Adjournment of Congress

Congress finally got around to adjournment last night, but when the clock struck midnight and John Garner's gavel fell, Huey Long was still talking.

The Kingfish had talked and read from the Congressional Record for five and a half hours, while administration leaders charged him with deliberately killing the third deficiency bill that would have provided funds for the aged and crippled. In all, Senator Long talked to death $100,000,000 worth of funds to start the social security program, for the neutrality arms embargo, the national labor board, the utilities and Guffey coal bills, and other important measures.

Congress has worked hard and long at this session. Undoubtedly the members were tired and wanted to go home. Undoubtedly their nerves were frayed with such proceedings as those last night, when a member arose and with all the false dignity and the buffoonery which accompanies such an action, talked to hear his own voice and read the Congressional Record for lack of something more interesting to the members. All that—clowning at the taxpayers' expense when there is important work to be done—smacks of a lack of something or other in the government.

It is a shame to have a body of men, even if they had no interests but their own to think of, spend this much time on legislation and then have one of their members talk them out of the power to put that legislation in effect.

Congress has worked hard, and most of the members undoubtedly have had something other than a campaign for the presidency or putting on a show for the galleries, on their minds. Much good has come out of the session, although there have been times when the members and the president could not agree upon legislation.

The congressmen will go home and talk it over with the constituents. When they come back, they undoubtedly will be in better shape to work out the program they started at this session, Kingfish or no Kingfish.

Brazos Sponsors Move On

Texas, by constitutional amendment, has provided for the development of its water resources. Lack of water when needed, and too much water in flood-times, have caused tremendous damage and losses and probably has withheld more money value from Texas land and property than remained in it.

Now, backed up by legislative act to give the Brazos district state taxes too further a conservation program, leaders of this development are well along the way toward success in their plans to finance and build 13 control dams in the watershed.

The Brazos district has been in existence several years. Its board has been functioning. It further has had the warm cooperation in Texas of Commissioner John A. Norris of the state board of water engineers, and in Washington of Senators Morris Sheppard and Tom Connally and many members of the Texas delegation.

The Brazos district now awaits approval of the works progress administration of a wisely-drawn program to put

Behind the Scenes in Washington

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fifth of a special series of stories showing exactly how lobbying works and tinges all the government at Washington.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON—The romance of the sea, the honor of the navy, and the officer-and-gentleman tradition of the army have all suffered through contacts with the Washington lobby.

The army and navy are two of the biggest governmental contractors in the world and the various American merchant marine policies have kept a standing corps of lawyers and lobbyists for ship operating and building companies in the job.

In the name of the merchant marine and the American flag upon the seas, lobbyists have been collecting fat fees ever since the war as they got ships from the government and wangled juicy contracts, subsidies and legislation which meant huge profits for certain individuals. Now they're massing against proposals to clean up the mess and prevent further scandals by creating a government-owned, government-operated merchant marine.

SHIPBUILDING lobbyists, allied with agents for naval suppliers and sub-contractors in a combination representing several billion dollars and connected with the biggest bankers, have lobbied for Big Navy bills, against disarmament efforts, against limitation of profits on warships or construction in navy yards, and for virtual monopoly of naval building among the Big Three—the Bethlehem, New York, and Newport News shipbuilding companies. Ship lobbyists try hard to see that their friends are appointed to the naval affairs and merchant marine committees of Congress. Usually they succeed.

BUSINESS pressures on the navy in connection with its specifications for the many things it buys are constant, which means a constant warfare between lobbyists here. F. Russell Bichowsky, former navy scientist, writes in "Is the Navy Ready?" that the navy is sold its material by "high-pressure" salesmanship.

Absolving officers from taking bribes, he suggests that "a good party" will attain the same end, plus realization that young naval officers may be able to make valuable contacts with large manufacturing concerns which they can use after leaving the service. Bichowsky says this results in too many "gadgets" for ships, inferior quality for naval materials, and rapidly increasing ship costs. "Bass Drum" Shearer, sometimes credited with breaking up the Geneva naval conference while working for shipbuilders, and who takes credit for a $740,000,000 naval program, still gets along well with the admirals and says they once, at any rate, used him for propaganda campaigns.

THE army also "buys" a lot of staff. It was the field of Joe Silverman, who says he spent most of $500,000 on "liquor, flowers, and gambling with army officers." Joe's game was buying up surplus war supplies cheap and he made millions at it. Joe Silverman was always a chubby, ingratiating business man who had a monopoly on surplus supplies and more friends in the War Department than anyone else outside. He called generals and officials by their first name. He also has pull on Capitol Hill. Senators Copeland, Barbour, and Reynolds once wrote the War Department on his behalf. Mongols Seeking To Return to Asia

HARBIN, Aug. 27. — "Return to Asia." Such is the cry of the 50,000 descendants of the Kalmuck tribe of Mongols, who now reside along the banks of the Volga and elsewhere, according to a letter received from the chief of the tribe by the White Russian leader in Harbin.

The letter states that "racial discrimination in European countries has of late become tremendously accentuated, and we are constantly being oppressed and suffering outrages."

Assured of protection by Emperor Vassily Shousky, a Kalmuck tribe of 55,000 first migrated to Russia in 1603. They settled along the banks of the Volga, and in 1771 their numbers had increased to 165,000.

Since that year, however, many of them have returned to Mongolia. Many settled in Sinkiang Province. Some 50,000 were scattered from the Volga districts throughout Russia. The present number in that country is estimated at about 200,000.

Before the revolution most of them were with the Cossacks or employed in the Czarist army. Immediately following the foundation of the Soviet regime they rallied under the White Russian forces in command of General Wrangel.

Today they are sharing the fate of other White Russians and are to be found in all parts of Europe. Some of these are farmers in Yugoslavia, France and Rumania. They are devout Buddhists and some time ago they built a Buddhist temple in Belgrade. Manchukuo has land and to spare, and according to the chief of the White Russians in Harbin, it is more than likely that the Hsinking government will permit them entry to the country.

Trial Ordered For Dog-Killing Girl

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27. — Because she killed a dog which allegedly attempted to bite a 4-year-old child, Miss Ayada Rucker, nursemaid, must stand trial on a charge of cruelty to animals.

Miss Rucker, in a preliminary hearing, admitted she had killed a 2-year-old wire-terrier with a golf club.

According to the maid, the dog had bitten her young charge, Haskell Norwood, last spring. Recently the dog again sprang at the child and herself. Miss Rucker ran into the Norwood home, got a golf club and struck the dog several times, driving it away. Later the dog died.

The owner of the dog, Mrs. Agnes Moore, swore out a warrant and Miss Rucker was arrested on the cruelty charge. Mrs. Moore denied that her dog was vicious and said it had not attacked the child.

Opening of Nazis' New Drive on Jews

This was the scene as thousands jammed the vast Sportplatz in Berlin for the opening of a new campaign against Jews of the Reich Julius Streicher (indicated by arrow), foremost Nazi Jew-batter, ex-coriated them in a bitter address while in the background a long banner read: "The Jew conquers with lies and dies with truth."

End of Jingoism In Japan Is Seen

HONOLULU, Aug. 27. — Militarists are slipping in power in Japan, Francis S. Harmon, international secretary of the YMCA, said here following a five months' tour of the Orient.

Harmon held that due to the restraining influence of the so-called "Palace Clique" plus the pressure of economics, "within two or three years the militaristic leaders of Japan will be relegated to much less importance."

"Two bitterly opposed forces are at the helm in Japan," Harmon said. "The one civil and the other military. It is because of the latter force that we today get our picture of a militantly aggressive Japan. It was they who were responsible for invasion of Manchuria and dominance in North China."

Harmon said the Palace Clique, comprised of statesmen who have the confidence of the Emperor "are gradually lining up the public against the militarists by pointing out to them the cost of militarism, for which 40 per cent of the budget went last year. Within two or three years Japan will begin to stagger under the burden of deficit bonds issued to meet militaristic expenditures and then will come the call to halt."

Harmon scored charges that America's silver policy was causing China's financial ruin. "This report is one I believe greatly exaggerated," he said. "I think it has been made by persons who have confused cause and effect."

"China, and especially Shanghai, did not feel the depression in 1929 as the rest of the world did. Six months ago her real estate boom began to burst and her banks began to fail, but I don't think it was the result of America's silver policy. She is feeling now what all the world felt five and six years ago."

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JO DARIEN breaks her engagement to BOLESON. She is a college athletic star, because she objects to her taking a job as hostess at Crest Lake. She is a friend of FRAGONET, film actor, says JO marked attention and asks her to marry him. FRAGONET promises to get a divorce. JO becomes friendly with LOLA MONTEZ, film actress.

Prompted by his mother, Marsh asks JO to leave Crest Lake. She looks for a job, and finds there with FRAGONET. Later she begins to doubt FRAGONET's promises, and moves to a rooming house where he cannot find her.

Lola Montez sets JO a job in a sandwich shop. FRAGONET comes there and, to get rid of him, JO agrees to marry him. FRAGONET comes first, then Peter. JO turns on the film actor, says she doesn't want him, and he can't get a divorce. JO gives up her job at the sandwich shop.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLIV

WHEN Maisie had gone JO sat dully on the edge of the bed, trying to pull her scattered thoughts together. Was there any corner of Hollywood where she might find a new job and be safe from the vitriolic hatred of Edna Fragonet? And if there was such a refuge how would she find it?

Her first thought was of Lolita Montez. She knew that the actress would be willing to help her, even a second time. But JO knew, too, what Lolita's advice would be. "Get out of Hollywood," Lolita would say. "Get as far away from Fragonet as you can."

Stubbornly JO held out against such an idea. She was more determined than ever to stay. "I've been fool enough to come here," she told herself, "and now I'll make a go of it . . . some way."

The resolve was easier than its culmination. As Maisie herself admitted, the salary at the sandwich shop had been little enough. And JO had imprudently gone from week to week assuming, as most of us are prone to assume, that once good fortune comes it will make an indefinite stay.

She was still sitting there on the edge of the bed when her landlady knocked at the door with her familiar one-two tapping. At JO's invitation she entered the room, showing her surprise that her tenant was yet dressed for work.

"Not feeling well, Miss Darien?" she asked. "I'm feeling all right," JO said. "But—I'm afraid I'll have to move back into that smaller room. You see, I've lost my job."

The good woman granted sympathetically. "After all that commotion in the front parlor last night," she said, "I knew something was going to happen. But here . . ." she held out to JO a telegram. "Maybe somebody's wiring you money."

JO's first thought was not so optimistic. Imagining frantically that something was wrong at home, she almost snatched at the envelope. Tearing both envelope and message in her haste, she unfolded the telegram and read:

JO DARIEN
4338 ENDHILL AVENUE
HOLLYWOOD, CALIFORNIA
BRET PAUL DANGEROUSLY ILL AND ASKING FOR YOU. IMPERATIVE YOU TAKE PLANE FOR CREST LAKE AT ONCE.
DOUGLAS MARSH.

JO shuddered. Fragonet would help her gladly. He would willingly show how generous he could be, helping her to go to Bret Paul. It was a role the actor in him would relish. "I won't, though," JO told herself. "I won't go to him!"

But suppose she had to go to him? There was barely time now

JO let the telegram flutter to the floor from nerveless fingers. She looked at her landlady wildly. "I've got to leave," she said. "Someone ill?"

JO nodded. "Yes. I have to take a plane." She stopped. "I'm afraid I haven't money enough to buy an airline ticket."

"You're paid up until the end of the week," the woman told her. "I can give you a $4 refund if that's any help."

"Maybe it will be," JO said, dragging her bag from the closet shelf. "Would you telephone and find out what a ticket to Crestmont costs?" She raised her head from the open bag where she had flung her slippers and dressing gown. "Please hurry, won't you? There may be a plane I can catch this morning."

The driver nodded dubiously, but increased his speed and headed straight for the roadway into the forbidden Atlas lot. The gateman poked out his head angrily, jerked it back again as the taxi whizzed by.

"Stay right here," JO ordered when the taxi pulled up in front of the low white building. "If anyone orders you out, tell them you're waiting for Mr. Boleson."

JO rushed straight through the hallway and into the familiar ante-room, where she encountered the brisk young woman who was Boleson's secretary.

"I'm Miss Darien," JO told her breathlessly. "I must see Mr. Boleson right away."

"But I'm afraid you'll have to have an appointment—" "Will you tell him I'm here?" asked JO, stepping forward. "Or shall I just go right in?"

"I'll tell him you're here," the girl said. She reappeared almost at once and nodded half-fearfully at JO. "He'll see you, Miss Darien."

Boleson was smiling quizzically when JO entered the room. "Good morning, Miss Darien! Something I can do?"

"Yes, there is. You—you blated once that it would be worth something to you to keep me away from Fragonet."

Boleson raised his eyebrows. "I see," he said slowly, ironically. "You've been thinking it over and decided to—cash in, eh?" He sat down abruptly. "How much?"

"I want just $50, Mr. Boleson. And only as a loan!" His look was one of startled incredulity. And then he threw back his head and laughed.

"Please, Mr. Boleson—I'm in a terrible hurry. I have to catch a plane at noon." Still laughing, Boleson reached into his pocket and extracted a $50 bill from his wallet. "There you are—and forget the loan idea. It's worth $50 any day to run across a kid like you. I hope you come out on top."

"I—thanks, Mr. Boleson. But I'll pay it back," JO turned and bolted through the doorway, past the startled secretary. To her great relief, the taxi driver had not only stood by valiantly, but had possessed the presence of mind to turn the cab around toward the gate. He had the car in motion almost before JO sank into the seat.

SISTER MARY'S RECIPES

BY MARY E. DAGUE

NEA Service Staff Writer Do your friends just drop in about supper time Sundays? Ours do, and we enjoy them almost more than the ones we invite days ahead, because entertaining them is delightfully informal, even to having them stay for supper. If we have a cake in the house, well and good. If not, we serve ice cream on hot waffles and nobody misses or wants the cake, of course. These waffles I make differently than for breakfast.

Dessert Waffles

Two and one-half cups cake flour, 2-1/2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon sugar, 2 eggs, 1-1/2 cups milk, 2-3 cup melted butter. Beat whites and yolks of eggs separately. Beat yolks until thick and lemon colored. Sift flour once and measure. Mix and sift flour, salt and baking powder. Add beaten egg yolks, milk and melted butter and stir until smooth. Fold in whites of eggs beaten until stiff and dry on a platter with a wire whisk. Bake in a hot waffle iron. Serve with a mound of ice cream and sweetened fruit or other sauce. Fresh peach sauce is good. To make it, allow one peach for each person to be served. Peel and cut in thin slices, dropping in sugar as you slice them. This prevents them from discoloring too rapidly. Be sure each slice is well coated with sugar. Cover and let stand half an hour. They will be deliciously syrupy when you want to serve them. Berries always make a nice sauce, too. Crush them in sugar and let stand fifteen or twenty minutes before serving. Jellied meat salads keep well.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Sliced peaches, cereal, cream, sauted eggplant, graham muffins, milk, coffee. LUNCHEON: Hot bouillon, salad of stuffed eggs and endive, waffles with ice cream and crushed berries, milk, tea. DINNER: Broiled fresh salmon steaks, shadow potatoes, creamed kohlrabi, onion and orange salad, elderberry pie, milk, coffee.

Jellied Ham Salad

Two cups finely chopped cold boiled ham, 1-1/2 tablespoons granulated gelatin, 4 chicken bouillon cubes, 3 cups boiling water, 1 teaspoon made mustard, 1-2 cup whipping cream, few grains cayenne pepper. Soften gelatin in cold water for five minutes. Dissolve bouillon cubes in boiling water and add softened gelatin. Stir until dissolved. Let stand until cool and beginning to thicken. Whip cream until firm and fold in ham, mustard and pepper. Fold into gelatin and turn into individual molds. Let stand on ice for several hours to chill and become firm. Unmold on lettuce and garnish with mayonnaise. A cheese tray with its accompanying crackers, several kinds of breads and rolls and a relish tray complete an easily prepared menu for Sunday night supper. It depends on the weather whether you serve an iced or a hot beverage, although hot coffee always is acceptable when the rest of the meal is cold.

Claims Dove Law In Panhandle Unjust

AMARILLO, Aug. 27. — Climatic conditions which cause mourning doves to leave the Panhandle, and go south before October 1 make the present regulations on dove hunting unjust, Panhandle sportsmen told Jay N. Darling, federal game head, in a telegram today. The message, sent after an indignation meeting of Panhandle hunters, asked that the season in this territory include September, as the state game laws allow, instead of beginning on October 1, as at present. "The present regulations are the biggest example of game law idocy I ever saw," Gene Howe, Amarillo publisher said. He pointed out that present regulations are doing more to set back game conservation than any other one thing. Petitions for presentation to government officials in the game department are being circulated throughout this region, protesting present game laws.

Girl, 18, Is Expert Parachute Picker

DEROIT, Aug. 27—Eighteen-year-old Kathleen RHowe proudly exhibits a new Department of Commerce parachute rigger's license to prove she is the only woman parachute packer in Michigan and one of three in the United States.

Several years ago Kathleen's parents moved near the Detroit City Airport and she became interested in planes. Later she transferred her interest to 'chute and now is as proficient as the best of them in packing the great silken canopies into a tiny pack of a bag. For two years Kathleen packed 'chutes under the capable direction of Stanley Prescott, packer at the airport. She became so good at the job that United States Air Commerce Inspector M. J. Perrin decided to give her a test. She passed and was granted a license. She has one ambition, she says. She wants to jump from a plane sometime to see how it feels to float down with a 'chute—and, she adds, she'll pack her own 'chute when she does it.
