EMPEROR CALLS ON PEOPLE TO RALLY

UNITED STAND FOR ETHIOPIA BEING URGED

Copyright 1935 by United Press
By EDWARD BEATTY
United Press Staff Correspondent
ADDIS ABABA, Aug. 30. — Emperor Haile Selassie called on his people today to rally en masse to the defense of their country, fearless of Italian planes, tanks, and bombs.
The emperor's weekly, "Light of Peace," sounded the rallying call for freedom, calling on his people to forget their differences and stand united for the country. Families were urged to give their sons willingly for the cause.
Apparently with a view of calming the alarm caused by the emperor's recent instructions to the people on how to act during air raids, the weekly said:
"Airmen cannot destroy the whole country. Tanks cannot climb Entoto (behind the city). Bombs can kill only a few people."
Another urge to determine warfare was furnished by the priests, who have been assuring their flocks that those dying for their country are assured of heaven.

BRITAIN AWAITS REPORT ON U. S. NEUTRALITY
Copyright 1935 by United Press
LONDON, Aug. 30. — Great Britain awaits a report by experts on the American neutrality act before deciding finally on its policy in the Italian-Ethiopian crisis, it was learned today.
Vital decisions on raising the present embargo against Italy and Ethiopia, and on the course to be taken at the League of Nations council meeting Wednesday will hinge in large measure on the interpretation.
The foreign office is awaiting a copy of the complete neutrality bill as passed by congress just before its adjournment. With the copy will be a report from the British embassy at Washington.
The all-important question to Britain is exactly what the embargo imposed by the bill on belligerents covers, where merely "visible" munitions of war, such as arms and ammunition, or such absolutely essential war supplies as cotton, copper, nickel, steel and chemicals. They go into the making of arms and munitions and a supply of them would give Italy's factories all the material needed to wage a war, whereas Ethiopia's position would be hopeless.

COLD WEATHER REACHES OVER ENTIRE STATE

The cool wave which sent the mercury to the low 60s in north Texas last night, moved into central and south Texas today.
Residents of north Texas, who had sweated under the heat many weeks, scurried in search of blankets last night as the first touch of fall weather swept down from the north.
Scattered rainfall also was reported. Palestine had 53 inch and rain was falling today at Austin, Galveston and El Paso also reported rain.
CISCOANS HURRY INTO LAST WINTER CLOTHES
The cold wave which hit all of Texas today sent Ciscoans into last winter's suits, and indoors during the morning hours. It wasn't so cold, people explained to each other, but it has just been so hot.
At 10 o'clock the mercury stood at 67 degrees here, but by 1 o'clock it had risen to the 75 degree mark.
HAIL DEFLATES BOAST MOOREHEAD, Minn. — Just as Axel Enderstrom, farmer, was telling Dr. Victor E. Verne, of Long Beach, Calif., what a wonderful corn he was going to have this year, a hailstorm destroyed his crop in 20 minutes.

WEATHER

West Texas — Partly cloudy, unsettled, probably showers south tonight and Saturday, slightly cooler southeast tonight, warmer north and west Saturday.
East Texas — Partly cloudy tonight and Saturday, probably showers west coast and southwest tonight, cooler east coast tonight and warmer north Saturday.

Benny Howard Wins Bendix Trophy Race

CECIL ALLEN IS KILLED AS PLANE FALLS

By United Press
CLEVELAND, Aug. 30. — Benny Howard, Chicago, flying his Howard special, won the cross-country air race, landing here today at 1:40 p. m. as the first arrival from Los Angeles in the 1935 Bendix trophy race.
Cecil Allen, transpacific flier, was killed at the start of the race when his speedy plane crashed shortly after the takeoff.
Allen, a native of Oklahoma, was killed when his ship struck in a potato field less than three miles from the airport at Los Angeles, starting point of the race.
He was the last contestant to leave his takeoff delayed by trouble with his fuel tank. He got away in the half light at 5:18 a. m.
Fog had delayed the takeoff of some of the fliers, but they took off in good order when the weather cleared. Included in the notables were Amelia Earhart and Col. Roscoe Turner.
Howard's elapsed time for the 2,056 miles from Los Angeles was eight and 33 minutes. After flashing across the finish line Howard circled and landed his racing plane.

ATTACK ON SPEED RECORDS STARTS

By United Press
CLEVELAND, Aug. 30. — The nation's fastest racing planes began today the annual assault on the world's land speed record.
All the craftsmanship and cunning of the foremost experts in aerodynamics were built in to the speedy ships entered in the four-day national air races of 1935.
The program will be devoted to closed course events, straight-away assaults on the land speed record of 314 miles an hour, parachute jumping, and acrobatic flying by stunt pilots.

Gene Howe Planning Contest of Snorers

By United Press
AMARILLO, Aug. 30. — A new type of contest, to determine the "most beautiful" snorer, is planned here.
According to Gene Howe, who is conducting the contest, it will be held during the second week in September. Prizes have been arranged for the most tuneful snorers, the loudest, and those having the widest "range."

3 Generations of Family in School

CANYON, Aug. 30. — Three generations from the same family attended school together here this summer.
Mrs. W. H. Rayzor, her daughter, Mrs. Edith Rayzor Canant, and Mrs. Canant's twin daughters, Maurice and Maureen, all were students at West Texas State Teachers' college.
Mrs. Canant is art supervisor of a grade school at Texas City.

Says Change Faces College Graduates

CANYON, Aug. 30. — Students who graduate from colleges and universities now confront a changing world, Dr. A. M. Meyer, of the department of education at West Texas State Teachers' college, told the summer graduating class.
"This is a changing world," Dr. Meyer said. "Your problem is to adjust to change. Our mechanistic order has come to an impasse, and instead of your looking to the world to give you a place, the world looks to you to answer its questions."

ROBBER EIGHTH TIME

CLEVELAND, — The F. and P. Style Shop here has been entered eight times in four years. In the last burglary the thieves took $300 worth of women's apparel. The robbers have entered the shop the same way in all eight burglaries.

Labor Board Head

Chairman of the newly appointed labor relations board is Joseph W. Madden (above). Pittsburgh law professor. He expects the board to be ready before mid-September to receive complaints of discrimination against union men and petitions for elections to determine who should represent workers for collective bargaining.

HALF MILLION DAMAGE DONE BY RAINSTORM

By United Press
LAS CRUCES, N. M., Aug. 30. — An estimated damage of $500,000 was done here today when a torrential rain struck Las Cruces.
Houses collapsed as the downpour caked the adobe mud from which the majority are constructed. No loss of life was reported.
It was estimated six inches fell in Las Cruces, the heaviest in 30 years.
The highway between Las Cruces and El Paso was impassable. Railroad tracks were washed out, stopping all traffic.
The storm extended from Anthony to Elephant Butte. All the dry arroyos flowed bankful during the storm and dumped the water into the Rio Grande. The residential section of Las Cruces suffered the heaviest damage. As the water started to recede, rescue parties began trying to dig out furniture and house hold goods, buried under the debris of the crumpled houses.

Slot Machine War Termed Successful

HILLSBORO, Aug. 30. — The war against slot machines in Hill county apparently was won, county officials said this week, when they were advised that every such machine had been moved out of the county.
The sheriff recently seized a large number of the machines but returned them to their owners when they promised to take them out of the county.

HOPKINS SAYS JOB PROGRAM TO BE IN FULL SWING BY SEPT. 15

By United Press
WASHINGTON, Aug. 30. — Administrator Harry L. Hopkins today indicated that the $4,000,000,000 employment program will be in full swing by Sept. 15. He allotted relief funds to 33 states only for the first half of the month.
Hopkins cut two states, Alabama and Wyoming, off the dole because the drive has employed almost 33,000 needy in those two political subdivisions.
He withheld September money from the nine other states, explaining the "amount to be given has not been determined."
States whose September needs have not been determined included New Mexico and Texas.
Program officials said they would be unable definitely to discontinue relief in the thirty-three states by September 15, but expressed hope "among people will be employed in those sections so the dole can be greatly curtailed."

QUEEN'S BODY RETURNS HOME FOR FUNERAL

By United Press
BRUSSELS, Aug. 30. — The body of Queen Astrid lay in state here today in a silver and black draped reception room at the palace to await burial Tuesday.
It was taken to the palace in a motor hearse escorted by cavalry when it arrived at 8:30 a. m. in a special funeral train from Arlan on the frontier.
Soldiers lined the route from station to palace and behind them were thousands of people mourning the dead queen many women were crying.
A guard of honor was placed over the doublet casket at the palace.
King Leopold left the train at an outlying station, unable to face the crowds of his subjects in the streets. A few minutes after the coffin arrived at the palace, he entered the reception room, his lip bandaged an arm in a black silk sling.
He asked that the casket be opened. The guard of honor retired and the king stayed for a few minutes in the room alone, looking at the face of his dead wife.
The queen died yesterday in Switzerland when the automobile driven by the king crashed at the side of the road. The queen's head struck a tree and she died in the king's arms when he reached her side.

Reporters To Play Herd This Evening

The Ranting Reporters will take on the Thundering Herd at Humble park tonight in another of the business men's games that have been drawing interest in football circles.
Truett LaRoque, manager of the Reporters, has announced that Cecil Leverage, his star hurler, will take the mound against the Herd. Jack Anderson, Herd mentor, will put Guyle Greyolds in the box to oppose him.
Following are the lineups:

Mrs. Connally Is Buried at Marlin

By United Press
MARLIN, Aug. 30. — As the crowd of more than 1,000 neighbors and other friends gathered about her casket, Mrs. Tom Connally, wife of the junior senator from Texas, was buried here yesterday.
Hundreds of friends gathered at the station to meet the funeral train which brought the body back from Washington where Mrs. Connally died in her husband's office.

Prehistoric Dog's Bones Are Dug Up

CANADIAN, Aug. 30. — Bones of a barophagus, prehistoric dog monster, larger than present day police dogs but far more vicious, have been discovered near here.
Bones of 25 other species of prehistoric vegetarian and carnivorous animals and reptiles dating back to the pliocene age five million years ago, also were found in the deposit with the dog bones.
Scientists said the find was one of the best in the nation.

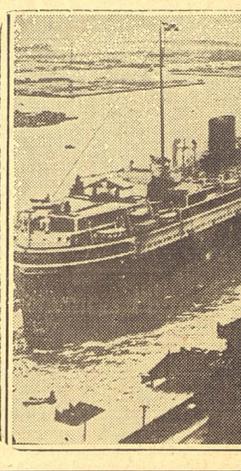

Chaos Is Facing Oil in California

By United Press
LOS ANGELES, Aug. 30. — Chaos faced the state oil producing industry today after the resignation in a body of the California Petroleum Producers Central Committee, the state's regulating group.
After the resignation at a special meeting, J. R. Pemberton, state oil umpire, announced his office would cease to function except that it would continue to keep records, until order is reestablished in the industry.
Resignation of the committee followed an announcement by the Standard Oil company that it had cut the price of crude oil approximately 50 cents a barrel in light grades.

Convinces Police That Parrot Is His

DALLAS, Aug. 30. — F. B. Nichols, Dallas, had little trouble convincing police that a parrot in the possession of another man really belonged to him.
Nichols lost his parrot when the bird got tired of staying home after sticking around 30 years, and flew away. Another man captured him.
When Nichols saw his bird he gave his pet call and the bird at once pecked the man who was trying to hold it and flew to his real owner.
Police really believed that the bird belonged to Nichols.

NANCE GRABS SEASON TITLE BY 6 TO 1 WIN

Nance today looked back with satisfaction over the summer's campaign on the softball diamond as the club hung up its 1935 city league championship.
The Motorists swept the series with Garner's, champion of the first half season, by taking the second game to the tune of 6 to 1. The two straight games won by Nance made the third contest unnecessary.
Rise hurried the final winning game of the season for the Motorists, pitching a far better brand of ball than he has displayed lately. Wilson, pitching for the Garner club, held the winners well but his mates were unable to score when called upon.
Twice Garner's had three men on bases with only one out and failed to push a run across the plate.
Nance has made a stormy comeback during the last three weeks, pushing aside all opposition in the uphill battle, first for the league season title and then for the league championship. After Garner's had won the first half season Nance got off to a slow start in the second but gathered speed and caught Community and in the last scheduled game of the season Monday night handed the gasmen a defeat to cinch the first of the two titles.
Tuesday night Nance came back to win a 16 to 6 victory over Garner's in the first game of the series.

4 ATTACKS ON OIL, GAS LAWS HEARD TODAY

By United Press
HOUSTON, Aug. 30. — A three-judge federal court heard four attacks on the state oil and gas laws here today.
One of the most important points taken up will be the much debated 16 acre spacing rule for drilling at South Houston, an incorporated community near here.
The rule passed by the little suburb's city council and the state railroad commission has been a storm center for the past two months. Tysco Oil company of Dallas has asked the federal court to enjoin the commission and the council against preventing it from drilling as it pleases.
Three other attacks on oil and gas laws of the states will be heard.
The Texas Panhandle Gas company and the Henderson Gas company will fight against the new gas conservation order by the commission for the Panhandle gas field.

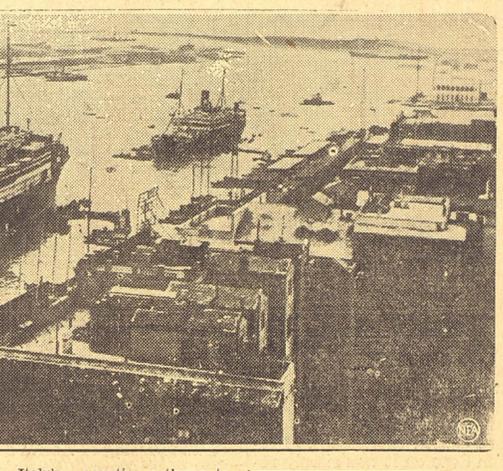

Allred Issues Call To Special Session

By United Press
AUSTIN, Aug. 30. — Governor James Allred's call for legislators to meet at noon Sept. 16 for liquor legislation was on its way to senators and representatives today, and also an indirect message from former Governor James Ferguson, opening a campaign for a state sales tax.
Ferguson told voters now that they have approved an old age pension by constitutional amendment they should follow up by a personal appeal to make the pension possible by a state sales tax. Old age pensions are not included in the governor's call for the legislative session.

Firemen Wash Off City's Crickets

Many and varied are the duties of the fire department, but perhaps none are so strange as that which the firemen were performing this morning—playing nursemaid to thousands and thousands of crickets.
The crickets, heralding the approach of today's cold snap or as City Secretary J. B. Cate said, "sent to us by Huey Long," had crowded into the downtown district and their great number had made them obnoxious.
The firemen, cooperating with the city, were giving the insects a bath, a shower bath, to be exact. They opened fire plugs in the business district and, by using a hose, washed the pests into the storm sewers.
Officers warned them to change their clothes in the future before going home and turned them loose.

UNIFORMS ARE ISSUED TODAY TO GRID TEAM

COLD WEATHER REACHES OVER ENTIRE STATE

Issuing of uniforms to candidates for the Lobo grid squad began today, it was announced by Head Coach Dexter Shelley.
Shelley urged all lettermen and squadmen from last year's team to come into today and get their suits so as to avoid the rush when other candidates are issued equipment Saturday morning.
The first practice session has been set for Monday, Shelley said. The grid menu for the Lobos will include two workouts a day until time for school to open, it was indicated.
Seven lettermen from last year will return for the 1935 campaign. They will include four from the line and three from the backfield, Shelley said.
Returning lettermen will be:
Line: Barns, tackle; Burnam, end; Wende, guard; Merckit, guard. Backfield: Beasley, halfback; Stansbury, quarterback; Rylic, fullback.
Indications are that Burnam, tall husky who snared passes and stopped the boys at end last year may be shifted to tackle or possibly center. He was tried at center in spring training.
Promising squadmen from last season are Rainbolt, Wood, McCannles, Wagley and Irie.
Coaches Shelley and Van Stickle are ready to start work with their charges and hope to give them enough work in the two-a-day-week and the next few days to have them well grounded in principles of the grid game by the time they take on Electra here Sept. 20.
Ten games are on the grid card for the season. The schedule includes five conference games, three here and two away. Following is the schedule:
Sept. 20—Electra at Cisco.
Sept. 27 — San Angelo at San Angelo.
Oct. 4 — Sweetwater at Sweetwater.
Oct. 11—Brownwood at Brownwood (League).
Oct. 18 — Big Spring at Big Spring.
Oct. 25 — Breckenridge at Cisco (League).
Nov. 1 — Eastland at Cisco (League).
Nov. 11 — Ranger at Cisco (League).
Nov. 18 — Childers at Cisco.
Nov. 28 (Thanksgiving)—Abilene at Abilene (League).

Walters Dressed As Convicts Arrested

DALLAS, Aug. 30. — Two waiters in a Dallas night club were arrested recently when they attempted to bum a ride on the highway, because they were dressed in prison uniforms.
At headquarters the pair explained that the striped uniforms were worn by waiters at the club for "atmosphere" only.
Officers warned them to change their clothes in the future before going home and turned them loose.

About Our Friends

Pavement for the Learay Cutoff

Announcement of appropriation of funds by the state highway commission for topping Highway 187 came as a climax to a long campaign by the Cisco Chamber of Commerce and Cisco generally to secure a better road to Breckenridge.

The road, known as the Learay cutoff, has long needed repairs. During the oil boom it was given a topping. Due to the fact that the topping was laid hurriedly or that the hauling of heavy oil well supplies over it was too great a strain, or both, the road had become so bad that it was not even as good as an ordinary dirt road, so far as smoothness was concerned.

Many persons, going from Cisco to Breckenridge or coming from the northeast, preferred an extra ten-mile drive by Eastland rather than battle the bumps over the 28 miles, nine of which were in Eastland county and known as the Learay cutoff.

Then came the time when it was announced that the road would be worked over. That caused excitement. Previously all the work that had been done on it was simply replacing the topping that had worn entirely away, leaving chug-holes. Then, as in the case of the poor French clerk's cloak, the patches had to be patched.

For a long while the road was torn up as the roadbed was repaired, straightened in places, and a caliche base laid. The caliche base marked the end of the first repair project.

Cisco was anxious to have the road paved, because it meant a great deal to the city to have a direct connecting highway link with Breckenridge without having to go through Eastland and travel 10 miles farther. The highway department promised that it would pave the road as soon as funds were available. Meanwhile the caliche surface was kept oiled to preserve it against the same thing that had destroyed the first road.

The announcement of appropriation of $25,988 for the paving job was the highway department's fulfilling of its promise to pave the road as soon as possible. At the same time, it was the climax of the efforts of the Cisco Chamber of Commerce and others to get a good road.

The announcement of the appropriation came to the Daily News in a special bulletin from the Austin bureau of the United Press. It said that the fund was appropriated "to provide bituminous surfacing on Highway 187 from Cisco to Highway 67." Details of the paving job will be made known shortly.

The Passing of Astrid

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON.—Drastic neutrality legislation would prevent diplomats from playing international politics in time of war or the threat of it.

That's why the State Department, backed by the navy and apparently by a navy-minded administration, has been hostile to neutrality proposals urged by Senators Nye, Clark and Bone which would hamstring any official attempt to play favorites among belligerents.

The pro-neutrality senators have heard rumors of secret "commitments" by this government and are aware that the public seldom finds out about such agreements until it's up to its neck in war.

That the State Department's hostility to neutrality measures is an old story is shown by many documents turned up by Senate munitions committee investigators in department files.

ONE of the most significant sets of these secret papers dates back to December, 1914, when Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska introduced a resolution aimed at export of munitions to any belligerent. At this time Americans were still being urged to remain "neutral in thought" and William Jennings Bryan, who probably did more toward keeping us at peace than any other high official, was secretary of state.

Ambassador Page at London cabled Bryan:

"Sir Edward Gray unofficially expressed the hope to me that the bill introduced by Mr. Hitchcock in the Senate will not pass."

And the pacifistic Bryan, instead of ignoring such a message from the British foreign minister, cabled back this disavowal:

"I have explained to Ambassador Spring Rice that Mr. Hitchcock did not consult the president or the State Department in regard to this resolution. Being from Nebraska, he is not personally friendly to me."

Of course the resolution failed.

THE feud that Dennis Chavez waged against the late Senator Bronson Cutting of New Mexico still goes on.

Chavez ran against Cutting for the Senate last year then contested the election in an effort which was almost certainly doomed to defeat and finally was appointed by New Mexico's Democratic governor to Cutting's seat after Cutting was killed in an airplane accident on a trip necessitated by the contest.

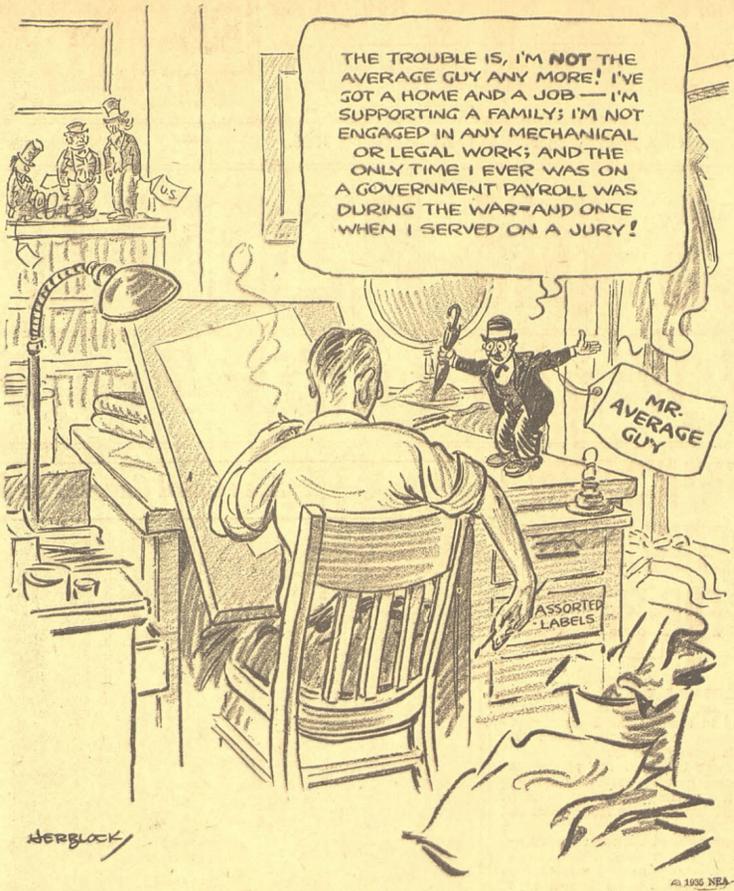

In an unprecedented public rebuke, such distinguished senators as Borah, Norris, Nye, Johnson and La Follette walked out or absent themselves from the chamber when time came for Chavez to be sworn in.

BUT instead of lying low for a while, Chavez went straight to the White House with a vigorous protest when Secretary Ickes appointed Edgar F. Puryear, Cutting's former secretary and friend to be personnel man for PWA and the Interior Department. As Democratic national committeeman from New Mexico, Chavez demanded that Puryear be kicked out.

Which did him no good at all. Roosevelt, although he had given tacit support to Chavez against the New Mexico Republican progressive senator who had backed him against Hoover in 1932, had no desire to carry on the feud.

Breakdown of the Old System

heading for another world war, their actions should have been stopped by the death of the ruler on whose nation much of the last war fought.

The passing of Astrid separated two of the most beloved rulers of all Europe, Leopold and Astrid, king and queen of Belgium. The Swedish princess and her Belgian prince, who ascended the throne a year ago, were loved by officials and commoners alike. Their marriage was believed to have been one of the happiest of all in modern history of royalty and one of the few in which romance played a more important part than treaties and friendship of empires.

A year ago the two became the rulers of Belgium when Leopold's father, King Albert, loved and respected wartime leader of the Belgian armies, was killed when he fell while mountain climbing. Belgium mourned then and turned to the young royal pair for leadership. This time it must turn to the stricken husband-king for guidance.

Europe's Forces Gathering

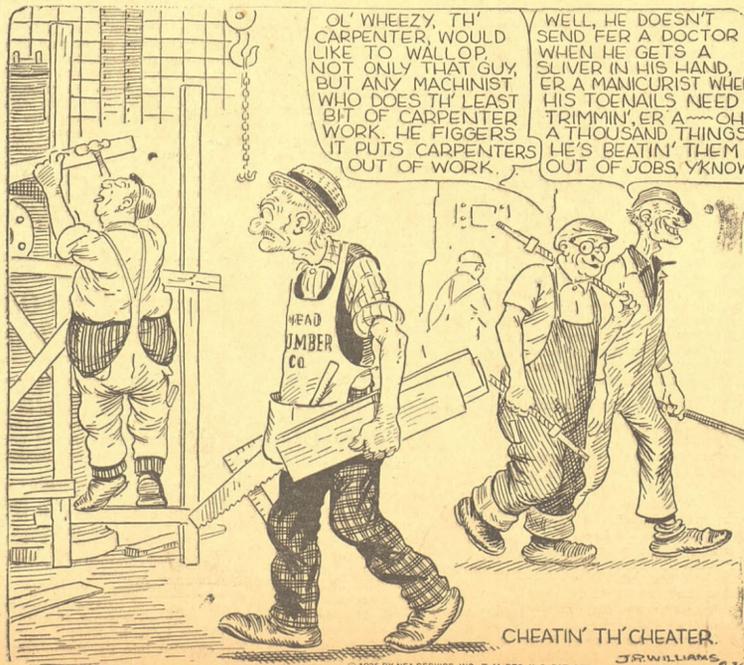

First movement of the world's navies in the East African crisis was reported yesterday when the British fleet steamed out of Malta, Mediterranean base, and started on what was termed a "normal cruise." The cruise, though, it was noted, will place the British fleet in an excellent position of strategy to cope with the situation if peace negotiations are of no avail and Great Britain and Italy have an armed misunderstanding.

At the same time, Italy was making ready for war in Ethiopia and telling the world not to dare to invoke any League of Nations sanctions against the nation of the Big Boot. Just to show the world he meant it, Mussolini had his army going through military maneuvers on a gigantic scale in his "back yard," just where Austria, disgruntled since the last war, might attack, and where Germany would be most likely to appear if Herr Hitler got into the squabble.

The Italian cabinet met—or rather, the cabinet met Mussolini—and granted Il Duce's demand for mobilization of economic and financial resources to wake a three-year war.

"JO DARREN breaks her engagement to BRUCE PAUL, college athlete star, because he objects to her taking a job as hostess at Crest Lake Inn, fashionable summer resort owned by wealthy DOUGLAS MARSH. Jo goes to Crest Lake and later Bert arrives on the scene.

Douglas Marsh's eccentric mother dislikes Jo. FRAGONET, film actor, pays Jo marked attention and asks her to marry him as soon as he can get a divorce. Jo becomes friendly with LOLA MONTEZ, film actress.

Prompted by his mother, Marsh asks Jo to leave Crest Lake. She decides to go to Hollywood to look for a job, and the arrival of Fragonet. Later she begins to doubt Fragonet's promises and moves to a rooming house where he cannot find her.

Lola Montez gets Jo a job in a sandwich shop, but she gives this up when Mrs. Fragonet threatens to make trouble. Jo goes to Crest Lake in response to a telegram from Bert. The message was a trick on Bert's part. The arrival of Jo, cutting through the woods, becomes lost. She sees a car and hurries toward it. The car is driven by BABS MONTEGOM. Babs tells Jo her engagement to Marsh is ended. She takes Jo to the Inn.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLVII

JO gripped Babs' gloved fingers. J and the two exchanged a swift understanding glance. Then, while Jo stood watching, the big sedan circled over the grass and dived recklessly down the road again.

Until she started toward the Inn. Jo did not realize how utterly spent she was. She had forgotten, too, that her appearance was nothing if not startling. Her hat was gone and her gold hair was wind-blown. Across one cheek was a cruel red mark, and her coat was ripped in a dozen places.

It was when she entered the deserted lobby of the Inn that she realized her state, for Peyton, rising from his doze behind the desk, turned slightly pale.

"Miss Darren! What—what—?"

Miss Darren faltered together, and he rushed from behind the desk as if to prevent Jo from collapsing there in the lobby. But Jo managed a smile, assuring him that except for a few minor injuries to skin and clothes, and a consuming weariness she was all right.

"I'd like a room, Mr. Peyton, and—and I'll explain everything in the morning."

Although he was obviously bursting with questions, Peyton nodded and rang for one of the house boys. "I'll give you your old room, Miss Darren."

When the door had closed behind her Jo tossed herself, fully clothed, upon the bed. She did not move from a deep, dreamless sleep until the room was warm with mid-morning sun.

SHE might have slept even beyond that hour had not Peyton telephoned to inquire in a worried voice if she was quite all right.

"I'm having them hold some breakfast for you," he explained. "You see, Mr. Marsh ordered the place closed for the season and we're short-handed. But I can bring the tray up myself, if you like."

"I'll be down in half an hour, thanks," Jo told him. "Have all the guests gone? I didn't imagine Mr. Marsh would be closing the Inn so early."

"It was rather sudden," confessed Peyton. Then, in answer to her question, "They've all gone except Mr. Barston. His new contract with the air line doesn't begin until next week, so he said he might as well stay on. I took the liberty of telling him you're here, and he's waiting on the veranda, I think."

"Oh . . . thank you," Jo said dubiously, not sure she wanted to see the insistent Todd Barston after the swift chain of events she'd experienced in the past few days.

Her first thought was for a shower, and in the long mirror of the bathroom she discovered that her injuries were somewhat more apparent than real. She felt as fit as usual, but her legs and arms were dotted with black-and-blue marks and scratches. "I'd better not wear short sleeves today," she thought—and then recalled with chagrin that she had neither a short-sleeved frock nor one with long sleeves. Her luggage was presumably at the airport where she had dropped it, and even her bag with handkerchiefs and compact was somewhere along the road.

Then she had a sudden thought. This was her old room, and perhaps—

It was improbable, but worth investigating. Almost holding her breath, she wrapped a towel around her and went to the closet. There, just where she had left them, were the clothes she had purchased at Lytton's for her job as hostess at Crest Lake Inn!

"I suppose I shouldn't," Jo told herself, "but—I'm going to!" Hurriedly she selected a complete change from stockings to sports jacket. Minus her compact, she had to omit powder and rouge, but she thanked her stars for a good complexion and a healthy circulation.

Barston had come in from the veranda, and had evidently learned from Peyton that Jo was expected down. The aviator was pacing from the fireplace to the desk and back again. When he saw Jo on the staircase he ran to meet her.

"Jo! . . . You've no idea how glad I am to see you again!" He took both her hands and surveyed her up and down. "And you're as lovely as ever."

Jo laughed. "Thank you, Mr. Barston!—You're still doing very well!"

"And before breakfast, too. I've been down here practically starving just so I could have it with you."

BUT at the table he was serious, refusing to accept Jo's light manner.

"I mean everything I've said, Jo. I mean it so much that I want you to marry me." He stopped, looked at Jo searchingly. "This isn't sudden, Jo. I've thought about it a lot while you were gone. My new job routes me to California and I'd made up my mind to find you when I got to Hollywood. I was going to tell you there, even if—"

He paused again, blustered nervously for a cigaret. "Of course," he went on, "if you're serious about Fragonet, then I'm out of order."

"I'm not serious about Fragonet," Jo told him.

His face lighted. "Then I'm not out of order?"

"Well, you see, I—"

Jo hesitated, then plunged on, "I haven't been thinking of marrying anyone."

"That's good news, too," Barston told her. "I was afraid you might have come back to see young Paul. And I was chuckling to myself because he'd rushed out too soon to see you again."

"Rushed out?" asked Jo slowly.

Barston nodded. "Yes . . . funny thing. He borrowed the Inn's car yesterday evening, then came back in about an hour, got his stuff together and took the midnight train out. Of course there's nothing more for him to do here, but he acted rather strangely. I thought, and got out in an awful hurry." The aviator looked sharply at Jo. "His leaving doesn't matter to you, does it?"

Jo shook her head. "Not in the least," she said. "Why don't you tell me about your new contract?"

Barston sighed, recognizing Jo's effort to draw him from his original topic. He did not answer her directly, but asked a question of his own. "Then it's 'no'?"

"I'm afraid so, Todd."

He gazed at the end of his cigaret. "I wish I knew what kind of a man you're after, Jo. I'd try my best to be that kind. Young Paul was that way about you, and so was Fragonet. Then Doug Marsh—but of course I haven't Marsh's money. And never will have, I suppose."

"It isn't his money I want," said Jo, half-aloud.

BARSTON'S eyes raised suddenly.

"You—you are in love with Doug?"

Jo reddened. "It's not that. You see, I only meant that—"

"You are, though. Jo. Why in the devil don't you tell him? He's been like a ghost around here. He told me himself he'd been a fool not to marry you the first moment he saw you. But I never dreamed you—and he didn't, either!"

Barston got up from his chair, and Jo asked quickly, "Where are you going, Todd?"

"I'm going to find Doug, and I'm going to fix this now." He looked down at her fiercely. "Jo, I'd cramp up in six months if I knew you were at loose ends and I couldn't have you myself. But maybe if I know you're happy I'll be all right. Stay here a minute!"

"But, Todd, you can't do that!" She ran after him into the lobby, but he was already asking Peyton to telephone Marsh's room.

"Mr. Marsh?" said Peyton, surprised. "Why, Mr. Marsh has gone."

Barston's jaw dropped. "Gone?" Then, "Well, where has he gone?"

"I don't know, exactly, Mr. Barston. That is, I think he'll be at the Tetrach Yacht Club for a day or so, but he's leaving from there on his yacht. I suppose it's another one of those long trips of his. He never says just where."

Jo leaned heavily against the desk. If she had never known what she felt for Douglas Marsh, she knew it now.

She looked at Barston dully, saw the aviator turn again to Peyton and bring his open palm heavily against the desk.

"Telephone the Crestmont airport and tell them to have my plane ready in 20 minutes!" Then to Jo, he said, "Get what you'll need in a bag, and make it quick!"

"But—but where are we going?" Todd Barston looked at her for a long moment, seemed to be trying to drive himself into what he was going to say.

"Going!" he said at last. "We're going to find Douglas Marsh!"

SOY BEANS IN U. S. INCREASE IN 30 YEARS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30. — The soybean, brought here from the Orient and improved year after year, has become an important American crop. In less than 30 years the acreage has increased a hundred fold—from 50,000 acres in 1907 to more than 5,000,000 acres in 1935.

This year American farmers planted 5,463,000 acres for soybeans grown alone—almost a third more acreage than in 1934. There was also a large acreage grown with corn and other crops for forage.

The seed harvest in 1934 amounted to 17,762,000 bushels, which was about 6,000,000 bushels more than the 1933 seed yield. Farmers usually harvest about 20 per cent of the crop for seed. They grow about 55 per cent of the crop for hay, 15 per cent for pasture, 5 per cent for green manure, and 5 per cent for minor uses.

Soybean growing has spread to 27 states, and to determine which varieties are most suitable for forage, climatic and soil conditions, the U. S. department of agriculture is continuing its experiments.

Over 300 Uses

A total of 6,906,000 bushels, or about 40 per cent of the 1934 seed crop, was used from October 1, 1934, to June 30, 1935, in the manufacture of soybean oil and meal for making a variety of commercial products. Chemists have found more than 300 widely assorted uses for the soybean. It may be used in making bread flour, paint, or automobile parts.

Factories in the United States used 20,907,000 pounds of soybean oil in 1934. About half—10,451,000 pounds—went into the making of paint and varnish. The remainder was used as follows: compounds and vegetable shortenings, 2,735,000 pounds; other edible products, 533,000 pounds; soap, 1,354,000 pounds; linoleum and olefin, 2,849,000 pounds; printing inks, 59,000 pounds; miscellaneous products, 2,109,000 pounds.

Soybeans are being used in the manufacture of automobile parts and paints. Gear-shift knobs, engine distributor covers, and other parts are made from soybean meal. Many paint manufacturers use from 10 to 20 per cent of soybean oil instead of imported linseed oil. They find that proper amounts of soybean oil prevent white paint and enamel from turning yellow. The oil has been used for centuries in the making of Chinese lacquers.

Glue made from soybean meal will not dissolve in water and is valuable in manufacturing plywood for packing cases. Lecithin, a dark brown liquid extracted from the soybean, gives chocolate candy a gloss. Gumdrops makers put in a drop of this substance to prevent hardening in storage. Cotton textile plants produce a soft, supple finish to their goods with lecithin. Tanners use their chrome leather to take up plenty of grease. They use lecithin to assist the process. Lecithin is also found in egg yolks, but egg yolks are too expensive as a commercial source.

Used For Paint

From the vegetable milk of the soybean comes casein. It is used in sizing paper, textile dressing, waterproofing, and in the manufacture of paints.

Food uses of the soybean are manifold. Soybean flour is used in making bread, cakes, ice cream cones, ice cream powder, macaroni products, wafers, and meat products filler. Refined soybean oil is an important constituent of salads and cooking oil; soy sauce, a dark brown liquid, is prepared from a mixture of cooked and ground soybeans, roasted and pulverized wheat, salt, and water, which is inoculated with a rice ferment culture and left from 18 months in vats or casks. Experiments are also being conducted by the bureau of home economics and the bureau of plant industry to determine which varieties may be used in the same manner as the green pea or Lima bean. The beans shell easily after the pods are boiled about three minutes.

The BLUE DOOR Rache Mack

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Two young officers, about to be at overseas, go to spend brief moments with their families.

LIAN CHAIWENS goes to a parental home where he sees his beautiful wife, GWEN, and his 3-year-old child, ERIKNE. GEORGE WOODSON goes to a modest little home for a last brief visit with his ailing wife, ELIZABETH, and his baby, RUTH. Each man makes the wish that his little daughter will have whatever it takes to make her happy.

Eighteen years later Ruth, now orphaned, is living with her cousins, the LAWRENCEs, in Brooklyn. She is looking for work in New York. Though lacking lunch money, she refuses an invitation to lunch with a wealthy stranger. Before going home she buys narcissus bulbs for COUSIN BESSIE LAWRENCE'S birthday.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER III

WHEN Ruth reached home she found her cousins, the Lawrence young people, engaged in one of their major battles. Letty was trying to wrest from her brother a dollar bill which he found on her mother's desk. Being large and well-developed for her 18 years, the girl was more than a match for the slim 16-year-old youth who was holding out against her.

"Help, Ruth!" Cecil yelled, biting at his sister's exposed arm. Letty said, "If she comes near, I'll slap both your faces, and I mean it. Give me the dollar, pig! You got the last one we found. You know how I need stockings!" With a final twist she pried open her brother's hand, snatched the damp, crumpled bill and fled with it to her bedroom.

Cecil lay groaning and rubbing his chest, where his sister's knee had pressed. Ruth said, "If you wouldn't smoke so many cigarets, Cecil, you might beat her now and then." She had no admiration and very little liking for this high school junior who took his mother's hard-earned money as his just due and pampered himself extravagantly.

Letty came back into the room with her hair smoothed and her face carefully made up. She had a round, pretty face with wide, sky-blue eyes, fringed with dark lashes, and light brown hair.

Once when Cousin Bessie, Letty's mother, was bemoaning the fact that the girl could not go to college, Ruth had said to her, "I don't think Letty would like college, Cousin Bessie. She's not a book-worm like you at all. I think Letty ought to marry young." It was true. She was a voluptuous rosebud that had formed early and needed to blossom early. Marriage would be the perfect blossoming.

Ruth did not know how far she had walked. She saw a great bus . . . and thought, "It won't be going for a while."

Ruth followed her. "What can I do, Letty?" she asked earnestly, wanting to help. "Or had you rather I stayed out of your way now and washed the dishes afterward?"

"Yes," answered Betty, "that would be better." She got out four salad plates and then thoughtfully went and got another. "I'll ask Jack to stay," she said. "He's fun." She turned her back and began to hum.

Ruth went to the coat closet and hung up her hat and coat. She thought, "Letty doesn't want me around. She dislikes me more all the time." It was a problem that Ruth had tried a thousand times to solve. She was dependent on the Lawrence's until she could establish herself. She knew that she crowded them. Even before she came it must have been hard for the three of them to move about the five small rooms, filled as they were with Bessie Lawrence's antique furniture and brass candlesticks and samovars and Indian prints.

After Ruth's arrival they let her sleep on the daybed in the living room, and keep her clothes in one side of the coat closet. Ruth was deeply grateful and felt herself fortunate. (An orphan who has lived in the crowded homes of distant relatives does not grow up expecting a great deal of life.) She only wished that Letty did not feel this antipathy toward her.

THE doorbell rang and Ruth went, absent-mindedly, to answer it. The house was a duplex and the Lawrence's lived on the first floor. When Ruth opened the door she saw a young man standing on the porch. It was Jack Walker.

"Hello!" she said politely. "Come in, Jack. Cecil's expecting you." She showed him where to put his hat and took him into the living room. She sat down on the little Victorian settee and began to make polite conversation, while he strode around the room, picking up things and laying them down in the restless way common to young men. He was 22 or 23 years old and was handsome in a curly-haired, movie hero way.

Ruth noticed that Jack Walker was looking at her queerly. He said, in an accusing voice, "I've been talking to you for five minutes and you haven't even been listening."

Ruth replied in confusion, "The idea, Jack! I always listen to you. I simply hang on your words!" In her remorse for his injured feelings she made her voice warm and cordial than she intended.

In an instant he was on the little sofa beside her, his arm around her shoulders and his sparkling eyes looking into her surprised ones. "Why have you always avoided me, Ruth?" he asked. "Why aren't you always nice to me like this?"

Ruth jumped to her feet, not knowing what to do or say. She felt positively relieved to see Letty standing in the door. That is, until Letty said coldly, "Am I interrupting something?"

"No," replied Ruth in embarrassment. "Oh, no. I'll go and call Cecil." As she passed Letty their eyes met and the hatred in those sky-blue eyes gave Ruth the answer to the question she had been asking herself for weeks. Letty was in love with Jack Walker and regarded Ruth as her rival.

Ruth wished bitterly that there were some spot in the house where she might go and be alone, some little sanctuary where she might go now with her problems and her mistakes, and try to think them out. Well, there was the street—

She went to the coat closet and got her hat and coat and put them on. She slipped out of the kitchen door.

RUTH did not know how far she had walked, or how long. She found herself on the fringes of a busy business section. She saw a great bus chugging before a station. Across its sides, in neat painted letters, were the words, "CLEVELAND, BUFFALO, ROCHESTER, SYRACUSE, SCRANTON." The lights were lighted and a few people were filing in, but the driver was not in sight.

"It won't be going for a while," Ruth said aloud to no one in particular.

Next door there was a pawn shop. She saw that, too. There were three gilded balls hanging above the door. She went through that door.

The man who came to serve her was elderly. He wore a skull cap and had a white beard and infinitely kind eyes. He reminded her of Moses. She said to him, "I have a little pin here that I would like to sell. It belonged to my mother, and it my grandmother before that. I think it even belonged to my grandmother's mother." She unpinned it from her collar and showed it to him. "What will you give me for it?" she asked.

The old man took the pin in his slender, sensitive hands. He said, "You must need money badly to part with this thing of your people."

"I do need money badly," Ruth answered. "I need to catch the bus out there that's about to leave."

The old man raised his eyes from the pin and looked at her. Then he said, "I am a sentimental man. I do not need any more money than I have. I can do what I like to do."

He seemed to be explaining these things to himself, rather than to the waiting girl. "It will give you $20 for the little pin, and I will put it away until you come again to get it. It pleases me to do this."

"You are good," Ruth said, as he counted out the bills. "I think God sent me here."

The old man shook his head in negation. "We can never be sure of those things," he said. (To Be Continued)

GROOM LOSES BRIDE

TIFFIN, O. — Beryl Hill, 29-year-old mechanic, appeared in probate court an hour after his marriage to Miss Alma Bean and complained, with tears in his eyes, that the girl's mother had "kidnaped" the bride.

YIELDS 50 YEARS

EAST CANEADEA, N. Y. — At a golden wedding supper for Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lapp, the wedding cake it to a police station and brought was decorated with flowers plucked from the same rose bush which supplied the bride's bouquet 50 years ago.

TOWN'S HONOR AT STAKE

WORCESTER, Mass. — The honor of Winsted, Conn., where violet grow in the winter, it at stake. Fred Blanchard found a live grasshopper on a street near here and brought it to a police station as evidence that "It's June in January."

Human Factor in Army Flying Given Belated Recognition By U. S. Bureau

By RALPH TEATSORTH United Press Staff Correspondent DAYTON, O., Aug. 28. — In the rapid development of aviation by the United States army since the World War, mechanical improvement has been considered almost to the exclusion of the human factor.

Safer planes have been built, greater speed has been attained, higher altitudes have been gained—but little has been done to aid the pilot.

For the first time in 15 years, the army air corps has decided to give more attention to the man at the controls. A new physiological research unit recently was established at Wright Field here to study flying conditions and to provide greater comfort for fliers.

Through betterment of flying conditions, the air corps hopes to obtain greater efficiency from its men, and to safeguard their health. This research work has been in progress only a few weeks and no concrete results have been announced yet. Recommendations will be made as soon as complete data can be obtained.

Oxygen Study First Among the flying problems to receive immediate consideration by the research unit, headed by Capt. Harry G. Armstrong, are the use of oxygen for altitude flying, the physical reaction called "blackout" in high speed turns, proper heating of cockpits, and protection from carbon monoxide gas.

Other problems will be studied as they are presented. Use of oxygen in the past has presented several perplexing questions, answers to which the research unit hopes to find. Many fliers have complained that prolonged use of oxygen apparently has a destructive effect upon the teeth. Medical authorities are not fully convinced this is true but experiments will be made to obtain accurate information.

Technical Details to Be Solved They also hope to determine whether oxygen is preferable for feeding civilians instead of armies.

More Profitable Than Waging Wars

WHEN you have read "Paths of Glory" probably the most talked-of book on the Great War since "All Quiet on the Western Front", it seems rather incongruous to discuss foods that keep armies fit. You find yourself asking—fit for what?

It is well, however, to consider the use of some of these foods which military authorities have found sustaining for soldiers, to make for a race of better civilians.

Foremost, among army rations, probably, is canned meat. "Bully Beef" has gone down in war songs and stories with as many versions as there are verses to "Mae West" or "Armentieres". And for the housewife, who is keeping her family fit and with sufficient energy for "the last long mile", canned meat has a distinct use.

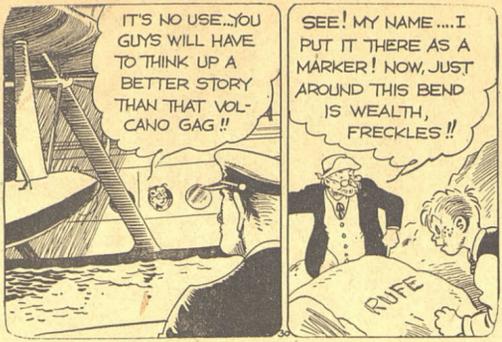

To Keep Them Fit Suppose, for example, that there are lunches to be prepared—lunches for hikes, lunches after swimming, after tennis, or some heavy exertion. The steak in the refrigerator is reserved for dinner, yet a vegetable luncheon is not sustaining enough. It is simple to go to the pantry, and choose at will between canned corned beef, veal loaf, ham loaf, tongue or any of the many canned meats.

It is important to know delicious ways to prepare these meats to vary them. Ham loaf is particularly good with pineapple; veal loaf sautéed and served with fresh asparagus is tempting; canned sliced tongue with macaroni and cheese is a very sustaining meal; and canned steak and onions can be made into a steak sandwich served on toasted rolls and garnished with sliced mushrooms if you like.

FARM CREDIT MEETING SAID BIG SUCCESS

The second sectional short course of the Farm Credit Administration of Houston, held at Texas Christian University, Fort Worth, August 26 and 27, was a great success, according to Claude Strickland, secretary-treasurer of the Cisco NFL association, who, with Bert Britain, Joe Sheridan and Nolan A. Berry, directors of the association, has just returned from the meeting. All who attended had an opportunity to learn more of the operations of the various units of this large financing system for agriculture that has, through its operations, helped thousands of Texas farmers and ranchers to carry on through the period of emergency.

SWEDISH SANDWICHES for summer snacks

WHATEVER Swedes do they believe in doing well, be it the building of bridges, constructing canals, founding universities or simply making sandwiches. To the average American who is accustomed to snatch a cup of mocha and a ham on rye for lunch, the making of a sandwich may seem a negligible culinary achievement. But not so with the Swedes! To them sandwich making is a fine art and sandwich eating a national institution.

So here's a tip from the Swedes to the American housewife who wants to be prepared for those summer guests who always seem to drop in at the very moment when her cupboard is bare. Keep plenty of good bread and butter on hand. Stock your refrigerator with refreshing fruit juices and other drinks, and your pantry with a variety of canned fish, vegetables and meats. Then you can sit back at leisure and enjoy the breeze, serene in the knowledge that you will never be caught unawares.

Secrets from a Swedish Chef "Swedish sandwich making is largely a matter of color combination and artistic arrangement in addition to the delicious taste," declares Paul Moll, chief chef on the S.S. Gripsholm of the Swedish American Line.

Rounds of brown bread or white toast, thickly spread with unsalted butter, form the basis of most Swedish sandwiches. Hard native knäckebröd also is used. Slices of chopped meat, anchovies or egg yolks, strips of smoked fish, discreet trimmings of capers or dill, make tasty morsels fit for a king. Swedish sandwiches are open like the face of a grandfather's clock, and as cheerful and gay as summer flowers. Hearty Food for Sportsmen After tennis or golf or a vigorous swim, folks simply aren't enthusiastic about thin "two-by-threes" with a sparse cream spread. They want something hearty that will stick to their ribs. For the purpose this beef sandwich seems just about right: Beef Sandwich: Cover rounds of lightly buttered brown bread with seasoned chopped canned beef. In the center of each sandwich place a mound of grated egg yolk, garnished with a ring of chopped canned anchovies. Radiating from the center, arrange Vs of chopped onions alternating with strips of chopped capers.

Fancy Fish Sandwiches "The Swede has an eye for color," says Chef Moll, "and even sardines must be jazzed up a bit." Here are some fish sandwiches which will appeal to your eye as well as to your palate: Sardine Sandwich: Bone and skin half a Norwegian sardine, lay it on a round of white buttered toast, and garnish it with chopped lettuce and thin fancy shrimp slices.

Smoked Salmon and Dill Sandwich: Butter crisp knäckebröd and cover it with parallel strips of smoked salmon, so placed that the butter shows between. Sprinkle chopped dill pickle across the center.

Egg and Anchovy Sandwich: Sprinkle brown bread with a center of chopped egg yolk and radiate from this center pieces of canned anchovy. This is another fine combination for a summer snack.

national director of the Elm Creek project, soil conservation service, U. S. D. A.; G. E. Adams, extension service, A. & M. College; Miss Bess Edwards, assistant state home demonstration agent, A. & M. College.

Those attending included secretary-treasurers and directors of a number of National Farm Loan associations and production credit associations, representatives from the extension service of A. & M. College, teachers of vocational agriculture, officials of institutions discounting paper with the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Houston, representatives of farmers cooperative organizations, and others. Strickland reported that those attending were enthusiastic in their comments on the short course.

GAINESVILLE REBUILT FOR COUNTY FAIR

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 30. — Old timers who come here this week to attend the Cooke county fair and pre-centennial exposition, will easily recognize Gainesville as the old cow-town of the '70's.

An outstanding feature of the fair is a complete reproduction of the old courthouse square. The fair opened Wednesday of this week and will continue until Labor Day. The reproduction of the square was based on pictures taken in 1870. W. O. Davis, 88, W. C. Brown, 95, and other pioneers who remember how the city looked at that time, also helped with the designing of the square.

Three log cabins, one of them 125 years old, were taken from their original sites in the cross timbers section of the county, and brought here to serve as a post office, store and bar. More than 10,000 shingles were rived with an old hand frow, and fair officials boast that not a stick of store-bought lumber is used in reconstructing the square.

A 16-foot well was dug in the center of the square and watering troughs were fashioned from logs. The interior of the courthouse is furnished with split log chairs and benches. To add to the pioneer atmosphere, fair officials secured a yoke of oxen to draw a covered wagon, and many women of the town designed old fashioned costumes to wear.

Use of Slugs For Machines Illegal

DALLAS, Aug. 30. — Marble machines may not be exactly legal in many counties, but use of slugs in them is even more a violation of the law, federal officers ruled here. Secret Service Agent A. H. Rebenish ruled that use of slugs instead of five cent pieces is a violation of the federal law even if the coins are used in illegal machines.

Raymond W. Peterson, 21, Dallas, arraigned on charges of using slugs, and released on $500 bond. The fact that the slugs are of the crudest type and don't resemble a five cent coin except in size, makes no difference as far as the federal government is concerned, Rebenish said.

SLAUGHTER PROTESTED CONNEAUGT, O. — Bird lovers in this town are up in arms. They blame the slaughter of hundreds of song birds on a brannish compound that is used by fruit growers to protect their trees from climbing cut worms.
