SUCCESS SEEN FOR ROOSEVELT BY GENETICIST

SYRACUSE, Ind., Nov. 30.—A successful and powerful administration for President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt is predicted by W. L. Ballard on the basis of "a scientific forecast—not fortune telling," centered on the fact that Roosevelt's father was 54 when Franklin was born.

Ballard called attention to the fact that many leaders in public life were born of middle-aged fathers and young mothers.

Jeff Davis Jefferson Davis' father, he said, was 52, when the Confederate states' president was born; Robert E. Lee and Benjamin Harrison were born to fathers who were 51; William Pitt the younger's father was 54; President Taft's was 47, and Queen Victoria's 52.

Even the fact that Woodrow Wilson's father was only 37 when the World War President was born does not detract from his theory, Ballard said, because that age is considerably above the average of 30.

Many Qualities

Such of springs as cited, Ballard said, apparently inherit certain qualities and characteristics. Roosevelt he said is no exception.

"This definitely warrants," Ballard explained "a scientific forecast of a possible, probable, new administration that will be well organized well managed and powerful, because of the calm, deep personality of its head, who can quietly move the unmovable, without apparent effort, whether it be a New York mayor, sheriff or legislator, or mayhap our broader, deep-seated semi-chronic depression.

"True, 'brains' do not always imply 'goodness,' yet the knowledge is that this law (of heredity) engenders healthy humanity that predisposes to right conduct."

31,500 BBLs. WEST CENTRAL TEXAS QUOTA

AUSTIN, Nov. 30.—Beginning tomorrow the allowable crude oil production for Texas for the next four months will be 849,625 barrels daily, compared with the present allowable of 791,705.

The distribution by fields in the first order issued under the new state law authorizing proration on a market demand basis allows west Central Texas 31,500 barrels daily and west Texas 157,900 barrels daily. The commission placed a limit of 325,000 barrels on production from the prolific East Texas field.

It ordered the East Texas field prorated on a basis of per well, acreage and bottom hole pressure combination, the formula to give each well an allowable according to acreage involved and its capacity to produce.

Until the formula announced can be put into practice, however, the field will be permitted to produce at the rate of 37 barrels daily per well. It was estimated the combination arrangement could be worked out and enforced by December 10.

The field produced, for the week ending on November 19, 352,620 barrels from 8,760 wells, or an average of 40.3 barrels per well daily. Allowable for other fields were fixed as follows: Panhandle, 45,000; North Texas, 56,000; Southwest Texas; Darst Creek, 14,000; Salt Flat, 7,500; others in Southwest Texas, 27,450; East Central Texas; Van, 45,000; others in East Central Texas, 6,700; Gulf Coast; Thompson's 10,000; Conroe, 25,000; Raccoon Bend, 5,500; Sugarland, 9,000 (8,000); Eber's Hill, 19,100; Goose Creek, 2,200; High Island, 7,500; Hull, 5,500; Humble, 125; Pettus 3,800; Pierce Junction, 4,700; Refugio, 7,700; Spindletop, 2,700; others in Gulf Coast, 24,750.

HOOPER SAID TO PLAN VETO OF BEER BILL

Copyright 1932 by United Press WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Democratic leaders, charged by Speaker Garner with conducting a canvass of the house to determine prohibition repeal sentiment, have found indications in the survey thus far that a repeal resolution would pass, if brought to a vote next Monday.

HOOPER SAID TO PLAN VETO OF BEER BILL

Members conducting the poll told the United Press today that they believed 275 votes could be secured for outright repeal. It was anticipated there would be enough absentees to lower the two-thirds majority requirement of 287 votes which would apply if the full house were present.

HOOPER SAID TO PLAN VETO OF BEER BILL

Speaker Garner announced he "didn't see any reason" why the repeal resolution should not now be brought up for action Monday, the first day of the new session.

HOOPER SAID TO PLAN VETO OF BEER BILL

Congressional leaders were informed today that President Hoover intended to veto beer and farm relief bills which may be submitted to him this winter.

HOOPER SAID TO PLAN VETO OF BEER BILL

If Mr. Hoover persists in that purpose the democratic short session program is wrecked in the vital matter of treasury income. Under such circumstances an early special session of the newly elected congress would seem unavoidable.

HOOPER SAID TO PLAN VETO OF BEER BILL

Designation by resolution of Sunday, December 4, as "Prohibition Sunday" with requests that all pastors of Texas churches devote that day to discussion of the subject was one of the prominent steps taken at the meeting.

HOOPER SAID TO PLAN VETO OF BEER BILL

Condemnation of the movement for legalization of beer and repeal of the 18th amendment was unanimous. The meeting's general attitude toward the question was that the recent national election was not "in any sense" a referendum on prohibition but was a "political revolution" and not a public expression of will.

HOOPER SAID TO PLAN VETO OF BEER BILL

J. W. Hunt, president of McMurry college, Abilene, declared repeal of the Volstead act would be a cowardly action by congress and would nullify the constitution. He charged large corporations and millionaires had conspired to bring about repeal to save income taxes.

TAX REFORMERS AND THEIR PLANS.

Texas has a state teachers' association 6000 strong. H. W. Stillwell, superintendent of schools and president of the Municipal Junior college at Texarkana, is the president-elect. Well, the Fort Worth convention adopted entirely the report of its resolutions committee after amendment by supplemental resolutions introduced from the floor. Into the section of the report containing resolutions dealing with financial support of the schools, a unanimous vote of the convention incorporated an amendment asking the legislature to enact strict laws for enforcement of the gasoline, oil production and cigaret taxes. Evasion of those taxes, it was declared, is costing the schools of Texas $750,000 annually. Uncle Sam, who has not a dollar he calls his own, was asked to come across and safeguard public education against retrenchment—the financial aid to be made available through the Reconstruction Finance corporation. Texas lawmakers were given a hint: The 43rd legislature was asked to reform the tax system and to set up a tax commission to study problems of taxation.

National leaders of the democracy, speaking of the president-elect and senators and representatives, are calling for the abolition of hundreds of commissions and bureaus in order that the budget may be balanced and economy made the watchword all down the line. Speaking of tax reformers, the Texas Press association has named the personnel of a state tax advisory committee to "cooperate with the members of the press organization." Furthermore, it is said that this committee will be a clearing house for the public on tax facts, news and recommendations, "hoping that its ideas of tax reductions will merge with such plans as may be decided upon by official tax executives to the end that definite relief will be secured." Fair enough.

JOBLESS WORKERS GIVEN JOBS.

General Motors corporation reports an increase of 3863 employes in October over September throughout the country, and that while this expansion did reflect a seasonal influence, it did indicate an improvement in employment. A cheerful little earful to say the least.

DEMOCRATS PLAN ANOTHER RELIEF MEASURE.

According to Washington advices the democratic leadership in the house has agreed to seek enactment of a farm relief measure at the coming session of congress. Speaker Garner predicts that it will bring "real relief." Democratic Floor Leader Rainey let it be known that the legislation would be based on a bill he introduced at the last session which was passed by the senate, later reconsidered and then killed. All this is a reminder that trustees of the $10,000,000 gift of the late Julius Rosenwald are attempting to obey orders and spend it within 25 years. Rosenwald was a multi-millionaire. He made good use of his vast wealth. He passed on millions for educational purposes; millions for charitable purposes; millions for scientific purposes. He knew that he could not take a dollar with him on his flight across the dark river.

BEST WINTER RANGE FOR MANY YEARS.

West Texas, indeed all sections in the grazing country, reports the best winter range in many years. According to a San Angelo correspondent, ranchmen are looking to the San Angelo branch of the regional agricultural bank for credit relief, and recent protests of the Sheep and Goat Raisers association have brought indications of a less stringent attitude toward split loan and feeder loan applications. It is said the greatest amount of feeding in its history will be assured the Concho river section. Another cheerful little earful for the people of Texas.

MORE RELIEF LEGISLATION FOR FARMER.

On adjournment the National Grange sent a delegation to Warm Springs to tell the president-elect the legislation the Grangers needed in the solution of farm problems. Also, to tell him of the stand of their organization for maintenance of the farm marketing act of the farm board, that organization to be given authority to use either the export debenture plan, the domestic allotment plan, or some other method for dealing with the farm surplus. It is said that the president-elect himself is a member of the Grange. Sen. Charles McNary of Oregon, the most outstanding republican statesman who escaped slaughter in November, has ever been committed to the debenture plan and will push the cause along while the short session is grinding. All of which is a reminder that Pres. Hoover threatened a veto of the debenture feature, and its backers fled to the sidelines when the federal farm board measure was hammered into shape. Now they have returned to their first pet proposal.

LAMENTATIONS OF MRS. NELLIE ROSS.

Former Gov. Nellie Ross of Wyoming has been the center of the stage attraction and a very industrious worker for democracy in recent years. Mourning does not become Nellie. As the director of women's activities of the party of Jefferson, she has voiced the hope that Vice Pres.-Elect John N. Garner will reconsider his "no-social-functions edict." Nellie returned from her Thanksgiving vacation and placed this protest in the social register literature of the hour. "I hope the people may not be deprived of the interest and color he and Mrs. Garner would bring into the official life of Washington. Official life in the capital without its social features, would be like soup without salt, or pudding without spices. The substance would be there but the flavor would be lacking. Let the speaker remember "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." This fair lady from Wyoming should remember that the Cavalier of the Cactus country "catches his own fish and cooks them to suit his liking and taste."

OUT OUR WAY

THE WAR PATH.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By EDSON R. WAITE
 Shawnee, Oklahoma.

Some people are born to economize, some achieve economy, and the whole country is having economy thrust upon it with the result that the economy broadcasts sent out by an organized minority of the people are doing much to keep the depression with us.

If there is one moral principle in what is being forcibly thrust upon a long suffering public, it is that silly idea that each and every one, including the government, has to practice economy to such an extraordinary degree as advocated.

It is remarkable that these vicious economy talks have not brought about a much worse state of affairs.

Drastic economy means the reducing of the purchasing power of the individual, which in turn means less of trade to retailers. As a result, wages are cut down and many thrown out of employment. This necessitates still further economy and still further loss in the internal or self contained trade of the country and the reduction in prices of commodities.

There is very little credit to be obtained in flattering oneself that one has acquired the science and art of economy to perfection when the plight of one's neighbor is plainly seen.

This country has valuable assets and credits which in time will undoubtedly create a normal revenue in such circumstances as it is not sound finance to utilize this potential wealth of the country as a means of obtaining sufficient money to tide the country over? In addition to that, with a steady decreasing revenue at the present time, the government should institute reasonable reductions in expenses, but within limits. Proceeding beyond that and practicing parsimony toward disabled world war veterans and paralyzing business, markets, and the buying power of the people by rabid economy talk and actions would further retard recovery.

FRANCE FEARS AMERICA WILL REJECT WINES

PARIS, Nov. 30. — French wine-producers want to persuade America that the fruit of the grape is a strength-giving and salutary drink.

While foreseeing an early end to prohibition, France fears that America will return to the whiskeys and beers of the pre-Volstead era. If they do, and ignore wines, French vintners will lose what was once their chief market.

The ministry of agriculture is considering the subsidy of a "propaganda campaign" to tell Americans that wine is a more salutary beverage than beer, whisky or gin. Meanwhile, Eschenauer, the famed wine growers of Bordeaux, are sponsoring an international winegrowers' society.

The aims of this union are twofold: One—to support the government's campaign to stress the healthful qualities of French wines; and Two—to fight against the present taxes levied on wines.

Wine-grower here fear that the government, when and if prohibition is repealed in the United States will place an excessive tax upon exported wines. As it is today, the manufacturers complain that the government is taxing them out of any profit.

Trade Journal Wide publication has been given in France to a recent pronouncement by "Ridley's Wine and Spirit Trade Circular," a British trade journal.

This periodical asserts that "it is high time indeed that viticulture, which produces the kindest fruit of the earth, should be resuscitated and that an association is formed to promote a worldwide "politique de vin." Wine is one of the fundamental sources of the wealth and health of mankind."

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEARER
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 AUSTIN, Nov. 30. — Former Governor Pat M. Neff originated a custom by which each governor of Texas upon retiring from office leaves a marked passage in the governor's Bible for his successor.

What Gov. Ross S. Sterling will mark for his successor, Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson is now a matter of much curiosity. The Biblical derivation of name has led to the suggestion that he can choose a verse directly naming her.

Mrs. Ferguson's platform called for vigorous measures against motor trucks and busses. Railroad men will therefore probably agree with a suggestion that Governor Sterling mark Numbers, twelfth chapter and fifteenth verse.

If your Bible is not handy, it says: "And Miriam was shut out from the camp seven days and the people journeyed not until Miriam was brought in again."

Mrs. Ferguson may have been elected to the governor's office but she hasn't been elected to the governor's chair. In fact unless the state board of control provides one before Jan. 17, she may lack a place to sit in her office.

The chair formerly used was sold by the Board of Control with consent of the legislature for Former Governor Dan Moody. It was not replaced and Governor Sterling is occupying a borrowed one.

Maj. Paul Wakefield, the governor's secretary, also is occupying a chair the state doesn't own so the new governor's secretary may have to stand.

Members of the legislature are free from arrest during session except for treason. The result is that some of the friskier members have occasional parties secure from interruption. But one of them was punished at the last special oil session.

During the course of an entertaining evening he was introduced to a group of young women. Next day he received a telephone call.

"This is so-and-so," said the voice. "My wife has told me all about your party last night, and I am coming down there to see you."

The legislator not knowing the names of the fair entertainers, swallowed the hook his colleagues had planned.

Throughout the day, at his desk in the house, he received notes from the door announcing the Mr. so-and-so was outside and wanted to see him. Finally his companions admitted the frame-up and relieved him of the strain.

Temporary jobs about the legislature help many a student at the University of Texas to keep going financially. Thirty were on the last

HORSES SAVED

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 30. — Two old horses—the last of the stable once maintained for city police — have been saved from death at a serum plant because of the faithful service. Charles Myers, safety board head, had planned to sell the animals to a Zionsville firm. But when he learned the fate awaiting the animals he halted the sale, declaring that "two animals as faithful as they were deserve a more fitting old age."

Pepo," marks the last record of the only person legally hanged in Choteau.

Week-end MURDER

By GABRIELLE E. FORBUSH
Illustrations by NEA SERVICE INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Amos Pebody, elderly cousin of Linda Averill, falls to his death from the second floor balcony of the Averill's Long Island home. Linda reaches him just before he dies, in time to hear him gasp, "He pushed me—!"

There are four guests in the house and all become suspects of the murder. All are strong physically, have violent tempers and all have quarreled with Cousin Amos. The four are: Mr. Stalander, midwestern manager of the firm Averill works for; Marvin Pratt, former suitor of Linda's; Captain DeVos, handsome Belgian representing a European perfume manufacturer; and Lian Shaughnessey, Irish writer and lecturer.

Linda, realizing her cousin had tried to tell her he was murdered, rushes up the stairs to the balcony. Someone steps behind her, tries to strangle her and she falls in a faint. She regains consciousness several hours later. It is assumed the death was accidental and that Linda fainted from shock. When she is finally able to tell Tom what happened Linda insists they must keep the four guests with them until they discover which is the murderer. There is no evidence on which to arrest any one of the four. Tom hesitates, finally agrees.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XV
Linda glanced again at the clock. After half-past 10—how the time sped! Tom was still to be convinced and some plan to be agreed upon to hold the house party together.

"We must think of some way of keeping them here," she went on, "without giving everything away. Tell them—well, I thought perhaps I could appeal to them. I could say—and its true, Tom—that this was partly a business conference and therefore it would hurt you at the office if you didn't put it through. That would apply to Mr. Stalander and Mr. DeVos. You do have to talk to them, don't you? I could appeal to Marvin—if I could get him alone."

Her husband's face hardened but Linda hurried ahead; "I'd ask him as an old friend to stand by me because you had to be occupied a good deal with business. As for Mr. Shaughnessey—well, he's a sponge, anyhow. A graceful, charming sponge, but the sort that's all for himself and probably has planned to spend a week or so in our garage at our expense. He won't need to be coaxed."

"That sounds plausible," Tom considered it while she anxiously studied his face. Would he agree? No, he wouldn't—yes, he might—no! "But Binks, it just wouldn't work. Put yourself in their places—a death in the family—"

"But Tom, we can tell them we hardly knew Cousin Amos—"

"Even so,"

"And all the festivities planned for the Fourth of July weekend! Perhaps we can't go to dinners and bridge parties, but they could."

"But if they did stay, Binks, what could we possibly do?"

She breathed more easily. At least he was taking her seriously—considering this desperate suggestion. "Talk to each one separately and notice how they answer, as well as what they say. They'll talk about the accident perfectly naturally with us. We can ask leading questions without seeming to and then meet and analyze what we've found out and go back and talk with them more. Oh, Tom, don't you see it's the only way? The one who did it is sure to give himself away by some perfectly unconscious slip. But it needs time—and so they simply mustn't go, they mustn't!"

He sat thoughtfully a long moment and then Linda dared press her advantage.

"What else could we do, Tom?"

"I see that, all right. It's a crazy stunt—but it's that or nothing."

She cut in eagerly, "Then let's go right away, Tom, and find them. I'm ready—!" She stood up quickly. "Now wait, Binks. Don't be in too much of a hurry."

Although she knew of old that his common sense decisions were slower but also more thorough than her quicker impulses, his caution infuriated her, so highly was she keyed for action.

"Tom! It's 11 o'clock. In an hour—"

"In an hour they'll be gone for good, especially if I fumble it. I want to think how to go about this. First we must persuade them to stay then get together for our first conference and decide on the story of what happened to you—"

"That's easy," she interrupted. "I fainted—"

"Not so easy as that. Remember, one of them knows."

"Yes," Their eyes met.

"Binks," said Tom quietly, "I shouldn't consider this for one moment."

"But you've agreed to it!"
"Yes. But I'm going to make one condition."

"What's that?"
"The agreement is dissolved at any moment if I think I'm justified. Think, dearest," as she began to protest, "you haven't really taken yet what it means. It means—"

(as he spoke, his words seemed to reach through some shell that had not been penetrated before) "It means that here, right in our house there is a killer—a man without mercy and, possibly, insane. A homicidal maniac! And that sort is insane only until he kills. Then he's as cool and clever and as sane, or more so, than most of us. One of these four men—Pratt, Shaughnessey, Stalander, DeVos—is certainly a murderer and may be a homicidal maniac. Do you take it in now?"

"Yes," she answered in a whisper. "And you don't want to call the police and have them all questioned?"

"No." Again the faintest breath of sound. Then more strongly, as he paused, perplexed. "It wouldn't do any good, Tom. That—that sort of man would get away. We mustn't alarm him—"

"But you know we are doing a risky—a crazy—thing. That either of us—you or I—may be—"

"Stop!" She put her hand over his mouth. "I can't hear you say that, Tom! I know—I realize—now. But we must—wait! Today's Saturday. We'll find some way to keep them until Monday morning. That, you see, will give us the rest of today and all tomorrow—Sunday. Everything we find or guess or even imagine we'll report to each other. We'll get something, I know that, Tom. But I promise this. If by, say after dinner tomorrow night, we haven't a thing, not a ghost of an idea or anything stronger, you can do whatever you want—call up Tim Hanahan or go get him or—"

"Him! Tom was contemptuous of the local policeman's aid. "Binks, to capture a man like this you'll need a squad—and then watch every move you make!"

"That's for you to take care of. Whom to call and how to do it. Whether we locate him or whether we give it up and call for help, that's your job, Tom—to bring it off. My job's to keep them here and happy and unsuspecting."

"And we're both to find out what we can—if we can."

"And compare notes. Often!"
"Agreed!"

They shook hands on it solemnly. And there came a tap at the door. Rosie stood on the threshold and her eyes were troubled.

"Please sir," she said, "it's Tim Hanahan. He's very urgent, sir. He says he must see you at once, sir—and Madame, too, if she's able."

which I told him she was not! Rosie spoke with a sudden access of asperity that suggested her tone to the young village policeman who had misfortune—so far as authority in that household went—to have married Rosie's sister Tessie, her predecessor in the Averill's service.

There was conscious guilt in the glances the two conspirators exchanged, but Linda quickly covered her surprise.

"Certainly I'm able, Rosie—though thank you for trying to save me the bother. Will Tim come up here?"

Again Rosie tossed her head, but she was reluctantly compelled to pass on the commands of the law.

"He will not, ma'am. He says, will the master be so good as to step downstairs at once, and if you cannot come too, then he will come up later. And already he has made so free as to use your telephone without asking your permission and has called Dr. Parsons. I heard him give the number and well I know it myself."

Linda rallied first. "Tell Tim we'll be right down, Rosie," she said almost sharply. "Both of us."

"And as the girl hesitated she added, 'I'm feeling quite myself now, thank you, Rosie. And we won't keep him waiting.' The dismissal was definite and the girl moved off slowly. She was not going to hurry for brother-in-law Tim Hanahan.

Linda grasped Tom's arm as much for physical support as to whisper anxiously to him, "Tom—do they know?"

"It looks queer. Binks. Phoning for Parsons—"

"Was Tim here—before?"
"No. Parsons reported the accident. He tried the police station when he was hunting for Boyle, but he took it for granted it was an accident and of course so did Tim."

"Especially in our house."

"Yes. Tim's entirely too much one of the family—even if it's only by adoption—so suspect us of anything so ungentle as murder."

"But something has happened!"
"Yes—something—"

"Well, come on, Tom. We won't find out this way."

"Be careful what you say, Binks. Let him do the talking."

She flashed him a glance of mingled scorn and agreement and together they went down the short hall, down the graceful winding stairs and into the central living room, still redolent of flowers and open to every passing whisper of air that might stir on that hot July day. Here, hat in hand obviously embarrassed, perspiring apologetically in his official uniform, stood honest Tim Hanahan, dreading as much as they the approaching interview in which he must assume the position of authority.

"They had hardly greeted him when there was a furious spurt of gravel from the roadway and the doctor's little roadster swung dangerously around the curving drive and came to a violent stop before their open door. From the roadster as though catapulted by the arrested momentum of the car, shot the doctor himself, as red-faced as Tim and far more agitated."

"What's this—what's all this nonsense?" he burst out before he was fairly in the door.

BIG DAM CHATTER

By FRANK LANGSTON
Coaches Elkins and Hodges are ending the football season for their squad of Lohoes tomorrow with a game between the boys who will not return next year and those who will. This might be said to be tapering off from the hard work of mid-season, but as a matter of fact, it will very likely be actually the hardest fought game of the year. The new men will be working for their positions in the lineup that has in mind beating Abilene and Breckenridge next season, and the older boys wouldn't think of letting flock of young upstarts go home with the game under their arms.

From the standpoint of finances the game ought to be a worthwhile one. Coach Elkins announces that the proceeds—10 and 15 cents for each admission—will go to buy basketball equipment. What he actually said was "five or six hundred dollars worth of basketball equipment," but he grinned when he said it.

This game marks the beginning of something else, too, intramural athletics. This phase of sport, though not exactly new in Cisco, has never been stressed very much. In the past the idea has been to get the best team possible on the field and have it work to beat the other town's team no matter how much hard work it may entail on the part of the team.

Interscholastic competition has been valuable to develop on thing, school spirit, though there are times when it may have worked up too much spirit and lost sight of the real objective of the game, athletics to develop the bodies of the participants and to instill into their minds a sense of sportsmanship.

Interscholastic athletics leaves out the fact that if the strongest team available gets out on the football field and stays there, leaving the other boys on the bench, only the eleven on the field who really do not need it, will get the benefit of the exercise. If, though, every boy in school, is on some team, football or otherwise, and that team plays other teams of the same caliber, everyone is going to benefit by the exercise.

But that isn't the end of the story. There is something significant that has been overlooked, by most coaches. Notre Dame, developer of the greatest inter-school football teams, is also a strong adherent to interamural play. A boy goes there and gets his football suit and an assignment to some team. From there he may or may not develop to a man of varsity caliber. Some of Notre Dame's best have been discovered on class or organization teams. There must be some point to it.

At the same time, such a program of intramural athletics tends to take the game away from the gamblers and give it back to the boys. That's where it belongs, on the field. As long as there is interscholastic football there will be a great deal of interest in it on the part of public and school alike. It is right that there should be such interest. But the

RECORD MADE BY VICKS IS IMPRESSIVE

GREENSBORO, N. C., Nov. 30.—An increase in employment of over 42 per cent—a rise in volume of sales of more than 25 per cent!

That is the impressive record made by Vicks VapoRub, Vicks Nose & Throat Drops and Vicks Medicated Cough Drops for the first nine months of 1932—figures disclosed today by L. Richardson, President of Vicks Chemical Company.

The record is made even more impressive by the fact that the House of Vicks showed a healthy increase in volume of business and employment in the years of 1930 and 1931, too.

It's a story of business courage—and of advertising faith. A year ago—running counter to the general current of business and against the judgment of advertisers—Vicks more than doubled its appropriation for advertising, and introduced two new products.

Volume of sales of the Vicks leader—Vicks VapoRub, the most universally used treatment for colds—has increased steadily. Rise of the two new products has been phenomenal.

These new products, in combination with the famous Vicks VapoRub, made possible the new Vicks Plan for better Control-of-Colds. In clinical tests among thousands last winter, this plan was proved successful in reducing the number, duration and costs of colds by half.

SOVIETS' EXOTIC GARDEN SPOT IS SUMMER RESORT

Editor's Note: A United Press correspondent recently spent several weeks in the Soviet Union's exotic garden spot, the Soviet Republic of Abkhazia.

By NATHALIA P. SHIROKIKH United Press Staff Correspondent SUKHUM, Soviet Abkhazia, U. S. S. R., Nov. 30—Three-quarters of a century ago a simple Abkhazian peasant, Urus, Lakoba, poisoned the Georgian Prince Shervashidze for his role in putting this Caucasian country into the Russian Czar's hands.

Today, his great-great grandson, Nestor Lakoba, rules the land as a Bolshevik Commissar.

Lakoba's official title is Chairman of the Central Executive Committee of Abkhazia, a post equivalent to president of his republic.

Abkhazia is one of the most beautiful spots in Russia, and the most richly endowed by nature as a vacation resort.
