

Poultry Section of Cisco Fair Will be a Hummer

The poultry section of the Eastland County Fair—Cisco, November 8, 9 and 10—bids fair to be a hummer. Secretary Richardson has already received a large number of entries and each mail brings the names of additional men and women who desire to compete in the exhibition of chickens and turkeys. It is already an assured fact that there will be many coops of as fine poultry as is seen at any fair. All persons entering birds in the big show must be members of the Eastland County Poultry Raisers' Association, the membership fee of which is $1. This year at least the poultry entries will not be confined to Eastland county, but will be open to the world. This was done for the purpose of attracting blooded stock from all sections of the state, thereby giving prospective Eastland county poultry raisers an opportunity to familiarize themselves with all breeds. Following are the prizes offered:

TEXAS PRESBYTERIANS
The splendid effort that the Presbyterians of Texas are just now making to provide additional equipment and endowment for their educational institutions is attracting the attention of the entire church. The great Synod of Texas is undertaking to raise $1,350,000 for Christian education. The beneficiaries of this fund, which we are confident Texas Presbyterians will pledge, are as follows:

Austin College at Sherman; Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary at Austin; Daniel Baker College at Brownwood; Texas Presbyterian College at Milford; Presbyterian Home and School for Orphans at Itasca; Texas-Mexican Industrial Institute at Kingsville; University Church at Austin; Presbyterian Home for Mexican Girls at Taft; Presbyterian Students' Work at Commerce, Huntsville and San Marcos; Colleges of Industrial Arts and North Texas State Normal at Denton; A. & M. College at College Station. — Christian Observer.

SCHAEFER'S FINE WORK.
The congregation of the First Christian church last Sunday gave Harry P. Schaefer a rising vote of thanks for the handsome hand-painted river scene which now stands back of the baptistry in the new church. It is very beautiful and a work of art, says Rev. E. H. Holmes, the pastor.

Cisco Must Provide Shipping Market and Cold Storage Facilities For the Poultry Raisers of Cisco Countryside

R. L. Poe, who lives out on south Main street, is making some marked improvements in his poultry business.

He is building one of the most up to date poultry houses in this section of the country. It is 20x72 feet in dimensions and is divided into three compartments, one of which is a brooder room, that will care for 1,000 young chicks. The other two rooms, 20x24 feet, are roosting and feeding rooms, which will care for 400 or 500 hens. The whole structure is built along plans as outlined by the department of agriculture. It is to be lighted by electricity and is provided with an alarm clock which will awaken the hens at 4 o'clock in the morning and put them on the egg producing job. On dark, dreary days these lights will be turned on in the afternoon also, so the hens will not call it a day and retire too early. It has been shown conclusively that the best egg production is derived from hens that are kept on the job early and late.

There are many handy devices attached to the plans of this building, one of which is the suspended roost and the dropping board. The roost is supposed to be so built as to be inaccessible to blue bugs and other vermin. The building is well ventilated and at the same time fitted for the coldest weather. Water jars and feeding pans are handy. A scratch pen is provided in the straw in which the feed is scattered. This is considered an ideal poultry house and will doubtless lead to the building of many more like it by Eastland county poultry men.

Poe is fencing a few acres for pasture for the hens and small chicks. This is being done with iron pipe as posts, set in concrete, and a six-foot wire netting attached. The posts will stand up seven feet and will have two strands of wire above the netting. This will make a fence that will last a life time and will be sufficiently high for any purpose.

He will keep some kind of grain growing at all times for grazing, and no fowls, large or small, can thrive without green feed.

He has just recently bought a nice flock of 100 pullets of the American strain of white Leghorns from a dealer in Missouri. These pullets are beginning to lay now, though only about five months old. He will try them out and see if they are superior to the English strain, used mostly in this country.

Mr. Poe is enthusiastic over the poultry business in this county, and expects there will be some developments before the Cisco poultry business is well enough organized to provide adequate cold storage and good shipping markets. But Poe has been interested in the poultry game for several years and knows there is good money to be made when the game is played with intelligence and business management.

Cisco Druggist Has Fine Strain of Chickens and Will Boost the Business

T. L. Shepard, Cisco druggist, who lives out at the end of Seventh street is a poultry fancier who is getting into the business in earnest. Mr. Shepard has the E. B. Thompson strain of Barred Rocks and is getting nicely arranged in the business. He has two city lots fenced and arranged with roosting sheds, nests and an incubator house.

He has two incubators, one of 110 egg and the other of 250-egg capacity. He has the patent feeding troughs in which there is always plenty of dry mash for the chicken. He says it doesn't pay to try to mix the feeds when a good mixture of a balanced ration is sold on the market almost as cheap as the unmixed grain.

His roosting shed has a concrete floor and is regularly covered with crude oil to prevent mites, bugs and diseases.

Mr. Shepard has now about 50 pullets which will soon be laying eggs which he will sell for $1 per setting, while he has just received from New York one rooster and four hens which cost him $150. The entire output from these for the coming year is already sold for $12 per dozen, or $1 per egg. At this rate he will soon have his capital investment and a nice profit besides.

Shepard has a nice home and the paper shell pecans and other orchard trees which he set out all over his lots will add to the appearance in a few years and will greatly increase the value of his property.

KEATHLEY IS INTERESTED.
Roy Keathley, who lives at 511 west Fifth street, is another merchant who has entered the poultry game for pleasure as well as for profit. Mr. Keathley, who is in the hardware business on Main street, has 48 white Leghorn hens of the M. Johnston strain. He has only a small space on which to keep his chickens, but finds it profitable to raise good stock and sell eggs for setting purposes.

Keathley will enter some fowls in the Eastland county fair at Cisco, November 8-9-10.

Feeding of Poultry For Egg Production

The general principles of feeding applies to fowls as well as to other farm animals. The poultry ration, therefore, should be properly balanced and should contain sufficient nutrients to meet the demands of the fowl. It should provide a good variety and possess sufficient bulk to enable quick digestion, and should surely consist of food which the fowl likes. This later fact aids in the digestion.

Grit and mineral matter form essential parts of a poultry ration. Grit has a double function, namely, to aid in crushing the food in the crop or gizzard, and to furnish lime and mineral matter used in egg production. Where one does not have a proper amount of lime in the gravel of the soil, the efficiency may be made up by feeding lime in the food or putting it in the drinking water. If you find that the shell of your egg is thin and you can scarcely handle them without breaking, it means that your hens are not getting sufficient lime. The putting of lime in the drinking water also has the effect of purifying it and preventing of diseases to which fowls are subject.

For best results, meat in some form should be fed in the daily ration. Beef scraps are usually the form fed. A bone grinder, with which green bones and scraps may be ground would be profitable to any one with a large flock. Here, near Cisco or any towns with meat markets, any amount of the raw material can be had for the trouble of carrying it away.

Green feeds must be supplied the year round if one expects to obtain the best results. This is supplied by pastures of wheat, oats, rye, barley, or millet, or in a small way by covering a small patch with net wire so that a large number of fowls would not scratch up the grain.

In the grain ration it is best to have from one-half to two-thirds of the ration to consist of whole grain, and the remainder to be ground feed, as fowls do not seem to be able to grind their own food fast enough to satisfy their needs.

In feeding for egg production, a valuable lesson may be learned from nature. As a rule fowls lay most in the spring, and the more so if left to shift for themselves. If given free range at this time of year, they obtain green food from young and tender shoots of grass and insects furnish an abundance of meat food. Such food mixed with a grain ration, seems to be a good one for egg production. So we only have to prolong these spring-like conditions to have a good ration for egg production.

The amount to feed is an important matter. A laying hen should have all the food she can use. And in culling for good layers, this is an important thing to watch. The hen that is a hearty eater is a safe bet as a good layer. The dry hopper method of feeding is a good one because the hen with a large capacity can have the opportunity of satisfying her craving any time she is hungry. The old wet mash plan is not a good one since the hen is at the

in her body, since the ovum (yolk of the egg) is sixty-four per cent fat. We have already emphasized the importance of lime in the food since the shell is composed of that material. This may be supplied in the form of oyster shells, bone meal, green cut bone or pure lime in the food or water.

For the country as a whole there is said to be one public employee for every twelve taxpayers. Twelve useful citizens out of thirteen is a very comforting ratio.—New York Evening Post.

The millennium is waiting patiently until the time comes when reform will begin where charity does.—Sacramento Bee.

DIPLOMAS AND BRAIN POWER

Too many boys and girls, as well as their parents, look upon the full high school course as useful only in fulfilling college entrance requirements. They fail to realize that secondary school work is organized on a four-year basis and that to omit the last one or two of those years is to forego the benefit of well-rounded training. Furthermore, statistical studies of the situation have indicated again and again that in general the earning power in later years of men who finished high school or its equivalent is greater than that of men who did not do so.

To the impatient boy who can't see any connection between school work and the satisfaction of his life ambitions, it should be pointed out that graduation from a good high school is proof of more than average intellectual ability, more than average industry and more than average stability. It puts a different light on quitting school to take a job when it is suggested that many of the boys who leave do so because they lack the brain power, the will power and the moral strength to stay in school until graduation.

Since the big war there is a more or less prevalent idea abroad that the merchants of a city should unite in closing their places of business out of respect to this, and the other public function—no matter what day of the week the aforesaid functions are held—and that those merchants who hold contrary opinions and refuse to fall in line are not good citizens. This is an altogether silly idea and one that could do much harm in any community if permitted to spread. The merchant—be he big or little—is usually a constructive citizen and possessed of sound sense. He is familiar with the status of his business and should be permitted to exercise his own judgment as to its conduct. All thoughtful men and women will recognize this fact and permit the merchant to regulate his own affairs, just as they wish to regulate theirs. It might be well to remember that the merchant contributes liberally to every earthly enterprise of a public nature, hence is always a large stockholder in these enterprises.

GERMAN DEBT REPUDIATION

An interesting fact in connection with the German reparations problem is that Germany now has no domestic debt.

There was, after the armistice, a huge national debt. It was owed mainly to the German citizens who, through their purchase of government bonds, had furnished the money for carrying on the war. That debt, together with the old imperial debt existing when the war began, was wiped out by the process of paying off the bonds in paper marks. Nearly all of the state and municipal debts of Germany are said to have been abolished in the same way.

It was very simple for the government, which could print all the marks it wanted and pay its debts with them at face value. But as far as the bond-holders were concerned, it was bare-faced robbery. Loans amounting to many billions of dollars, for which the investor had given gold or its full equivalent, were paid in fiat money which probably averaged less than 1 per cent of its face value at the time of bond redemption and which is worth altogether only a few thousand dollars today.

What it amounts to is that Germany has repudiated her national debt at the expense of her own people.

Suppose the United States government were to pay off all its outstanding war bonds with paper worth less than one cent on the dollar. Imagine what that breach of faith and confiscation of capital would do to American business. There would be less taxes to pay, with the war debt wiped out; but what would there be left to pay taxes with?

It is a sad thing not only for the German people but for the allied and associated creditors now trying to collect what Germany owes them. Yet there is a sort of German silver lining in the situation. Seeing what such confiscation has done to Germany, none of her creditors are likely to follow her example.

A well known lady writer informs the world that the sheiks in this country are all imitations. They only make a gesture toward sheiking. They don't know the game. They are fakes. Well, what can you expect? With the country full of modern women, a man has as much of a chance to pull the sheik stuff as he has to buy an old-fashioned cocktail. Even the Asiatic and African sheiks are being forced out of the game. A man who starts any cave-man stuff these days must have more courage than any modern man possesses.

In encouraging the poultry business and adopting practical methods of securing a market for everything on the farm, the Cisco chamber of commerce will aid the people of Cisco in exactly the same degree the farmer is aided. In this matter city and farm interests are identical.

"I do not contend that the battleship is obsolete," remarks Chief Patrick of the army air service. "I only say that the air service can sink any naval craft afloat." To the average mind that seems quite enough to say about the matter.

The wise man sees both sides of a question—and then is often suspected and disliked by both sides.

The trouble with most people, like most cars, is that they burn too rich a mixture, thereby getting full of carbon and reducing their mileage.

THE LIMIT OF SPEED.

The winner of the Pulitzer aviation race traveled 124 miles at the rate of 243.67 miles an hour. His speed may be called roughly 250 miles an hour. It may be regarded as definitely established that airplanes can travel that fast. Will they go faster?

Glenn Curtis, who built the winning plane, says no. That is, not as a regular thing. He thinks it not impossible that an airplane may be able to fly, sometimes, as fast as 500 miles an hour. But that would be a highly specialized craft doing a "stunt." For practical purposes he believes the airplane has now just about reached its speed limit.

This will shock imaginative people who have talked glibly about the time when planes would fly 1,000 miles an hour and travel around the earth keeping pace with the sun. It is a poetic and appealing fancy, but according to Mr. Curtis there are practical engineering obstacles in the way. There is friction, for instance. He suggests that the mere friction of the rushing air would soon destroy a plane making 500 miles an hour. There is tremendous wear on one going half that fast.

Some slight notion of what this air friction means may be gained by anyone who has gone through a hurricane or tornado in which the wind blew 100 miles an hour, and who can imagine wind two and one-half times as strong.

Nobody need feel blue about it if it develops that Mr. Curtis is right. At this present maximum speed, which some people profess to regard as mere dawdling, a plane flying continuously would circle the earth at the equator in about four days, and do it further north or south in three days.

Maybe what Europe needs is an international baseball league. There's nothing like a ball game to relieve nervous pressure and satisfy patriotic enthusiasm.

A Massachusetts woman wants to sell her husband, a poet, for $500. If a poet brings that much, an energetic poultry raiser should be quoted at a million.

YOUNG STRIBLING PUTS IN NEW YORK APPEARANCE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1. — Young Stribling, the high school boy who makes life interesting for the wandering light-heavyweights who stray down Georgia way, landed in New York Wednesday night to count the stories in the tall buildings he has heard so much about.

The Southern boy has a lame shoulder, due to some crowding in the clinches of his recent fight with Steven Choinski in Macon, Ga., wherein Steve was stopped in five rounds. Then he probably will take on two bouts in Boston, one with Joe Eagan and the other with Dan O'Dowd. He was asked to call on Tex Rickard Wednesday afternoon, but did not do so because he does not want to fight in New York, where lads of his age are permitted to go no more than six rounds. Stribling is still a minor.

First M. E. Church of Cisco Names Trustees and Other Officials

At the quarterly conference of the First Methodist church of Cisco, held Wednesday night, Dr. O. F. Sensabaugh presided and reports of the various organizations showed the church to be in excellent condition, with a total membership of 750. It is generally agreed that under the pastorate of Rev. H. B. Watts, who is now completing his first year, the church has made distinct gains, with even brighter prospects ahead.

The Central Texas Annual conference meets at Temple, November 14, at which time it is presumed Mr. Watts will again be assigned to this charge. He is a sincere, well-liked man and capable minister.

After a brief but interesting opening talk by Dr. Sensabaugh, the conference elected the following church officers:

Trustees—J. M. Williamson, Lee Owen, William Reagan, Roy Keathley, J. E. Elkins, H. G. Eppler, D. L. Rogers, Ben McClinton and John C. Sherman.

Senior Stewards—George Winston, H. S. Drumwright, W. B. Statham, Lee Elkins, J. M. Witten, J. H. Chambliss, John C. Sherman, E. R. McDaniel, W. H. Morse, Lory Boyd, George Boyd, J. C. McAfee, Earl Bibby, J. E. Elkins, J. T. Gardner, Roy Keathley, A. O. Humphries, J. J. Godbey, B. F. Gaither, H. G. Bailey, G. C. Brock and William Reagan.

Junior Stewards—Ernest Winston, William Morse, Elroy McCanlies, Felix Harris, Clyde Mancill, Marvin Boyd, Terry Turner, Joe Lee Moore, Billy Ricks, Glenn Elkins, Byron Lovelady, Mal Rumph, Monroe Witten, Henson Williamson.

Sunday school superintendents—J. J. Godbey and B. F. Gaither. Lay leader—W. L. Boyd.

Poultry Men Will Hold Annual Meeting Friday Night, Nov. 9, Cisco

The annual meeting of the Eastland Poultry association will be held at the city hall in Cisco, Friday night, November 9. R. L. Poe, president, will preside and the annual report will be made by Secretary G. C. Richardson. Then will come the election of officers for the next term.

Speakers on the program, with their subjects, will be as follows: R. Q. Lee, "My Visit to Petaluma." F. W. Kazmeier, Bryan, "Profits in the Poultry Business."

Mrs. Carl Hoffman, Argyle, Texas, "How to Begin in the Poultry Business."

B. S. Dudley, Ranger, "My Experience in the Poultry Business."

An Eastland speaker will also occupy a place on the program.

The association, which is now concluding its first year, has a total membership of something over 500 and is growing steadily.

Too Much Money Probable Cause Chicago Couple's Many Marital Troubles

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—Mrs. Genevieve Stephenson was granted a divorce from Harry M. Stephenson in the superior court and, by agreement, she was given $500,000 alimony.

The charge was cruelty and drunkenness which, the wife testified, began as soon as America "went dry." Stephenson has figured in the newspapers at divers times in the past, once because he lost his solid gold garter clasp for the return of which he offered a $5 reward.

About ten years ago Stephenson bought the palatial "farm" estate near Boston which cost $250,000 and which he took over for $40,000. This "farmhouse" had seven silver bathtubs in as many bathrooms.

According to medical testimony the average man is much more active than his ancestors. He has to be if he is a pedestrian.—Punch (London.)

GOOD HEN LAYS FOUR TIMES HER WEIGHT

A rather startling statement was broadcasted from radio station WOS at Jefferson City, Mo., recently by H. L. Kempster, of the Missouri College of Agriculture, when he said that a farm hen well cared for will lay nearly four times her own weight in eggs in a year.

"One should appreciate what an efficient animal the hen is in converting farm produced feeds into edible products," said Mr. Kempster. "This is especially true of laying hens. According to the demonstration farm poultry flock records from nearly 300 farmers who manage their poultry according to directions furnished by the Missouri College of Agriculture, the hens during 1922 averaged 129 eggs. Such hens produced sixteen pounds of eggs. Assuming that each hen consumed eighty pounds of feed, she produced one pound of eggs for five pounds of feed.

"The average price received for eggs during 1922 was 27 cents a dozen or 18 cents a pound. In fact, these farmers, according to their own records, have realized an income from poultry products of two or three dollars for every dollar expended for poultry feed. In well cared for flocks one can safely figure on getting from two to three times as much for his grain as he would get by selling it on the market. It pays to market home grown feeds in the form of chickens and eggs.

"Such results are possible only when the flock is well fed. It is the result of liberal feeding of food properly selected in a judicious manner."

Wish of Fathers Long Dead Met When W. H. Vanderbilt and Child-day Friend Wed

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Not Paris, London nor Vienna will call the young Vanderbilt honeymooners, William H. Vanderbilt and his bride, Miss Emily Davis, after their wedding here today.

They will go home to Oakdale Farm, the country estate of the Vanderbilts, up in New York state, where they will make their home for the greater part of the year.

The big, roomy homestead, set in the midst of rolling acres, has always been the favorite residence of young Vanderbilt, to whom it was given outright last November upon the occasion of his becoming of age.

It is "just across and down the road a piece" from the home of Mr. Vanderbilt's mother, the former Elsie French, widow of the late Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, and now Mrs. Paul Fitz Simons.

The wedding of Mr. Vanderbilt and Miss Davis will bring about the fusion of two families which have been life-long friends. The two fathers, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt and Frederick W. Davies were boyhood friends and life-long intimates, and nothing would have pleased them more than to have seen their children wed.

So great was their friendship that acquaintance of both saw something strangely moving in the fact that when Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt perished on the Lusitania, his friend, Frederick Davies died very suddenly before the news of Vanderbilt's death could be brought to him.

The young couple recently returned from an extensive trip abroad with Mrs. Davies, Miss Audrey Davies, who will be her sister's maid of honor, and Mr. Eugene O'Neill.

WATCH TICK HURTS LECTURE.

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—A radio audience of 1,000,000 persons in Milwaukee, Cleveland, Detroit, Indianapolis, Cook county and many other points, which tuned in Sunday night to listen to a lecture by Bishop Fraser McDowell at Orchestra hall, deluged the Sunday evening club with complaints that it couldn't hear the lecture for the ticking of the bishop's watch. He laid it too near the transmitter. He was telling how small the world is.

EPISCOPAL SERVICES.

Rev. Frank Stedman, pastor of the Episcopal church, will conduct regular services Sunday at the hall in the Garner building.

$1,000,000 TO CHARITY.

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—Stocks, bonds, real estate and personal property, valued at nearly $10,000,000, are listed in an inventory of the estate of the late Mrs. Nettie Fowler McCormick, widow of Cyrus H. McCormick, filed in probate court here Wednesday.

The official account disclosed that Mrs. McCormick had invested $1,000,000 in Liberty bonds and raised the estimate of her estate more than $1,000,000.

In her will Mrs. McCormick bequeathed $1,000,000 to charity. The majority of the remainder of the estate was divided equally among her three children, Cyrus Hall McCormick, Anita McCormick Blane and Harold F. McCormick.

Approximately 25,000 shares of International Harvester stock, valued at close to $3,000,000, formed the bulk of the estate.

Mrs. McCormick who was widely known for her philanthropies died July 5 last.

Cisco's Big Dam Is Now Retaining Water and It Will Be Dedicated Soon

The last concrete was poured Wednesday night and Williamson dam at Lake Cisco is now a finished job so far as retaining water is concerned, although there are numerous details to be looked after yet by the capable superintendent, E. M. Urban, such as placing and connecting the pumping machinery and removing construction machinery, tools and materials from the grounds. Mr. Urban now hopes to secure his sailing papers and depart for his home in Chicago about December 1.

Special services dedicating Cisco's mammoth engineering feat and water supply will probably be held at an early date, or as soon as the city council can determine a suitable day from the standpoint of good weather.

FEED GERMAN CHILDREN.

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—Major Henry T. Allen, who commanded the American forces on the Rhine, announced Wednesday on his arrival from Washington that plans were being made to feed 2,000,000 German children this winter through the medium of the American Society of Friends. Gen. Allen, who returned from a visit from Germany last July, declared that "a very grave situation and one with which Germany itself is not able to cope," exists in the former enemy country. He has accepted the chairmanship of the American committee in charge of the campaign, which he said had been endorsed by Secretary of Commerce Hoover and is being participated in by many nationally-known individuals.

SOY BEANS POPULAR.

Soy beans were grown over 56,000 farms for the first time in 1922 or the method of cultivation modified according to reports of the United States Department of Agriculture, through the efforts of co-operative agricultural extension workers to extend the use of this legume as a green manure for increasing soil fertility and a protein supplement for livestock feeding.

11,000 MORE HOME ORCHARDS.

Home orchards were planted on 11,000 farms in 1922, as a result of co-operative agricultural extension work, according to reports of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Now Facing Jury Judge Hill's Court For Murder Hugh Maples

The trial of Bob Mohler, charged with the brutal murder of Hugh Maples, Cisco rural mail carrier, is under way in Judge Hill's court at Eastland. Before the jury was the special venire of 175 had exhausted and nine additional summoned. The courtroom was crowded since the case was called and intense interest is manifested in the audience. Maples' aged father, brothers and many friends are present daily. Mohler's two brothers are also attending the trial.

The jurors are as follows: J. G. Ranger; D. C. Jordan, Ranger; Floyd Cooper, Cisco; Ed Maher, D. M. Kyle, Dothan; C. A. Eastland; W. N. McDonald, C. E. Heathcock, Ranger; Pope, Eastland; W. G. Clegg, R. W. Zeibr, Cisco; E. L. Eastland.

MAKES SENSIBLE SUGGESTION; NEXT STEP IS TO PUT IT IN EFFECT

RANGER, Nov. 1. — "Make the head highway between Ranger and Cisco the most beautiful road in the state," was the suggestion of R. H. county agricultural agent, Ranger for a club talk, and that the pecan tree be planted 60 feet of the way as the step in that direction.

"I don't see why we shouldn't plant pecan trees on both sides of the highway to Cisco," he said. "It would be an attraction. No reason why the trees shouldn't grow on every side of the road.

"It would be a beautiful road in years. You'd have tourists talking about it the country over."

Charge Sheriff L. D. Head Killed M. A. Stroope Last May Without Justification

Suit for $80,300 was filed in the 90th district court at Breckenridge Monday against Sheriff L. D. Head, Deputy Sheriff Wallace Crawford and the sheriff's surety, the American Surety company, as the result of the killing last May of M. A. Stroope. The suit is brought by the widow. Her attorneys are E. A. Bills of Eastland and John W. Mackey of Breckenridge.

The plaintiff's petition alleges that the two Stephens county officers fired upon Stroope without justification or cause and his death resulted. The sheriff was recently indicted on a murder charge as the result of the shooting.

Stroope is survived by two minor children. Actual damages are set forth in the suit at $50,000. Three hundred dollars incurred for funeral expenses is also asked and in addition, $25,000 exemplary damages is sought making the total sued for, $80,300.

NEW JUNIOR CHAMP.

By producing 7,010 pounds of milk and 411.50 pounds of butter fat at two years two months of age, Noble's Bettina 479769, owned by J. M. Kennedy, El Reno, Oklahoma, has become the champion junior two-year-old of that state. She displaces Rose Fern Elner 248529, a college Jersey, that has held the record with 399 pounds of fat to her credit. Of particular interest is the fact that Bettina averaged 5.87 per cent throughout her period of test, exceptionally good, when one considers that the breed average is 5.36 per cent.

PAID REPAIR COSTS.

How to Raise More Cotton in 1924

(W. M. Cosby)

Now is the time for the farmers of Texas to begin preparing for a large cotton crop in 1924.

You have undoubtedly heard of the big crop of cotton that has been harvested in San Patricio and Nueces counties this year, and if you want to know the reason why these people can so far outstrip other counties and other parts of the state in raising cotton, I will tell you.

In 1911 there was very little cotton grown in San Patricio county. Then we began putting some land in cultivation, and on account of the fact that the land was nearly all owned by the Taft ranch, it was an easy matter to get all the tenant farmers to follow the same plan of farming. In the contract for the renting of land, these tenants agreed to plow under or cut and burn all cotton stalks immediately after the last picking. They also agreed to burn all the grass and weeds during the early fall. This was done for the purpose of killing out the weevil before they went into winter quarters. This plan of farming also destroys a great many cut worms and boll worms so that the following season there was very little trouble with insects until the crop was nearly matured.

The farmers who owned their own land in San Patricio and Nueces counties, who heard about the big crops that were being made on the Taft ranch, began to adopt the same plan of farming and nearly every farmer began to plow out his cotton stalks immediately after finishing picking his cotton.

The land in many other Texas counties is just as fertile and productive as that in San Patricio and Nueces counties, and if all the farmers of Texas would destroy their cotton stalks by plowing them under immediately after the cotton is picked, there would be much less damage by boll weevil and boll worm next year.

If you examine your cotton fields at the present time you will probably find a great many punctured squares on the ground, and every one of these squares will furnish food for the weevil to come to maturity. If the farmers do not make some effort to co-operate in clearing up their fields this winter, and if we should have a wet spring, we probably will make a very short crop of cotton next year. A little co-operative work, however, and some encouragement offered to those who are inclined to be slow in cleaning their fields, will go a long way towards increasing the 1924 crop. You have been able to get a pretty good price for your cotton this fall, and the price is getting better every day. This indicates that there will be a short crop this year, and an effort made to increase the acreage next season. It will be money for you, however, to put some extra work on your fields this fall, getting ready for a bumper crop next season on your own farm than it will to wait until spring before working your land, thus permitting the weevil to get the advantage of you.

Remember that a weevil when he is active cannot live on anything but green cotton. He will not become inactive until after the first hard frost. Kill the cotton stalks now, cut off his food supply and he will have to die. Do not expect to make a top crop; you will never make it if you let these stalks continue to grow in the fields after you have picked your cotton; all you will raise this fall will be a crop of weevil, and these weevil and their progeny will harvest the crop next season for you. This is the open season on weevil—let's kill him now!

NEW YORK EATS 156,691,869 DOZEN EGGS ANNUALLY

Despite the development of egg production in California and the other Pacific coast states, New York still depends for the main supply of eggs upon the middle west, is the statement of Charles Junod for the Bank of America. Last year 354,000 cases of eggs were received from California; from Illinois shipments totaled 1,378,846 cases; from Iowa, 921,046.

Santone Klan Asks Public To Use Its Influence In Securing Parade Permit

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Nov. 1.—San Antonio Klan No. 31 Wednesday sent letters to hundreds of citizens asking them to fill in a blank form saying that they joined the klan in asking city and county authorities to parade in full regalia. They propose a three-day carnival here in January. Mayor John W. Tobin, Commissioner of Police Phil Wright and Sheriff Jim Stephens stated that they would not issue such a permit.

UNDERWOOD MANAGER

ORANGE, Texas, Nov. 1.—Mayor W. E. Lea of Orange today had resigned to become Texas manager of the presidential campaign of Senator Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama. MITCHELL.

My! My! Doesn't it rain. We didn't have any services Sunday on account of weather conditions. W. B. Starr is harvesting his sweet potato crop this week. W. B. says he will make a good yield.

Miss Bertha Livingston left for Curtis Sunday, where she will teach this term.

The boys of this community had quite a wolf chase Monday and Monday night, when they caught two of the vigorous fellows. They ran one under one of the neighbors houses and caught him. That's a new way of catching wolves, but a good way.

We are planning for the county singing convention again Sunday the 4th. Hope it doesn't rain us out again.

The Hallowe'en party to be given in honor of Bertha Livingston, Saturday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Rupe, was rained out, which we very much regret.

Success to the American. We will try to have a long letter next week.

BOLES, PRACTICAL CHICKEN MAN, WANTS SMALL ACREAGE ON CISCO-RANGER HIGHWAY FOR A MODERN POULTRY PLANT

R. G. Boles who lives southeast of Moran was in Cisco Thursday. He was selling some fryers which he had raised on the place he had rented this year. Mr. Boles is from New Mexico, where there are some nice poultry farms. He has just sold his property in that state and intends to enter the poultry business here. He is prospecting for a small acreage somewhere on the Cisco-Ranger highway. On this he intends to erect a nice little cottage and install a modern poultry plant.

When questioned as to what he considered a modern plant, he said it meant in his case about 2,000 hens of good blood, with his ground cross-fenced so as to have a change of pastures and with poultry houses so built as to be easy to keep clean and free from vermin. This latter is the cause of more poultry failures, he says, than any other one thing. When hens are infested with any kind of vermin, their systems are so weakened that laying is impossible for a long period of time, even after they have been freed from the pests. Then trap nests are very necessary, so that one can know which hens are paying their way and which are boarders.

It is necessary to have some kind of green feed at all times of the year, else hens cannot have material from which to manufacture eggs. He will have small patches of wheat, oats, barley and millet, on which they can graze; in winter he will prepare in addition, frames in which he will have rich soil and in this he will plant oats or other grain to be sprouted for his hens to nibble. Over these frames will be stretched net wire to keep the chickens from scratching up the seeds.

If he gets the desired location he will have an alarm clock connected with his lighting system so the lights will come on at about 4 o'clock each morning. This will cause the hens to come off the roost early and begin work. The previous night he will have scattered grain in straw so the hens will begin exercise while securing their breakfast. If the day is cloudy and dreary, the lights will be turned on in the afternoon as early as is needful. He says it may be proper for men to expect to make a living by working a few hours a day, but one cannot expect poultry to pay in egg production without putting in long hours at the job. He finds long hours of exercise is needed if one expects to get most from his flock of hens. The hen that retires late and gets off the roost early is the one that will pay the profit. He says that young chickens grow larger and develop more rapidly if made to scratch for their feed. It develops their muscles and their desire for food at the same time.

Mr. Boles thinks this soil and climate is suited for the poultry business and says he really believes that within ten years the poultry game will be played by rich and poor alike in Eastland county. He thinks as the business grows in this county the markets will develop and be stable and sure, because we will be shipping eggs all over the country and getting, at the same time, the highest possible price.

CLARK STUDYING GAME.

A. L. Clark, a popular barber in the X-Ray barber shop, is another convert to the poultry business. Mr. Clark lives out in Harrell addition and has a small space on which he is entering the poultry game in a quiet way, at first, with 38 white Leghorn hens. He is going to breed up this stock until he will have the best obtainable. He will use trap nests and sell eggs for breeding purposes as well as for the market. Clark says he hopes to be able to enter the business in a big way later on and it is his desire to have established a high-class flock by that time.

Report of This Year's Crops in the South. Detailed figures are given, from official government reports, showing that the basis on which the September forecast, seven leading crops of the country will give a value of over $7,630,000,000 as compared with $6,394,000,000 last year, showing a gain for these seven crops of $1,236,000,000 over last year's crop value was $2,000,000 in excess of the crop of 1921, and more than one-third that increase was in the South. The increase indicated for the crops named for this year the South is two-thirds of the entire country, or between $800,000,000 and $900,000,000. When the returns for all the crops of the South have been completed, it is estimated by the "Manure Record" that the gain in production this year will run from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000,000 over the preceding year.

President Harding's estate. The total value of the estate, according to the report of the appraiser filed in the probate court in Ohio, on October 11, exclusive of the Harding Publishing Company which has not yet been appraised, was set at $486,565.64. Real property and chattels were valued at $4,154,833, money $34,300, securities $400,794.91, and other assets at $46,720.

SINGING CONVENTION.

WHAT YOUTH DEMANDS OF THE CHURCH.

(J. D. Barker.)

Young people disagree about the church, just as their elders do. Some of them find value in the symbolic services of our ritualistic churches; others will not tolerate what seems to them to be a jumble of meaningless adornment. Some are crusaders for a conservative faith, rivaling Mr. Bryan in his attacks upon liberalism; others are impatient with anything that is older than to-day. Some openly hostile to the church, some are tolerant of it, some are indifferent and others are its staunch defenders.

But regardless of the theology, or denominational affiliation of their attachment or aloofness to the church young people agree in insisting that there are some things very much wrong with the church, and that there are certain prospects in which the church needs to change its attitude if it is to have the complete approval of young life. A few of these points of criticism may here be set down for the benefit of the elders in the church.

Youth wants age to treat its opinions as worthy of full respect and consideration. Young people want to be considered as having arrived at a point of intelligence and capability which entitles them to be heard—to be heard as individuals, as members of the church family. Youth does not want consideration; it despises the patronizing air as much as it dislikes either the tolerant or intolerant disrespect for the opinions of youth.

It has been the habit of parents to treat the opinions of high school people as though they needed to be discounted anywhere from twenty-five to seventy-five per cent. Older folks have great difficulty in realizing that their children have grown up; they seem not to be aware that these young people are doing their own thinking in high school and in business and need to do it both in the home and in the church. Eighteen year old John Smith wants Deacon Brown to talk to him as though John Smith were the equal of Deacon Brown, as though the opinions of John Smith were of equal value with those of Deacon Brown. The deacon may have maturity and experience to back his viewpoint, but the young man may have vision and faith and freshness to supplement the seasoned wisdom of age.

This carries with it the idea that young people want to bear important responsibilities in service. The impression is current that the church is pretty much an old folks' institution, that it is officered and directed entirely by those of middle age or beyond. There is no reason why this should be true. It is rank injustice to youth when a church makes up its committees and official board entirely of those in the thirties or over. Such a church does not represent the families—it represents only a part of the families. It cannot minister effectively to young people, if it goes along on this basis.

It is not enough to say to the young people that they have their own department or society in which they may function, any more than it is deemed sufficient to say to the women that they may have their own "Aid Society" in which they may work. If youth is going to be much interested in the church it must be fully recognized as a part of the entire church family, and this family must treat youth respectfully as it is accustomed to be treated in high school or in the business world.

Youth demands that the church be busy about important affairs. It has little time for organizations seeking merely to revive the ancient or keep alive the institution for the sake of its past record. Some of our youth may be defenders of the theology of the Middle-Ages, but they are defenders in terms of today and tomorrow. They fight modernism because they believe it will have a ruinous effect upon the life of tomorrow. That is to say, they face the present and future and are interested in a church which talks the language of twentieth century America rather than of scribal Palestine.

Young people, when given opportunity, criticize frankly the modern service of worship. They say the ministers pray too long, and they pray about things which the young folks don't understand and don't need to study about. They say the sermons are about matters which have no connection with experiences of the week. They say that many of the lessons of the church school and for certain young people's societies are too far removed from their daily experience to justify the expense of any thinking about them.

And as with the subjects which middle age considers, so with the programs projected by some churches. Youth wants to spend little time in merely keeping the body and soul of the church together. It says frankly that if there is not enough energy in an institution to make it live, it is unwise to be eternally employing pulmotors and to resort to the transfusion of blood. Sometimes youth is quite cruel in this matter; sometimes it is sympathetic; but always it insists that an institution which deserves to live is one so busy about the practical needs of community and world life that it hasn't much time to be thinking about its own aches and pains. The theory of youth is that the aches will disappear if the church takes sufficient exercise by properly serving humanity. Almost any church can enlist the vigorous energy of its youth by undertaking some difficult and needed task of social betterment and by sharing responsibility with the young life.

The revolt of youth is not merely destructive. It wants to build, and it wants to build along with older folks if only older folks will let younger folks join in constructing something really worth while.

R. F. Bruce Got 160 Bushels of Potatoes From Half Acre Land

R. F. Bruce, who lives south of Eastland, was shopping in Cisco Friday. He says the people in his community have the poultry fever. They are getting pure bred stock and cleaning out their hen houses for a fresh start in the chicken business. He says the worst pest that we have in this section is the blue bug. It sucks the blood and lowers the vitality of the fowl so that they become too weak to even stand. He gives a sure remedy. Use 3 parts of crude oil and 2 parts of gasoline in a spray.

He will make four or five bales of cotton and enough feed for his stock and team. He has dug about 160 bushels of potatoes from one-half acre of land. He is going to keep them in a hill until later, when the market will be better.

The chief cause of war, however, is the submissiveness of cannon fodder.—Anaheim (Cal.) Plain Dealer.

folks, you know "there is always two sides to a question" and this "Sixth Street Paving" is no exception. The first is, we'll have the dirt that is being removed, put on the high school campus. It looks as if we will soon have to compare with our build-had to talk, and then lead us in a few yells himself.

Maybe you think we didn't have any pep in Cisco High—if you don't, come to one of our meetings and you'll surely change your mind!

GRADES OR KNOWLEDGE?

Should a student study to make grades or to gain knowledge? Should he study merely for affectation or for ability?

Isn't it true that just before examination or try-out, one will study hard—will "cram" as the student expresses it, simply to make a passing grade? Even in daily recitation if he thinks he will likely be called upon to recite on a certain topic—then he will hastily study over this topic; thus he is able to make a good showing and receive a good grade. But does he really deserve it?

To some, this display of knowledge is all that studying means to them. The real purpose of studies is to gain a clear perception of truths or facts, and learn to make some practical use of this knowledge.

Bacon said, "Studies serve for delight, for ornament, and for ability." Shouldn't it be "for ability" in your case?

A NEW DEPARTURE

"Short" Friday has become, recently, a very popular institution in Cisco Hi. For the last three ball-games we have changed our regular schedule, by omitting assembly period and the noon hour, and running through the seven periods of the day without any intermission. In this way, we are out by 1:30 p. m. and have the remainder of the day free. This gives us time to do a bit of "parading," advertising, etc., and then go to the game in good time. Heretofore there was always a wild rush for the park and nobody had time to do anything. The student body feels very grateful to the Powers—that-be for this pleasant consideration.

P. G. CLUB ORGANIZED.

On Wednesday afternoon a bunch of jolly girls met in room 112 and organized a new club in history of Cisco High school namely the P. G. club. After the house was called to order, Hazel Preston was elected president and Nell Parker, secretary. A new yell was selected, and the senior motto, flower, and colors of last year were kept.

This club has no direct purpose or goal, such as the other classes have. It was decided, however, to offer a willing hand to any or all of the class at any time that we are needed.

Our sympathy and interest are with you, students of C. H. S.—Sympathy for you in your disappointments; interest in your every activity. We have been there and we know every step of the way.

Please command us when we can be of service.

Jazz music seems to be improving. At a jazz-band performance the other night it was so quiet that the audience could almost hear a revolver fired.—Punch (London).

Oklahoma discovered the other day an effective method for making reluctant citizens go to the polls. All you have to do is to prohibit people from voting and leave human nature to do the rest.—New York Evening Post.

GOOD NEWS FOR C. H. S.
The ladies of the 20th Century at their last meeting, decided to be free of charge to all High pupils the use of the reference books in the public library—books not to be taken from the school, but to be consulted in the reading room. This will be a help to all students of history and literature especially, and "The Gusher" wishes to offer relative thanks.

THE PEPPY PEP MEETING
You ever see anything that had more pep in it than our pep meeting this morning? I think you will agree with me when I say I don't see anything else. One of the best yells lead- ing was found. He always has been new for us to learn, and never was a more willing person to his share of everything. We were anywhere within two blocks of the school building Friday between 8:30 and 9:00. I imagine you thought to yourself, "What in the world is going on up there," and then, they are getting ready for a football game they have had on." And we were! We led us in all the old yells we had and Miss Baten played for us the songs. Mr. Godbey is still any longer, he just

Crimes Veiled in Mystery Are Never Given Up, Says The Head of N. Y. Police

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Justice never sleeps! For every wrong someone must pay, and long after the most mysterious crime has ceased to be a nine days' wonder and passed into limbo, the long arm of the law is reaching, grimly, relentlessly, to exact expiation. So Police Commissioner Richard E. Enright says, and with the assertion holds forth promise that three of the most baffling murders in police history may yet be solved. From what Commissioner Enright told an audience by radio-recently, it appears not unlikely that the slayers of Joseph Bowne Elwell, the "whist king," and of "Dot" King, "Broadway butterfly," may be brought to trial in the near future; and similar signs indicate that the murderers of the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and his choir singer, Mrs. Elinor Rheinhardt Mills, in New Brunswick, N. J., a year ago, may soon be in the toils. "In these unsolved cases our books are not closed until the last principal involved is dead," Commissioner Enright declared. "Such cases as the Elwell and 'Dot' King murder mysteries, for instance are not mysteries to the police department. "The murderers are known, but we have not been able to get the additional 1 per cent of legal evidence necessary to make arrests. We are hopeful that some day we will get it. It is better to be sure of your shot than miss."

In each of the three cases named suspects are under constant surveillance and the search for evidence ever goes on. The women with whom Elwell was friendly, the men who were "Dot" King's companions, the persons who might have had most cause to wish the Rev. Hall and Mrs. Mills out of the way—the alert, watchful eye of the law is ever upon them. All three murders are almost without parallel as regards the skill with which the slayers wiped out all trace of their identities and covered up their tracks. A blue kimono was one of the very few clues upon which the police were able to base their search for the murderer of Elwell. The wealthy whist expert and turf devotee was found fatally shot in his sumptuous apartment in West Seventy-seventh street on the morning of June 11, 1920. His senseless body slumped down in a chair was removed to the Polyclinic hospital, but he never regained consciousness. An empty 45-caliber shell was found beside him, and in the room the blue kimono. The night before he had attended a gay theater party, a banker and a woman member of which were questioned. Later investigation revealed that he had distributed six pass-keys to his apartment among as many lady friends. "Dot" King, the "Butterfly of Broadway," was found chloroformed to death in the luxurious West Fifty-seventh street apartment paid for out of the ample means of John Kearsley Mitchell, Philadelphia millionaire. Mitchell, masquerading as "John Marshall," had been the beautiful model's most ardent admirer and "angel," supplying her every want with a lavish hand. He had showered gifts of money, bonds, jewelry, motor cars, expensive raiment, upon her—and she had taken of his bounty and given it to her lover, Albert E. Guimares. The latter was questioned about the crime, so were other associates of the slain "butterfly"—actresses, models, male admirers. Nothing that could throw any light on the mystery was discovered. The bodies of the Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Elinor R. Mills were found together under a tree in a meadow in Somerset county, New

The wife of the slain minister and the woman's husband were questioned, as were other relatives and friends. No trace of the murderers was ever found.
