AGRICULTURAL DEVELOPMENT IN COUNTY GAINS IMPETUS

Eastland county farmers are taking more interest in farming this year than for many years. Also there is more farming being done, a greater variety of crops are being planted, and cultivation is more intensive than ever before.

The recent freeze did but little damage. The small grain sown for winter pasture is now being turned under and will act as fertilizer.

The orchards of the county, many of which have been greatly neglected, are being given special attention this year and owners are spraying and otherwise taking care of the trees in order to get as large a yield from them as possible.

Farms that have not been cultivated in many years are being cultivated again. Farm homes are being repaired, out-houses are being rebuilt, and other improvements that added to the convenience and profits of the farm are being made.

Another notable fact is that virtually every family living in the county has planted or is planting a garden, have a few chickens, one or more milk cows, some hogs and are making arrangements to live at home.

The added interest in deep plowing and subsoiling and the use of pure seed, which is being taken by the farmers of this section, is pointed to by agricultural experts as a very promising sign that agriculture in this part of the county is coming into its own.

Every indication points to a shortage of poultry and eggs in this section next year those close in touch with this industry say. The fact that both eggs and chickens have been cheap during the past several months has caused the farmers and poultrymen to kill off their flocks for food, which naturally reduces egg production. Also the cheap prices kept poultrymen from growing additional poultry all of which, it is pointed out, is sure to cause a shortage next year.

CROWS CAUSE TROUBLE E. W. Dawson of the U. S. department of agriculture, bureau of biological survey, who has been in the county for some two weeks assisting in putting out poison for rodents and other pests that are destroying crops, states that he has been meeting with success except in poisoning crows.

While there are not a very large number of crows in this section there is a sufficient number to do great damage, especially just now when the farmers are planting corn. These crows, Mr. Dawson states, do not roost in this county, but come in from their roosting places in adjoining counties, therefore the bait put out for them is not as effective

DISCRIMINATION (AN EDITORIAL)

With East Texas oil operators preparing to fight oil proration to the last ditch a statewide proration meeting has been called for March 24 to deal with the problem of curtailing overproduction not only in the newest boom section of the state but generally.

The state pipe line law, passed by the 41st legislature was designed largely for the purpose of preventing purchaser discrimination between producers of petroleum. But instead of doing that it has fostered discrimination upon a wider and more disastrous scale than ever.

The west central Texas district, plainly a "stripper" area for whose protection the aforementioned regulations were designed in the interest of conservation, has been handed a fine mess of porridge. For instance, under the law, the railroad commission has defined the marginal limits for wells on a 4-8-14 basis, permitting wells 2,000 feet and under to produce four barrels daily exempt from proration; wells from 2,000 to 3,000 to produce 8 barrels daily and wells over 3,000 to produce 14 barrels daily.

No effort whatsoever is made to protect one section against discrimination in the favor of another in the matter of running excess oil. Hence in the Wichita Falls district to the north of us, a district geologically similar to the west central Texas area, regulations, or agreement, or whatever authority prevails provides for taking 58 per cent of the potential or the marginal limit if 58 per cent of the potential is less than this limit.

But what happens in the west central Texas district? Production is limited strictly to the marginal limits, if taken at all, and although a pipe line can take no more proportionately from one well in the district than another, what benefit does this provide for the producers generally if in a neighboring area more liberal regulations are provided?

It is high time that west central Texas business men took action to chase the nigger out of the woodpile. The statewide proration meeting is an immediate opportunity to force action that will require other districts to bear proportionate loads in a general conservation program. Operators in this district are willing to go their part but they should make a demand for uniformity so forcibly felt that further discrimination would be impossible.

CISCO DAILY NEWS

"There Is No Substitute for Newspaper Advertising"

WHAT CAN anyone gain by buying unknown products.

And why should anyone buy them, when it is always safer to ask for brands of recognized quality.

The lure of unknown products is often a "bargain price." The clerk may say they are "just as good" as the popular advertised brands.

But isn't the approval of millions of people worth more than the word of one?

No amount of advertising will create character for a product. But constant advertising does place established character on trial.

The advertised product has a reputation at stake. It must make good to hold your confidence. One false claim would be fatal.

The substitute product is an unknown brand, with nothing to lose.

In appearance, it may imitate a brand you know. Over the counter, any claim may be made for it. Only by sad experience can you prove that claim untrue!

Think of this the next time anyone tries to sell you something "just as good."

Such "just as good" products are urged upon you for only one reason. There is more profit in selling them.

The merchant who permits and encourages such substitution is looking only at today's sales slips. Not at tomorrow's loyal customers.

These facts are published by this newspaper to protect its readers.

Whenever you shop, ask for standard advertised products. Insist on getting them. Be warned by the words "just as good" that there is something better.

When you are guided by names you know you can be sure of constant quality. Of definite purity. Of honest weight. Of full value in return for the money you spent.
