Predict National Police Force for United States Within Next Five Years

Associated Press.
Detroit, June 7.—President Joseph M. Quigley predicted here today that in five years the United States will have a national police force to take the work of crime detection from the hands of municipal authorities. He was speaking before the seventh annual convention of the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

PREDICTING DEADLOCK G. O. P. CONVENTION

Less Than One-Fourth of Delegates are Instructed or Committed.

CHICAGO, June 7.—It is apparent that developments in the preliminaries for the republican national convention, which begins at noon tomorrow, has a tendency today to further belound instead of clarify the question of who will be nominated for the presidency.

Claims by Wood, Johnson and Lowden amount to little, in view of the fact that less than one-fourth of the delegates are instructed or committed.

Prospects of a deadlock are becoming better hourly. Favorite sons and dark horses are increasing their activity.

The platform is rapidly beginning to take form. The league of nations contest is promising a bitter fight, which may reach the convention floor.

G. O. P. Convention Held Sixty Years Ago

CHICAGO, June 7.—At the first republican national convention held in Chicago 60 years ago:

An Iowa delegate walked 150 miles to get to a railroad to come to the convention.

Special railroad rates were made and Chicago's population probably doubled in convention week.

Hotel rooms were $1.50 to $2.50 a day. Crowds were so large that billiard tables in the hotels were pressed into service as beds.

The "Wigwam" in which the convention was held was probably about the size of the annex to the coliseum in which this year's convention takes place.

The Wigwam's profuse decoration was largely furnished by the republican women of Chicago. They were invited to come "armed and equipped with those formidable weapons, needles, thimbles, scissors, etc."

When a special train pulled in with the Massachusetts and other New England delegates, rockets were sent up and a cannon boomed to announce their arrival to waiting friends.

The gallery in the convention hall was reserved for women and their escorts. Because of the great number of men unable to get in, one man was reported trying to get into the gallery with an Indian squaw selling moose skins as his credentials, but was excluded on the ground that she was no lady.

The two chief nominating speeches were made in less than 30 words. Abraham Lincoln was placed in nomination in 26 words.

The making of the presidential nomination was announced to the city by the firing of a cannon placed on the roof of the convention hall.

That night cannon and rockets were fired, bonfires lighted, and multitudinous parades formed, their participants carrying anything that would serve—even to rakes and fishing poles.

The foregoing data was obtained from the library of the Chicago Historical Society, which has various relics of the convention and the campaign that followed.

TEXAS IS NOW NATIVE STATE NINTH U. S. INF.

IS EXPECTED TO RECRUIT PERSONNEL ENTIRELY FROM LONE STAR STATE

Associated Press.
CAMP TRAVIS, Texas, June 7.—The ninth United States Infantry, now stationed here, has been allotted Texas as its native state by the War department, and under the present plans of the department is expected to recruit its personnel entirely from the Lone Star State. The fact that the ninth infantry was stationed in Texas at various places on the Mexican border prior to the world war is regarded as one reason why Texas was allotted the regiment as its "native heath."

The ninth infantry's record in the world war is a fine one. As part of the second division, the regiment first went under fire in March, 1918, when it took over from the French a "quiet sector," which soon became a very active sector. The Germans, knowing American troops had come into the front line, welcomed them with heavy artillery fire, and soon attempted a surprise attack. More than 500 Germans attacked at night, and at first succeeded in breaking through the American lines. The ninth infantry, however, came back strong, and drove the Germans out with losses of more than twice as great as the raiding party had inflicted.

The regiment's first heavy fighting came when it was ordered to Chateau Thierry district early in June, 1918. At toward Paris was in full swing, and many believed it would succeed. American troops, however, stopped the German advance in the Chateau Thierry district, and the ninth infantry took an active part in this resistance. After about five weeks of fighting, a series of engagements of varying size and importance, the regiment was relieved July 10. It had lost 740 men killed, wounded or missing, and expected to be sent to a rest area for some weeks.

A week later, however, the ninth was again ordered to the front, and by a forced night march through rain and mud, reached the vicinity of Soissons in time to go into action at dawn. In two days of extremely heavy fighting, the ninth infantry was entirely successful in driving back the Germans and taking the objectives assigned to it. It paid dear, however, for its losses totaled 1353, or more than one man out of every three. For its work at Soissons the regiment was awarded the Croix de Guerre with gold star, which now adorns its regimental colors.

After a few weeks in a rest area, spent drilling recruits sent to replace its losses, the ninth infantry took part in the St. Mihiel drive, where it captured 1500 prisoners and a large number of cannon, locomotives, motor vehicles, and machine guns.

From St. Mihiel, with little time to rest, the regiment was sent to Blanc Mont in the Champagne district of France, where it was again victorious, with heavy losses. Thence it went into the Argonne fighting.

At one time the regiment advanced so far and so fast that there were Germans not only in front of it, but on both sides and behind.

When the fighting ended with the signing of the armistice, the regiment had lost since March more than its complete quota of men and officers in killed, wounded and missing; 584 killed, 3735 wounded and 191 missing. Hardly a man or officer of the original membership of the regiment had escaped unscathed.

OFFICERS TAKE BOOZE IN RAID HOTEL ROOMS

THIRTEEN PINTS BONDED WHISKEY IN POSSESSION POLICE CHIEF.

TWO MEN UNDER BOND

Officers Demanded Pass Key of Clerk and Made Systematic Search Different Rooms.

Thirteen pints of bonded whiskey are locked in the desk of Chief of Police Wiley C. Hittson, and two men are awaiting the action of the grand jury under $1,000 bonds, as the result of a raid early Sunday morning on a west side hotel by a squad of police officers and two deputy sheriffs, under Assistant Chief of Police J. T. Stamps.

Three men alleged to have been in a slightly intoxicated condition and who are said to have come from the hotel, led to the investigation which terminated in the raid.

The men arrested were strangers here. They say they are in the oil business.

The raiding squad was composed of Police Officers William Grimsinger, George Carmichael, J. W. Turner, Norman Lee, and two deputy sheriffs.

They proceeded to the hotel about 11:30 Saturday evening and emerged with the liquor shortly after two o'clock in the morning.

Assistant Chief Stamps stationed one man at the front door of the hostelry with orders to let no suspicious character pass. A second officer was stationed at the telephone at the desk with instructions to intercept all calls in or out of the building.

Demanding a pass key of the night clerk, the remainder of the squad undertook the search of the hotel. The raiding party was divided into groups of two men each.

According to the police, every door of the hotel was opened in succession, and a minute search of closets, bureau drawers and baggage of all kinds made. From twenty-five to thirty empty pint bottles were found distributed about various rooms, but no trace of liquor could be discovered until the search was about concluded.

Here they found a door locked from the inside with the key in the lock. The next door was unlocked. Entering, they found a man lying on the bed smoking and reading. A door in this room led through a bathroom into the locked room. The man was put under surveillance while the locked room was searched. The thirteen pints of liquor were found in a suit case and a hand grip among clothing, according to the police.

The man under surveillance claimed that he had no connection with the baggage in which the liquor is alleged to have been found, despite the fact, the officers declare, that letters addressed to him were found between the bottles. Both men were arrested when the occupant of the locked room appeared upon the scene shortly afterward.

WHITE BABY FOUND IN NEGRO QUARTERS MAY BE LOST CHILD

Associated Press.
DALLAS, Texas, June 7.—Police here today expressed the belief that the white baby found in the home of negroes Saturday is Blakely Coughlin, stolen from his parents' home in Norris town, Pa., last Wednesday. The child meets the descriptions received here by telegraph.

The police are waiting for the picture mailed to them yesterday, and upon its arrival will compare it with the baby. The negroes detained has told many conflicting stories as to how she obtained the child.

HOLD PROHIBITION AMENDMENT TO BE CONSTITUTIONAL

Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—The prohibition amendment was held constitutional today by the supreme court of the United States. The enforcement act was also held constitutional.

The court's opinion is very brief, setting forth only the court's conclusions.

Chief Justice White rendered a supplementary opinion, concurring with Justice Van Devanter. Associate Justice Kenna, in another opinion, said: "The court declares conclusions only without giving reasons for them. I must at least be excused if I cannot justify my dissenting opinion."

Justice McReynolds, while not dissenting, said he conformed his "conclusions to the fact that it is impossible to say what construction should be placed on the eighteenth amendment."

The opinion holding the prohibition amendment and the enforcement act constitutional was rendered by Associate Justice Van Devanter.

The court dismissed the petition of Rhode Island to have federal officers enjoined from enforcing prohibition in that state; also dismissed the injunction proceedings brought by New Jersey to prevent the enforcement of prohibition within that state.

A number of other prohibition proceedings were dismissed.

BAGFUL PENNIES USED BY MEXICAN TO PAY HIS FINE

In fining a Mexican yesterday Justice of the Peace Z. M. Taylor was compelled to take part of the money in a bagful of pennies weighing seven pounds.

There were 990 coppers. It took Taylor and police officer William Grimsinger ten minutes to count them. A local bank accepted their count. The total fine was $78.46. The offenses charged were wife beating and rudely displaying a gun.

Taylor took the man of an eastbound train Saturday as he was attempting to escape after beating his wife into a state of unconsciousness it is alleged.

Cisco's New Boating and Bathing Resort Drew Crowd Sunday

Lake Dothan, the new boating and bathing resort, six miles west of Cisco, opened up most auspiciously Sunday, says J. R. Cumbly, the manager.

Many automobile parties from the city were there—some just picnicking, some boating, some bathing, and some fishing. Some of the anglers captured prize strings of fish, said Mr. Cumbly; and all parties had a real recreation outing.

Mr. Cumbly was in Monday morning for lumber to erect a high diving tower at the bathing house, and contemplates other improvements at this resort that now promises to be very popular this summer.

Work of Removing Unsightly Awnings Begins on Avenue D

The upper balcony of the Hartman hotel which protruded over the sidewalk on Math street was wrecked today, together with the wooden awning of that hostelry and the steel awnings of the Nunn Electric company, the Quick Service Cafe and the American National Bank.

That section of Main street now presents a far better appearance. Some are realizing for the first time that the Hartman hotel is a good brick building, and not frame.

GOVERNOR HOBBY SAYS MARTIAL LAW WAS WARRANTED

Estimated 5,000 Troops Will Be In Gulf City Tomorrow Afternoon—Welfare and Rights of Property Owners and Citizens and Upholding of State Constitution Basis of Proclamation.

Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, June 7.—Galveston was placed under martial law today, becoming effective at noon, in a proclamation issued by Governor Hobby. Brigadier General Wolters was directed to assume supreme command in the territory affected, subject to orders of the governor.

The governor's action followed a telephone conference with Adjutant General Cope, in which the latter said conditions at Galveston warranted the military rule. The adjutant general's department stated that it was expected to have 5,000 troops in Galveston by tonight, with possibly another thousand tomorrow morning.

The governor's proclamation said that the conditions in Galveston had "reached proportions affecting the business and welfare of Texas property and rights of citizens." He then asserts that the conditions "are clearly in violation of constitution and laws of this state."

Associated Press.
HOUSTON, Texas, June 7.—Military rules have been issued by General Wolters for Galveston prohibiting the carrying or sale of arms and ammunition, congregating of crowds in the streets, assemblages in streets and parks and in any way interfering with the soldiers.

Two Persons Burned to Death In Marshall Fire Early Sunday

MARSHALL, Texas, June 7.—Two persons were burned to death in one of the most disastrous fires which has visited Marshall in several years, when a combination store and dwelling house was destroyed by fire early Sunday morning. The dead are Mrs. Addie Mings, who was trapped in the building, and J. L. Covin, who was burned to death when he was cut off from exit by the spreading flames.

The origin of the fire is unknown. The building was a mass of flames before the occupants were awakened by the dense smoke.

Mr. Mings, carrying his wife in his arms, started for an exit when the fire was discovered, but in the excitement dropped her.

Later he picked up Mrs. Covin, and thinking she was his wife, carried her from the second story to safety. His wife in the meantime was burned to death in the flames.

Mrs. Covin was badly injured internally and was taken to a hospital.

The burned building was a two-story frame, part of the first floor being used for a grocery store while the second floor was occupied by the Covin family. The other apartment was occupied by the Finley family downstairs and the Mings family above.

The body of Mrs. Mings was taken to Gladewater this afternoon for burial, accompanied by a large number of friends. Mr. Covin will be buried tomorrow.

The loss of the building and contents is placed at $15,000, partly covered by insurance.

Advertising Means a Reduction in Cost to Consumer, Say Experts

FATHER JOHN H. GARNER OF CISCO DIES SUDDENLY

Announcement comes from Celeste, Texas, of the death of Captain James K. Garner in that city last Wednesday. Death came very suddenly of heart failure and while he was in his usual good health—and while his wife and daughter were en route to Mineral Wells.

Captain Garner was formerly a citizen of Cisco, and was the father of John H. Garner, one of Cisco's prominent business men. This son was notified at Mineral Wells, where he had been for some weeks, and joined the mother and sister at Dallas, returning to Celeste Wednesday night.

There are two sons, three daughters and nine grandchildren in the family. The sons are: John H. Garner, of Cisco; J. B. Garner, of Columbia, Tenn. The daughters are: Mrs. A. M. Douglas of Los Angeles, Calif.; Mrs. R. M. Lewis of Celeste, and Mrs. C. O. Terrell of Ranger.

Captain Garner moved to Texas in 1898, and lived in Cisco until about eight years ago, when he and his wife went to Celeste to live with their daughter, Mrs. R. M. Lewis.

The Celeste paper gives this biography of the deceased:

"Captain James K. Garner was born in Giles county, Tennessee, Sept. 25, 1842, and was united in marriage to Miss Ellen Clegg in 1872, at Lawrenceburg, Tenn.

"Captain Garner joined the Confederate army at the age of 19, and was wounded at Raymond, Miss., in May of 1864. He was a member of the Cheatham Bivouacs, at Nashville, Tenn., and was a member of the Masonic lodge at Lawrenceburg, Tenn.

"At the age of 39 Captain Garner was elected to public office, holding responsible offices for 23 consecutive years. In 1876 he was elected to the legislature of Tennessee, and served four years in that capacity.

"The success of Captain Garner's political career was marked by the fact that through all his years of political activity he was not one time defeated in a race, and was elected to the legislature of Tennessee by his multiplied friends of Lawrence county."

Cisco boys had chances to score in the fourth, sixth, and seventh, but a larger inner wall of defense held in iron wall in the pinches, and all attempts of Scout hand-

GIL'S GLEANINGS

Tim Griesenbeck received an ugly gash in his head Saturday from the bat of Gross of Eastland, when the visitor missed a strike and swinging all around hit Tim full flush about a couple of inches above the left temple. As a consequence, Tim was not behind the bat Sunday, but Dockery, who took Griesenbeck's place, did well considering his inexperience as a backstop. Our million dollar catcher will be out of the game two or three days, according to doctor's orders.

Johnny King proved that his eyes are open at all times during a ball game, when he came all the way from center yesterday to put Tate out at third, because the hasty Nitro had forgotten to touch the third station.

Mooney's catch off Billings' bat in the seventh yesterday was a darb. The Nitro center gardener was running at top speed, and had to dive forward to snare the ball, but he was equal to the occasion, and when he rolled up on his feet he had the pelota safely in his mitts. That's the kind of catches that make baseball games interesting.

Mrs. Mattie Hodges Is Given Custody of Two-Year-Old Child

EASTLAND, Texas, June 7.—Mrs. Mattie Hodges of Ranger, was successful in her legal contest Saturday before the district court in an effort to recover the custody of her two-year-old baby boy from her husband, Dellus Hodges. Mrs. Hodges had filed a suit for divorce and asked for the permanent custody of her child. In her divorce petition she alleges that she had had possession of her baby ever since her separation from her husband, on April 16, 1920. She alleges that he was cruel, unkind, tyrannical in his treatment of her, often cursing and abusing her, and at one time struck her and knocked her against the wall of the house; that she had the baby with her at Ranger and had it cared for during the day while she worked in a store for their support; that while she was away at work her husband came and fraudulently took the child away with him and carried it to Abilene. The court's judgment gave the mother the exclusive care and custody of the child. The divorce petition will be tried later.

Bids Too High for Road Construction, Say Commissioners

EASTLAND, Texas, June 7.—All the bids for construction of the good roads of Eastland county have been considered by the commissioners' court, and the conclusion reached that all the bids are too high, and that to accept any of the bids would cause a further bond issue or a cutting down of the mileage of roads proposed.

The commissioners' court adjourned Saturday without having finally decided on what course will be pursued. All phases of the matter are being considered carefully, even the proposition presented that all bids be rejected and the commissioners' court undertake to do the construction work under the supervision of some construction superintendent on a salary and wages basis.

Maintenance Budget and Revenue for the Year for City of Cisco

In the city commission's new estimated maintenance budget, given in The News a few days ago, a typographical error made the clerical estimate read $35,000, when it should have been $350,000. Neither in that estimate was any account taken of the city revenues that come other than taxation. This deducted would leave a need only of about $37,000.

Following is the estimate as furnished by the city secretary, and which does not vary in its total from that formerly given, after the school estimate was deducted, but corrects the clerical item and gives the revenues:

AMERICAN LEGION AT BAIRD WILL HAVE COMFORTABLE HOME

Given Plot of Ground on Court House Lawn and Will Erect Beautiful Bungalow.

Special to The News.

BAIRD, Texas, June 7.—The members of Eugene C. Bell Post, No. 32, American Legion, of this city, which is steadily increasing its membership, want a permanent home and now the commissioners' court of Callahan county has made it possible for them to achieve their hearts' desire.

A plot in the southwest corner of the courthouse grounds has been donated to the ex-fighters for the purpose, and, under the enterprising leadership of the post's new commander, R. Q. Evans, who is also mayor and assistant postmaster of Baird, and likewise a hustling hustler, an active building campaign has been started. Already two thousand dollars has been pledged toward the building fund, and the boys think that to raise the full amount will be dead easy, when they "go over the top" for it.

It is proposed to erect a brick bungalow on the donated plot with a frontage on Wendell Russell avenue of 50 feet and a depth sufficient to contain a commodious reception room, which can be used also for meeting purposes and social gatherings, a gymnasium fitted up with individual lockers and with shower baths attached, reading rooms and executive offices.

Bell Post was organized last fall and has a charter membership of about 30. Lieut. L. W. Green was the first commander, but as he has since become a candidate for a political position county attorney of Callahan county he promptly resigned in accordance with the provisions of the American Legion's constitution. It is named in honor of Lieutenant Eugene Carter Bell, Company B, 35th Infantry, A. E. F., son of Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Bell, who was killed by the explosion of a German shell in the Argonne forest, November 1, 1918.

On Sunday last, which was observed here as Memorial Day, a beautiful stained glass window was consecrated in the Episcopal church of the Holy Ghost to the memory of Lieutenant Bell and his younger brother, Private Hubbard MacDonald Bell, Company F, 2nd Infantry, who died at Camp Travis, six days after his brother was killed.

SENATE FAVORABLE TO NEW COURT IN EASTLAND COUNTY

EASTLAND, Texas, June 7.—A telegram from Austin states that the bill providing an additional district court in Eastland county has passed the senate and goes to the house of representatives for consideration there. A like message for relief in Wichita and Stephens counties has already passed both houses of the legislature, and it is not contemplated that any trouble will be had in the matter of the new court for Eastland unless the crowded calendar in the lower house should crowd out consideration of this bill until the session snail end.

In order that the matter may be pressed to a successful conclusion, Judge E. A. Hill, who knows more than any other man how work there is to be done in the district court of this county, is preparing to go down to Austin Monday next and give the weight of his influence to the immediate passage of the new court bill.

Bids Too High for Road Construction, Say Commissioners

EASTLAND, Texas, June 7.—All the bids for construction of the good roads of Eastland county have been considered by the commissioners' court, and the conclusion reached that all the bids are too high, and that to accept any of the bids would cause a further bond issue or a cutting down of the mileage of roads proposed.

The commissioners' court adjourned Saturday without having finally decided on what course will be pursued. All phases of the matter are being considered carefully, even the proposition presented that all bids be rejected and the commissioners' court undertake to do the construction work under the supervision of some construction superintendent on a salary and wages basis.

Teachers' Salaries Increased.

BROWNWOOD, Texas, June 7.—At a meeting of the board of education held Saturday, the salaries of all teachers in the schools of Brownwood were increased 20 to 30 per cent. Several teachers resigned, and their places were filled with teachers from the State University.

"CISCO — THE CITY THAT TEAMWORK IS BUILDING"

Tonight, Cisco, which is the citizenship of this city, will assemble in mass meeting.

The deliberations and the actions of the citizens who participate in this meeting will perhaps delineate the future of this city.

This meeting could have meant more for Cisco had such a referendum been resorted to, as suggested by The News several days ago, before the open break and hasty actions of the two contending factions.

Now, it is problematical what the result may be. Charges and counter charges have served to draw the friends of each closer to them—intent upon personal vindication.

Now is the time when the plain citizenship of Cisco should take a cool and deliberate hand. They should waive any personal preferences in this unfortunate official upheaval and be guided by the judgment which is for the city's welfare.

Cisco should be put before personal friendship when Cisco assembles tonight to hear the two sides of an official family quarrel. Even that part of Cisco's citizenship who are parties to these discussions should lose sight of personal interests in deference to the welfare of the whole citizenship.

Both sides to this controversy may have been in the right or both may have been in the wrong, but it is questionable whether, after their hasty actions, the citizenship should have been called in to hear the quarrel. This may engender feelings that will overcome "teamwork" for many months, and perhaps years.

So, since the people are "called to arms" in this little city official unpleasantness, it behooves them to forget personal friends when their cravings or exactions might involve the best interests of the city.

Go to that meeting tonight determined to do your duty as a citizen of Cisco, and not as a partisan of either contending personality force.

Go cool, listen in coolness, and use coolness in any actions. In this period of city building in the Central West Texas area, the destiny of Cisco hangs in the balance at this meeting.

Cisco is bigger and more important than any individuals, and this is the occasion for some genuine teamwork on the part of the assembled citizenship.

Cisco should look askance, or she may soon be included in the limits of Eastland—if their publicity agency is unchecked. In the Sunday's Star-Telgram this agency claims for Eastland the two million-dollar Humbletown enterprise, just nine miles west of Eastland, as a part of that city. And when this agency knew that Humbletown was within the city limits of Cisco. They are getting in desperate straits in Cisco's sister city, to the east, just 10 miles,

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES AT S. UNIVERSITY

PRESIDENT R. E. VINSON PREACHES BACCALAUREATE SERMON —CONFER DEGREES TONIGHT

AUSTIN, Texas, June 6.—President R. E. Vinson of the State University preached the baccalaureate sermon of the annual commencement exercises at that institution tonight. Degrees will be conferred upon more than 400 graduates tomorrow night.

The commencement address will be delivered by Dr. W. L. Brazell, president of the A. & M. College. Dr. Vinson's sermon was heard tonight by a large and appreciative audience. He said:

"No function exercised by an Israelite under the original constitution of his nation could have passed for him a greater significance than that of the priest. It was the one office originally contemplated. In it resided the power of the king, and through it was guaranteed the instruction of the people in addition to its having intrusted to the priest the exercise of that special ministry of atonement which the office connotes. The priest was ideally the mediator between God and man and between man and God, the intelligent channel of communication from the one to the other, 'touched with the feeling of the infirmities' if his brethren were sure of his ability to minister to them because of the divine source of wisdom and power with which he was in contact. Thus defined, it was and office to be sought, and enviable position, attractive to strong men, worthy with possibility for use or abuse, a concentration of either constructive or destructive powers in the person of the man who held it.

"Historically, of course, these ideals did not work out. The priesthood having been made hereditary became institutionalized, afflicted by routine, given to outward forms and ceremonies, entered upon by men who did so because there was a statute applicable to human conditions which so provided, and not because there was in them by that fact any fitness for the office, any proper appreciation of its significance, even any desire to serve. They were priests because their fathers were. The whole of the tremendous meaning of it was lost upon them, and as a result the thing slipped away into other hands, leaving them in possession of only an empty form. It is just this fact which marks the contrast between them and Christ to which the author of the letter to the Hebrews has immediate reference when he says: 'There ariseth another priest who was made not after the law of carnal commandment but after the power of an endless life. They had the commandment, the law, the customs handed down to them. Their antecedents went back to the beginning. He had no priestly progenitors, no law calling for or even permitting the exercise of this function. But he had the spirit what our author calls the dynamic of an endless indissoluble life to answer for, a sense of personal worth and a field upon which to display it, which led Him, even forced Him, to the discharge of the priestly function contrary to all human precedent or law and made Him a mediator between God and man simply because he had the ideal personal fitness for it. That was the thing that moved Him—the dynamic of His life. He became a priest, the priest, because He was fitted to discharge its duties, because there was an inherent correspondence between His nature and the thing which was most needed to be done in and for the world as He saw it.

"But we must not reach the conclusion that the choice made by Him was an easy one. If the record of His life is to be trusted He might have made good, as we say, in any one of many lines, for there is no reason to believe that He would have been submerged or lost to sight had He chosen to go in another direction. The range of His vision was wide and the qualities of His character would have carried Him far up among the world's leaders. He might have been 'wise or rich or great' had He not chosen to be 'blest' instead. He probably would have been a good carpenter, with men coming from far to witness the excellence of His skill and the perfection of His work, with more demands for His labor than one pair of hands could have satisfied. His contemporaries tried to force Him to be their King; they appealed to Him to be their judge. His auditors hung upon His speech as of an orator who spoke as one having authority, and for two thousand years the world has designated Him 'the Great Teacher.' He did not therefore choose to be a priest in the absence of ability or fitness for successful endeavor elsewhere. We must believe that He encountered all these things, laid Himself down as it were, alongside of them, took their measure and His own and then deliberately determined to 'be about His Father's business,' to use His life for men instead for Himself. In Him two things came together, both complete, the knowledge of the world's needs and His own ability to meet it. This conjunction created a compelling situation for Him. It put Him under necessity. It called the exercises of all else for it. It gave definiteness to His training and set to His powers. It developed Him, it enabled Him to accomplish. It gave Him contentment. By His joy which was set before Him He endured the cross and despised its shame. Having made the supreme choice and having made it supreme, His whole career fell at once into a most beautiful harmony. Everything He touched found its place in His life's purpose and became contributory thereto. His eyes were in His head and He went straightforward and He breathed out His spirit at the end with an expression which contains a depth of significance and a wealth of satisfaction which every right-thinking man must long to fathom and to possess.

"Now this is the outstanding thing with reference to each one of us, that sooner or later we must relate ourselves to the work of the world and find our own places therein. The major portion of our value and certainly the whole of our best value to our generation and of our own contentment as well depend upon the decision we make as to the part each of us is to play. Lacking such a decision we convict ourselves of aimlessness; we furnish to our powers no focus; we are unable to work out any proper synthesis of the elements with which we deal, and such work as we do is done by rote and contributes nothing to either character or contentment or efficiency. For my own part I can not view the present unrest of the world, its misdeeds, its wastage, its clash of class with class, its misplaced emphasis, its lack of interest in its labor and its fixing of its gaze upon the material rewards of its work, without the feeling that at bottom all of this is due to the need of just such an integrating force as that which determined the life of Jesus, so that it may be said: 'There ariseth another business man, another farmer, another scholar, another lawyer, or mechanic, or doctor, or whatnot, who was made not after the law of a carnal commandment but after the dynamic, the inherent force of His own life.' For the work of the world must be done, all of it, and in the last analysis there is no criterion by which each person can determine his own place and part that that he is following the leadership of his own soul, bearing it call obedient to its commands. It matters not that you may be long in discovering and preparing for this—it matters not that it requires sacrifice in the singleness of your devotion; it matters only that you have found not a place but your place, not a work but your work.

"I can not come to these successive commencement occasions without wondering just what is the sum total in effect of your four years of University life and particularly if you are going out not only with an intelligent choice of a life purpose, but with a compelling purpose and an adequate training therefor, and I can not escape the feeling that if we have not at least furnished you with the means to this end we have failed in what is or should be our main purpose and in the trust which we administer for the people of the state. To paraphrase the words of another, the university earnestly desires to do its share of the world's work but in so doing finds itself largely confined to one avenue of approach. Its impact must be through you who are living its life and are soon to go out to live the other life. The field is the world. Time and money and personal service have been spent in and upon the university, not for its sake merely, but rather that it may be more attractive, more efficient, more compelling as a power in the world and the student's own worth as a university man is inseparably measured by what he counts for in the world of men. The men and the women of the university must live in the world, in its politics and in its trade, the life which the university conserves. That is our only opportunity. The ideals of service and love which we enlighten and love which we teach here are not matters for museum or treatment. They must be incarnated in living persons. Their true expression is not through educational platforms and resolutions and creeds, but in and through university men and women the realms of social ad civic life, of business and of government will never be controlled by the principles for which the university stands, unless and until the men and women of the university go into and possess the land, able to match wits with wits, to meet strategy with strategy, and to measure against the endurance of selfish greed, the superior endurance of unselfish public service.

"But there are not wanting critics of our whole system of modern education who deny that our programs as now laid out are either fitted to do or accomplish anything of this sort. From without there comes the insistent demand that education be made practical, a demand too, which is having its way in our institutions, and which deserves to have its way, or rather it will deserve to have its full way when once its real underlying idea is clarified and given content which it should possess. To quote President Graham, 'It is a common place to say that the time we live in is above all else a practical time. It is called commercial. It is even said to have sold out humanity's great ideas and ideals to dollar standards of success, and it is further said that education and particularly college education has lost its permanent values through becoming superficial and practical. College education has become obviously practical in its tendencies. This is shown not only by the upgrowth of so-called technical schools, but by the whole college curriculum. But it is not true that the real values have been set at naught by this vocational inclination, nor is it wise, in my judgment, for the college to belittle practical values, nor lament the lack of worship of its ancient shrines. What it must do is to make convincingly clear how wholly essential to present practical life its permanent truths and methods are. For the greatness of a college depends upon its ability to satisfy the supreme human need of the people and the time it serves. The great college is the college that supplies the civilization of the world with a program of guidance—a way out of the difficulties through which the people are trying to find their way, and equip its students to be representative men in the era in which they live. Colleges have a way of dying and going to seed; they have a way, as the years go by and take toll of their vitality, of losing their fruitful impulse, and becoming a set of more or less worthy and dignified by-laws.'

"For an institution no less than an individual is in need of a definite aim or a focal point to which its life and work are directed, a clear definition of its object and the correlation of all of its forces to that end. We need first of all, says Faunce, to secure and develop in the college some large coordinating and unifying purpose. The college of today is often moving about in wretchedly in aggressive effort and lost in self-consistency. Our larger institutions have some times sprawled into sudden bigness, enlarging by pressure from without, instead of developing from a purpose within. Hence the multiplicity of courses, the disconnected glimpses of truth gained, from unrelated departments, the conflicting standards and outlooks, usually arouse and feed the student's curiosity, but leave him hungry for a working theory of life. On the day of his graduation he knows far more facts than his father knew at the same age, but is not nearly so certain as to the meaning and goal of his own life. He feels a dim and vague disappointment at the end of his course because the institution for which he has shouted and fought in so many famous contests has given him a vast array of knowledge but failed to bring it to a focus in any definite view of human institutions and duties. We need teachers who have not gained erudition in a small province by willing blindness to all other human interests. We need someone to give our students power to 'see life steadily and see it whole.'

"But is there any conceivable method of giving them this power in the absence of an informing principle adapted to this purpose and running through the whole experience of college life? For our disciplines are certainly not so varied as are the natures to which they are applied, nor are they more unrelated than the infinite fields of service for which they are designed to prepare. May it not rather be that the difficulty lies in a faulty emphasis, that in our zeal for discovering and clarifying truth and increasing the store of knowledge, we have not sufficiently stressed the incarnation of this truth in the individual student, the application and adaptation of it to this peculiar personality and to the fundamental duty of relating him to life? The word must become flesh and to me at least each student is an agency through whom some certain phase of it may be revealed and ministered to the world, and it is no small part of the task of the university to bring him to a clear and compelling decision of his own vocation. For I believe in vocations. Not in the evoked sense of the word which is now much the vogue, confining it to something done with the hands, or which is immediately productive of financial returns, but in the sense that it is a call of the individual soul, an inner conviction of personal assignment to a definite place in the work of the world, the accomplishment of the old Hebrew proverb to 'Train up a child according to his way and even when he is old he will not depart from it.' For if President Faunce is correct in saying that our universities are moving about in worlds half realized, may this not be due in large measure to the fact that our students are often stumbling about in worlds not realized at all? Far too many of them come from homes given over to external things, pass through their preliminary courses after the law of a carnal commandment, and then enter the university only to find themselves in a labyrinth with no other guiding thread than some vague desire to 'get an education,' and I know of no situation more pathetic than that of a freshman in such a case, unless indeed it be that of a senior who comes to his day of graduation as aimless as upon the day four years ago when he first enrolled. I even venture the assertion that the most satisfactory work is done and the best educational results are attained in our universities in our technical and professional schools and among those students in the colleges of arts and sciences who know their purposes from the day of entrance to the day of graduation, and that too irrespective of the nature of these purposes. For it is not the nature of the purpose but its presence which is the determining quality. He may have desired to do nothing or he may have had a passion to know something. No matter, for in each case the course and the accomplishment has been equally happy. It has regulated his habits, it has focused his energies, it has guided his choices of courses, determined his participation in the activities of so-called college life, and it is in these men and women that the world has found its leaders and our universities their best examples of culture and refinement. For it is time that we were having done with this warfare between vocation and culture, and were wiser to see that both are now generally interpreted as extraneous and beside the mark, for the course of a human being can not be correctly determined by any carnal commandment, but only by its own inherent force and its relationship to the life and the work of the world. Nor have I any fear that the ancient ideals and established disciplines of historical education will suffer by such a change of emphasis nor even that legislators will reduce appropriations because of an in-sufficiency of 'practical' things in the curriculum. (The Signa and the Charybdis of the state university president) for I am convinced that by such a process we shall not only retain the study of the truth for its own sake and furnish the state with the desired practical training, but we shall do both the better because we shall be pouring into the life of the world a steady stream of men and women each of whom has heard the call of his own soul which is after all the call of God. To quote from President Graham again: 'The problem of modern university education is not to combat the application of abstract truth and the mastery of how to do in addition to what to know—as religion and culture combatted the coming of science. Behind the practical, material and commercial standards of the new social order that is in process of construction there is an idealism that is the unique obligation of higher education to stimulate and interpret in our everyday life. The activities of men have taken a new shift but the single great art is now as always the art of living. It is upon this mastery through education of the practical world of vocation and upon their ability to saturate efficiency in making a good living with the ideals of living a good life that the greatness of a modern university depends.' 'And indeed I can think of such a university as not only a great institution but of its life as a very happy life. For there will be in it men and women who must know the thought and the experience of the past, some who must only the North Pole and wholly unuseful, some who must do useful things, some who must dream dreams, and see visions, but all alike looking to the joy that is set before them, with heart and will as well as mind involved in their daily tasks, determined by the dynamic of their own lives and guided by those whose feet have already trodden the paths upon which they are ready to venture. By so doing we shall save both ourselves and them, ourselves from the effort to force the lives of our failure which are far too common marks of college life. To do this educational system must provide through cooperation with the home the machinery for diagnosis, so that we shall not work in the dark nor prescribe until we know all that is knowable in each particular instance. Such an effort should be part and parcel of the duty of every teacher from kindergarten to graduate school and part of his pleasure as well, for he will be searching for the pearl of great price which lies concealed in the heart of every child.'

APOLOGIZES TO ENGLAND FOR BURNING OF FLAG

Associated Press. WASHINGTON, June 7.—Secretary Colby, in behalf of the American government, has tendered a verbal apology to the British ambassador for the burning of a British flag here one day last week by Irish women.

If one could have a cent the first day of the month, two cents on the next day, four cents the next, and so on, doubling the amount each day, it would have nearly $3,000,000 at the end of a month of 31 days.

In Turkey grows a wild flower which is the exact floral image of a hummingbird. The breast is green, the throat yellow, the head and beak almost black.

Native rubber gatherers in the Congo get 50 cents a week and pay their own expenses.

GIL'S GLEANINGS

Tim Griesenbeck received an ugly gash in his head Saturday from the bat of Gross of Eastland, when the visitor missed a strike and swinging all around hit Tim full flush about a couple of inches above the left temple. As a consequence, Tim was not behind the bat Sunday, but Dockery, who took Griesenbeck's place, did well considering his inexperience as a backstop. Our million dollar catcher will be out of the game two or three days, according to doctor's orders.

Johnny King proved that his eyes are open at all times during a ball game, when he came all the way from center yesterday to put Tate out at third, because the hasty Nitro had forgotten to touch the third station.

Mooney's catch off Billings' bat in the seventh yesterday was a dab. The Nitro center gardener was running at top speed, and had to dive forward to snare the ball, but he was equal to the occasion, and when he rolled up on his feet he had the pelota safely in his mitts. That's the kind of catches that make baseball games interesting.

Mrs. Mattie Hodges Is Given Custody of Two-Year-Old Child

EASTLAND, Texas, June 7.—Mrs. Mattie Hodges of Ranger, was successful in her legal contest Saturday before the district court in an effort to recover the custody of her two-year-old baby boy from her husband, Dellus Hodges. Mrs. Hodges had filed a suit for divorce and asked for the permanent custody of her child. In her divorce petition she alleges that she had had possession of her baby ever since her separation from her husband, on April 16, 1920. She alleges that he was cruel, unkind, tyrannical in his treatment of her, often cursing and abusing her, and at one time struck her and knocked her against the wall of the house; that she had the baby with her at Ranger and had it cared for during the day while she worked in a store for their support; that while she was away at work her husband came and fraudulently took the child away with him and carried it to Abilene. The court's judgment gave the mother the exclusive care and custody of the child. The divorce petition will be tried later. Other suits filed in the district court Saturday follow: Joseph P. Gabler et al. vs. B. H. Cogdell et al. for debt of $500; and enforcement of materialman's and mechanic's lien. American National Bank vs. T. W. Hodges, debt. Mrs. Phoebe Knox vs. J. M. Knox, divorce.

Maintenance Budget and Revenue for the Year for City of Cisco

In the city commission's new estimated maintenance budget, given in The News a few days ago, a typographical error made the clerical estimate read $35,000, when it should have been $350,000. Neither in that estimate was any account taken of the city revenues that come other than taxation. This deduct would leave a need only of about $37,000.

Following is the estimate as furnished by the city secretary, and which does not vary in its total from that formerly given, after the school estimate was deducted, but corrects the clerical item and gives the revenues:

Estimated Budget for City.

Water Department $20,000.00. Sanitation and Public Health 15,000.00. Fire Department 4,000.00. Streets 25,000.00. Clerical 3,500.00. General 5,000.00. Police Department 15,000.00. Park and Cemetery 15,000.00.

Total $104,500.00. Revenue: Water $40,000.00. Sanitation 12,000.00. Police Department 15,000.00. Total $67,000.00.

AMERICAN LEGION AT BAIRD WILL HAVE COMFORTABLE HOME

Given Plot of Ground on Court House Lawn and Will Erect Beautiful Bungalow.

Special to The News.

BAIRD, Texas, June 7.—The members of Eugene C. Bell Post, No. 82, American Legion, of this city, which is steadily increasing its membership, want a permanent home and now the commissioners' court of Callahan county has made it possible for them to achieve their hearts' desire.

A plot in the southwest corner of the courthouse grounds has been donated to the ex-fighters for the purpose, and under the enterprising leadership of the post's new commander, R. Q. Evans, who is also mayor and assistant postmaster of Baird, and likewise a hustling hustler, an active building campaign has been started. Already two thousand dollars has been pledged toward the building fund, and the boys think that to raise the full amount will be dead easy, when they "go over the top" for it.

It is proposed to erect a brick bungalow on the donated plot with a frontage on Wendell Russell avenue of 50 feet and a depth sufficient to contain a commodious reception room, which can be used also for meeting purposes and social gatherings, a gymnasium fitted up with individual lockers and with shower baths attached, reading rooms and executive offices.

Bell Post was organized last fall and has a charter membership of about 30. Lieut. L. W. Green was the first commander, but as he has since become a candidate for a political position county attorney of Callahan county he promptly resigned in accordance with the provisions of the American Legion's constitution. It is named in honor of Lieutenant Eugene Carter Bell, Company B, 35th Infantry, A. E. F., son of Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Bell, who was killed by the explosion of a German shell in the Argonne forest, November 1, 1918.

On Sunday last, which was observed here as Memorial Day, a beautiful stained glass window was consecrated in the Episcopal church of the Holy Ghost to the memory of Lieutenant Bell and his younger brother, Private Hubbard Macdonald Bell, Company F, 3rd Infantry, who died at Camp Travis, six days after his brother was killed.

SENATE FAVORABLE TO NEW COURT IN EASTLAND COUNTY

EASTLAND, Texas, June 7.—A telegram from Austin states that the bill providing an additional district court of Eastland county has passed the senate and goes to the house of representatives for consideration there. A like measure for relief in Wichita and Stephens counties has already passed both houses of the legislature, and it is not contemplated that any trouble will be had in the matter of the new court for Eastland unless the crowded calendar in the lower house should crowd out consideration of this bill until the session next.

In order that the matter may be pressed to a successful consideration, Judge E. A. Hill, who knows more than any other man how work there is to be done in the district court of this county, is preparing to go down to Austin Monday next and give the weight of his influence to the immediate passage of the new court bill.

Bids Too High for Road Construction, Say Commissioners

EASTLAND, Texas, June 7.—All the bids for construction of the good roads of Eastland county have been considered by the commissioners' court, and the conclusion reached that all the bids are too high, and that to accept any of the bids would cause a further bond issue or a cutting down of the mileage of roads proposed.

The commissioners' court adjourned Saturday without having finally decided on what course will be pursued. All phases of the matter are being considered carefully, even the proposition presented that all bids be rejected and the commissioners' court undertake to do the construction work under the supervision of some construction superintendent on a salary and wages basis.

Teachers' Salaries Increased. BROWNWOOD, Texas, June 7.—At a meeting of the board of education held Saturday, the salaries of all teachers in the schools of Brownwood were increased 20 to 30 per cent. Several teachers resigned, and their places were filled with teachers from the State University.
