible but where this fails to cause the farmer to reduce his crop, apply coercion; by those who are furnishing him to enable him to raise 2 crop. Withdraw credit from the recalcitrant and he will quickly come to terms. But Senator Robinson believes that the counties could be so organized that public sentiment could bring about the necessary reduction.

As the vast majority of cotton growers must be financed in the planting and growing of their crops, the Senator believes that with this gun behind the door of withholding credit, that 99 per cent of the cotton growers would agree to make the cut and abide by the agreement.

Procedure of this kind has been advocated for years, but little has come of the agitation because of the absence of the wide-spread and powerful organization that Senator Robinson now proposes. The desperate condition in the cotton state; ought now to afford an opportunity for a fair trial of the plan and thus open the way to a profitable diversification in Southern agriculture. Oh, that the South and especially Texas, had statesmen like Senator Robinson, men who could not be swayed by every political wind, men who would dare to be sane when others went wild, men of courage to lead the people aright. But alas! We seem to have no such. — Marshall News.

Letters From Our Readers

Editor Daily News: There died in our community a few days ago a man who had reached his "three score years and ten." He had lived in this county for 56 years. A length of time that reaches back to "the Indian days". Days when local schooling privileges were meager, yet he was considered a well read man. His industry, honesty and temperance, coupled with the opportunities of the early undeveloped natural resources of our country had made him a comparatively wealthy man in his local obituary notice he was spoken of as a "staunch citizen"; "a man whose word was as good as his bond". Yet when he died people shook their heads. He did not believe in the "bunk" that the churches taught, and was said not to believe in God. He asked that no church services be performed at his grave, and his wishes were respected. He did believe in the social equity of human relationship (mind you I did not say equality, but equity; words largely synonymous, yet often admitting of a wide wide difference in their inference. (See Webster's) He did believe that every babe born into the world was entitled by nature with the right to develop its individuality unhampered by economic and social barriers created by preceding generations. He did not believe in the "individualism" of the business world of today, that "ism" behind which "special privileges" hide that doctrine of supreme force opposing all the teachings of Jesus, and practiced by the beasts of the jungle and the monsters of the deep (the seal) where "individualism" reigns supreme and the less fortunate are devoured by the strong. He believed with Pope, the poet, that "man's injustice to man made countless thousands mourn". With these few words, I leave my friend to rest in peace in his grave, but I leave him with a feeling of love, and I ask my Almighty Father, in whom I believe to consider his honesty of purpose. Thou knowest better than we what powers shape our youthful minds. There was a period in my early manhood, when I only saw chaos. I could not discern thee, Father; then the screen rolled back, and there came to me a vision of thy true purpose; mankind in bondage, the bondage of Love. To thy love I leave my friend. The writer is a church-member, and as actions go today an active member, but he views with deep concern the attitude of his and other church organizations in the crisis of today. This does not mean that we should desert our churches, but that by redoubled efforts we should seek to have the church assume the responsibility that rests upon it, and perform the service that this responsibility demands. W. B. STARR.

YIELDS HISTORIC DATA. SUTTGART, Sept. 15.—The accidental discovery of a cave in the so-called Swabian Alb, near Ulm, has resulted in a great number of valuable prehistoric finds. Most important of these is the skull of a man of the Aurignac period. It is the first of its kind to be unearthed in Germany, though others have been found in England, France and Austria. Excavations under the direction of the University of Tuebingen have proved that the cave was a Neolithic burial place.

Families can usually get along without buying a new household device or luxury. They cannot get along without paying their current bills for necessities, even though they haven't the money. Yet sickness, tax assessments, temporary lay-offs, and dozens of other unavoidable emergencies frequently wipe out surplus and bring indebtedness.

How Young Lady's Health Improved

THOUSANDS of cases, like described below, have been reported in which better health followed the use of Cardui by women: "When I was a young girl," writes Mrs. W. H. Guina, of Milroy, Ind., "I was run-down and in bad health. I was delicate, thin and pale. I was nervous, at times. My mother knew of Cardui and thought it would be a good tonic for me to take. I took three bottles and my health improved a great deal. My mother was pleased. I kept on taking it for a while. I have been in good health ever since." Many a young lady has been spared useless suffering because her mother knew about Cardui.

INVESTIGATION IS REQUESTED BY LONE STAR

AUSTIN, Sept. 15.—Co-operating with a number of cities who have requested the Texas railroad commission to investigate natural gas rates, the Lone Star Gas company has asked the commission to make a thorough examination of its entire system in order to determine whether the rates should be changed. In a letter to the commission, L. B. Denning, president of the company, states that he believes such an investigation would be "quite beneficial both to the public and to the natural gas industry and may possibly dissipate some of the apparently prevailing ideas regarding the industry."

A number of city councils have passed resolutions calling upon the commission to make such an investigation, pointing out that no change in rates can be suggested until costs are determined. Mr. Denning said his company concurs in this stand and offers complete co-operation. Mr. Denning's letter to the commission follows:

"We are informed that requests have been made by some of the cities and towns supplied with natural gas service by Lone Star Gas company that the commission initiate and conduct an investigation of Lone Star Gas company rates and service in such communities. The management of Lone Star Gas company feels that such an investigation and inquiry, by establishing the basic underlying facts of the natural gas industry in Texas will be quite beneficial both to the public and the natural gas industry and may possibly dissipate some of the apparently prevailing ideas regarding the industry. Lone Star Gas company desires to respectfully advise the commission that it approves of and concurs in such requests as may have been made to the commission for such investigation and assure the commission that it will co-operate in every reasonable way in order that such investigation may be speedily made and the conclusions derived therefrom may be accurately determined."

In the Political Arena

By RAYMOND BROOKS.

Resuming work Monday morning, a Travis county grand jury this week will be busy in the study of far-flung waste of public money and careless or wrongfully-handled claims of local officers.

So extensive has its investigation grown, from the start of accounts of three Central Texas sheriffs, whose approval brought on impeachment charges against District Judge J. R. Price, Bastrop, that it may be several days or weeks before this grand jury finishes its study of the fee claims.

The senate fee committee is auditing all claims covered by the recent deficiency appropriation to pay off sheriffs' and witnesses' claims. In this work, numerous matters were passed on to the grand jury for review.

Several tax collectors' failure to get in re remittances of state money within the legal time limit was promised official scrutiny.

The grand jury will report to Dist. Judge W. F. Robertson in the new court created to handle state, business.

The fee committee found itself buried in a far more comprehensive mass of work than was expected when Sen. J. W. E. H. Beck proposed an inquiry into specific abuses which had been reported by the state auditor's department and Compt. George H. Sheppard. The audit alone of the deficiency claims has required work every day since the regular session adjourned last spring. More than $300,000 of fraudulent claims and faked claims, in only a few instances of misdoings that have been traced down, were discovered as a result of the committee's work. Many of the matters under review of the group do not involve official wrong doing or fraudulent or questionable claims. The committee has been assisting in sorting out the proper claims from those requiring fuller investigation or disapproval.

New disclosures have been promised by officials at work on the claim questions. Further light upon abuses of the fee system has been promised for this season of the legislature. Members have demanded, by house resolution, that the whole subject of straightening out the fee system, be opened up for legislative action.

State Labor Commissioner R. B. Gragg, secretary of Governor Sterling's state employment committee, is inviting the cooperation of all chambers of commerce, labor organizations, local employment committees, city officials and service organizations, in carrying out the program of the state committee, recently adopted.

The recommendations included: Cutting schedule in oil industry to eight hours, six days a week.

Five-day week, where possible, on the same hourly wage or day-wage basis as at present, to spread employment.

Married men and single women be employed, where possible, instead of married women whose husbands have jobs.

That all committees give preference to men of family.

Not less than 90 per cent of native labor on all public work.

That the state and its political units, business groups and citizens so far as possible use Texas products.

That citizens not leave home towns to seek employment in other communities.

That all communities discourage donations without service rendered.

That during December, January and February, each service club arrange to give extra employment to three men one day per month.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma.

That love of work for the home city will come from what you put into it, rather than what you get out of it.

Work for the home city is agreeable; it is work that you can do.

You should put your best efforts into this work. If you do, you will accomplish something worth while.

Worth while work will gain for the respect of all your city.

To get the attention of the world to your city, you should advertise every good thing in it.

Confidence in the home city is a big factor in making it bigger.

As individuals, you can do a lot — collectively, you can accomplish more.

Nothing that is possible is impossible for consistent workers to do.

Cities that are filled with boosters are showing a steady improvement in every line of business.

Wide-awake boosters can put a city on the map in such large letters that the whole world will sit up and take notice.

KISSED BACK OF NECK

ROANOKE, Va., Sept. 15.—White physicians were grafting a piece of skin from the back of his leg to the back of his neck, M. T. Vest bent over and kissed the skin from his neck as it was held in a pair of tweezers. Vest claims to be the only man who has kissed the back of his own neck.

BACARDI RUM FIRST MADE IN AN OLD BARN

HAVANA, Sept. 15.—The new Edificio Bacardi, which is one of the most beautiful buildings here and whose private bar the last of its modern accoutrements, was completed a short time ago, strikes a fine contrast to the original Bacardi building, a one story frame barn in Santiago de Cuba, where the famous rum made its bow in the latter part of the nineteenth century.

It was here that an old Catalonian jam maker eked out a meager livelihood for himself and his three sons, Emilio, Facundo, Jr., and Jose, working from dawn until dark drove the great bats out of the barn loft, brewing over vats and kettles the jams and jellies they sold in the streets of Santiago.

Came from Spain

Bacardi and his three sons came from Barcelona, Spain, to Cuba in the early 50's. It was Facundo, Jr., however, who spent long hours experimenting with new flavors, new combinations and blending processes forever in search of an unusual and tasty jam.

Greatest Triumph

During one of these experiments he happened onto the delightful combination which today is the basis of "Bon Bacardi". When he finished the product his father was overjoyed. He pronounced it the perfect blend, the acme of all the finest liquors. He gave it his own name and created a trademark fashioned from the bats which nested in the creaking rafters.

Perhaps Bacardi's greatest triumph came when the rum was prescribed for King Alfonso, XIII, during the influenza epidemic in Spain. Shortly later Bacardi was granted the right to the title "Purveyors to the Royal House of Spain" as well as the right to publish the Spanish royal coat of arms on the label.

Peculiarly enough, however, only one living person knows the recipe for Bacardi rum, and that man is Facundo Bacardi III, grandson of the discoverer and present vice president of the company. Each day he retires to the laboratory of the Bacardi plant at Santiago de Cuba and works over the huge mixing vats. Up to the present time no plans have been made to pass the secret on to his successor.

French Recall Sunny Sunday

PARIS, Sept. 15.—Like the ranks of the G. A. R. the small band of aged Frenchmen, who can remember a sunny Sunday in the French capital is rapidly being thinned out.

Seated in their stuffy homes while the Sunday torrential down-pour beats against the window panes they relate to groups of youthful unbelievers stories of the "good old days" when such a thing as a Sunday with sunshine did occur in France.

It has rained in France, it is raining in France, and it looks as if it will always rain in France. Straw hat manufacturers have committed suicide by the scores and raincoat makers are becoming millionaires overnight, while the doughy French population wades through the Paris streets, or goes boating down the Champs Elysees. Even the few remaining cab horses are becoming wretched and the taxis are fast being equipped with pontoons.

Fatou, Lanvin, Worth, and other fashionable dressmakers are seriously considering making nothing but bathing suits for the coming season. At the Grand Prix next year we will see mannequins strolling about in bathing suits, hip boots, and umbrellas.

MARKS GOLD FIND.

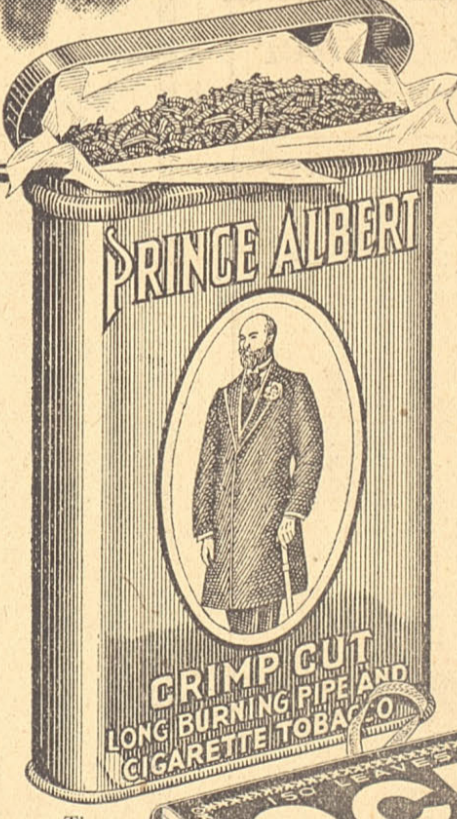

BUTTE, Mont., Sept. 15.—A bronze plaque marking the spot where gold was first discovered in Silver Bow County recently was dedicated by the Butte chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The plaque, which was mounted on a six-ton granite boulder, marked the spot where B. H. Barker and companions panned the first gold from Silver Bow Creek, in July, 1857. The spot is between Nisler and Silver Bow.

48 NEW TRY FOR PLACES ON MUSTANG 11

DALLAS, Sept. 15. — Thursday morning Coach Ray Morrison and his assistants started their 1931 edition of a Mustang eleven, with 48 men present and striving to do their part towards a winning team this fall. Seventeen lettermen were present to form the nucleus for the coaches to mold their team about.

The first day's practice consisted mostly of lectures and light exercise. According to Coach Morrison, he is going to take each game as it comes this year, and not give special attention to any game or games. He does not have a severe intersectional game early in the season as he has had in the past, so he will not be grooming his men for any one contest.

All of the men reported in good physical condition. Most of them have been doing outside work this summer. Many of them have been in East Texas either pipe-lining or doing oil field work of some kind, while others have been keeping in good physical condition by carrying ice or playing baseball. A few of the boys were in camps, either in Texas or in Colorado. Not a single man returned that was not ready and anxious to go.

The spirit that now dominates the Mustang's training camp is very encouraging to the coaches. Every man is pulling for a winning club, with plenty of fight to help things along. The men that keep up that spirit will likely make the trips this year when the Mustangs reek off to both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. Something to fight for all right.

Two practice sessions will be held daily until the 23rd, of this month, when registration begins. The Mustangs meet the Denton Eagles on the 26th, in the opening game of the season. Between now and that time the Ponties have plenty of hard work to do in order to meet the schedule they have this year.

Marshall Chang Denies Rumors

PEIPING, Sept. 15. — Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang has no intention of withdrawing from North China on account of rebellious movements, despite reports to the contrary.

Marshal Chang said that it would be disastrous if his control of North China should be given up at this time, because the government at Nanking needs his moral and actual support as much now as at any time.

Marshal Chang said he has no doubt whatever that General Chiang Kai-shek will remain in power at Nanking, and that this is for the best interests of China. He said that any patriotic Chinese leader must realize that civil war is disastrous at this moment, when the Communist menace has not been removed, and that any who have made the Communist program more difficult for General Chiang have revealed their lack of patriotism.

More Backs!

WHEN a bevy of young men of assorted shapes and sizes romped out of the dressing room onto the gridiron at Columbia the other day, Lou Little and Assistant Coach Marty Brill counted noses. There were 32 men.

"That's fine," said Mr. Brill. "I'll just take these young men and make a backfield out of 'em."

"You'll also make some ends, tackles, guards and centers out of 'em," spoke Mr. Little. "That's not my backfield. That's my squad."

Whereupon Mr. Brill must have realized with startling suddenness that coaching at Notre Dame and coaching at Columbia are different things. There were more than that many men competing for Mr. Brill's one backfield job at South Bend last year.

"FORM tells," remarked the greybeards at Beverly when Bud McKinney of Dallas, Tex., was crowded out of the National Open with an 83.

McKinney had led the nation's qualifiers on his home course with scores of 72-68-140. Experts, watching him, and noticing that he broke all the rules of golfing form, predicted for him an early doom. After a first round of 79, McKinney shot an 83, and out he went.

Romance Sags In Quaker City

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 15. — Are the economic stress and widespread materialism of the present day having their effect on the old, old business of mating and living happily ever after?

As far as figures are concerned, the answer would seem to be "Yes." The records of the marriage license bureau and the Probate court's office here show a decrease in the number of those contemplating matrimony, and an increase in those seeking divorce.

Since Jan. 1, 7,762 couples have taken out marriage licenses. For a period of less than eight months that may seem a sizable number, but in 1930 there were 8,757 couples licensed to marry. And, going back to 1926, the prospects is even less cheering. During the first eight months of that year there were 9,835 licenses issued, or 2,073 more than this year.

As for married couples wishing to untie the knot, the most recent records would seem at first to be slightly encouraging. Only 1,129 divorces have been granted in Philadelphia thus far this year, as compared with 1,206 for the same period last year. But the decrease was merely sporadic, for in 1926 only about 1,000 marriages were dissolved during the first eight months.

EMPCRIA, Kans., Sept. 15. — Dr. D. C. Schaffner, professor at the College of Emporia, recently returned from South Dakota where he and his son, Roy, dug a "ton" of fossils out of the Badlands this summer. His best find was the complete skull of a sabre-tooth tiger. He reported thousands of fossils are being found in the Dakotas and that even filling station men have started hunting them.

Author of "MAD MARRIAGE"

©1931 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Pretty Norma Kent, 20-year-old secretary in a law office, marries Mark Travers, son of F. M. Travers, millionaire real estate dealer, after the father has sworn to cut Mark off without a penny if the marriage takes place. Norma has known Mark a few weeks, and not knowing during the courtship that he was a millionaire's son.

The story opens in Marlboro, middle western metropolis. Christine Saunders, with whom Norma shares an apartment, and Bradley Hart, Chris' employer, are witnesses at the wedding. Before this Norma has refused to marry Bob Farrell, young lawyer of whom she is fond as a friend.

Mark sells his expensive roadster to get money for the honeymoon. He and Norma go to fashionable Blue Springs. There Norma meets Hollis Stone, and it is evident from the girl's discomposure that she has known Stone before.

One night Mark loses heavily in a card game. The young couple are almost penniless. Mark borrows $500 from Stone. He and Norma return to Marlboro. They stop at an expensive hotel and Mark sets out on a round of pleasure-seeking with his wealthy friends instead of hunting a job. One evening he introduces Norma to Natalie Price, a debutante who has long hoped to marry Mark. As their funds dwindle the young couple move to a furnished apartment. Mark begins to hunt work frantically. He is unsuccessful until Christine Saunders tells him to get a job as salesman in Bradley Hart's advertising agency.

Saturday afternoon Norma waits for Mark to appear with his pay check. At last she hears footsteps on the stairs.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXIII

Mark Travers halted on the fourth step below the landing. The staircase and hall were poorly lighted and his face was in shadow. "Hello!" he said evenly to the girl above.

Norma was radiant. "Oh, I'm glad you've come, dear! Did you work this afternoon? I thought you'd be through long ago!"

"Had a talk with Dad," Mark said indifferently. He had climbed the last four steps and stood beside her. "Well—you're all dressed up around here?"

The blue eyes twinkled. "Do you like it?" she asked. "Really?" Norma looked down at the simple crepe frock she was wearing. The cloth's sapphire shade exactly matched her eyes. She whirled about in a pirouette and assumed the pose of a fashion mannequin. "Guess," she demanded dramatically, "what it cost?"

"Gosh, how should I know? Where'd you buy it?"

"I didn't buy it, Mark. I made it! Mrs. Tracey on the floor below let me use her sewing machine. I got a pattern and it wasn't a bit hard. And the best part—it cost exactly $4.26!"

"Do you mean it?" Incredulity in the young man's eyes. "Do you honestly mean you can get a dress like that for four bucks?"

"Not in a store—of course not. But I've always liked to sew and it was fun to see if I could make a whole dress. Tell me—do you really think it looks all right? I was sort of worried about these tucks."

"Looks like a million dollars to me." There was something a little strange about Mark's voice. Something unusual in the way he avoided her eyes, too. Norma, excited over her triumph as a seamstress, took no notice.

"I'll get my coat and we can do the marketing," she announced happily. "I waited on purpose so we could go together today. You—you got your check, of course?"

"Yes, I've got it."

The girl was bustling about the apartment. Norma took pride in her housekeeping and the quarters were so crowded that if a single chair were misplaced, a drawer left open or the slightest detail out of order, the scene became topsy-turvy.

She brought her coat and Mark held it for her. The small hat was jammed down over her curls. All the way downstairs and as they walked the two blocks to the grocery and meat markets, Norma talked eagerly. After the hours of waiting it was comforting to have Mark beside her. His silence escaped her attention.

They bought generously—potatoes, canned goods, butter, loaf of bread, eggs, fresh vegetables and fruit. There was a small roast for dinner next day, cream and macaroons from which Norma would concoct a delicious dessert. The huge paper sacks were piled high when the two were ready to start for home. Their purchases would make up the bulk of their living for the next week. Norma explaining advantages of quantity buying as they retraced their steps. She believed emphatically that foods should be selected personally and not ordered by telephone.

Not until they were back in the apartment did it occur to her as strange that Mark was talking so little. She looked at him closely, asked if he were feeling well.

"Sure, I'm all right," Mark answered carelessly.

He wasn't, however. He wasn't at all the usual Mark and though he strove against it and tried to keep it back at last the story came out. They had finished the evening meal. Norma was removing dishes from the table and Mark was hurriedly behind a newspaper. Suddenly he threw down the scattered sheets.

"Let's get out of here—go somewhere!" he exclaimed.

"All right. As soon as I have these dishes done. Where do you want to go?"

"Anywhere! Want to get out of this place, that's all. Here—I'll wipe those for you."

She handed him a fresh tea towel and the dishwashing began. A small task. Their entire supply of dishes would not fill a shelf in the built-in cupboard over the sink. Before Mark had dried the last plate his mood changed again.

"Something was wrong! Something that was serious had happened."

Norma put a hand on his shoulder. "Please, Mark!" she begged, "you're worried about something! I know you are. Won't you tell me what's the matter? Won't you tell me what it's about?"

He tried to evade, failed. The ugly secret was branded in the burning brown eyes. Mark started to deny, shifted his gaze and blurted out, "I'm not going back to Hart's. I'm fired!"

"Mark—?"

"Oh, Brad didn't put it that way, of course. He didn't use the word, 'fired.' That's what he meant, though. Asked me to go to lunch with him and edged around to the fact I haven't made a single sale all this week. Hinted some other line of work might be more 'congenial.' He made it plain enough, all right! I didn't want to take the lousy check for last week but he insisted. Even said I could get a new job if I wanted to. He knew I wouldn't do that! He knew I'd never set foot again in the damned place."

There was more of the same—much more—for the next hour. At the end of that time they decided it was too late to go elsewhere. For another hour they discussed ways and means and their financial situation. After that they went to bed.

Sunday each of them tried scrupulously to give the impression of being utterly unworried. Preparation and serving of the dinner, the bulky Sunday newspaper, the sort and order and reading of the deception. Mark dropped to the davenport in the afternoon and took a nap. Toward evening they put on wraps and went out into the cool air for a walk.

Monday morning brought the inevitable problem. Where was Mark to find work? He breakfasted as usual, put on his hat and coat and departed. Shortly before six he returned. Norma, aware of his pride, asked no questions.

Three days passed, then four. Each 24 hours became a dreary repetition of the one before. Norma, so anxious to be helpful, began to hear bad news as well as the good, was wise enough to wait for Mark to speak. She knew pocketing his pride was for Mark the hardest struggle.

A week went by in this fashion. Presently Norma noticed that each night Mark was scanning the newspaper "help wanted" columns. She noticed he set the alarm clock for half an hour earlier. What struck her painfully in the transformation taking place was the disappearance of the gay alertness from his eyes, loss of the old brisk confidence. He talked less, fell into moody silences that lasted a long while.

Displays of irritability were less frequent. Mark's lips were hardening into a firm line. Sometimes Norma almost felt the man across the table was a stranger.

A dozen times she regretted the money spent for her pretty crepe frock. In spite of its cheapness that dress was a luxury. She could have done as well without it.

Norma wasted not a penny in these days. She walked blocks to save a few cents on fruit or vegetables. She hoarded the household money. Such things were not hardships. Economizing was something the girl had done all her life. What terrified her, turned days and nights into nerve-shattering ordeals, was the fear of what should come when the last of their money was gone. Only a little remained. What would they do when that had vanished?

There was less than $5 in Norma's purse as she stood at the meat counter of her favorite store one Thursday afternoon. Rent would be due in another week. It had been paid in advance for the first month. Payment of the coming rent bill had been on the girl's mind all day.

Bother! She couldn't possibly get $15—one week's installment—out of that $5 in her purse. If they were to be put out of the apartment they would be put out. That was all there was to it! With unaccustomed recklessness Norma selected a choice cut of steak. She told herself she and Mark were so near the brink now that nothing mattered.

Regret overwhelmed her as soon as she had paid the bill and started home. As she opened the door of the apartment 10 minutes later something made her glance about quickly.

"Mark!" she cried, "how you startled me! I didn't think you'd come so soon!"

The young man was standing across the room. "Sorry," he said. "Didn't expect to be here myself but I had a piece of luck."

"You mean—is it a job?"

Mark nodded. "Wait until you hear the rest of it," he said, "before you begin cheering. It's a job all right. Floor walker at Blossomdale's! Yes, Madam—infant's wear on the third floor! Indigestible chocolate drops, two aisles to the right. Garden hose? Yes, ma'am, you'll find it in the hosiery department. Step right this way!"

Norma tried to laugh. She knew Mark didn't think it funny in the least. She knew he was bitterly resentful and the burlesque was venomous. It was her duty to win him from this mood.

So she said with forced gaiety, "You won't sell ME garden hose or indigestible chocolate drops! Well, darling, no one can deny there's a lot of 'standing' that goes with the job of floor walker. Hail the new merchant prince!"

Mark said grimly: "I don't see one thing about it—Blossomdale's may be the 'biggest store in the state' but nobody I've ever known shops there! Anyway, I'm to check in at 8:45 tomorrow morning. And for my services I receive the princely salary of 35 bucks a week!"

"There'll be raises! Isn't it funny, Mark? Something must have told me you'd had a good day. Look—I bought beefsteak!"

"They celebrated that evening—not at the motion picture theater but with a diner party just for two. Norma sent Mark to the store for mushrooms and whipping cream. She made his favorite salad and topped off the meal with coffee that was ambrosial. The scent of that coffee did as much as anything to put young Travers in a cheerful frame of mind. He even joked about their poverty as Norma poured the second cup.

The girl was radiant. "It's the turning point," she told herself. "Everything's going to be all right now." She was singing as she cleared the dishes from the table. Mark wiped them. The two were as happy as they had been on any of their extravagant evenings at Blue Springs. Thirty-five dollars a week seemed as big as $500 had before.

"He'll get along!" Norma assured herself. "Mark's going to make good!"

He was off next morning at eight o'clock; tired but on good spirits when he returned at six. A number of interesting events had happened during the day. A huge department store, Mark was to discover, was an absorbing institution. The first day had proved an eye-opener. Successive days were each to hold new experiences.

It was hard work but for the first time Mark Travers was seeing a side of life he had never known. Some of the anecdotes he related were amusing. Some were pathetic and others showed how jealousy, egotism and a dozen other weaknesses of the human family are bared in their daily barter. Each day brought Saturday nearer when Mark was to receive the coveted $35. Fifteen of those dollars would go for Norma's rent. The major worry on a week's holiday had been removed when she learned the rent money was secure. Nothing seemed so important as maintaining the roof over their heads.

The eventful evening finally came. Norma wore one of her prettiest house frocks. She ran to the door and threw it open as she heard Mark's footsteps in the hall. He stood before her, grinning. "Surprise!" Travers exclaimed. "Shut your eyes, Norma, and count ten!"

Bryan proposed to legislate a better staple of cotton, and thus meet the main difficulty—that in which one-fourth the cotton of Texas is so low-grade that it is not tenderable on contract, and is therefore subject to such prices as buyers may care to offer—and reduce the surplus. He would prohibit the use of hinters, sweepings and low-grade cotton in the manufacture of cushions, mattresses and similar containers.

"Mass meeting" legislation has its drawbacks, and the Texas lawmakers probably won't resort to it again. Not that verbal lambastings from people called to give their testimonials mattered, but two members had complained of being "insulted" by the enthusiastic visitors in the house during sessions.

One argumentative cotton orator had thwacked a member across the head with a folded newspaper with force and seeming affability, but the member hasn't figured out for sure whether it was just excess enthusiasm, or whether it was pugnacity. And while the farmers mingled during sessions with the legislators, there also filtered in other persons actively lobbying against any kind of legislative action.

Now the oil men claim they are coming back for more. New oil associations are being formed with the same facility that others sprang up before and during the oil session. New appeals for legislative help were to be made.

One oil man, conspicuous about the hotel lobbies, insists that the "real purpose" behind the farm session was to get the oil people back and have another fling at oil prices in the name of conservation.

TEXAS TOPICS

By THE POLITICAL ANALYST

AUSTIN, Sept. 15.—Add one-third and nothing and get one-fourth. That was the mathematics the Texas house was preparing to use on cotton.

The no-cotton, 'drop a crop' cotton holiday or planting sabbath, variously used to mean the Long Louisiana law, had enough strength in the house to force the legislature away from the original 50-50 idea. A sub-committee prepared a bill to limit the acreage to one-third. Subjected to the pressure of the no-cotton forces, members of the committee were ready to yield and cut the cotton to 25 per cent of the land in cultivation next year.

The senate, in original substitute and compromise bills, still clung to the idea of trying to base the 1932 acreage on what was in cultivation in 1931. Somewhere along the line the senate, which so reluctantly yielded to the house to accept pay and mileage, likely was to yield again and accept the 1932 cultivated acreage as the basis of the cotton restrictions.

Instead of going at it from acreage, Senator Charles S. Gainer of

MAKE ICE CREAM

BILLINGS, Mont., Sept. 15.—The terrific hailstorm which destroyed crops along Indian Creek, southeast of here recently, was not without its benefits—at least that is the opinion of the farm children. The high wind, which accompanied the storm, drove the hailstones into drifts, which lasted for some time, and the farmers' children used the ice, which nature had provided, to make ice cream.

PEACH CROP ROTTED

MUNICE, Ind., Sept. 15.—W. B. Austin, who owns a large western orchard, said he was paid $25 by growers and canners to let his peach crop, totaling 45 tons, fall from the trees and rot. Austin said that he had found no market for the peaches. He estimated that, in normal years, the crop would bring more than $35 a ton, or approximately $1,500.

RADIO SYSTEMS IN EUROPE ARE BEST OPERATED

HELSINKI, Finland, Sept. 15.—The Finns and Russians believe that it is an insult to the exalted office of president of the most powerful nation on earth that its chief executive should depend on the charity of private stations and advertisers to broadcast his radio messages. They cannot understand why as great and rich a people as the United States should have to commercialize the radio messages of the nation's head by connecting them up with advertising. This feeling is shared by all other European countries.

Russia is making effective use of radio broadcasting. During the evening hours when jazz dominates the American air, when college and university stations in the United States are silenced by the combined efforts of commercial broadcasters and the Federal Radio commission, earnest and able Russian speakers broadcast instruction absorbed by eager listeners anxious to fit themselves for better work in order to help improve economic conditions in the soviet republic. Foreign languages are taught over the radio so that workers may be able to learn what the imported engineers can teach them. As a result of this great national effort fostered by the Russian broadcasting system, American products are bound to encounter increasingly stiff Russian competition for the European market.

Contrary to the assertions of the communications committee of the American Bar association an investigation on the ground convincingly refuted the statement that the American broadcasting system is the finest in the world. Such a personal investigation shows that European broadcasters, supported by small fees on receiving sets, give the listeners what they want. The American system, on the contrary, encourages the exploitation of the public by favored commercial concerns and gives the listeners what the advertisers want them to hear. Well informed persons familiar with both American and European programs declare that the European broadcast offerings are by far the best. Europe has proved time and time again that listeners would rather pay a small fee than tolerate the advertising nuisance.

Little Latvia is entirely satisfied with the quality and variety of the programs broadcast by the country's nationally owned station operated without advertising. In Estonia advertising is broadcast for a period of only twenty minutes daily; listeners pay the broadcasting company a small fee, yet the company's receipts are large enough to pay 30 to 40 per cent of the gross into the government treasury, put out good programs and still place 10 to 12 per cent into a reserve fund.

However, the European stations do not pay inflated movie prices for radio talents. They present more solid mental food, although there is enough froth of good quality to satisfy those seeking only light entertainment.

Hydro-Electric Plant Rushed

COLUMBIA, Pa., Sept. 15.—Workers are stringing a mile of cable a day in connecting the Safe Harbor power plant with Baltimore, where the electricity provided by the gigantic dam across the Susquehanna river here, will be distributed. The cable stretches across 350 steel towers in the 70-mile carry from the river plant. The right-of-way is through Lancaster and York counties in Pennsylvania, and Baltimore and Howard counties in Maryland.

On about Oct. 1, the initial unit of the power plant will be put in session. It will provide augmented power for the Consolidated Gas and Electric company service in Baltimore.

When the project is completed, the hydro-electric plants at Holtwood and Safe Harbor will be connected, to provide one of America's chief sources of electricity developed from water power.

The Holtwood plant now produces 150,000 horsepower capacity. The first unit of the Safe Harbor operation will provide 255,000 horsepower. The completed plant will be equipped to supply 510,000 horsepower.

At present 3,400 men are at work on the $30,000,000 project.

Charges of Liquor Law Violation Made

Complaints have been filed in Justice of the Peace Jim Steele's court in Eastland against C. C. Putnam and W. M. Armstrong in which both are charged with violation of the state liquor laws. Both Armstrong and Putnam were arrested by the raiding officers. At each place a quantity of alleged intoxicating liquors were found by the officers. The raids were made Saturday by Sheriff Virge Foster, Constable Marion Seabourn and members of Sheriff Foster's office.

The officers also recently arrested Ralph Davis and Roy Davis at Eastland following beer raids. Complaints for violation of the liquor laws have been filed against each of them.

LANDS 97-LB. TURTLE

OCRAOKE, N. C., Sept. 15.—Using only a fresh water tackle, Mrs. Murray Tolson caught a 97-pound Loggerhead turtle. The turtle was landed by her husband. The couple were fishing in Flounder Slough near here and upon the waters of the Pamlico Sound when they made the catch. Mrs. Tolson is the first woman of this community to ever land a turtle of this size.

MAY BAN GAS CANS

ELY, Nev., Sept. 15.—If you believe in preparedness and carry an extra can of gas touring through Nevada, you will be out of luck! Assemblyman Bransom, Nevada's record-breaking law-maker, proposes introducing a new bill, which prohibits carrying of extra gas cans or tanks. Purpose: to obtain $200 additional daily revenue for state, which he claims Nevada now loses.

Police Charges--

county, state and federal authorities toward the making of beer in the homes he explained made it extremely difficult to suppress the sale of the beverage by negroes and other operators.

It has been the experience of the police, he declared, that cases of beer selling turned over to the state usually result in the violator being fined and sent back where he can make more beer. If such cases are tried in the courts, he said, it is rare that a jury will convict. He pointed out that this was due to the attitude of the federal and state officials in refusing to interfere with the making of beer for home consumption which appears to be due to a general attitude that those who wish to make the beverage at home should be allowed to do so. Under these conditions he declared it a practical impossibility to suppress the sale of it by negroes and minor bootleggers, particularly in times when unemployment is great and the sale of beer represents the only income for large numbers of families. Conditions are no worse here than elsewhere, he declared.

He charged, also, that agitation against the police was the result, in most cases, of efforts to get a job on the police force or a desire of discharged officers to "get back" at the department.

Took Objection
Mr. Phillips took objection to this statement and declared that he had a job and had had the same one for 12 years and that he did not want the job of being police chief. His charges were actuated by his desire to see Cisco clean, he said, and he declared he intended to continue his efforts on that ground in the interest of his family. He disavowed any personal feeling against Mr. Miller, asserting that his objection is to the policy of the department in its anti-vice activity. This prompted Chief Miller to demand why he had not come to him personally with his complaints.

Members of the commission interrogated Chief Miller and Mr. Phillips with respect to policies of the police department and to conditions said to exist and after some discussion the matter ended with Chief Miller's assertion that his department is endeavoring to enforce the law and stands ready to make investigations and conduct raids whenever charges of violation are brought to the department.

The commission had occupied the greater part of its meeting period in an audience with a number of leading attorneys of the city with respect to the best course for the city to pursue in attempting to solve its bonded debt difficulty. D. K. Scott, Eugene Lankford and B. W. Patterson appeared before the commissioners with City Attorney F. D. Wright. They gave their individual views with regard to the question of settlement.

The commission authorized the construction of 350 additional feet of water lines as recommended by a committee headed by Comm'r J. T. Elliott.
