SENATE STARTS WORK ON OMNIBUS BILL

Italians Gain Strong Position Near Makale

Through the Editor's Spectacles By GEORGE

Death of Billy Sunday, famous evangelist, has been heard here with regret. The former big league baseball player who became one of the outstanding evangelists of the Christian religion in America, early in the year considered an offer to come to Cisco to conduct a union revival here.

It was near sacrilege to use the sacred place as a jumping box. But as the appeal of this new type of evangelism spread, our ministers came to feel that Sunday did a great work in preparing new ground for Christian cultivation by the more orthodox workers.

A joint meeting between the Cisco and Eastland Rotary clubs here next Thursday is in prospect. The Eastland club will not meet Monday, because of Armistice day. Rather, none of the Eastland club members will attend the Eastland meeting on the regular Monday date.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Is not the Lord your God with you? and hath he not given you rest on every side? For he hath given the inhabitants of the land into thine hand; and the land is subdued before the Lord, and before his people.—1 Chronicles 22: 18.

Is the work difficult? Jesus directs thee.
Is the path dangerous? Jesus protects thee.
Fear not and falter not, let the word cheer thee; Al through the coming year he will be with thee.

A Whiskey Bill

IT COULD have been said before the legislative wrangle began, but it now seems certain that the sale of liquor in broken packages—that is, by drinks—in Texas will not be permitted. The heavy majority by which the people of the state voted for repeal of the state's prohibition law might have been taken by some as indication that the voters wanted liquor sold wide open. As a matter of reality, however, the heavy vote was a vote against the consumption of liquor in public places, flaunting of the dry laws having become too disgustingly common under the prohibition regime.

BOTH the senate and the house passed bills outlawing the sale of liquor except in unbroken packages in state-licensed stores. Principles of the bills are the same. Their features will probably be composed in conference into a measure acceptable to both houses and the governor within a very short time.

A TAX of 80 cents per gallon would be placed upon whiskey. This is not an exorbitant tax. The tax should not be. The fallacy of prohibition existed in an artificial effort to prevent the consumption of whiskey. Temperance and abstinence will consist in education. People cannot be led to let liquor alone because the price is high. The bootlegger can flourish under a wet regime as well as under a dry one.

Something Definite

FAR be it from us to point any criticism at the movement for raising a fund with which to erect a memorial to Will Rogers. We admire the memory of the great humorist-philosopher, and respect the sincerity of those who are fostering this cause too much to cast any doubt upon the motives. But it does occur that the committee in charge would have guaranteed a more general expression of the public esteem and a larger fund with which to do good in the memory of one of the greatest Americans who ever lived had they first settled upon a definite memorial. It is understood, of course, that the fund raised will not be frozen into any classic marble or cenotaph, but placed to the

Human and Other Nature

By W. F. BRUCE

A great deal might be said in defense of a sun porch, if anybody is inclined to attack it. The dip in the lake at early dawn has its advocates; their cause is worthy, and many a sluggish, corpulent, overfed man (not to say lady) needs to be persuaded as to its merits. It gets the blood going for the day; and one thing is certain if the blood runs all day he is sure to have that one day to live at least. It is a good test of the life curve, as to whether one is on the slope toward the high point or is already going down on the other side. But may not a heroic plunge in the early morning earn a man a pleasant afternoon? I am talking now about the days when the north wind is in charge of things and the mercury is playing around the frost mark; when the sun is playing hide and seek with autumn landscape that are fading into winter grays. Then one can sit by a low gas flame and look at the shivering world outside and smile from the inside. And after all is not the sun bath recommended just as heartily as the ice bath? It is a modern idea and may seem to belong to a declining civilization, while the cold plunge takes nerve and belongs more to the age when man had to wrestle with things around him if he kept his head, and kept it up. And yet the savage took his exposure to the sun whether he knew of its virtues or not. He had little to ward off the full effect of its rays, and if there was any curative powers in them at all he had to take it. Perhaps he found himself getting better sometimes and didn't know why. Maybe lots of germs died by exposure to the hot sun and the benighted savage never even knew he had them. We don't know how many advantages we have around us all

The National Whirligig

THE NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

A discussion of events and personalities in the news, world and national, by a group of fearless and informed newspaper men of Washington and New York. "Whirligig" is published as a news feature. Opinions expressed are those of the writers contributing to the column, and should not be interpreted as reflecting the editorial policy of this newspaper.

WASHINGTON.

By RAY TUCKER.
BOSS—If you believe all you hear, the only man our bold admirals of the grand fleet fear is Cordell Hull, the mild mountaineer from Tennessee. Loquacious gold-braiders parry questions about disarmament, Great Britain's naval thrust in the Mediterranean and Japan's building program with the explanation that "Mr. Hull has ordered us not to talk."

Sometime ago Rear Admiral J. K. Taussig, assistant chief of operations, discussed Japan's naval strategy with almost naive frankness before an audience of newspapermen. He agreed to let them publish his remarks as "background"—is, without quoting him.

The secretary of state flew into a rage—for him—and politely requested Secretary Swanson not to let this his men meddle in foreign affairs.

There have been two other incidents of the same sort. Though the navy has four friends in the White House—Messrs. Roosevelt, Howe, Early and McIntyre — it pretends to cringe before a man who doesn't know the front from the rear end of a battleship.

COORDINATED—In reality the admirals are playing possum. World conditions are too shipshape for them to upset the boat by talking out of turn.

The naval strategists have never taken seriously threats of immediate, large-scale war in Europe. Politicians and publicists themselves, they look upon Britain's Mediterranean demonstration as a maneuver to mobilize public sentiment behind a big navy program. On the other side of the world Japan is preparing to build. In the old days, when White House occupants neglected the navy, secretaries of state suppressed diplomatic reports which might have angered the sailors. They suspected that the navy would "leak" so as to stage a counter-attack against secret proposals to weaken the fleet. And the navy did "leak" in those days. Now it feels it can afford to play along with Mr. Hull.

HOMES — Harold Ickes has quietly trimmed his sails so that the supreme court's expected crackdown on his slum clearance experiments will not stymie the program.

What the court may object to, as a lower body did, is taking of land by federal condemnation. The time whose benefits we are enjoying; perhaps it would be better to say benefits we are reiving, without knowing enough to enjoy them. Don't give up your cold morning bath; but consider also the merits of the sun bath.

But Mr. Ickes has abandoned that procedure for purchase by negotiation with landlords. If they refuse to sell, he drops the scheme. He estimates that he has inaugurated $150,000,000 worth of building projects which the "nine old men" cannot touch with their judicial scepter. Housing legislation will be the "big push" at the next session. Senator Wagner of New York studied the problem in Europe during the summer—supposedly at FDR's suggestion. "Bob" has not revealed his plans. But it is understood he will urge a $1,000,000,000 federal expenditure for low-cost construction of homes, with $200,000,000 to be spent yearly. Interest rates for the money will average about 3 per cent, and the construction "kitty" will serve as a revolving fund.

POWER?—Felix Frankfurter's "hot doggers" hotly dispute Hugh Johnson's statement that the professor dominates the administration.

They deny that he recruited the "brain trust," explaining that Mr. Roosevelt himself must bear that responsibility. They say Prof. Frankfurter simply suggested a few men who seemed to have a special gift for framing and administering the kind of laws the president wanted — Jim Landis, Ben Cohen, Tommie Corcoran, Jerome Frank, etc. They tell stories which indicate that Mr. Roosevelt rejected the professor's advice more often than he accepted it.

The Harvard man begged Mr. Roosevelt to "lecture" the supreme court or to accept the Schechter decision as the end of NRA. Mr. Frankfurter urged that the president submit a stronger case to the court. Mr. Frankfurter also lost out in his earlier plea that the administration dodge a court decision as long as possible. Another rebuff is in the making. Whereas the professor thinks a nation can spend itself into prosperity, the Roosevelt-Morgenthau policy contemplates a reduction of federal expenditure—if and when possible.

SMASH—The GOP is beginning to feel the need of a political pathfinder like the late Frank Hitchcock.

About this time Mr. Hitchcock used to tie up with the most promising GOP presidential candidate. With $25,000 or $50,000 in his pocket he toured the country to discover how the key politicians felt about his man. If they responded coldly, he relayed that information to important headquarters and attached himself to a more likely prospect. By a process of elimination he and important GOP-ers knew long before nominating time how their various possibilities stood in popular esteem. Frank was a political John the Baptist.

There is nobody to extend "feelings" now. Perhaps the next best pioneers are ex-Senators George Moses of New Hampshire and C. Bascom Slemph of Virginia. It is understood that several candidates are willing to retain them for this kind of service. Unless the GOP can dig up somebody to canvass the field, and help to eliminate the impossibles or undesirables, the presidential hopefuls may stage a head-on smash at the convention next June. Mr. Hoover's friends foresee such a situation.

DEVELOPMENT—Hugh Johnson made one prediction—in which, modestly we may recall, this column preceded him—which seems to be coming true. In warning industrialists against sponsorship of company unions, he declared that they were creating a monster that would harass them.

Now it develops that company unions number almost 2,000,000 employees. They are developing a class conscious and beginning to feel their power. Some groups have held regional conferences with a view to organizing on an industrial rather than a factory scale. They may yet threaten the movement for industrial versus craft unions.

The answer to this strange twist is the Labor Relations act. Under that statute company unions obtain full protection against employer-domination, as well as against A. F. of L. inroads. They can stand on their own legal feet. And some are beginning to try out their legs. The development is not altogether displeasing to New Dealers, who aren't advertising it.

NOTES — The Truck and Bus division of ICC is running into snags in formulating regulations—lots of state and local rules to be mopped up. . . . Wise guys say a plan has been found for new taxes in case processing taxes fade out. . . . The next big struggle in court involves the Guffey coal law, effective November 1. Utility-holding concerns are preparing to follow with an attack on the holding-company law. . . . "Don't be alarmed by all this talk about us lawyers working for nothing," said a Liberty league adviser.

NEW YORK.

By JAMES McMULLIN.
DISTRUST — Some unusually well-posted New York sources are beginning to get skeptical about the authenticity and permanence of recovery. Their doubts are based on reports from reliable scouts to the effect that three factors are combining to give an exaggerated picture of the upturn. One is evidence that many corporations and individuals have decided in recent months that it's better to have goods than cash in a rising market. A number of important companies have been building raw material inventories far beyond normal needs on this premise. This has increased the volume of commodity sales and stimulated prices—but obviously this type of buoyancy cannot continue indefinitely.

Then there's the fact that trainloads of cotton, copper, mules and other munitions materials in the raw have been shipped to Great Britain's order—jacking up trade activity in general and carloadings in particular. The result is a nice showing in current business statistics—but this kind of business is non-recurring and may not last very long.

Third is the question whether business high spots aren't being played up too much and low spots ignored. Private reports from all around the country tend to indicate as much. Insiders have a deep-rooted distrust of prosperity ballyhoo. They remember 1931 and 1932.

UNCERTAIN—It was the consensus of opinion at a recent meeting of industrial big-timers that the present upward trend cannot carry into next summer. The meeting was private and this conclusion—being off the record—can be taken as sincere. It presents a different prospect from rosy one in which official Washington has faith.

If leading industrialists feel this way about it chances are they will discount their judgment in advance by selling commodities and securities before they figure the letdown is due. If enough of them do so the decline which they predict as certain for the summer of '36 would more probably develop in the spring.

There is no cause for alarm but there is for discretion. Many people are taking positions on the basis that we are in the midst of a sustained boom. Astute New Yorkers see the future as uncertain enough to warrant keeping a careful eye to windward.

PHONY — The Federal Power commission's gloat about the rush of last-minute applications from utility operating company directors to serve in that capacity for more than one such corporation (as required by Section II of the new utility law) was a trifle premature. Practically all of the real big-timers in the power industry (there were only two or three exceptions) refrained from filing applications. They did so for two reasons.

One was that they were pretty sure their requests would be rejected to make a headline holiday for the Power commission—just as the Federal Communications commission refused permission to Walter Gifford to serve as a director of American Telephone subsidiaries—and they saw no point to offering themselves as sacrificial goats. Second, they contend the whole issue is phony because it doesn't make the slightest practical difference whether a holding company head is allowed to sit on his operating company boards or not. If he isn't, he simply designates substitutes (as Mr. Gifford has done) who can be trusted to carry out his wishes.

In time the wholesale refusal of top-rankers to heed this aspect of the law may bring on another constitutional test—but not for at least six months. Those who hold multiple directorships are given that long before they can be brought to book.

ABSORB—New York insiders rate the shooting of the Chinese premier the beginning of a bitter-end campaign against the close ties between the Chinese government and Japan. The Chinese government has to depend on the support of Japanese soldiers for the collection of money it needs in order to function.

But sentiment in China for the Chinese is breaking up. Educated Chinese leaders are thoroughly disillusioned with the west—whose professions of friendship have invariably been worth nothing in time of stress. They note on the other hand that Japan has learned how to deal most successfully with the west. So they figure the only way to adapt incidental progress to their own problems is by accepting Japanese leadership.

This does not imply the ultimate abandonment of Chinese nationalism. The Chinese have always swallowed up their earlier conquerors—Mansu and Mongols—in the course of time. They feel they will eventually absorb their new Japanese overlords the same way. If it takes a century or two—what of it? That would be only a momentary phase in the eternity of Chinese history.

COLLECTIONS — The Securities Exchange commission's investigation of various councils and committees for the protection of foreign bondholders is unlikely to produce any startling scandals. But it will reveal that a number of people have been making a pleasant living without too much exertion.

This doesn't imply that all members of such councils promoted them for selfish motives. Insiders say there are many high-minded idealists among them who really wanted to help the holders of defaulted bonds. These may be surprised and shocked to find themselves tarred with the charge of taking money and giving no value received in return. But others have undoubtedly gone into the "business" because it was a simple and painless way of solving personal economic problems.

New Yorkers familiar with the foreign bond situation say flatly that no protective committee has any real hope of getting results unless it can get official support from Uncle Sam. They remark that the only way most of those defaulted debts could ever be collected is with battleships and marines—and they somehow doubt that FDR would ever take the bondholders' plight enough to heart to turn the navy into a collection agency.

COMPETENT—A British moving picture magnate visiting New York tell his American friends that his industry certainly has cause to be grateful to the Nazis. "For the first time in our history we have competent movie directors—and they're Jews who have been kicked out of Germany."

"Little TVA" Along Savannah River
Goal of Proposed Federal Project

By M. L. ST. JOHN.
AUGUSTA, Ga., Nov. 7. (AP)—A "Little TVA" on the upper reaches of the Savannah river is seen as the ultimate goal of the proposed $17,500,000 development by the federal government at Clark's Hill, 21 miles above Augusta.
The proposal has been received favorably by President Roosevelt in the appointment of a commission of three to study its possibilities and report direct to him. On his commission are Col. Earl I. Brown, representing the army engineers; Roger B. McWhorter, chief engineer of the federal power commission, and Sherman M. Woodward, of the national resources committee.
The development, based upon the recommendations of the board of army engineers, has a three-point program: to make available an abundance of cheap electric power for distribution in eastern Georgia and western South Carolina; to assure a dependable year-round channel for navigation on the Savannah river between Augusta and Savannah, and to provide flood control.

Would Start at Clark's Hill.
The plan provides for the construction of a concrete gravity dam at Clark's Hill, creating a reservoir area of 52 square miles. The reservoir would extend about 37 miles up the Savannah river to the Trotter's shoal site, 32 miles up Little river, Georgia, eight miles up Little river, South Carolina, and six miles up Broad river to the foot of Anthony shoals. It would consist of the dam with spillway in the present channel and a power house immediately below the dam.

The engineers estimate that 60,000 acres of land will be required for the project, 36,000 of which will be cleared for the reservoir area. Of this acreage, a substantial part is now owned by the Georgia Power company, which is cooperating with the development plans. The land once was owned by the Savannah River Electric company, which planned a similar development project ten years ago.
Between 2,500 and 3,000 men would be employed in developing the project. The government would spend more than a million dollars in purchasing the land, and a similar amount in clearing it for the reservoir.

Levee Already Built.
The dam would be 100 feet high, and would develop about 600,000,000 kilowatt hours annually—a fifth of the current now used in Georgia. Power could be transmitted profitably into all of South Carolina, much of North Carolina, and two-thirds of Georgia, it is claimed.
To keep back flood waters, a great levee has been built at Augusta, but it must always be strengthened against the annual inroads of floods. The devastating flood of 1929 threatened to inundate the city. Damage to the Augusta area by the 1929 flood was $1,320,000, and to the city proper $480,000. The district engineer estimates the damage at Augusta by floods from 1796 to 1913, prior to the construction of the levee, at $80,000 annually. And this does not take into consideration the damage to farms in crops and livestock and the cultivated areas above and below the city.
The Savannah river development board, of which Mayor R. E. Allen, Jr., of Augusta, is chairman, has been organized to promote the development.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS
By JULIAN CAPERS, JR.
AUSTIN, Nov. 6. (AP)—Pension-seekers of Texas last week looked apprehensively toward Austin, and pondering the disturbing possibility that the legislature might furnish them with a shiny new automobile—represented by an old-age pension law—without any gasoline to run it. The "gasoline" is the tax revenue necessary to pay the pensions authorized by bills finally adopted by each house, and sent to conference for final agreement.
The house last week after a record-breaking debate of seven hours, passed the omnibus tax bill authored by Hollis Frazer and Jesse James. Nobody knows how much revenue it will raise should it be approved in the senate in its present form—which it will not be. Estimates range from $8,000,000 to $18,000,000. It would tax gas and electric utility gross receipts, telegraph and telephone companies, marble machines, cement, crude oil (1/2 cent a barrel), natural gas, sulphur (15 cents a ton), horse race bets, hotels, plane and bus fares, pipelines, tourist camps, theater tickets and many other items.

Legislative bickering and activity of lobbyists have maneuvered the pension-tax problem into a situation where the legislators may come to the close of the special session next week, faced with the choice of accepting a "selective" sales tax, tacked onto the omnibus tax bill in the senate (which is the plan of the sales-tax lobby), or of failing to make any provision for payment of old-age pensions.
Lobbyists representing every business and industry which would be taxed under the omnibus measure have joined hands with the general sales tax lobby—headed by ex-Gov. Jim Ferguson—to present this alternative to the legislators in the closing hours of the session.
They believe that public sentiment is so strong for old-age pensions that the legislators will not dare finish another session without action on the question, and that a majority, even though opposing a general sales tax, will accept a "selective" sales tax rather than face the wrath of the pension-seekers. With this enterprising wedge, they hope that eventually when Gov. Allred leaves the mansion, it will be possible to substitute a sales tax, and thus relieve the special interests of any special taxes.
The alternative is for the legislature to follow the precedent of some other states, which have passed old-age pension laws, but made no provision for paying the pension. Arizona did this three years ago, and no pensions have been paid as yet. That would probably cost many a member his seat in the legislature, when the pensionless pensioners go to the polls next July.
The whole pension performance is a fine example of unintelligent governmental procedure to which Texas has become inured. No private corporation would attempt to set up machinery for spending $10,000,000 to $20,000,000 a year for any purpose, without first making a careful study of how the money was to be raised and expended. But the legislature is attempting, in the heat of a 30-day session, during which it must deal with at least three other major subjects, to act on the pension question without even knowing how many people will be old enough to claim pensions, what they will cost, whether the patchwork tax bill will pay them, or any of the other fundamental facts essential to the intelligent action upon the matter. The only information the legislators have on the subject is that submitted by a frankly selfish lobby, or by their demagogic colleagues who want to use their support of pensions as a vote-catcher next year.
Six separate bills, each representing a different method of regulating the sale of liquor, were before both houses this week, following submission of this major controversial measure by Gov. Allred. Advocates of sale-by-the-drink, apparently beaten down in the first special session, showed renewed life with a bill to provide local option on drink sales. The whole liquor question is charged with political dynamite, and any predictions as to the outcome would be only wild guesses. Though warned by the governor that inaction is costing $10,000 a day in taxes, the legislature may fail again to reach any agreement at all. The three warring schools of thought include the sale-by-the-drink-under-local-option group, led by Houston's Emmett Morse in the house and Weaver Moore in the senate; the unbroken-package-licensed-dealer group headed by Bryan Bradbury and Alfred Petsch in the house and

Crop Rotation Helps
Yield of Ensilage

WINSLOW, Ariz., Nov. 7. (AP)—Important results of crop rotation in the raising of ensilage have been obtained by two northern Arizona farmers. C. A. LaPrade of Winslow reports 16 tons of silage per acre have been raised on his farm from corn on alfalfa land as compared with 11 tons from corn on land cropped to corn three years in succession.
N. D. Kartchner of Linden has found that corn in rotation with beans yield 12 tons of silage per acre compared with nine tons from corn following corn under dry farming conditions this season.
The slaves employed to carry off the bodies of slain gladiators from Roman arenas wore masks representing the Etruscan Charon.

Will the Loboes Come Out of the Cellar In Armistice Clash?

GAME RECALLS MEMORABLE 1930 CONTEST

It has been a mighty long time since the Cisco Loboes gained a football victory over the Ranger Bulldogs. It was back in 1930 that an underdog Cisco eleven took the field on a damp afternoon and upset this particular part of the football world with a 3 to 0 victory over the invaders, and thus prevented the canines from taking the district championship which they would have won by their equally unexpected victory over the Breckenridge Buckaroos and Boone Magness.

That victory, gained by a stout Cisco defense that kept the Bulldogs bottled up all afternoon and the right good toe of Roy Chamberliss, sent the Cisco team into a tie with the Buckaroos and brought about a play-off between the two elevens on Chesley field. It was a sweet bit of triumph, because it was gained by a psychological success rather than any particular football prowess, and it atoned in some measure for the disaster that resulted at the season's outset when what appeared the finest high school team in the state was wrecked, body and soul, by successful eligibility charges against the two offensive stars of Coach W. B. Chapman's last Lobo eleven.

Unhappy Episode

That experience, which so shattered the Cisco eleven that the Breckenridge team swamped them a few days later, was the beginning of an episode of resentment whose vicious effects still linger in Oil Belt football. It had its climax in suspension of Cisco from the Interscholastic league for one year. No team in the district escaped the influence of that unfortunate thing. It wrecked the Cisco team and ruined the healthful rivalry that has made Oil Belt football so respected throughout the state. Season after season, Cisco has been endeavoring to come back from that experience and to present again the strong football front that it once did.

It may be able to do so, but it is proving a long, hard road. The experience has done one thing—it has stopped the annual epidemic of unreasonable "committee room" charges and campaigns against teams whose rivals could not defeat them on the field, and has returned the game to the sportsmanship and skill of the gridiron rather than the smoke and jealousy-begotten committee rooms wherein the moguls of the district gathered to joust for a victory before the teams had a chance to determine who was the better. The game has returned to the boys, at least.

Sweetened Bitterness

The Cisco victory over Ranger was, therefore, something of a sauce to sweeten a season of bitter disappointment at the end. It did not matter that the Magness crew won the play-off by a considerably less score than its earlier victory. It mattered that the Cisco team demonstrated that it could come back against odds that made the return almost heroic. There were tears in honest eyes as the Cisco supporters and those who had worked with such earnestness to gain that victory left the field.

The present Cisco team has a chance Monday afternoon to repeat that history. It is on the come-back trail now. Obviously it has no other chance to win a victory over an oil belt rival. Ahead of it will be only the Abilene Eagles, who surely they cannot expect to defeat. Ranger, with an improving team, offers the only chance for the Loboes to come out of the cellar.

Will they do it?

A telephoned order asked Routsos, cafe operator, to send over three dinners and change for a $10 bill. A negro woman was waiting on the front steps of the residence. She took the change and the dinners and said she would be right back with the bill. She went around the house—and she hasn't come back yet.

It measures six feet in diameter and a bull hide covers each side. The company which made it told the school the drum was the largest on record. It will be featured at football games.

SPORT SLANTS

By PAP

It took the combined efforts of Promoter Mike Jacobs and the Madison Square Garden folks to dig up Paulino Uzcudun, the battered Basque wood-chopper, as an opponent for Joe Louis. No doubt they feel proud of their achievement. They should. After all, they had to go all the way to Europe to resurrect the 36-year-old trial horse.

It is all well and good for Mike Jacobs to pattern his promotional ventures after the one and only Tex Rickard, but it does seem that he is carrying that practice a bit too far when he brings Paulino over again to "test" the Brown Bomber. Ten years ago Tex imported the wood-chopper to give an international flavor to the heavyweight elimination tournament he was staging.

Paulino's Tough

A lot of water has flown under Brooklyn Bridge since that time and Paulino has absorbed a lot of beating. He has taken 'em all on and most of them have taken him. True he has never been counted out, or even put on the floor by an opponent's punch. He is rugged, no denying that. It is doubtful if a tougher fighter ever drew on red leather gloves. But that is about all he has to recommend him as an opponent for Joe Louis, the man who has been acclaimed by many as the greatest heavyweight in the history of the ring.

Paulino in the course of his travels in this country did, by means of his aggressive, mauling style, earn decisions over Max Baer, Knute Hansen, Tom Heeney, Otto Von Porat, Pierre Charles and Jack Renault. His record shows that he knocked out Phil Scott in 1926 and Harry Wills in 1927. But that only indicates how bad they must have been.

Primo Carnera, Johnny Risko, Max Schmeling, Tommy Loughran, Mickey Walker, Ernie Schaaf and King Levinsky took his measure in decision bouts. Schmeling won a 12-round decision over him last July in Berlin.

There is nothing in Paulino's record to indicate that he is at all likely to upset all the plans Mike Jacobs has laid for his pride and joy, Joe Louis.

Target For Louis

On the contrary, Punchless Paulino is just the type to permit the Brown Bomber to open up his heavy artillery at the first bell without the slightest fear of leaving himself open for a damaging punch. Paulino couldn't hurt him.

Joe Louis, or any puncher for that matter, always looks his best when he knows the other fellow is not likely to tear his head off with a counter-punch. The main reason Louis looked so good against Levinsky and Baer was because in both cases he faced men who were too frightened to let go a real punch.

After all one can hardly blame Mike Jacobs and Madison Square Garden for protecting their own interests and if the folks want to shell out their hard-earned shekels to see Joe Louis put the battered Basque on the floor for the first time, that's up to them. Mike Jacobs seems to think that is what they want and up to the present time Promoter Mike has not been wrong.

Jacobs has scaled the prices so that a capacity house will gross in the neighborhood of $160,000. And Jacobs is confident that when the men square off early in December it will be before a capacity house.

HIGH COURAGE

by Jeanne Bowman

SYNOPSIS: Anne Farnsworth loses parents, fortune and fiancée in one grand catastrophe when Luke and Lucinda Farnsworth die without having formally adopted her. Her relatives drive her from home, and she takes refuge with Tecla Soriki in Union Town, the Finnish settlement near Astoria.

... wonderful it seems to have someone actually want you? She waited a moment, then went on. "You can't, because everyone wants you, always."

Chapter 23. THE JUDGE WRITES. Anne quickly slit open the envelope, and read the closely typed pages Ansel Kellogg had written:

"Dear little Anne: You may have been by the papers that the big bad wolves are eating out of Uncle Ansel's hand. You see, my dear, they aroused my anger. A good thing. My system needed stirring up. I feel ten years younger since that talking down match with Mrs. Farnsworth. I won. I dare say I established a record. Poor Lee stood by tongue-tide, providing he has a tongue, and marveled at me.

... "Your clothes and other things will be delivered with this letter, and I have a check for nine hundred dollars which I will send you as soon as I hear from you. This was the best Harney and I could do.

"I'm glad you've found such a haven. I remember meeting Tecla Soriki, when you were little. I'm sure Luke and Lucinda trusted her implicitly.

"Anne, I listened to the reading of the will and I'm more than ever convinced that Luke had deep-laid plan. There is little to tell you that you don't all ready know. The house was left as I said, salaries were raised somewhat in the case of Lee, Tom and Crocker. Your allowance was stipulated. Everything else, insurance, dividends from the fisheries and other interests, was to be turned back to the general estate to be held as such for a period of five years. At that time, it is to be distributed "among my kinfolk," according to instructions to be made public at that time.

"Miss Nikki—" John Neuman, rounded the corner of the house, brow furrowed, eyes troubled. He sat beside her at her invitation. "I'm afraid in our selfish eagerness to have you with us, we're forcing you to do something you may regret.

"Perhaps you'd better wait to make your final decision. Suppose, forgive me for this, but suppose Mr. Crocker returned and realized what he was losing and came down for you, because, you know, if he loves you so . . . as a man should love the woman he asks to marry him, he'll find you. And then—"

"Then what?" asked Anne. "Then you'll want to go back." "No," Anne shook her head, "no I couldn't go back. In the first place, Rob was in love with Anne Farnsworth and there is no Anne Farnsworth. He loved a position, not a girl. In the second place I could never feel the same. I'd never be sure of having someone to depend upon. I'd never know how he would act in a crisis.

"As for the selfishness of Liisa. You know," she turned confidently, "I'm wondering if half this longing for a home Liisa speaks about isn't a desire to give me something to occupy my mind. "And can't you realize how acteristic manner. "Putting it that way, we accept. Lunbeck has a new glnetter. It isn't painted yet, nor the license taken. If we buy it at once," his somber face brightened at the idea, "then we will be ready for the spring run." When she went to her room that night, Tecla followed, hovering over her like an apprehensive mother hen.

... "Did I mention that I had re-

After she had left, Anne slipped from her bed, drew the one chair to the window and looked down on Union Town, out on the water sparkling now with tinkling net buoy lights which rode the waves like fireflies. Drifting along behind one cluster were the Soriki brothers, and behind another, John Numan, back at work on his brothers' boat. (Copyright, 1935, by Jeanne Bowman.)

Anne has, tomorrow, a strong hint of trouble.
