DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

GOD'S THOUGHTS:—I know the thoughts that I think toward you, saith the Lord, thoughts of peace, and not of evil. . . . And ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me with all your heart.—Jeremiah 29: 11, 13.

THE COUNTRY PRESS.

The intimate influence of the small dailies and the country press is convincingly discussed by C. M. Hammond in an article in the Texas Weekly of Peter Molyneux recently. The part that the editors of these papers have played in the development of the sections apart from the large metropolitan areas has been the biggest factor in that development, the article points out, and advertisers cannot afford to overlook that influence when seeking a medium through which to carry their messages to the vast market that stretches between the large cities.

"Scores of country towns have become little metropolitan centers and the old trading stores now display the latest merchandise in plate-glass store windows. The farmer's daughter is as modishly dressed as her city sister and the farmer himself can discuss state, national and world-wide problems with as much knowledge and insight as can the average citizen of any of our metropolitan cities." Thus is described the change from an earlier era when the small town resident was looked upon as a "rube" and made the subject of innumerable jokes by his sophisticated city brethren.

What made that change? There are many factors, points out Mr. Hammond. Good roads, automobiles, radios, are some. But the factor that came first and paved the way for the introduction of these other influences, the educational power of the country press can claim the most and original credit.

"For," says Mr. Hammond, "the influence of the country editor has been the prime moving cause which has brought many of these other factors into being. There is no denying the fact that his unceasing preaching of the doctrine of good roads has made them possible in many countries or at least hastened their coming by several years. And his dogged persistence in selling the business men of his town on the value of advertising has had more to do with the well-filled stores with plate-glass fronts than any other thing. The country store-keeper, reluctantly perhaps at first, yielded to his insistent solicitations and began to advertise. After reading in his own advertisement what a nice store he had, the store-keeper naturally began to think more of himself and started in to straighten and clean it up. Business began to pick up and in the course of a few years, the country store-keeper had become a merchant with a store in keeping with his new status and a business increasing from year to year through consistent advertising in the home town daily or weekly."

"The small town daily newspapers and country weeklies of our country hold a strategic position in the battle for markets which confronts the American manufacturer today," continues Mr. Hammond, pointing out they control the greatest undeveloped or partially developed market in the world—a market made up of fifty million people with something like thirty-three billion dollars of spendable income. The statement, he says, is not to disparage the importance of the metropolitan papers but simply to show what is the importance of the smaller press.

Quoting some of Mr. Hammond's statistics:
"According to the 1930 census report, the population of Texas exclusive of the five counties of Dallas, Tarrant, Harris, Bexar, and El Paso, which are covered by the metropolitan dailies of the state, was 4,518,013. Of this number 1,030,483 lived in cities and towns covered by local daily papers and 3,487,530 lived on farms and in towns having no local dailies. According to the Sales Management survey, the spendable income of the population outside the five counties mentioned above for the year 1930 was $2,087,619,000 of which $477,535,000 represented income of population in cities and towns covered by local dailies, and $1,610,084,000 that of people living in towns without dailies and on farms. So it can be seen that the country weeklies cover a market made up of 3,487,530 people with a spendable income of $1,610,084,000 which income is six hundred million dollars more than that of the entire state of Iowa."

"Of course the metropolitan dailies do cover a portion of this market outside their counties and the smaller dailies circulate outside their own towns, but this is balanced in the above calculation by the fact that a large part of the population in the counties of the metropolitan dailies and of the smaller towns with local dailies is covered by country weeklies."

"The sixteen metropolitan dailies of the state have a total combined circulation of 799,864. The total circulation of the one hundred daily papers located in eighty-two of the smaller towns and in seventy-four counties is 527,993, an average of 5,279 subscribers per paper."

A CHAMPION OF THE FEDERAL FARM BOARD.

David Lawrence is the editor of the United States Daily. In an address he said: "The history of the first few years operation of the federal farm board is perhaps the most important document on government issued in a decade." Speaking of the policy of the federal government along cooperative lines for the relief of the farmer, he declared: "The policy in agriculture has been to protect the farmer against those who would exploit him, those who would seek to profit by his lack of marketing outlets, by his disorganization and inability to command capital and credit in the marketing of his crops." Then he reminded his audience that "we cannot forget that agriculture is a $58,000,000,000 factor in American national wealth. Hence the relative small expenditure made to defend agriculture from greater losses and the lessons that have been learned in this most trying period in a hundred years have either been in the public interest or else we must assume that the protection of a $58,000,000,000 investment and of an average annual output valued at $10,000,000,000 is not truly a government function or responsibility."

Bring on the Millennium

There is another side to it. All the farm leaders are not committed to the policy of the federal farm board. All the congressional leaders are not committed. There is going to be a merry row under the big dome at Washington this winter.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By EDSON R. WAITE
Shawnee, Oklahoma.

That in the minds of the public advertising has a decidedly distinctive place. It has been put there by the definite policy of persistent advertisers in advertising only the best in quality.

Well advertised products, on account of their high quality and the service they give, have proved themselves the best time and time again.

It is a well known fact that persistent advertisers never substitute for quality. Substitutes for quality never satisfy.

Discriminating buyers demand advertised products for their quality is guaranteed and they always give complete satisfaction.

Of the many methods of advertising created, none has met with such cordial appreciation as advertising through the printed page.

Advertising through the printed page meets every requirement of every line of business. It surpasses in economy and brings better results than any other known method of advertising.

Good advertising not only brings business but builds prestige. Wide awake business concerns profit by its service.

More and better advertising creates a desire on the part of its readers to possess. Persistent advertising means more sales and more sales mean more profits.

The world knows that persistent advertisers always keep step with progress.

Donald H. Wilson, editor and manager of the Post Hope (Ontario) Evening Guide, says:

"That if any part or parts of our modern industrial civilization broke down, we would be a helpless people."

If the ink or paper makers stopped, the printers would be unable to carry on because they do not know how to make their raw materials.

The present generation of farmers would be unable to raise their crops if the present supply of equipment failed because the younger men could neither sow nor reap by hand at it is a lost art in this country by reason of being long in the discard.

With all our learning we are a helpless lot of people since we became inter-dependent. There is only one in a thousand who can make for himself the means of a livelihood—raise his own food, light a fire without a match, cook without modern utensils, make clothing, or any of the other things which would keep body and soul together.

This being the case, it seems essential that we study to keep our civilization from falling and strive to see that those we are dependent upon are fairly recompensed for their share in our welfare.

We must see that there is a means to check some individuals from getting unlimited wealth and depriving others of a fair return for their contributions to the common good.

WORLD LABOR MEET TO PLAN INSURANCE

GENEVA, Jan. 5.—An international convention requiring every signatory state to institute an obligatory old age, widows and orphans insurance is to be launched by this year's International Labor Conference.

The International Labor Bureau has sent out a questionnaire asking for all laws and informations on the subject.

In addition the Labor Bureau has begun the drawing up of a draft project for such a convention to be submitted to the conference.

Over 50 existing compulsory insurance laws have been carefully examined as a basis of the draft.

One of the principals, which it has found in all these existing laws is that insurance should be compulsory for wage-earners and this will be incorporated into the draft.

In investigating the present status of compulsory old age, workmen's widows' and orphans' insurance, the Labor Bureau has found that the first steps in this direction were taken by Germany in 1889.

First Scheme
For a long time it remained the only scheme of the kind in existence, but in 1906 the former Austrian Empire also established a pension insurance scheme for non-manual workers.

France in 1910 instituted pensions for workers and peasants but this was never fully applied.

The same period saw sickness and invalidity insurance launched in England; old-age and invalidity insurance in Luxemburg, Rumania, and Sweden.

Following the war the Holland scheme, which had been adopted in 1913, was finally put into force while compulsory insurance was adopted in Italy and Spain.

The body of such laws as they now exist cover tens of millions of people, but the Labor Bureau hopes to make such compulsory insurance applicable to workers of all classes.

Presidents May Get Pensions

PARIS, Jan. 5.—The French Chamber of Deputies may solve the problem of what to do with our former presidents by giving them an annual pension of $8,000 and urge them to take life easy.

A project to grant the $8,000 pensions, and to allow an annual pension of $4,000 to the widows of presidents is now before the Chamber, fathered by a group of centrist deputies.

The pension would be made available to M. Alexandre Millerand, who was turned out of executive office by the adverse elections of 1924; M. Raymond Poincare, who gave 40 years of his life to the public service and France and spent the war as President of the nation, and M. Gaston Doumergue, who has been taking one long rest since he left office last June.

Madame Paul Deschanel is also eligible for a half-pension, her husband having died soon after his historic fall in pajamas, at night, from the presidential train as it speeded through Normandy.

Its supporters pointed out that two former presidents, Poincare and Millerand, stood for election to the houses of legislature after spending their terms in the Elysee. One other ex-President, although past 80, was obliged to resume his practice of law in order to live.

Bell Ringers Go in Training

LONDON, Jan. 5.—The bell ringers of London, who represent one of the city's most ancient and honorable professions, trained hard for their work during the holiday season.

No men are more serious. Upon their shoulders rested the reputation and traditions of bell ringing guilds that are centuries old. As a district craft, bell ringing dates back to the time of Edward the Confessor.

Each Yuletide the two oldest guilds go determinedly after the bell ringing endurance record.

The record is now held by the Society of College Youths (founded, 1637), which in 1922 struck 21,363 blows on the church bells of Appleton, Berkshire. The Scholars of Chesapeake Society (founded, 1602) are confident, however, of regaining the honor within the next few years.

The last time the record was in danger was in 1928. For about ten hours the bell ringers had held grimly to their task and the record was almost in sight. Then the voice of the big tenor bell gave way. Its bearings had burned out.

TRUCK KILLS DEER.
KEMPSTER, Wis., Jan. 5.—A truck driven by Julian Blonied, Antigo, ran into, and killed, an eight-point deer, the largest seen in this locality in several years. The carcass, which weighed 184 pounds dressed, was confiscated by conservation wardens.

WATER CURTAINS.
STOCKHOLM, Jan. 4.—"Water curtains" are an innovation installed in the Royal Opera and the Royal Dramatic Theater here. They consist of water pipes running along the top of the proscenium and in case of fire they open a cascade of water over the footlights.

THREE KINDS OF LOVE

by KAY CLEAVER STRAHAN

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Ann, Cecily and Mary-Frances Fenwick live with their grandparents. The sisters have been orphaned since childhood. The grandparents—known as "Rosalie" and "Grand"—have long since lost their wealth and the household is supported by Ann and Cecily's earnings. For this reason, Ann, 28, and Philip Erczoy, young lawyer, are still postponing their marriage though they have been engaged for eight years.

Cecily, 22, is in love with Barry McKee, an engineer, but when he proposes she refuses to name the wedding date because she cannot leave Ann with the financial responsibility of the home.

Mary-Frances, 15, and still in school, strikes up an acquaintance with Earl De Armount, stock company actor. She meets him secretly on several occasions.

Cecily tells Ann that Barry has proposed. Next morning he comes early to drive Cecily to her office.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

The sun was shining, and the air was sweet, and as she ran down the front steps from the porch, Barry got out of the car and came to meet her. She thought, "I've never been so happy. This feeling is what people mean when they remember the happiest minute of their lives."

"Barry!" she said. "Barry!" and gave him both her hands, and he took them and held them.

"Do I look pretty?" he asked anxiously.

She stood back and surveyed him. He was wearing a dark suit that she had not seen him wear before; his necktie was just this side of gaudiness; his hair was slicked too much—she loved its frowns—his face, especially the short, blunt nose, looked scoured like a little boy's face and that has been washed and polished too vigorously. The darling! He might make a joke of it, but he had, the actually had "dressed up."

"You look grand!" she said.

"I tried so hard," he explained. "But I had to hurry. I thought you might look out of the window any time after six—I've been here since then."

"Dear—dearest! My silly little sister saw you, but she told me just this minute. Why didn't you come to the door?"

"Afraid. Bashful. It was too early to call."

"Why didn't you honk your horn?"

"Any guy that sits in his car and honks his horn at my girl gets a punch in the nose. May I take you to your office? Won't there be time for a little ride first?"

In her room, as she pulled on her hat and searched for her best gloves, she found herself humming that foolish song of Mary-Frances'.

"This love that makes us happy..."

No other girl has ever loved me like Cecily—very much."

Liked them, could take her choice of hypocritical humility, base perfidy, or just plain dumbness. She found none of them to her pleasure, so she gasped, "Why—Barry!" miserably, and let it go at that.

"Did you want me to be a much loved man?" he teased. "Sorry, but most women shudder away from me on sight. What's the matter, darling? Something? Anything?"

"Barry, I shan't mind, that is too much about you other love affairs. But I'm going to mind like everything when you don't tell me the truth."

"As you should," he agreed. "But I haven't told you anything that isn't true, sweet, and I won't if I can help it. You must have known I was trying to be funny, if feebly, about the shuddering ladies. Though most of them are unflinchingly indifferent to me and my charms."

"It wasn't that," she said.

"Was?" he prompted.

"Your saying that no girls had ever loved you or even liked you."

He glanced at her. "I see," he said. "Via Lutie, via Marta? I might have known—they're both lippy. I can't see that it matters a hoot in hades whether girls have loved me or not—the repeating of it sounds simply and sickeningly, anyhow. But you'll have to take my word for it. I should know, shouldn't I? Those girls loved themselves a lot; they loved their vanity; they may, perhaps, have loved charity and spasmodically—when they didn't love me in the least. As I've told you, they didn't even like me."

Cecily said, "Oh, but you could not know that, positively," and quailed at his frown and added hastily, "could you?"

"I read the other day," he answered, "about a man who, when he came home and found his dinner was not ready, held his wife's hands down on the hot cook-stove until she fainted. She'd have a reasonable right to decide, don't you think so, when she gets out of the hospital that the man didn't love her and had never loved her and had never loved her nor liked her as a real friend?"

"Barry!"

"I'll tell you," he said. "I'd thought that I wouldn't. It is unnecessary, in a way, but you'll regard it as a confession, won't you, Cecily, and not as a warning? Quarrels—do something to me that I can't endure. I can't explain the sensation better than by saying they extinguish me, suffocate me, though that isn't accurate, because I suffer all the time. Fact dear, a quarrel touches my mentality dangerously."

"I'm sure that I know how it came about. Mother and dad quarreled incessantly, frightfully during my childhood, and all the unpleasant things that happened with these quarrels. I grew to hate them; to be afraid of the loud voices and the ugly words. Physically afraid. They made me ashamed, too. I knew that it was disgraceful, and I'd slip off into a closet and hide and cry."

"One day, during a particularly violent quarrel, I ran away and hid as usual in my closet—a small one in the upper hall where dad kept his fishing and hunting traps. I went to sleep in there. When I woke and pushed open the door—well, never mind, I won't dramatize it. The house was on fire. The upper hall was thick with smoke. I was five years old. I ran to the front stairs, and flames were leaping up them. I couldn't get through the hall to the back stairway because the smoke was too thick. My picture of it now is exaggerated, of course. But I think of flames shooting out at me every where—at my head and eyes and feet—leaping and licking and trying to catch me. Through it all I heard clanging and screams and shouts, as if the world were taking part in a final monstrous quarrel. Five years old is too young to be as frightened as I was in that hall, choking with smoke that day.

"I ran into the bathroom—some idea of water, I imagine. At any rate, it was at the side of the house where the fire had gained the least headway. Just as I got there a fireman, with his face blackened from smoke, came through the window. He let out a round oath and reached for me. That was the end of it—so far as I was concerned. He frightened me much more than the flames and the smoke. Like a good child, I had gone regularly to Sunday school. I thought the fireman was the devil, and that he'd come to catch me. I gave up the ghost right then and there. Fainted, you know."

"Strange but fires don't bother me in the least, and never have since then. I'll run as fast as the rest of them after the fire engine. But to this day I have to stop deliberately and rationally the whole works before I can know that it was not the quarrel before the fire that day that caused the flames to lick at me and the smoke to choke me and the devil himself to come and get me."

"They brought me out of it all right that time. The next time the folks started a quarrel I ruined it by throwing something or other not unlike an epileptic fit. Scared the lives out of them. A couple of repetitions, and they sent me to grandma's to live for the winter. I recovered beautifully from the fits. But still I run for my closet and hide when I hear a quarrel. I don't cuddle myself and think it is cute and original to be like that. I'm ashamed of it to the bone. But it's true. A quarrel takes something out of me that I don't ever get back. Now, do you think that a person who liked me, and to whom I'd explained all this—much more in detail that I've explained it to you—would drag me through the smoke and flames again, and give me over to the devil?"

"But—but Barry," Cecily quavered, "it is so terrible. It makes me afraid. Suppose. I'm scared to death. I'll never dare—" not have been—like that? They were both university people, and your father was a member of congress."

"He may have developed his voice there. It was suitable for nothing on earth but a shipwrecked sailor—that voice of dad's. But they were good, worthy people—both of them. Overeducated a bit and—well, underbred, or they couldn't have quarreled as they did. You see, they never liked each other at all, though for years were violently and vulgarly in love. Shall we talk about something else?"

"In just a minute," she said. "Barry—I'm still frightened. I'm afraid you have made a mistake. I'm afraid that I'm a quarrelsome person. Only this morning I was quarreling with my little sister."

He laughed. "I can hear you—chattering like a squirrel. Did you scream at her? Did you say one cruel, scorching thing to her. You did not. You couldn't. I'm sorry I told you. Please forget it, darling. And if, sometimes, I get unendurable, don't say a word. Just smack me down. I don't mind being smacked. It is only words that burn me up. You are always cool, Cecily. That is one of the things I love most about you. Your hands are cool to touch, and your voice is soft and cool, and your eyes are the color of cool rain clouds, and your cheeks are pinky like sea shells, and your lips—even when you go and paint them up—are cool coral, and kiss-shaped."

Cecily shivered. "Boo! and my flesh is gooseflesh, and my teeth chatter, and my heart's in an ice chest, and I'll die unwarmed, unheated, and unthawed."

"That's a swell way to receive my fairest flights of fancy, isn't it? All right for you. I'll think 'em up ahead of time, after this, and revise them, and then if you still go rhybal, I'll—" He paused to search through his threats.

(To Be Continued)

"No, no, darling. Nothing like that. I'm not a freak—and the fits were purely hysterical. I haven't had one for 16 years. I'm not a freak. I don't mean that I can't stand an argument nor a discussion nor that I have to have my own way about everything. You could tell me to go jump in the lake, if you felt like it, and didn't scream it. Don't ever scream at me, or call me names in a loud voice—will you?"

"Barry! But—but exactly how do you define a quarrel, dear?"

"Noise. Recriminations. Hot, ugly words. Loud voices. Squawking sarcasms—"

"But, Barry, your people could work on the personnel of Parliament be undertaken, but because of financial stringency, it is doubtful if the task will be started for years to come.

Meanwhile, records compiled by the present committee have been card indexed.

Paris Takes Tip From New York

PARIS, Jan. 5.—Paris has taken a tip from New York and brought back the "table d'hôte" dinner at a fixed price as a measure to meet hard times.

But while American restaurants are offering their patrons all the coffee they can drink, Paris caterers are providing unlimited quantities of wine.

Diners may have a carafe of white wine with their hors d'oeuvres, rose-colored wine with their fish and red wine with their meat. Then, if their consciences do not trouble them, they may start all over again.

Meals consist of hors d'oeuvres or soup, fish, meat and vegetables, and dessert. In some cases coffee is included.

Well-known restaurants in all parts of Paris are displaying signs advertising these fixed-price meals. Prices range from 60 cents to $1.20. Some restaurants have followed the plan of chain restaurants in the United States, banding together to enable them to purchase large quantities of food and wine at advantageous rates.

Common's List Is Incomplete

LONDON, Jan. 5. — A House of Commons committee, which has been working for three years on the personnel and politics of Parliament from the year 1258 to 1832, estimates that 35,000 men sat in Parliament prior to 1832. Names of thousands of them have been lost, probably forever.

From municipal records, rolls of Parliament and journals of the House, the committee managed to collect 7,000 names, which had not been listed previously.

The committee concluded that the names of many members prior to 1400 never will be found. They have recommended that a thorough

Fewer, Less Severe Colds With "Colds-Control" Plan

Discovery By Makers of Vicks VapoRub Makes Possible Better "Control-of-Colds" In The Home.

HIGH COSTS REDUCED

Relief from much of the burden imposed by colds is now available in every home. The Vicks Plan for better "Control-of-Colds" lessens the number, the severity and the duration of colds. It reduces the family's "Cold-Tax" in money, loss of time and health.

A New Vicks Discovery.

This Plan has been perfected by the makers of Vicks VapoRub—made possible by Vicks Nose & Throat Drops, based on a new idea for "preventing" colds, this new Vicks formula is an ideal companion to VapoRub, the modern way of "treating" colds. Used together, they aid and supplement each other in the Vicks Plan for better "Control-of-Colds," which follows:

1.—Before a Cold Starts.

Watch yourself whenever you have been exposed to anything that you know is apt to give you a cold, such as—

Contact with others having fresh colds—crowds, stuffy ill-ventilated rooms, public places—a night on a Pullman or a dusty automobile ride—sudden changes in temperature—inhalating smoke, dust, gasses—excesses in living, such as over-eating, smoking or drinking, which reduce body resistance—after a hard day when you are over-tired.

2.—After a Cold Starts.

At night, massage the throat and chest well with Vicks VapoRub (now available in white "stainless" form, if you prefer). Spread on thick and cover with warm flannel. Leave the bed-clothing loose around the neck so that the medicated vapors arising can be inhaled all night long.

If the air-passages are badly clogged with mucus, melt some VapoRub in a bowl of hot water and inhale the steaming vapors for several minutes. (If there is a cough, you will like the new Vicks Cough Drops—actually medicated with ingredients of Vicks VapoRub.)

During the day—any time, any place—use Vicks Nose Drops every few hours as needed. This gives you full 24-hour treatment and without the risk of too much internal "dosing" which so often upsets digestion—especially of children.

Trial Offer Guarantee.

Every drugstore in the United States is offering Vicks Nose & Throat Drops and Vicks VapoRub on the following trial guarantee: Use together as directed in the Vicks Plan for better "Control-of-Colds." Unless you are delighted with results, your drugstore is authorized to refund your money.

DESIGNERS VIE IN PLANS FOR SOVIET TEMPLE

By EUGENE LYONS
United Press Staff Correspondent
MOSCOW, Jan. 5.—The whole country, but Moscow residents in particular, await eagerly the results of a world-wide contest among architects for a design of a Temple of Labor on the site of the former Cathedral of the Redeemer.

The announcement of the winning design is expected in February. It will determine an aspect of the Moscow landscape for generations and perhaps centuries. The location is such that it made the gold dome of the annihilated cathedral visible from every part of the city. The same prominence awaits the Temple of Labor.

The cash reward, although it will be large, is the least of the attractions which has led 140 Soviet architects to contribute elaborate plans. The winner will become instantly famous in the Soviet Union and the temple will immortalize his name.

All Architects Invited
It is not beyond possibility however, that the architectural hero may turn out to be a foreigner. Anxious to obtain the best that modern architectural skill can offer, the commission in charge of the projected temple invited leading architects all over the world to contribute designs.

The largest foreign representation is that of the United States. Many eminent American architects, according to officials here, are expected to have their designs in Moscow soon. They include Joseph Urban, T. H. Lamme, Weddes and Wright. Germany will be represented by Helzig Mendelssohn and Gropius; France by Le Corbusier.

The first crop of plans submitted indicated that the contest has touched architectural imaginations here strongly, perhaps too strongly. Some of the ideas range from the fantastic to the insane. One proposes a structure more or less in the shape of a dirigible. Another inconspicuously places the auditorium, seating 15,000 on the ninth floor.

Britishers Poke Fun at George Bernard Shaw in Contest Through Newspaper

MANCHESTER, England, Jan. 5.—If the United States decided to go royal, and asked George Bernard Shaw to accept the throne, what do you think Shaw's answer would be? This was the question the Manchester Guardian asked its readers recently. It brought humorous replies. Not one suggested that he might refuse, because of any sense of unfitness in himself.

In fact the answers showed a very clear idea of the reputation that he has achieved. When they made him refuse he did so on the ground that the post was to mean a cut for a man of his abilities, or that the pay was not large enough for a man with his salary, or that he just couldn't be bothered.

First prize, $10, was won by George T. Hay, of Low Fell, Durham by the following:

Phone message regarding decision to establish monarchy in America received on emerging from mid-day bath. Quite understand your desire, seeing Stalin not available to have only other infallible human being as your first king, but offer totally inadequate notwithstanding undebated improved social status of modern kings. Do you really consider attractive offer of limited monarchy to absolute monarch world intelligent and film clown's salary to dramatist surpassing Shakespeare. Besides have no desire to captain compassless ship. When your vessel steering definitely by common-sense like friend Stalin's offer me post again. Minor points. Day is past when immaterial whether king speaks his people's language. Could not reign happily in undemocratic country where minority dealing in stimulating alcohol are prosecuted by majority dulled and brutalized by cannibal practice of meat eating. Have hunch phone message fake to obtain 150 words incomparable. Shaw copy. G. E. S.

Two other answers which were favorably mentioned, principally because of their brevity, were:

Elected myself king of the United States in 1890 and have been ruling successfully ever since.

Delighted to honor you, but where are the United States?

All Russians Hunt Minerals

MOSCOW, Jan. 5.—The increasing curiosity about their own country, which is stimulating hundreds of thousands of Russians to tour out-of-the-way regions, will be capitalized by the government to aid the nation.

Instead of merely enjoying the scenery and the exercise, these tourists, chiefly young people, will be mobilized to search for untapped natural resources as they go along. Courses in geology, mineralogy and other sciences are being opened by the Proletarian Society of Tourism for this purpose.

The president of the society is a man known throughout the world as a relentless prospector in melodramatic counter-revolutionary trial, Nicholas Krilenko. He is a passionate explorer and mountain climber and now has set his society to the task of helping find precious metals, chemicals and other natural resources.

Pleasure will thus be combined with business. A pamphlet issued by the tourist society urges the members to look downward for rare metals instead of upward for pleasant scenery. It argues that with a minimum knowledge of sciences the study of the ground they walk on can become even more exciting than observation of the landscape.

Soviet tourists, whose number is growing every year, will be trained to collect likely samples of minerals, chemicals and fossils and transmit them to the proper scientific institutes, with indications of the localities where they were found.

Stalin to Rule Soviet Theater

MOSCOW, Jan. 5.—The world-famous Moscow Art Theater, still under the direction of its principal founder, Constantine Stanislavsky, soon will be transferred from the Art Department of the Commissariat of Education, which normally supervises all theaters, to the direct patronage of the Central Executive Committee (Tsik) of the Soviet Union.

The transfer, a report in theatrical circles has it, was made upon the direct recommendation of Joseph Stalin, after Stanislavsky had complained about interference.

In effect, it more or less removes the Art Theater from the ordinary official censorship and makes it directly responsible to the highest governmental authority. Only one other theater—the Bolshoi, home of opera and ballet performances — is under the wing of Tsik.

Stanislavsky for a number of years took no direct part in the work of the Moscow Art, owing to serious illness. Recently, it is reported, he returned to more active control, but found himself blocked by the so-called "Red director." Exasperated by the challenge to his artistic authority and the type of plays being put on, the report continues, Stanislavsky appealed to Stalin himself for assistance.

Pauline Frederick Raising Prize Hens

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 5.—Pauline Frederick had gone her neighbors one better in selecting a hobby that is unique and at the same time profitable. Chicken raising!

Just before her recent departure for New York, the actress counted her flock and found that it numbered more than a thousand.

A year ago Miss Frederick was interested only in keeping her home supplied with fresh eggs, but as time went by, she developed a fancy for the fowls. A small number of blue ribbon Plymouth Rocks were purchased. They multiplied so fast that Miss Frederick had to take over a small ranch. Not only do the chickens pay for their own upkeep, but also that of the ranch.

While in New York Miss Frederick is making arrangements to exhibit her chickens at the large Eastern shows.

T. C. U. CAGERS GET READY TO BEGIN SEASON

By STANDARD LAMBERT
 FORT WORTH, Jan. 5. — Following their barnstorming tour of the middle west during the Christmas holidays in which they lost but one game, the champion Texas-Christian Horned Frog basketball team have returned to Fort Worth to make preparations for the initiation of the 1932 basketball season. They go to Waco Saturday night to meet the strong Baylor Bears. In spite of the fact that the champions have practically the same team back from 1931, Coach Schmidt is of the opinion that the opening tilt will be one of the hardest of the year.

Although the Schmidtsmen dropped a 31-10-27 decision to the Wichita (Kan.) Henries, national A. A. U. champions of 1931, the Horned Frog mentor was well pleased with the result of the trip. The defensive department, especially that of the forwards, was materially improved, the offensive clicked better than previously, and the experience in self competition in this early part of the season was invaluable. The Frog administrator, the Southwest Teachers of Ada, Okla., the first defeat they had suffered on their home court since 1927.

Unless injuries are inflicted during this week of practice, the entire squad of an even dozen players will be intact for the opening game. Capt. Doc Sumner's hand injury received in the Baylor football game Nov. 21, is practically healed.

Elbert "Flash" Walker, sophomore forward from Falls, is developing rapidly, and has proved a serious contender to Dietzel's and Sumner's scoring crown. Dietzel has improved remarkably defensively since last year, and will be of double value to the team with this added asset.

If the starting lineups in the pre-conference games mean anything, Capt. Sumner and Walker will be at forwards, Dietzel at the tip-off position, and Green and Brannon at guards. The forward positions are secure and probably won't be questioned for the next two years, but with Vaught, Myers and Kinzy for guard competition, Green and Brannon don't feel quite so confident. Kinzy can also be used as relief man at center.

Although the squad is small, Coach Schmidt is not worried. There is not a man out who does not have a chance to letter, and this gives Schmidt time to spend practically all of his time with the men who will be used in competition.

France Ends Its Count of Noses

PARIS, Jan. 5. — The complete census returns made public by the government show that the author of the lyric which had its run on Broadway several years ago, "Fifty Million Frenchmen Can't Be Wrong," was guilty of exaggeration. By actual count there are but 38,248,255 Frenchmen and 2,495,642 foreigners in France, a total population of 41,344,933.

This census was very satisfactory, for it showed a revitalized race, and for the first time in a quarter of a century, France showed a population gain through births rather than through increased influx of foreigners. The previous census, in 1926, showed but 39,242,253 Frenchmen, and a total population of 40,743,897.

The foreign penetration is so great that in the Alpes-Maritimes department, which comprises the French Riviera and the Franco-Italian frontier, two out of every five persons are foreigners. Italians predominate with English in second place.

In Paris and the Seine department one resident in ten is a foreigner and here again the Italians lead all races, with British second and Americans third. Germans, followed by Spanish, Belgians, Poles and varied Africans.

High Heels Are Defended by Expert

LONDON, Jan. 5. — High-heeled shoes are harmless, according to P. B. Roth, orthopaedic surgeon of the Miller General Hospital, Greenwich.

Reading a paper to a section of the Royal Society of Medicine, Roth stated that more than two-thirds of the civilized women of the world wear high-heeled shoes, and when asked why they wore them, most women replied that high heels look smart, are fashionable, make the feet look smaller, and are much more comfortable than flat heels, especially when standing.

He stated he could give no credence to the suggestion of objectors that a high heel causes alterations in the spine and abdominal viscera. For walking, a heel of about two inches is more comfortable than a flatter heel, provided the ground is fairly smooth.

Not the slightest evidence of harm resulting from high-heeled shoes was forthcoming from Roth, but he said that a more likely cause was badly fitted footwear.

HITS BINOCULARS.
 WASHINGTON, Jan. 5. — Even naval binoculars have felt the pinch of government economy.

Thirty-eight dollar binoculars are almost gone. Some have been reconditioned here. New binoculars cost only $17.38 apiece, a saving of $20.62 on each binocular.

Indian Danger Wins Law Fight

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., Jan. 5. — Pedro Cajeta, the "dancing Indian," of Manitou, danced through the summer months for years and thousands of American tourists in the Garden of the Gods paid him small coins.

Pedro used the money to live and to fight for a settlement of $1,000,000 from the United States government for land taken from the Indians and whites of Northern New Mexico.

He made two trips to Washington in the fight, which lasted over 20 years. He had friends write innumerable letters to the Indian department.

Pedro is a Santa Clara Indian. Seven times he was made chief of his tribe. The Santa Clara lost the largest share of the land.

Pedro's long fight has ended. The Indians affairs subcommittee of the United States Senate has voted to pay the Indians and whites the $1,000,000 for their land.

In fighting, Pedro has become one of the wealthiest Indians in the Southwest. The trickle of dimes, nickels, quarters and half dollars that have been directed his way by the tourists have reached a remarkable sum. He owns large herds of cattle, has bonds, stocks, and bank accounts.

MECHANICAL HEART KEEPS ANIMAL ALIVE

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 5. — Machine age efficiency has scored another triumph.

A man-made mechanical heart has been successfully substituted for a living animal's own heart.

The revelation was made during a demonstration directed by Dr. Maurice L. Tainter, of the Department of Pharmacology of the Stanford University medical school here.

Dr. Tainter substituted a mechanical heart of his own construction in a living animal before the Society for Experimental Biology, keeping the animal used in the experiment alive "for hours."

In describing the use of the mechanical heart, Dr. P. J. Hanzlik, head of the pharmacology department, said:

"After the substitution of the mechanical heart for the animal's heart, the blood continued to pulse through the body.

"The blood pressure remained normal. By showing responses to narcotics, it enabled us to study their effects. The animal lived for hours."

The device has been used in studying the reaction of blood in living animals by Dr. Floyd De Eads, of the United States Department of Agriculture, who has been experimenting at the Stanford pharmacology department.

Women Face Danger Of Baldheadedness

LONDON, Jan. 5. — When your sweetheart, or wife, bends over, do not be surprised if you notice that she is becoming bald-headed!

The hour of bald-headedness' victim of two defiant young Purples London hairdressers. Many women are beginning to lose their hair very rapidly due to the alleged, to the damage of continual bobbing, shingling and waving.

Titled women and aristocrats of the "weaker sex" are among those who now sense the reported danger and are beseeching their hairdressers for treatment. Young women, some not past their thirties, have been forced to resume the long-hair style to grow enough hair to cover their bald crowns.

Hidden Mesa To Be Searched

SCOTT'S BLUFF, Neb., Jan. 5. — A hidden mesa, once the meeting place of prehistoric Indians, will be excavated by a party of archeologists in Northwestern Nebraska this summer.

Location of the mesa, said to contain the evidences of three distinct periods of Indian life, is being kept secret for fear of vandalism. Thomas L. Green, of Scottsbluff, discovered it.

The remains found on the site are believed to be those of the old Cadzho tribes, dating back over 300 years. The mesa lies between the districts inhabited by the Pawnees, and the Arikara Indians.

Indian implements, pottery, bones of prehistoric animals, flints and other specimens of Indian life are to be found, the preliminary investigation revealed.

Three layers of remains can be found on the top of the mesa, investigators say. Many of the bones found in one layer are cracked and broken, indicating, scientists say, that the Indians were a primitive race, which cracked open bones for marrow.

EXHIBIT OPENED.
 BERLIN, Jan. 5. — An exhibition of tapestry, mosaics, sculptures, gold and jade, showing Maya, Inca, and Aztec art, is now on display by the Prussian Academy of Arts here. The exhibition was assembled from German private collections and museums.

BRITISH ROYAL FAMILY AMONG MOST HEALTHY

LONDON, Jan. 5.—The British royal family is one of the healthiest in the whole country. Its constitution borders on the remarkable.

For instance: It was his constitution that saved King George when he was near death as the result of bronchial pneumonia in 1928. It has been said that the doctors attending him were amazed at his resistance.

Queen Mary probably has had less fitness than any other member of the royal family. Recently she had a cold, and within a few days she was out-of-doors. Since she became Princess of Wales, the Queen has had to cancel an engagement only once, and that was when she was unable to accompany the King to the opening of parliament three years ago. At that time also she was suffering from a cold.

Keep Up Tradition
In this respect Queen Mary is keeping up a tradition. It is said that from the time of the coronation of Queen Alexandra to the present day, the occasions on which the Queens of England have been unable to fulfill their public engagements could be counted on one hand.

Another hardy member of the royal family is the Prince of Wales. His health and his physical fitness is one of the Prince's idiosyncrasies. It is said that he has a dread of fatness, and used to stand in front of a mirror, to see, as he himself said, "whether he was getting fat like grandfather (King Edward)."
Prince Had Cold
The Prince also had a cold recently, which caused him to cancel an official visit to Portsmouth to review part of the Atlantic Fleet. The chill, which was malarial, confined him to his room for a couple of days only.

Taking their cue from King George, the royal family are very scrupulous about their official engagements. Since Queen Victoria's funeral, when he had a chill which prevented his attendance, until his serious illness in 1928, King George has never cancelled a single engagement.

"VAPOR LOCK" POPULAR

DETROIT, Jan. 5.—There will be much talk of "vapor lock" prevention at the auto shows in January. This relatively new word in automobile parlance simply means that the highly volatile feds used for easy winter starting develop a pocket of vapor in the gas line during the warm weather, preventing a flow of fuel. Nearly all the new cars have devices to prevent this.

Crops Slump In Nebraska

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 5.—Income from Nebraska's leading crops fell off 42.3 per cent during 1931 as compared to 1930.

Estimates of the state and federal division of agricultural statistics show the value of the leading crops to be $140,706,000 for 1931, or 57.7 per cent of the 1930 valuation.

As compared to the 1929 income from leading crops, the 1931 income showed a slump of 57 per cent.

Low prices and low production combined to bring about the marked slump in values.

Despite marked increases in acreage during the past two decades, Nebraska's 1931 crops reached the lowest value in that length of time. Farm prices this year were approximately 30 per cent below the pre-war level.

On the other hand, farmers are required to pay 23 per cent more than in pre-war times for commodities purchased. Taxes are more than two and one-half times higher.

City's Politics Seemed Fishy

GRAND HAVEN, Mich., Jan. 5.—Politics and fish are all jumbled together here in a battle for control of the city government.

Mayor William Ver Duin, recently elected on a progressive ticket, is also commercial fisherman. He mixed the fish and politics last July, when he allegedly landed a boat of undersized whitefish.

Arrested by conservation officials, the mayor was brought to trial in Justice Court. A hung jury prevented his political enemies from starting oyster proceedings.

The case was dropped for several months. Recently, when the mayor was successful in his fight for a better water supply, his enemies revived the old charge. They called the attention of the attorney-general to the case. The attorney-general has ordered a retrial.

And, now, Ver Duin's followers are lined up to fight, first, the mayor's conviction for a misdemeanor, and second, any oyster proceedings which may be started. They contend catching undersized whitefish is not a crime.

Edgar Muller is transacting business in Ranger today.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl McKibben of Ranger spent the weekend with relatives in the city.
