A particularly contagious species of bacilli politicus is on the loose at Wichita Falls. Two years ago the afflicted city was a big spot on an oil map. It laid claim to several distinctions, none of them except Jimmy Allred, of the political variety. Today, with four alleged candidates for governor, not to mention a discreetly hinted fifth, the town bids to become as famous an incubator of gubernatorial ambitions as Williamson county.

Latest bitten is reported to be Walter Cline, president of the West Texas chamber of commerce. Elected, he would not be the first to have gained the promised land from the Mount Sinai of the WTCC presidency. There was Col. Walsh, of San Angelo, later governor of the eleventh federal reserve district; Clifford B. Jones, of Spur, regional federal public works adviser; our own Col. R. Q. Lee, who died a congressman from 17th district, and there is Arthur P. Duggan, Littlefield, who failing to have a congressional district carved out for him, went to the Texas senate, took a personal hand in the deferred carving and now is accused of ambitions to gain a seat at the porticoed end of Pennsylvania avenue.

Of all bugs to which man is host the species reported epidemic at Wichita Falls is the most difficult to isolate, the most virulent in effect. It lodges in the ego, generally producing illusions of a public mandate. As a pathological problem it far exceeds the difficulties produced by the outbreak of sleeping sickness at St. Louis, whose microscopic secret is said to have been brought to knowledge by a Mrs. Smith, university medical research worker. No Mrs. Smith has yet succeeded in detaching a pure culture of the Wichita Falls species of germ.

Historically, the above-mentioned epidemic will probably be found to date from A. H. 1 (Year of Hunter No. 1). Hunter, it will be remembered, muscled in on "Ma" and Ross last year and got quite a hand for his act. A sort of glorified second choice, he drew a lot of disgruntled votes. He was indicative. He showed that something was ripe that a large element of the voters was tired of the same old alternative. He didn't win, of course, but he put Wichita Falls on the map at Austin and convinced some of its main street denizens that the political door has hinges, accounting for the fact that some of them appear to have gotten ideas based on themselves. If Mr. Hunter polled 150,000 votes—or whatever it was he polled—it was quite easy for some of the boys who had kept their shirt fronts clean during the soup course, to figure triple that amount simply by advancing the power of the coefficient. Lest we forget, Jimmy Allred had already contributed precedent in showing what a collar ad and a burning issue will do with the attorney-general's office. Jimmy, by the way, is named among the four as a candidate via the Dan Moody route. The boy is smart.

Whatever is producing this subtle expansion of west Texas political importance and, incidentally, this outcropping of aspirations at Wichita Falls, it is made more significant with the rumor that even Ferguson money will be placed on a Wichita entry. The entry is said to be C. C. McDonald, regarded as Ferguson's teammate on a probable senator-governor ticket. The strategy could be worse. Ferguson can afford a fair-haired boy in an area that is roughly anti-Jim, he himself, supplying the east Texas atmosphere. West Texas isn't treating his relief commission with love and affection overmuch.

Who are the others mentioned? Cline, Allred and McDonald have been named. Hunter is another and again a prospect. He has discovered the subject of taxation, has been lobbying for the people during the interim, and will probably discover, if he runs, that he is an excellent trail blazer for community enterprise.

The discreet whispers concern Charles I. Francis. They are still discreet.

UTILITY RATES.

By coincidence, within a day after the Texas Railroad commission ordered a 20 per cent reduction in the gate rates on domestic gas in 253 Texas cities and towns, and suggested the reduction be passed on to consumers, the federal government acted upon a similar matter.

The Tennessee Valley authority issued an order that electric power produced in its immense plant, should be resold to consumers at rates cutting in half the former rates, and running to an average of less than half what it announced the government had found to be usual rates throughout the nation.

Its action assured consumers, served by its wholesale customers, rates of an average of about two cents per kilowatt hour for electric energy, and the rates running down as quantity increased, to considerably less than one cent.

It said the government had found the usual rates over the nation to be from four to six cents, and that its action followed the government's belief that these rates, in very many instances, could be made cheaper to the consumer.

TRUST REGULATION AND NRA.

Two types of bills, sharply in contrast, have been offered in the legislature to adjust Texas anti-trust laws to conform in the national codes of fair competition during the two-year emergency period.

One, sent up by Gov. Ferguson, is closely patterned upon a model state bill sent out by the federal recovery administration. It would suspend altogether the anti-trust laws, and the penal provisions as to monopolies and combinations in restraint of trade.

Another bill, which seems in a practical way to be far more nearly adequate to Texas needs, if it fully satisfies the federal recovery administration, would preserve the anti-trust code entirely, for use against any practices not specially called for in the fair competition codes approved by the president, nor authorized in proclamations of the president.

It would not suspend the anti-trust laws as to combinations within approved codes, but would protect industry, business and business men under the code by giving them a complete defense to any court proceeding that might be brought, simply in showing their acts were in compliance with a code.

Protection from those complying with the codes is not needed, but should be retained against those trying to find the ways of sharp practices to evade the spirit of the agreements. The mere signing of a code does not guarantee full compliance with its spirit by every person in the state or nation.

Both bills retain the important feature that competitors will have the indirect power of enforcement of the code agreements, under them, through the right of securing injunctions against violators. The Bradley-Woodward bill, contrasted with the Sanderford-McCullough administration bill, leaves out all penal provision, but gives the state drastic damage recovery powers against violators, with the right of taking punitive damages even where actual damages are not proven.

The two bills, considered together, will chart a course for the legislature in which the traditional spirit of Texas law to protect citizens against monopolies and conspiracies in restraint of trade can be preserved.

Through the Editor's Spectacles
 By GEORGE

I had my first glimpse Friday of an "electric eye". R. L. Ponsler, who is fortunate enough to have a "hobby" in the shape of a workshop at his home, was the demonstrator. The "electric eye" is responsible for most of the electrical marvels at the World's fair at Chicago. Otherwise known as a photo-electric cell, it is so sensitive to emotional complexes that it will start or stop things for little more than a wish. All you have to do to start an electric fan that Ponsler has hooked up to his jinni is to stand off and make a face at the jinni.

Up until Friday afternoon my my ignorance of photo-electric cells was abysmal. It is still profound. I had thought they were some microscopic mystery that a scientist had discovered and was fortunately able to incorporate into a machine. That goes to show how persistent is the human fault of jumping at conclusions. The "cell" part of the name suggested the notion of a protoplasmic nimbus of some sort, gifted with miraculous reflexes in the presence of electrical influences. Imagine my astonishment to see what appeared a cross between the light bulb in your chandelier and the vacuum tube in your radio. The interior of the tube, except for a round "window" at one point in the bulb, was painted white with some chemical of a very important name. Through the aperture could be seen a small, platinum-looking hoop suspended central.

Nothing either microscopic or protoplasmic about that. "The cell" is an invention, a man-made product, and not even a back-door relative of the bug that sours your coffee cream when the ice box is left open. Explained by Ponsler, it is all simple enough. A beam of light entering at the "window" operates the "cell". Passing a hand or other body before the window shuts off the light. Removing the hand lets the beam enter the tube, the chemical in the interior coating of the tube reflects the light upon the suspended ring, setting up a faint electric current which passes out of the "cell" to a vacuum tube where it is amplified and thence to a "relay" which operates a switch shutting off or turning on the fan.

All very simple. Yes, quite simple. I saw yesterday morning a sight which, for all its commonplace, was new to me. It was a cream can on a wagonload of unguined cotton. I'll wager few of you, comparatively speaking, have ever seen that.

Texas Topics
 By RAYMOND BROOKS

AUSTIN, Sept. 16 — Texas, in all the furious effort to repeal the 18th amendment, has shown indifference to another amendment to the federal constitution, that to outlaw child labor, while 15 other states, or nearly half the required number to ratify it, have approved the emergency decree.

Humanitarianism and social justice aside, Texas and other states are beginning to find the child labor amendment would be useful, and would help ease the burden of carrying it.

Whenever this amendment to the federal constitution, that to outlaw child labor, while 15 other states, or nearly half the required number to ratify it, have approved the emergency decree.

ing for jobless adults crowded out by the low price of the labor of children.

It was Alexander Hamilton who announced the British factory system would permit employers in America to exploit the labor of "many thousands of females and children, many of the latter of tender years."

This nation, and Texas, for 150 years, has considered it all right to exploit the lives of children of tender years; but at last this present national administration has given the impetus to corrective measures that promise to forever abolish that exploitation.

Rep. Emory B. Camp and Rep. George Moffett were welcomed back as newlieved by their colleagues in the house.

If Speaker Coke Stevenson has made his choice between congress and the governor's office races for next year, he has kept it to himself. A district was carved out around him and Rep. Penrose Metcalf's districts promising an attractive vice for either and possibly a competition between the two.

Some of the administration friends in the capitol for the early days of the legislative session were: Maury Hughes, democratic state chairman; Pinckney Francis, B. Yancey Cummings, wet leader; John H. Bickett, Ferguson appointee on the board of legal examiners; C. C. McDonald of Wichita Falls.

Texas must have its poet laureate. Unlike England, it must award the title every two years, rather than for life. Texas will, under this plan, accumulate a long list of ex-laureates. If they all should turn from poetry and run for the legislature, they might in time create a majority in the house, and thus could dominate legislation, require the journal to be printed in blank verse, and all the speeches to be made in sonorous heroic couplets.

Freckles and His Friends.

For the LOVE of EVE by Lucy Walling

he to himself he would play on his violin.

"HE was a tailor and my mother made him teach his trade to my three brothers. They had her business head and they made good. Started a little shop in a rickety old building on a side street. Now they own Gordon's on the avenue—Gordon's tweeds, you know. They could outfit the Prince of Wales himself!"

"Gordon's?" But I thought—I've heard—"

"Eve began, then broke off in embarrassment.

"That Gordon's is owned by the Koveleski brothers?" Sadie finished the sentence for Eve matter-of-factly. "Wall, it is. Abe and Sol and Ben. My name is Koveleski too but my mother thought we should have an American name in business."

"It's funny about names," Miss Gordon went on. "Our old country name wasn't good enough for a first class clothing store or for Bixby's coat buyer but it was just right for Abe's Lina when she turned out to be a real violinist."

"Lina—Lina Koveleski?" Eve repeated in amazement. "Not—not THE Koveleski, the famous girl violinist?"

"Sure," returned Sadie Gordon calmly. "Why not? She could carry a tune before she could walk and she was playing in public at four. She can make a violin speak—our Lina can! And she's a good girl, always thinking up some little surprise for her mother and father. I used to think it was foolish—the money Abe paid out for lessons for that child. But he always said she would make good and she has. But here I go, bragging about Lina, and your husband waiting down at the side door to take you to dinner!"

At this mention of Dick doubt and loneliness again overwhelmed Eve. "He isn't waiting tonight," she sighed. "He left yesterday for the Adirondacks. He's on a new job there, she went on, encouraged by Sadie Gordon's unexpected friendliness. "He'll be gone for a year—longer, perhaps. He's super-intending a big construction job—some hospital buildings."

"You'll be leaving us before long then."

THE certainty in Miss Gordon's voice irritated Eve. "Oh, no! I'm not leaving," she returned spiritedly. "I'll go on with my work here. We're modern—my husband and I. We started our marriage on a 50-50 basis. It has always seemed to me that a woman's career is just as important as a man's."

"Sounds grand, dearie, but the arrangement doesn't always work out as you expected. If I were you I'd check this job and follow that handsome husband to the wilds before it's too late—even if I had to live in a tent and eat canned salmon and baked beans three times a day."

"Tell you what," the brisk, kindly woman went on, as they descended long flights of stairs to the street (the elevators having stopped for the day), "why not come home with me to dinner if you haven't any special plans for the evening? I'll get something at the delicatessen at the corner and make some of that potato soup I was telling you about. It would be a real kindness to me! It never seems worth while to cook a hot meal for myself and yet I do get tired of restaurant food.

Eve accepted the invitation gladly. They stopped at the delicatessen shop and while Miss Gordon bought half a roast chicken, greens for salad, a small cheese cake and rolls, Eve selected a box of candy as her contribution to the little feast.

Miss Gordon lived in a large apartment house just off the avenue. The building, convenient to her work, was in a neighborhood no longer considered fashionable. This factor, which seemed important to Eve, apparently gave Miss Gordon no concern.

EVE, setting the table and preparing the salad while her hostess peeled potatoes and put them on to boil, found herself telling Sadie Gordon about Mrs. Brooks' old house with its great trees and attractive garden and how Dick had turned its dinginess into beauty with hammer, nails and a paint brush.

"I'd hate dreadfully to leave now," she admitted, "though I thought the place was impossible at first."

"This potato soup is delicious," she assured her hostess when they were seated at the cheerful table.

Miss Gordon beamed at this praise and gave Eve detailed directions for making the soup. "You can surprise your husband with it some evening," she said.

"Oh, — don't have much time for cooking," Eve confessed. "Dick gets home first—or did when he was here. He usually had dinner nearly ready by the time I reached home. Now that he's gone I suppose I'll eat out most of the time."

"Listen, dearie! It looks to me as though you've picked the world's wonder for a husband. Not many men would go home at night and cook dinner! Don't be foolish and let some other girl vamp him away from you. Why don't you tell Earle Barnes you've got a new job as cook in an Adirondacks construction camp?"

Eve laughed uneasily and changed the subject but when she returned home that night the apartment seemed unutterably lonely in spite of its beauty and comfort. She remembered Miss Gordon's advice. Not that she intended to follow it—not in the least!

But what if this temporary separation should lead to a permanent parting from Dick? He had gone away so calmly—almost cheerfully. Had he really been glad to go?

Eve cried herself to sleep that night and on many other nights to come.

It is here.. Humming Bird HOSIERY in new Fall colors.

Don't these names suggest rich, full-toned shades? Don't they sound new, different? Yet, they aren't half as intriguing as the beautiful Humming Bird colors themselves. You have to see them to know how rich they are, how well they blend or contrast with clothing and accessory colors.

And when you see these colors and realize they are combined with traditional Humming Bird sheerness and wear, you'll decide on Humming Birds for Fall.

TRIPLE ALARM SYSTEM GUARDS GAS PRESSURE

Cisco gas consumers are triply protected against gas pressure fluctuations above or below efficient range by means of a new pressure alarm system which has been installed by H. L. Dyer, manager of the Community Natural Gas company.

Three alarms have been set up, one in the company office, one in the manager's home, and a third in the home of J. D. Franklin, outside foreman.

On guard day and night, the alarms signal the moment pressure goes to high or to low, notifying service men to rectify the difficulty without delay and making double certain an efficient, economical, and proper burning pressure 24 hours of the day. If the pressure should become deficient or excessive because of leaks, impaired regulations, or for any other reason, an electric contact is closed by the alarm mechanism and a bell rings until the pressure is returned to normal.

"It is just another precaution," explained Mr. Dyer, "to give gas consumers the best service humanly possible. If, for instance, zero weather should strike suddenly this winter and freeze up a regulator and reduce the flow of gas, we would be warned in plenty of time to remedy the trouble before it could inconvenience anyone."

FEDERAL GRAND JURY TO PROBE FINNEY BONDS

TOPEKA, Kan., Sept. 16. — The financial career of Ronald Finney and more than $1,000,000 in Kansas municipal bonds, which officials charge are forgeries, will be investigated by a special federal grand jury here Oct. 14.

Action of the grand jury will be the next step in a drama which has resulted in the arrest of Finney's father, W. W. Finney, his office manager, Leland Caldwell, and Tom Boyd, Kansas state treasurer.

Until two years ago the career of Finney was not remarkable. He had been graduated from Cornell university and had married. He worked for some time in one of his father's three banks at Eureka, Kan.

Became Bond Buyer. He dropped this, however, to start bond buying and speculation. He established an office at Emporia, his home town, a larger one at a big hotel here, and maintained a representative at Washington. Wires ran from his hotel here to Washington and the principal markets.

He purchased ranches in Colorado, Texas and Kansas. He bought the 101 Ranch show when it ran into difficulties. With his father, he purchased 30,000 head of Texas cattle in one deal.

For a time, Finney was remarkably successful. He made money in commodities during the bank holiday. His Washington representative delivered authentic "inside" market information. Finney rode the summer grain boom to a fabulous paper fortune.

Then came the crash. He did not repay a loan from a local bank for which he had pledged Kansas City, Kan., municipal bonds as security.

Charge Bonds Were Forgeries. The bank offered the bonds for sale to discover, it is charged, that they were forgeries and that more bonds with the same numbers were in the state treasury as security for state deposits in the Finney banks.

Young Finney, Caldwell and Boyd were arrested first on state and then on federal charges. The three Finney banks at Emporia, Eureka and Neosho Falls were ordered closed. Examination of the bank records at Emporia led to charges of embezzlement against the elder Finney. The federal charge against the other three is using the mails to defraud.

Money in Pockets Of Iowa Farmers

CLEAR LAKE, Ia., Sept. 16.—After three long years of hard times, vegetable prices this season have sought the high places, and money jingles again in the pockets of vegetable growers.

Cause of this year's higher prices has been a severe dry spell, which cut production in most parts of this vast truck growing area by half.

But instead of adding to hardships of hard-bitten farmers, it has proved an economic blessing.

"Give me a short crop and a demand and you can have the bumper crop every time," declared Sam Kennedy, Jr., operator of one of the largest farms in the area.

Reason for his declaration was explained by a little simple arithmetic. The crop from his 170 acres of potatoes this year will return four times its selling price last year. The dry spell has cut his production only by half.

"Last year I sold my first freight carload of cabbages at $5 a ton," Kennedy continued. "This year my first carload sold at $55 a ton. Is there any wonder we're feeling better here?"

Hundreds of lowland farmers in northern Iowa — growers of onions, cabbages and potatoes—share Kennedy's recovered spirits.

The vegetable-growing area is largely in Cerro Gordo, Hancock and Winnebago counties.

MOM'N POP.

SOUND YOU CAN SEE AND LIGHT YOU CAN HEAR IN FAIR'S HOUSE OF MAGIC

CHICAGO, Sept. —Did you ever hear of corn popped by radio? Have you ever seen a sound? Or heard a light? Sounds silly, doesn't it? Yet every day between four and five thousand visitors to the Chicago World's Fair see and hear these and many other unbelievable wonders in the General Electric "House of Magic".

Here in a cozy, comfortable little theater in the Electrical Building, a skilled lecturer, with a wealth of showmanship and good humor and a minimum of commercial propaganda, brings to the stage before you a half-hour's show of experimental "stunts" from the laboratory of a great electrical manufacturer. He shows you that science can be playful and entertaining to the layman, even if it is weird and baffling.

Display Fever Machine. First on the program is the fever machine, now being used in several important medical centers for experimental work in the treatment of certain types of disease. The machine gives off high-frequency electrical oscillations which ordinarily are used to produce fever that kills disease germs in the patient. In the House of Magic the "patient" treated by these radio waves is a handful of pop corn, and it doesn't take the corn long to pop. "A human patient might pop, too, were not an expert physician operating the machine," says the speaker.

The "world's simplest radio receiver" is next on the program. It looks like an empty glass tube, but it is really filled with rare gas—neon or helium. Held in the path of electrical waves, vibrating 8,000,000 times a second, it becomes a wand of brilliant colored light.

"Hearing" Light. A weird looking black and white disk, with peculiar figures on it, comes to view next. A red neon light, called a "stroboscope," flashes on and off in front of it, faster than the eye can record. When the disk is revolving at high speed, the figures appear to be standing Wonders never cease for children—or grown-ups either—in General Electric's House of Magic, one of the big free shows for visitors to the Chicago World's Fair. The wands in the hands of Donald Thomson, 11, South Orange, N. J., Helen Martens, 8, New York city, and the "magician" (Lecturer Gabriel E. Drollinger) are glass tubes filled with rare gas. Held in the path of rapidly vibrating radio waves, they glow with colored light.

Appeal Threatened to Legislature to Force Nebraska U. to Play Creighton

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 16 — As athletic officials of the University of Nebraska turned deaf ears to pleas of the Omaha Junior chamber of commerce that they schedule a football game this fall with Creighton university of Omaha, the threat was heard that the Omaha chamber may appeal to the state legislature to force the game.

The junior chamber is seeking to arrange the game for Thanksgiving day — an open date on the schedules of both teams. As an inducement to the Cornhuskers, the chamber held out a guarantee of $15,000.

But members of the athletic board of Nebraska university refused to sanction the game. "The university board has decided it will adhere to its traditional policy of not scheduling any games within the state," R. D. Scott, chairman of the board announced.

There is Precedent. In advancing the threat of an appeal to the state legislature to force the Cornhuskers to play the Creighton university team, Richard Koch president of the Omaha Junior chamber, pointed out that there was substantial precedent in such matters.

An appeal to the state legislature of the Bluegrass state resulted in the University of Kentucky including Centre college on its schedule he stated. A legislative appeal was threatened in Missouri before the Tigers consented to schedule games with Washington university of St. Louis and St. Louis university.

State-wide interest has been aroused by the proposal of the Creighton-Nebraska grid contest. Both institutions annually put powerful machines on the field, and both this year, have an unusually promising array of material.

SARAZEN RATES PADGHAM BEST BRITISH GOLFER

By HARRY L. PERCY
United Press Staff Correspondent
LONDON, Sept. 16 — Gene Sarazen's assertion that Alfred Padgham is the best British golfer at present is proven by statistics.

These show that he undoubtedly was the most consistent stroke player this year, even though he carried off no major prizes. With an average of 73.91 for 24 rounds of 18 holes each, he leads the field easily. There are six big tournaments during the season; in some, stroke play is the beginning and the end; in others, stroke play qualifying precedes the match play stages. The tournaments are: Roehampton (36 holes qualifying, followed by match play); Leeds, under the same conditions; Dunlop-Southport (36 holes qualifying followed by 72 holes tournament proper), and this is the only tournament in which the player has the chance to acustom himself to the conditions which govern the Open Championship. There follow 72 holes in the Penfold-Porchawl tournament and the Irish Open under similar conditions.

Only seven British stars entered for all six tournaments and successfully survived the various qualifying rounds. Padgham, besides leading the way, was a semifinalist at Roehampton, and was runner-up at Leeds in the match-play stages.

Behind him comes Syd Easterbrook, upon whose broad shoulders fell two of the most exciting finishes in the history of the game. It is ancient history now, Southport and the Ryder Cup thrill, when he beat Denmore Shute in the last green to turn the tide in Britain's favor, and how he just failed to beat this same opponent in the Open at St. Andrews.

Henry Cotton, who headed the list last year, missed Roehampton, Porthcawl and Ireland. He played 14 rounds, and with 73.28 just heads Padgham.

Only 5 Lettermen Back for Athens

KILGORE, Sept. 16 — The formidable Athens high school football machine which won the district 10 crown in somewhat of a walk last fall and lacked but one touchdown of capturing the Texas school-boy championship must be rebuilt for the 1933 campaign.

The team was virtually wrecked by graduation. Only five lettermen are eligible this year. Coaches Bobo Nelson and Charlie Hawn have a squad of 30 working out.

Two veterans of the versatile Hornet backfield are Bub Barnes and Bob Ard. Durward Newman, Junior Craig and Louis Owens are the remaining luminaries of the Hornets' '32 forward wall.

Athens coaches are basing their hopes on the last year's Class B squad which was developed by Coach Hawn. From this machine should come some working parts for the '33 Hornet eleven.

Other coaches in the district continued sending fair sized squads through early season practice paces. More than 60 candidates reported to Coach Rufus King at Tyler. More than 30 were in training under Coach Woodman at Longview, and 35 were taking instructions from Coach Johnnie Wight at Kilgore.

The Kilgore team is a newcomer in the Class A realm. Other members of the district are Lufkin, Nacogoches and Palestine.

Three Show Policy At Fair Is Popular

DALLAS, Sept. 16 — Popularity of the three show policy in the auditorium at the State Fair of Texas is shown in the early purchases of tickets at the Adolphus hotel box office, which is now open, it has been announced here by Otto Herold, president of the exposition. Most patrons of the auditorium are buying tickets to all three productions and taking advantage of the discount offered in such purchases.

"Bitter Sweet", will open the auditorium season and will run Oct. 7-12. This will be followed, Oct. 13-17, by "Nina Rosa." Sigmund Romberg's great musical production, "Florodora" will close the season—Oct. 18-22.

These three operettas will bring the largest casts to the state fair which have ever been presented in the auditorium. Many of the outstanding stars of the musical comedy and opera worlds will be included in these casts, which will be announced within a short time. Music for the three operettas will be provided by a twenty-six piece orchestra which is being brought here intact from Broadway. This will be the largest orchestra ever to play for a State Fair production in the auditorium. The same orchestra will provide music for all three productions.

Typhoid Death Rate In Texas Declines

AUSTIN, Sept. 16—Typhoid fever has caused Texans to lose more than a half million working days during the last five years, according to reports compiled by Dr. W. A. Davis, state register of vital statistics.

The typhoid death rate, however, dropped from 9.8 in 1929 to 7.9 in 1932 per 100,000 population. The 1932 rate compares with the rate of 5 in Alabama; 7.9 in Mississippi; 10.10 in Louisiana; and 12.4 in Arkansas.

32 Per Cent Increase In Enrollment

There was a 32 per cent increase in enrollment at Randolph college last week over the first week of last year, Dr. Lee Clark, acting president, said Saturday. The number of students already matriculated had reached 102, he said. Based on the experience of the school the last few years, this means an eventual enrollment of around 200, he said. The number matriculated during the first week usually is doubled before mid-term. The 102 does not take into account the students enrolled in the music department.

Numbers of students from Moran, Putnam and Albany are driving to Cisco daily. Several teachers from various points in the county are taking work to meet the new requirements of the state department of education, he said.
