40,000 Men Fight In Big Battle of Gran Chaco

MANY POINTS CHANGE HANDS IN OFFENSIVE

BUENOS AIRES, April 23. — Forty thousand men fought today in one of the biggest battles of the long Gran Chaco war on a 125-mile front from Villamentes north to Charagua. The battle has been raging for six days and although more than 2,000 men were reported killed, it has so far been indecisive. Several important positions have been taken and retaken. The Bolivians announced they had recaptured several important positions in Bolivia proper, halting the Paraguayan drive in Santa Cruz province and pushing them back to the Parapeti river. The Paraguayans declared they had started a counter attack in the center and Bolivians were withdrawing rapidly. A Bolivian statement said the Bolivians had broken the entire front, taking many prisoners, cannon, machine guns, rifles, and trucks; killing 2,000 Paraguayans and injuring or capturing 3,000. A Paraguayan official statement said it was the greatest and most audacious Bolivian offensive, with more than 8,000 Bolivians comprising nine regiments, concentrated in the central sector alone.

Cemetery Favorite Place Of Couples

OMAHA, Neb., April 23 — Popularity of the old Mormon cemetery here with "spooners" caused City Commissioners to hesitate before leasing the historic ground to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints of Salt Lake City, Utah. Before leasing the grounds for 50 years for $1 per year with a renewal option, the city insisted that "visitors" hours be designated as "reasonable." Police reports that the old Mormon burial ground was a favorite rendezvous of spooners resulted in the city council stipulating such a reservation before granting the lease.

7 Horseshoes Are Hidden 60 Years

FALL RIVER, Mass., April 23 — Ralph W. Reynolds, 69, appeared at the Belmont club and requested permission to inspect a fireplace. In the fireplace's cleanout he found seven horseshoes which he had concealed there more than 60 years ago when the present clubhouse was his boyhood home. Club attaches were going to remove the horseshoes and present them to Reynolds as keepsakes, but urged them to leave the shoes. "It might be bad luck to take them out," he said. He explained that he had hidden the horseshoes after his mother had complained that they were "cluttering up the house."

Undaunted by the fate of a Michigan "bat wing flyer" who dived to death when his parachute fouled, Capt. Floyd McKennon, veteran Dallas, Tex., parachute jumper, shown with his wings, plans to leap from a plane a mile in the air. McKennon will carry two parachutes and believes he has solved the problem of averting fouling.

Bonus Means More Taxes--Morgenthau

WASHINGTON, April 23.—Henry Morgenthau, Jr., secretary of the treasury, told the senate finance committee today that passage of any one of the soldier bonus bills pending before congress would entail the necessity of levying new taxes. His statement applied to the Harrison compromise measure reported to have President Roosevelt's support, as well as to the Patman $2,000,000,000 currency expansion proposal and the American Legion plan which does not specify a method of payment.

CAMP PROJECT AT LAKE CISCO IS DISCUSSED

"It's about to become too big for us," said Rev. M. H. Applewhite, of Fort Worth, in speaking about the Presbyterian encampment plans at Lake Cisco last night at the ice cream supper given for the members of the Men's Class of the Presbyterian church. Applewhite and Charles Tucker, the latter of Haskell, are working with Rev. J. Stuart Pearce, pastor of the local church, to shape plans so that actual work of building on the grounds donated by the city may be started as soon as possible. After a short introduction by Rev. Pearce, both Rev. Mr. Tucker and Rev. Mr. Applewhite made talks along the line of future plans for the encampment, which, as Rev. Mr. Applewhite said, are growing so fast that it is hard to keep up with the demand for room for those who want to become identified with the project. It was first the idea to care for only the intermediates, but now, he said, the young people's department and the women also want a part in the encampment and its housing facilities. Dr. W. P. Lee, teacher of the men's class, also made a very beautiful talk concerning his work with these men. Music by Ernest Hillson, Harry Schaefer and Spurgeon Parks enlivened the program with selections called for by the audience. L. Y. Siddall also spoke of the class and its fellowship. H. C. Henderson, live wire of the class, had charge of the meeting and introduced the visitors, who were, J. R. Burnett, Bob Winston, J. B. Cate, W. H. LaRoque, R. A. Butler, Leonard Hudson, Rev. M. H. Applewhite, pastor at North Fort Worth, and Rev. Charles Tucker, pastor at Haskell. All present were served with ice cream and cake and after all had finished more helpings were forced upon them, those who so generously served.

Prohibition Repeal Is Due Decisive Action As Conferees Go Into Huddle

AUSTIN, April 23. — Prohibition repeal placed before the legislature in house joint resolution number 1 was due for probable decisive action tonight. House and senate conferees will meet to seek agreement on what the people shall vote upon when a repeal amendment is submitted to them August 24. The senate has voted to submit return to local option with provisions that there shall be no drinking on the premises where sold and no sale except in double-barreled submission, to let voters decide if they want a return to local option. Should most of the votes be for local options, ballots would be counted on a second question, "shall the state set up a dispensary system for sale?" The house has voted for double-barreled submission, to let voters decide if they want a return to local option. Should most of the votes be for local options, ballots would be counted on a second question, "shall the state set up a dispensary system for sale?"

RACE TRACK GAMBLING GIVEN BIG SETBACK IN TEXAS HOUSE

AUSTIN, April 23. — Foes of race track betting gained an advantage today when the bill to repeal the pari-mutuel act was placed on the house table, subject to call. The motion to advance it by Rep. Harry Graves of Georgetown, bitter foe of gambling, was carried 87 to 42. House action today contrasted with senate action Friday when an attempt to repeal bill was defeated. Racing friends hailed the senate action as a death blow to the repeal bill. They said the repealists had polled their full strength in the vote cast then.

REVIVAL HELD BY METHODIST CHURCH GROWS

The revival which began at the First Methodist church Sunday is continuing with good spirit and attention shown, according to Rev. Frank L. Turner, pastor. Two large congregations greeted the pastor and the evangelist Sunday. Rev. C. C. Henson, the visiting pastor, has been bringing messages on the value of prayer and personal evangelism. For this evening's theme he has chosen "Personal Worth." The pastor said that this is a message well worth the time of all who will come to hear it. The membership of the church has been urged to attend the services and the general public invited to cooperate with the church in the revival.

MOTORCYCLE COP BOXER

PAINTSVILLE, Ky. — When this little city's only motorcycle patrolman drives up beside a speeding car and shouts, "Where's the fire?" it doesn't call for any wisecrack from persons who know his identity. The motorcycle cop is Ray "Tuffy" Griffith, one of the best boxers to be developed in the Tri-state region in a number of years. "Tuffy" divides his time between the highway and the ring.

Jeweler Constructs Tiny Electric Motor

YORK, Neb., April 23 — A tiny electric motor, no larger than a fly and weighing but a quarter of an ounce, has been built by Emanuel Kahm, jeweler here. It is said to be the smallest motor in the world. Many of the motor's 58 parts are constructed of 14 karat gold. It attains a speed of between 400 and 500 revolutions per second and runs long without overheating. The parts are held together by 19 screws, the largest of which has 220 threads to the inch. So small are the parts that Kahm used a magnifying glass when constructing it. It is operated from a three-volt battery and generates sufficient power to drive a larger device used to indicate the motor's speed. The pulley belt is made of one-third of a strand of No. 60 cotton thread.

Czech Beauty Virginia Fete Queen

A beauty from far Czechoslovakia will reign as queen of the famed apple blossom festival in the historic Shenandoah valley of Virginia this year. Third girl of foreign parentage so to be honored is Nella Veverka, shown here in a recent portrait. Daughter of her country's minister to Washington, Miss Veverka has been a capital resident seven years, finishing her education there. More than 100,000 visitors are expected at the festival in Winchester, Va., May 2 and 3.

SUGAR LIKELY MAY REPLACE GAS IN MOTOR

NEW YORK, April 23 — Sugar as a motor fuel milk and eggs as building materials synthetic weather, which excludes extremes of heat and cold, are future chemical possibilities, scientists declare at the chemical industries tercentenary meeting being held here by the American Chemical Society. "If it is shown at some time in the future that engines can utilize sugar as a fuel more economically than gasoline, it will become the job of the petroleum industry to make sugar," says Dr. J. Bennett Hill, chief chemist of the Atlantic Refining company. Known Substances Basic building materials include practically all of the known substances, organic and inorganic, F. Leo Smith, chief architect of the Federal Housing Administration, points out. Even milk, eggs, and other food products can be included in this list, he declares. Leather, textiles, paper, rubber, resins, oils, gases, vegetable fibers, and a countless number of products have a place in the construction of buildings. The movies were the pioneers in "selling" air - conditioning to the public, Thomas Midgeley, famous as the discoverer of ethyl gasoline asserts.

Anti-Crime Bills Are Attacked By Former Prosecutor On Senate Floor

AUSTIN, April 23.—Anti-crime bills before the Texas senate underwent a scathing attack today from Sen. Clay Cotten of Palestine, a former prosecutor. "Texas present criminal statutes are the best in the world. A courageous and sincere prosecutor would not need any change in the laws. The laws are the result of experience. They guard against the injustice from an inflamed public mind." This senate would not willingly do anything to take away property right, life and liberty are much more valuable than any property rights," Cotten said. Senator Cotten said that in one year in Harris county, where he was assistant prosecutor, out of 835 cases, 75 resulted in verdicts of not guilty.

CITY IN LEAD WITH VICTORY FROM NANCE

City yesterday crowded Nance off the top rung of the city softball ladder, where the motorists had been perched alongside the local government and the Woodmen, by taking the long end of a 5 to 4 score at Chesley park. At the same time, Randolph delivered a notch and sent the Daily News more definitely into the cellar by slamming out a 23 to 2 victory at the college. Bivens hurled good ball for the City club and good support from his mates held down the Nance team to the four circuits. Rise, pitching for Nance, also turned in a good game. Coach Garrett's men at the college began hitting in the first inning of their game with the Daily News and kept it up for the entire afternoon. The journalists found it difficult, on the other hand, to connect with Shelton's fast ball. Daily News used two moundsmen, Lewis and D. Yarbrough. Wednesday's games will bring together Randolph and the City at the college; Lobeos and Nance at Chesley park, and the Daily News and Garner's at the grammar school. There will be no games today, unless the clubs rained out last Friday make up their games. They are the City and Lobeos and Garner's and W. O. W.

WORKERS FOR CHEVROLET IN BIG WALKOUT

There will be no direct effects of the automobile walkout felt in Cisco unless the strike spreads to other cities, it was announced today by A. D. Anderson, head of the A. G. Motor company. "We get our cars from Kansas City and St. Louis," he said, "and the strike in Toledo won't bother us."

TOLEDO, Ohio, April 23. — Organized labor demand for union recognition in the automobile industry rose today with a strike of workers at the local plant of the Chevrolet motor company. The walkout was believed to involve more than 2,000 employees. Company and union statements conflicted as to the actual number which had joined the strike. The United Automobile Workers association, federal labor union, said General Motors officials had refused demands for higher wages, establishment of seniority, a shorter working week, the closed shop, and union recognition. Company officials met with several hundred workers who did not join the strike, explained the company plans, and told them to go to their homes, as the plant was being closed down. Hugh Dean, manufacturing manager of the Chevrolet Motor company, issued a statement in which he said that only 600 of the employees had joined the strike, that the union had refused to consider counter proposals made by the company, and that the strike primarily was a fight for the closed shop. Picketing of the big factory began. There was no disorder. Hugh signs appeared in the picket line such as: "Stop, please, for our sakes. Strike."

BABIES OF 1914 MARCH TO JOIN FRENCH ARMY (Copyright, 1935, by United Press) PARIS, April 23. — Youths of 21, born as the guns of the World War crashed out their first bombardments in 1914, marched singing to join the army today from every city, town, and hamlet in France. In ragged squads with bright colored badges pinned to their coat lapels, signifying that they had been accepted for military service, they marched to railway stations and entrained for army barracks. They went 16 and one-half years after "the war to end wars" to become part of the most formidable war machine Europe has ever seen. They may return seasoned soldiers after 18 months training, ready as reserves to respond to a call to the colors, or the survivors may return as veterans of a new war.

Dionne Unsatisfied With Quins' Report

CALLANDER, Ont., April 23. — A child specialist today pronounced the Dionne quintuplets in splendid condition, although their father, Oliva Dionne, continued to protest that he is not satisfied with medical reports on the recovery of four of the girls who are suffering from slight head colds. Dr. Allan Dafeo, who has cared for the famous quints, was highly pleased by Dr. Allan Brown of Toronto, who told Dionne that he did not object to further examination, but that it would have to be delayed.

Cisco Is On Her Way

The several hundred picnickers at the parks at Lake Cisco Sunday, the first real spring day of the season, brings to our attention the value to Cisco of her recreational facilities as attraction features in making Cisco the center of this section as a playground for her people.

Several hundred people come each day and evening during the outdoor season, to avail themselves of the exceptional features offered by Cisco. We are glad to have these people come. That's why we have pressed every effort through the past years to advertise these attractions. Many come without spending any money in Cisco, perhaps, but others do. At any rate we want them to come and play with us. We are social beings and cannot enjoy life without companionship of our kind. We want them to come and in greater numbers. By and by, some of them will come and stay with us more than a few hours. They'll tell others and slowly, but surely, we'll become advertised as a delightful place for the vacationist.

The locating of the Presbyterian camp here is a fruit of someone's liking what Cisco has to offer. Other denominations will follow the lead of the Rev. J. Stuart Pearce's denomination and soon we'll have several camps of the kind.

With the building of the state park which just now holds a rosy prospect of maturing, and if a commodious auditorium may be had near the city, which also seems likely, Cisco will be well on her way to becoming a mecca for the tired people in search of a lovely haven of rest.

Cisco has much to offer. No flies nor mosquitos, cooling breezes and the purest of water—all in addition to fishing, boating, swimming and camping. Cisco seems to be well on her way to a realization of her ideals as a recreational center.

Effect of Total Eclipse on Animals

While transportation companies in August, 1932, were busy selling the world an eclipse in northern New England, biologists were investigating the reactions of birds and other animals to the phenomenon.

Instead of traveling, most of them went to bed, says the committee on behavior of animals, headed by Dr. Harold J. Coolidge, Jr. The report, to be published in the proceedings of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, has just been made public.

In it are included individual observations gathered by the committee from private citizens, game wardens, and naturalists who occupied assigned posts during the eclipse. The letters received told in general of slankened activity among diurnal animals while nocturnal creatures slowly awakened, many of them continuing activity even after the eclipse was over.

Not a few letters bordered on humor. For instance, one woman informed a neighbor who informed the committee that her pantry was infested with water bugs after the eclipse. Another wrote that dragonflies "appeared confused and acted very peculiar"; another complained that mosquitos came up out of the grass with "approaching darkness and acted wildly."

A fisherman in New Hampshire reported much better fishing during the eclipse than he had experienced all day. Just the opposite story was told by a Maine hatchery where the fish were observed as feeding before the eclipse, but resting on the bottom during totality.

Nineteen persons reported on the activities of toads, peepers, frogs and reptiles. Toads began their nocturnal search for garden insects, disclosed one observer. Peepers increased the volume of their concert, said another. Bullfrogs croaked as though evening were approaching and reptiles were apparently very active.

No birds, the committee found, gave any extreme signs of fear or panic. "No behavior reported could be regarded as equivalent to the terror evinced by ignorant men and women during the Middle Ages." The majority of feathered folk though the eclipse a signal to retire, though many paid no attention to it at all.

The behavior of cats and dogs the committee threw out as of small value, for, says the report, "dogs and cats closely associated with man as his companions may have sensed his air of expectancy and responded to that rather than to the actual conditions of the eclipse." Bats were seen flying in many localities, skunks appeared on Cape Cod.

Loans to Europe Unsafe—Unwise

Declaring that Europe is "preparing for war" Senator William E. Borah (R) of Idaho, veteran isolationist, introduced a resolution last week in Congress putting an absolute embargo on all loans or credit, public or private, from the United States to countries other than those on the American continent.

Loans made to Europe today are "an aid to war," Mr. Borah asserted, and should be banned if for no other reason than to keep the United States clear of an impending conflagration.

"If war breaks out and we have large investments in Europe they will be a powerful factor in bringing us into war," Mr. Borah declared.

Mr. Borah's dramatic expression of extreme isolationist sentiment found immediate response in a Senate minority group, which has been working to keep America free from all European entanglements. While the resolution, at first sight, was not expected to get beyond the talking stage in

OUT OUR WAY

Congress, it partially reflects mounting apprehension over German rearmament and the consequent European crisis.

American loans abroad are not good investments anyway, Mr. Borah insisted, in view of the repudiation of $11,000,000,000, which was loaned under the most sacred circumstances.

"Further, in the interest of our own people and our own country, our money should not be loaned abroad but should be used at home."

MEDICAL CHARTER FOUND

The DARK BLOND

By CARLETON KENDRAKE © 1935 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
MILlicent GRAVES, secretary to GEORGE DRIMGOLD, finds her employer in his office dead. "THERE'S HAPP," a stranger, offers to help her. He sends her to a beauty shop where she is transformed into a woman. She returns home, introducing her as his secretary. She meets HAPP's son, NORMAN, his stepson, ROBERT DUCHENE, Mrs. Happ's maid, and a black emine in her door. "That night a note under her door informs Millicent, 'The woman in black emine is here.' Millicent goes to the chauffeur's quarters. The chauffeur is dead from a bullet wound. Next morning SERGEANT MAHONEY takes charge of the case. Over the telephone Mrs. Happ learns that her husband has been kidnapped. She is warned not to inform the police. Norman and Millicent learn the owner of the car Millicent saw the woman in black emine driving is PHYLLIS FAULCONER. They go to her apartment and find a black emine. There is also a note left by Bob Caise. They are still in the apartment when they hear a key in the lock. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXV

THE key rattled in the lock on the other side of the door. Millicent waited, expecting momentarily that the door would open; that Bob Caise would enter the room and a deadly combat would ensue between him and Norman Happ. But the door didn't open. After a few moments the key was withdrawn, and then, after an interval, another key inserted. Once more a key rattled about in the lock and Norman Happ turned to Millicent and whispered, "It's someone who's trying to pick the lock with a skeleton key." They stood perfectly still, listening to the noises made by successive keys as they were fitted, one by one, into the lock and the man on the other side of the door tried to open it.

Norman Happ, leaning close to Millicent so that his lips were almost against her hair, whispered, "We've simply got to find out who that is. Stand perfectly still and don't make a move when I open the door." "You're not going to open the door!" she protested. He placed his finger against his lips in a mute command for silence, then leaned forward so that his ear was against the panel of the door. A few moments later the noise made by the key in the lock ceased.

Norman reached for the door knob. Millicent flung her weight against his arm, pulling his hand away from the knob. "Don't be foolish," he told her. "We've simply got to know who's at the door." "I won't let you do it. He'll shoot." "No, he won't. It isn't Bob. Bob has a key. I've got to find out who it is." "I'll tell you," she said, "what you can do. Wait until he gets in the elevator and then run down the stairs. You can get to the lobby almost as quickly as he does. Then he won't be suspicious. Wait until you hear the elevator door clang and then you can start."

THE words were no sooner spoken than they heard the sound of the elevator door moving on its track. "Now," she exclaimed, "go ahead. I'll wait. Come back here just as soon as you find out." He jerked the door open, paused while he peered down the hallway, said disgustedly. "He's already in the elevator." Then he turned toward the staircase and disappeared around the corner of the corridor. Millicent closed the door of the room, grateful that she had prevented Norman from rushing into danger but suddenly realizing that she had left herself in a far from enviable position. She was alone in this apartment, rented by a killer or a killer's accomplice, and Bob Caise, who had threatened to "take care" of her, might return at any moment. She felt a touch of panic but reassured herself with the thought that Norman Happ would soon return. She decided to utilize the few minutes that she would necessarily be in the apartment by making a more thorough search. She went to the writing desk, opened it and looked for some bit of evidence which would give her additional information about the occupant of the apartment.

There was some note paper, some stamps, a rent receipt, a blotter, some pens, ink, and the broken stub of a pencil in the desk, but nothing that gave her a clue to that which she sought. Millicent turned back once more toward the closet, suddenly remembering that she had looked only at the coat hangers for garments. She had not looked into the darker corners at the back of the closet.

She opened the door and peered to the right. She thought she saw a bulky object and stooped, pushing forward her right hand with exploring finger-tips outstretched. She touched something hard, solid and smooth. Her fingers ran around it until she realized that it was a suitcase. She groped for the handle, found it and lifted. The suitcase was surprisingly heavy. She dragged it out to the light and gave an exclamation of delighted surprise. It was the suitcase Jarvis Happ had given her—the suitcase containing the books of account covering the business dealings of Happ and Gentry.

SHE forgot her surroundings in the thrill of her discovery. She dragged the suitcase well out into the center of the apartment, dropped to her knees, opened the clasp, unfastened the straps and stared at the assortment of books revealed as the suitcase swung open. She glanced through the books hastily and realized that beyond doubt they were the ones which dealt with the affairs of Happ and Gentry. Millicent's mind raced with a quick succession of startling thoughts. There was now no question but that the occupant of the apartment was directly concerned with the affairs of the Happ household and must also be implicated in some way in the Drimgold murder. But what possible connection could there be between Drimgold and the Happs?

Then there was Bob Caise to be considered. Undoubtedly he knew more than he cared or dared to tell about the woman in the black emine coat. Bob Caise had a key to the apartment. Yet he had knocked at the door before he had tried that key—a peculiar series of code knocks. If he had a key why had he bothered to knock? And why the code? Millicent had thought at first that the occupant of the apartment worked daytimes and was in the apartment only at night. But Bob Caise must have expected to find someone there. Otherwise he wouldn't have given that peculiar knock. And who had been the other person who had come to the door, given the same set of code knocks, and then tried in vain to unlock the door?

Millicent looked up from the suitcase, suddenly realizing that she had lost all track of time while she had been speculating upon these angles of the case. She wondered if Norman had been able to reach the lower floor of the apartment house in time to see the person who had left the elevator. She carefully closed the suitcase and carried it to the door so that when Norman returned no time would be lost in leaving the apartment and carrying away the valuable evidence she had discovered. MINUTES passed, minutes which seemed eternities. Slowly the conviction was forced upon Millicent's mind that some untoward circumstance had upset Norman's plans. Millicent realized that she dared not wait longer for him. He had undoubtedly encountered something which had prevented him from returning. She picked up the suitcase and, as she did so, realized that she was hiding every bit of evidence they had been able to uncover, every bit of evidence which would show the sinister activities of the woman in the emine coat, or link Bob Caise with the Felding murder. In her right hand she carried the suitcase which had been stolen from the Happ residence. Over her left wrist was the strap of the purse in which reposed the folded note signed by Bob Caise. She took a deep breath, tried to steady the pounding of her heart, opened the door into the corridor, hesitated a moment, then pushed her way out into the corridor, the heavy suitcase banging against her legs. The corridor was empty. Millicent closed the door behind her, heard the spring lock click into place, turned toward the elevator and then decided that she dared not risk descending in the elevator. She turned down the corridor toward the stairs, the heavy suitcase causing her to exert all of her strength in order to carry it. She reached the bend in the corridor, turned toward the stairs and heard the clang of the elevator door. Her heart gave a leap as she realized that this might be Norman Happ. She dropped the suitcase to the floor and turned back toward the corner of the corridor, ready to cry out Norman Happ's name as she saw him come down the corridor. She swung around the corner and suddenly came to a dead stop in consternation. A man was walking directly toward her, a man who walked with the quick, purposeful strides of someone proceeding toward a very definite objective. There was something in the set of his shoulders, something in the poise of his head which reminded her of a wild beast hunting down some small, defenseless animal. (To Be Continued)

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

AUSTIN, April 23. — Lieut. Gov. Walter Woodul has gleefully helped "pan" many state officials at the annual gridiron dinners of the Salesmanship club.

The tables were turned at a Governor-for-a Day dinner in his honor when Gov. Allred's trip to Washington made Woodul acting governor. Former Senator George Purl of Dallas presiding.

The acting governor heard himself deliver a statesmanlike address through the mouth of a senator page. He saw another page in big britches give the governor's views.

The dinner ended when the cowboy senator, Jim Neal of Laredo and Lon Messer of Robstown wearing Texas Ranger hats, rushed in and began chopping up chairs. "It's Gov. Woodul's orders," Neal was supposed to announce. He had stage fright and only chopped.

The present session of the Texas legislature opened with the house spectacularly putting senators on a spot with a resolution to disclose who was paying them.

The session is ending with the senate in another uncomfortable place. The house has sent the senate a resolution to prohibit interim committees being appointed without consent of both branches.

The senate either must agree or stand convicted of providing interim employment for its members by the committee route.

Expense of such committees is said from the contingent expense appropriation for the legislature. House and senate alike can dip into the fund. House members say the senate takes a major share.

Senate interim committees forced two increases of $50,000 each in the contingent appropriation sales tax although origination of tax measures is a sole prerogative of the house.

Rep. J. Bryan Bradbury of Abilene speaks convincingly to the house of representatives, but Allred's voice neither ascends nor drops.

"He talks like vertical handwriting," said a hearer endeavoring to convey an impression of the West Texan's speeches.

"Gather here at the feet of Jim Hogg," House Speaker Coke Stevenson admonished a house committee that asked permission to hold a meeting while the house was in session. He referred to the portrait of Former Gov. Hogg that hangs in the house auditorium near the speaker's stand.

Former State Senator T. H. McGregor, Austin, began giving barbedies for the Texas legislators in 1913. Then came prohibition and the barbecues were abandoned.

The custom will be resumed Monday when legislators will gather about the smoking pits at the McGregor ranch, in the hills west of Austin. Legislators learned that it is a sure-enough ranch and not just a country estate when they were given road directions, including the notice to drive through three cattle guards en route.

Rep. J. C. Duvall, Fort Worth, threw a neat brick at the motor division of the state railroad commission by asking an investigation to determine if Texas highways are adequate for Centennial year tourists.

He explained that the highway department has spent many millions to make them adequate yet the motor division says there is not room for more motor truck operation and refuses permits on that ground.

"We ought to ascertain which branch of the state government is correct about it," Duvall told the house of representatives, but members turned a deaf ear.

Casper Steiner put what was thought to be a poser up to the state supreme court when he was held in contempt by District Judge C. A. Wheeler in a liquor case. Steiner's attorneys pointed out that he was enjoined, among other things, from transporting liquor that was on his premises. He left it there and along came the Rangers, found it and reported him for possession.

"I was held in contempt for obeying the court," he complained. The supreme declined a writ, leaving him to figure it out.

The chain store tax which Gov. Allred approved only to be accused of fostering an indirect sales tax, has now been shorn of the tax on sales. It will go before the legislature as a straight tax, graduated on the number of stores.

Suspicion of legislators that it was a sales tax arose from an original provision that graduated the tax both on the number of gross sales, and on the amount of gross sales. Its remaining distinction from an

Stories in STAMPS WHAT MAKES YOUR BODY GO

THE man who discovered the secret of man's nervous system—what makes us react to thought and feeling—is honored by Spain in a 20 centimo stamp of 1934. He is Ramon y Cajal, histologist, winner of the Moscow International award in 1900 and of half the Nobel prize in medicine in 1906. By his microscopic study of man's nervous system he defined the laws which govern the reactions and relationships of the nerves and sense organs in man. His three-volume work on the histology of the nervous systems of man and the invertebrates is regarded as a classic in medicine.

AUSTIN, April 23 — Last week saw one Texas administrative board go out of existence, and next week promises to mark the passing of another. But in both cases, new agencies have been created to take the place of the old. The official state planning commission replaced an unofficial body which functioned for the past year. The Centennial appropriation bill proposes to set up a Centennial board of control, replacing the official commission created last year.

A bill to interpose state bonds in a refunding of county and district road bonds eligible for state assumption, is near agreement for submission in the legislature. It would take the present one-cent of gasoline taxes and apply it so as to extend the assumption of the outstanding bonds considerably further than possible at present.

It would save the state from the pending attempt to levy an additional bill to interpose state bonds in a refunding of county and district road bonds eligible for state assumption, is near agreement for submission in the legislature.

It would take the present one-cent of gasoline taxes and apply it so as to extend the assumption of the outstanding bonds considerably further than possible at present.

It would save the state from the pending attempt to levy an additional ional cent of gasoline taxes to re-federal matching highway aid. Many of the present bond issues, not yet reached for assumption, are on the market at around 70 to 75 cents on the dollar. The refunding bill, designed to benefit counties and not the holders, would simply give the counties a way in which to buy the bonds at market prices and would not contemplate both raising the price and purchasing them before maturity.

The state assumption fund has been insufficient to meet all the maturities. Counties in some instances have refunded. It was found a state bond issue, backed by the revenues of the one-cent gasoline tax, would be saleable at far lower interest than most of the issues.

Many of the outstanding issues could be traded in for the new issues others could be bought in at low prices, while the owners who held out for a full payment of both interest rate on about $20,000,000 of obligations could be lowered without additional taxation or further cost to the state. The assumption program would be speeded by the extent to which interest demands were lessened as to part of the bonds, and as to other savings as to purchases and county tax-rate reduction in others.

County Judge Oscar C. Dancy of Brownsville is author of the provision that the savings in purchase of low-price bonds would go to the counties and the state assumption fund rather than to bondholders.

AUSTIN, April 23 — Debate, such as the fight over adopting the Centennial bill, repeatedly shows Texas is so big (so diverse in interest, so conflicting in regional ambition and objective, that there is no true "Texas spirit.")

Texas share a common heritage, just as, for instance those people of a state scattered over the whole nation; but the heritage is not as strong as the burden of present interest and community spirit.

The conflicts feed on the commercial and economic rivalry of cities. They are extended by the inherent conflict, in legislative matters of rural and big-city interests.

The Centennial repeatedly has been on the rocks of sectional dissension and discord. It now has been shown that even a great and successful Centennial will only leave these differences accentuated rather than unifying all the state in that harmonious unity of spirit and purpose its presupposes.

IKON ARTISTS TURN TALENTS TO NOVEL ART

MOSCOW, April 23 — The day of the ikon has passed. In a land where atheism is preached, strangely enough, with religious zeal, there is little demand for sacred pictures. But in the village of Ivanovo Province, Palekh, the ancient guild of ikon-painters is attempting to transfer their art and skill to new subjects.

These men, some 70 in number, who are bound together by a famed but little-practiced art, recently celebrated the 10th anniversary of their organization under the Soviet system.

Ikon-painting is one of the few original Russian arts. Today tourists pay fabulous prices for the works of the more famous masters. Before the revolution every household, no matter how poor, had at least one religious picture before which an oil lamp constantly burned.

The most famous center of ikon-painting was Palekh. A remote little colony, 30 kilometers from the nearest railroad line, produced works of rare art. These paintings found their way all over Russia, into the palaces of Tsars and princes as well as the homes of common people.

When the Bolsheviks, with their hatred of everything religious, came to power, it appeared that the day of the ikon-painters was over. For several years that was true. But about 1924 the Soviet government decided that although it did not approve of ikons as such, the skill of the painters was a heritage of national art which should be preserved.

Although the nature of their work has changed, the old masters of ikon painting still preserve in their paintings that combination of fantasy and reality which made them celebrated in pre-revolutionary times.

TON OF STEEL USED TO MAKE MOVIE ARMOR

NEW YORK, April 23 — At least a ton of steel is represented in the armor now being used by Cecil B. DeMille in his picturization of the Crusades era for Paramount. It is steel that was rendered malleable and beaten into hundreds of helmets and swords here by one of the few master blacksmiths, living in the world today, who knows the craftsmanship that was imperative in days of knighthood to outfit a warrior and his horse with metal hat, lance and overcoat.

It takes this armor expert and his corps of twelve highly trained smiths just three days to make a helmet of the style worn by Crusaders and their enemies, the Saracens. In the old days, however this master smith, Kenneth Lynch, declares the same job executed in the same manner used to require all of 90 days. He attributes this discrepancy in time to a single fact: that today smiths may buy steel while in olden times a smith had to spend the greater volume of his efforts in making steel.

The popular belief that Knights must have been giants in stature and strength to stand up within encasements of steel — and still manage to wage war — is shattered, if credence is to be placed in the observation of this scholar and maker of armor.

Taking a Saracen helmet in his hand Lynch puts it on the scale and it weighs an even two pounds.

The Crusaders helmet, of entirely different design follows: and it tips an even three pounds.
Finally the great broadsword which King Richard, the Lion Hearted, flayed through the air, is deposited on the scale. It should be little more than a toy in the hands of such a physically powerful star as Henry Wilcoxon. It weighs slightly less than five pounds.

Battleship U. S. S. Chevrolet Is Seen In Cisco

The battleship U. S. S. Chevrolet made fast alongside the A. G. Motor company building this week and was formally christened. Dealers and officers of the Chevrolet zone office witnessed the ceremony. The unique craft is mounted on 157-inch Chevrolet 1-2 ton chassis and demonstrates effectively the protection offered by the all-steel Fisher turret top featured on the new Master De Luxe bodies. The main batteries of the battleship are housed under two steel turret-tops.

The new all-steel top of Chevrolet's Master De Luxe models greatly increases the safety factor against accidents as one sheet of seamless drawn steel runs from the cowl to the rear panel, covering the side panels as far down as the door sills. Top U-shaped bows are also of steel, making it the most protective top ever built.

Using this construction, it is now possible to more effectively streamline the upper part of the car, enhancing the beauty of the body by giving it an unbroken line and uniform color from front to rear. Thoroughly insulated, the turret-top offers protection from weather discomforts, outside shock, and engine and body noises. The construction also eliminates the possibility of troublesome leaky roofs, which prove costly to repair.

Built Railroad For Son Says Enthusiast

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., April 23 — Earl Riggs, an automobile mechanic, says he built a miniature railroad—complete with two trains, block signals, station, tunnel, bridge and even a farm along the "right of way" for his son Joe—but his friends don't believe him.

They say he gets as much fun out of playing with his home-made "railroad system" as his son does and they say also he built the contraption because he had got so much pleasure out of playing with Joe's toy electric train.

It took Riggs three weeks to build the layout.

"Of course, I built the 'system' for my son Joe," Riggs explains. "You may have," Mrs. Riggs says "but you run it yourself most of the time."

CALENDAR OF 13 MONTHS IS CALLED BEST

WASHINGTON, April 23 — Thirteen may be an unlucky number, but E. E. Hardcastle, vice president of the Union Central Life Insurance company, believes there should be that many months in a year.

Hardcastle is one of the nation's leading actuaries. He believes the world should adopt a 13-month calendar without delay.

He said after considerable study of the original 13-month plan and new 12-month plan that he favored the former.

"Calendar reform is a matter essentially international in scope," Hardcastle said, "and the League of Nations is obviously the body through which unified action should proceed."

"By refusing to join the League the United States has impaired its opportunity to take the lead, but might indicate to other nations that it would be willing to study the matter in co-operation with them in a sympathetic spirit."

He said the 13 equal months calendar was the only plan proposed which would remove all defects from the present calendar.

"What we need is a calendar in which the months will be equal in length and contain a whole number of weeks," he declared. "The 13 months plan is the only one that can give this. The fact that over 700 firms are already using it proves that it will work."
