Cisco's Trades Day Campaign Has Auspicious Beginning

PROGRAM TO BE PRESENTED EVERY SAT.

Featuring the Cisco Lobo band in a concert in front of the city hall Cisco's fall Trade Extension campaign had an auspicious beginning with a program at 7 o'clock yesterday evening.

The band concert occupied an hour with intermissions for announcements to the large crowd of the programs planned for the future. These programs will include Trades Day entertainments each Saturday evening with a master program every first Monday. These first Monday programs will be planned as gala days and efforts to attract people from all over the Cisco section will be made through extensive advertising. Saturday evening programs will begin at 7 o'clock but the first Monday entertainment will take place at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Little time was permitted for advertising the program yesterday, since the campaign was undertaken only a few days previously, but the merchants participating expressed satisfaction with the interest that was aroused and predicted that the results of the campaign will be great.

Merchants Participating

Forty-six business concerns have enrolled in the Trades Day campaign. There are still others who have not been seen by Ted R. Smith who has been employed to take charge of the campaign. Mr. Smith says that he will likely overlook some merchants despite every effort, and to such he requests that they telephone him at the chamber of commerce so that he may call and explain how they may become members and so forth.

TWO ARRESTS ARE MADE IN BETTING TEST

ARLINGTON DOWNS, Sept. 19.—Sheriff J. R. Wright today arrested Dr. Leslie Coulter, of Arlington, and O. O. Franklin, of Vernon, at the track here today for a test of California auction betting under Texas anti-race track gambling laws. They were released on $1,000 bonds for a hearing at Fort Worth.

A crowd of 10,000 saw Lady De Zer owned by J. A. Blackwell and H. H. Faust, win the Texas Futurity feature race of the one-day meet and a purse of $1,500.

Three horses from the stables of Dan Dearing, finished second, third and fourth in the event which was limited to Texas bred two-year-olds. Col. W. T. Waggoner, builder of the plant, said future track programs here depend upon the outcome of the charges against Coulter and Franklin. As it will be several weeks before a ruling can be obtained no meet is likely before spring, he said.

Dr. Prottili, who has been engaged in experiments over a number of years, and has published a book on the possibility of enlarging the field of therapeutics by radiations from blood injections, follows, in a measure, the line of research taken by Sir Albert Abrams and the German, Gurswitsch.

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

HE REDEEMS AND CROWNS:—Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits; who redeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with loving kindness and tender mercies.—Psalm 103: 1, 4.

AN UNFAVORABLE PROSPECT.

Three representatives of the New York group which is claimed to hold power over a pool of more than $3,000,000 of Cisco's municipal bonds left for New York Friday with less of the aplomb with which they had come. The committee which they represented does not own the bonds it is said to control but has simply collected them on the theory that it could effect a settlement. Powers of wide latitude have been surrendered to the committee with the bonds. Naturally the group is eager to effect a settlement in the shortest possible time, the inference being that its expenses and commissions must come from the proceeds of such a settlement.

Sitting in New York is no way to appraise a situation in Cisco and the committee cannot be blamed for having unfounded conceptions with respect to Cisco's ability to pay. The visit to Cisco was therefore an enlightening event for them. It no doubt brought home quite forcibly the fact that Cisco's attitude is not to blame. There is a possibility, in view of this fact, that a definite change in the committee's policy in dealing with the "white elephant" it has acquired will be seen, and Cisco may be permitted to look askance at the litigation now pending in the federal court at Abilene.

What was significant in the visit of three men was the fact that the committee was at a loss for a workable idea for the solution of the question. The city commission was made to realize quite clearly that it cannot depend upon an outside organization, particularly one that can be charged with mercenary motives, to provide a road out of the municipal dilemma. What it can deduct from the present facts is the probability that the committee will demand drastic curtailments in directions that Cisco's future development can ill afford to permit. That is a logical consequence, since the committee has a limited period in which to operate, and it is but human nature to place one's own interests first. The visitors kept their cards pretty well hidden here, but rumors to the effect that considerable expense has been incurred in the pooling of the bonds substantiate a prospect that looks embarrassing and may develop into a serious handicap unless Cisco takes steps to properly protect its interests.

A PERMANENT CAMPAIGN.

Cisco's Trades Extension campaign was initiated last evening with a very successful program on the streets. Because of the limited time in which to prepare and advertise the event it was not expected to attain any great dimensions. Succeeding trades days should increase in magnitude and interest as the good work goes on.

A certain amount of ballyhoo is necessary to put over any program that is aimed at arousing the public enthusiasm. It is first necessary to attract attention. Cisco is entitled to make as much noise as possible, and the methods are dictated largely by what is going on in its competing trade centers.

But the greatest volume of ballyhoo in the world cannot provide a remedy for depressed trade conditions. There must be stabilizing factors behind, and these factors must be those which convince the visitors that the ballyhoo is justified. Bringing crowds to town is one thing; keeping them coming is quite another.

If behind this campaign of interest-getting is found quality and service there is reason to expect that the results of the movement will be permanent and far-reaching. If the visitors feel they have been disappointed our efforts to attract them will prove fruitless.

It is up to the business interests to give satisfaction. They must be able to meet commodity demands as well as their competitors in neighboring cities and to give a character of service that will induce continued visits without the necessity of high sounding round-up campaigns.

In the present instance the real motive behind our trades extension campaign should not look merely for seasonal fall improvement. It should be planned and executed with the idea of permanently tying to Cisco a large section of adjacent territory which it may rightly claim as its own and which by reason of neglect has been allowed to attach itself to other centers. Prosecution of the campaign should eventually be placed in the hands of a permanent organization, perhaps the Retail Merchants association, which should be lifted from the position of a mere indexing agency into an organization charged with promoting business and extending trade influence throughout the section.

Such an arrangement would enable the movement to be carried on indefinitely with cooperation upon a sustained and definite program.

OTHER OPINIONS

THEY TALK TOO MUCH

In the old-fashioned Friends' religious meeting the audience might sit in silence the whole hour, if the Spirit moved no one to make remarks. Gandhi has Monday as his "silence day" so as to find time for inner meditation. An echo of this love for thought rather than words comes in the report of the Associated Press that Gandhi recently chided the Indian conference because it talks interminably, without getting anywhere. Can it be that India's saint put his finger on one of the noise evils of western civilization? Members of Parliaments, Congresses and Legislatures talk entirely too much, especially when stenographers record their speeches for publication. A famous political writer of Cromwell's time urged him to bar out clergymen and lawyers from Parliament, and to allow no discussion of measures except in committee, the main body missions and problems gave significance to an early council in Jerusalem. Paul and Barnabas had returned to Antioch in Syria from their missionary journey. The church there had heard them tell the story of all that had been accomplished through them, and especially of the conquest of the Gospel among the Gentiles. It was under these circumstances that certain men from Judea began to teach that there could be no salvation without the fulfillment of certain requirements of the Jewish law. Dispute at once arose as Paul and Barnabas opposed such teachings, and it was this that led to their going up to Jerusalem to discuss with the apostles and elders these questions. At Jerusalem, however, the contentious issues were not easily settled. The whole controversy broke out afresh. Peter took a good stand, pointing out that he had himself ministered to the Gentiles and that as the Gospel had brought a vital experience of religion to them, they should not bring the Gentile Christians under a yoke which, as he said, "neither they nor their fathers were able to bear." With a clearness to which he did not always adhere in further controversy, he put the matter of salvation upon the basis of the grace of God in Christ Jesus. Paul told the story of the miracles and wonders that he had seen wrought among the Gentiles in his Text: Acts 15-22-29; Gal. 2:1, 2, 9, 10.

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Sept. 20, The Council in Jerusalem. Acts 15:22-29; Gal. 2:1, 2, 9, 10.

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D., Editor of The Congregationalist

The very success of any ministry or mission brings its inevitable problems. The spreading of new truth and its effects upon many conflicts and many types of people quickly produces problems through differences of opinion and through misunderstandings. This was particularly true of the new and vital religion associated with Jesus of Nazareth.

The variety of experiences in the early church, as well as the variety of types, led inevitably to controversies and conflicts. Many contended that the form in which the new religion had come to them was the only form in which it could be rightly and properly held.

Apparently, also, there arose problems of authority in the church. Jerusalem was the place of origin of the new religion, and evidently the group of disciples there thought of it as an authoritative center. It would seem, also, that in the churches generally there was a looking to the mother church at Jerusalem.

The converging of all these questions and problems gave significance to an early council in Jerusalem. Paul and Barnabas had returned to Antioch in Syria from their missionary journey. The church there had heard them tell the story of all that had been accomplished through them, and especially of the conquest of the Gospel among the Gentiles.

TAX DOLLARS . .

Paid for You by the West Texas
Utilities Company

YOUR business is not the only one which has been faced with the serious problem of ever-mounting tax expenses. Since 1923, the year of this company's organization, taxes paid by the West Texas Utilities Company have increased over 1,200 per cent! In making these tax payments, the West Texas Utilities Company is contributing substantially to the cost of government . . . and relieving you of a considerable burden which otherwise would fall on your shoulders.

If the taxes paid annually by the West Texas Utilities Company could be applied by governmental agencies as efficiently as funds are handled by private enterprises, they would build for you each year: two large city high schools; three completely equipped ward schools; fifteen modern rural schools; a complete water system for a city of 12,000 population, or seven and one-half miles of standard concrete highway.

While this company has had to meet an ever-mounting tax bill and increased cost of equipment and materials . . . you, as a customer, have benefited by rate reductions which make this modern necessity available to you at an average cost sixty per cent lower than was charged before the organization of the West Texas Utilities Company!

Electric service will do your domestic, industrial or farm tasks more efficiently than they can be accomplished by any other method, and the entire cost of such splendid service can be figured in terms of pennies!

Out of every dollar you spend for service, approximately 10 cents is returned to the various governing bodies in the form of tax payments.

Do You Know?

... that the average cost of government per family in 1918 was six times the average family's electric bill—but that through increased political activities the cost of government to the average family is today fifteen times greater than the cost of household electricity?

... that a reduction of 10% in the average family's household electric bill would amount to but $3.00 a year; whereas a reduction of the political racketeering activities alone connected with the cost of government should decrease taxes at least 7%—a reduction sufficient to pay all the nation's household electric bills? Let's work on the political racketeers. There is the easiest place to save.

BY ARMI

It's a strange tale of th' sea that I'm goin' to tell you this time. With my animal pals, Kangy and Singoot, I was cruisin' with an old shipmate of mine, Tops'l Barney. One mornin' th' lookout aloft yelled that a derelict was in sight off th' starb'd bow. She was low in th' water, partly dismantled, and seemed to be abandoned. To make sure that there was nobody aboard I hopped into a boat with my pals and pulled over to her. When we hove alongside I made th' painter of th' boat fast to th' main chains and we climbed aboard. Not a livin' soul was in sight. I hailed good and loud but there was no answer.

Meanwhile, Kangy and Singoot disappeared into a deck-house, but came leaping out with eyes as big as saucers, and right after them, with a big pistol spit-tin' fire, and with a swearin' parrot perched on his shoulder, was a ragged little kid. I was settin' on th' deck, where I had been knocked by Kangy, and I looked with goggle eyes at that fire-eatin' youngster chasin' my pals about th' deck. When they finally headed in my direction I yelled. I thought for a minute that th' kid was goin' to plug me, but when he saw I was just a harmless sailor he almost cried he was that glad to see me. He told me his name was Tim, and that th' derelict was th' Lady Lou. When we were back aboard th' Lanui he told Barney and me how he came to be aboard an abandoned ship.

The next yarn will be a thriller, told by Tim himself.

BERRY PLANTS

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 19. — Four huckleberry plants, each believed to be at least 5,000 years old are being carefully nurtured by Pennsylvania forestry officials in the Tuscarora Forest District in Perry county.

The plants are the only ones of their kind in the world, according to John W. Keller, Deputy Secretary of Forestry in Pennsylvania.

There is no means of propagating them, he said, because the seeds produced by the plants are not fertile.

Unlike the common huckleberry bushes native to Pennsylvania hills, the four plants in the Perry county forest are evergreen known to botanists as Gaylussacia brachycera.

They grow in four neighboring ravines, with one entire plant extending in all directions on the north slope of each ravine and covering about one hundred acres each.

A botanist recently estimated annual growth to be about six inches. From this estimate the foresters computed the ages of the plants to be from 5,000 to 12,000 years and relics of the preglacial periods of the state.

The plants were discovered in 1846. Prior to that Michaux famed French botanist, reported finding one in Virginia, but the discovery was never verified Kelley said.

Sunday Services at The Churches

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH
Sunday school at 9:45 a. m. A class for every age. A work for every worker. Dr. Stuart Pearce of El Paso will preach at 11 a. m. and also at 7:30 p. m. A cordial invitation is extended to all to hear Dr. Pearce, who is recognized as an able and forceful preacher.

HOLY ROSARY CHURCH
Mass will be at 10 a. m. by Rev. P. Ruano. This is the seventeenth Sunday after Pentecost and the Gospel is from St. Matthew XXII, 35-46. We are told that the two great commandments are to love God and our neighbor. We must love our neighbor as ourself. This is easier said than done. Some try to defraud and steal from the federal, state, county or city government without apparently thinking that they are defrauding or stealing from their neighbors because the government means every man, woman and child in the country. So when we act thus we are acting unjustly towards our fellowman. Want of love of our fellow man is the logical cause of the present depression. There is enough for all in this world but many are not satisfied with enough. — REV. M. COLLINS.

GRACE LUTHERAN CHURCH
Corner Sixteenth street and F avenue street. Sunday school and Bible class at 9:30 a. m. Morning service at 10:30 a. m. Evening service at 8 p. m. Topic for morning service: "Jesus Teaching the Sadducees Concerning the Resurrection"; for evening service: "The Good Angels." We welcome you to these services. — ARTHUR RATHJEN, pastor.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

Matthew 24:35 furnishes the golden text: "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away." The following passages from the Bible (Psalms 39:6-7) are included in the lesson sermon: "Surely every man walketh in a vain show; surely they are disquieted in vain; he heappeth up riches, and knoweth not who shall gather them. And now, Lord, what wait I for? my hope is in thee."

EPISCOPAL CHURCH

AUSTIN, Sept. 19.—The highway commission, meeting here the early part of the week, will start about $4,500,000 more of new construction work in many counties, added to the heavy list of work already under way. This will provide employment for several thousand persons through the winter months and contribute materially to better economic conditions.

The people who get the benefits by using the roads are paying the greater part of highway building costs, and this is one form of public improvements at which those concerned have little kick.

The commission likely at this meeting also will order bids on erecting its new highway building in Austin, on the site of the historic half-century-old Travis county jail.

Waco, Beaumont, Austin, have announced municipal budget-cutting. The state is at under a program of official salary-pruning. Official jobs have multiplied, and salaries have climbed up until in many cases they are out of line with the average income of those who pay the bill in taxes. They can be cut in many cases without crippling the service, and still leave the employees receiving a greater commodity value than represented by more

by LAURA LOU BROOKMAN

Author of "MAD MARRIAGE"

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Pretty Norma Kent, 20-year-old secretary, marries Mark Travers, son of F. M. Travers, millionaire estate dealer, in spite of the father's opposition and threats to disinherit Mark.

The story opens in Marlboro, middle western metropolis. Mark sells his expensive roadster to get money for the honeymoon and he and Norma go to fashionable Blue Springs. There Norma meets Hollis Stone, and it is evident from the girl's manner that she has met Stone before and for some reason seems to fear him.

Their money is soon gone, partly due to Mark's gambling. With $500 borrow from Stone the couple return to Marlboro. Mark sets out on a round of pleasure seeking instead of hunting a job. He introduces Norma to Natalie Price, a debutante who has long hoped to marry Mark. When their funds dwindle again Mark and Norma move to a cheap apartment. Mark begins to hunt work seriously. He gets one job and loses it. Then he becomes a floorwalker in Blossomdale's department store. Norma practices rigid economy at home. When Mark's mother comes to call on him and urges the young man to seek reconciliation with his father Mark refuses. He and Norma spend a happy Thanksgiving Day together. Next morning Norma, on a shopping trip, hears a familiar voice beside her. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXVII

The two girls had almost reached Norma. One of them was talking eagerly. It was the shrill, high-pitched voice that caught her attention. Where had she heard that voice before?

Norma glanced from one face to the other. The taller girl, the one whose voice seemed familiar, wore a green suit with luxurious collar and trimming bands of dark fur. Her companion was in brown. Another instant and they were beside her. The girl in green looked directly at Norma. A fleeting change of expression crossed her face. In that instant Norma recognized Natalie Price.

"Oh—how do you do?" Natalie's voice dropped to a cooing sweetness. Her dark brows arched with their subtle hint of aloofness.

Norma, startled, said, "How do you do?"

The girls passed. Norma stood at the edge of the sidewalk, about to step down when the traffic light flashed from red to green. She heard Natalie Price's quick, high-pitched voice floating backward. "That, my dear, was Mark Travers' wife!" She heard the other girl's incredulous, "No—but, Nat, such funny clothes!"

The rest of the words were lost. Six words spoken by a stranger—why should Norma feel those six words were to scorch their way into her brain and remain forever? Six words! But it wasn't the words that brought quick, hot circles to Norma's cheeks. It was the way they were spoken. As though for Norma to be Marie's sister or wife was something beyond belief. How dare they sneer at her "funny clothes"? Because she was trying to help Mark to save his money—was that something for these girls who had everything to laugh at?

"Funny clothes?" Her coat and hat were not funny! They were plain and cheap and the same as hundreds of girls who worked in downtown offices wore. Norma was suddenly bitterly angry. Her small gloved hands dug into her coat pockets. Oh, what could she do to show Natalie Price and those others how little she cared for the way they said "did"? What could she do to let them know that if she wore cheap clothing it was their ill-manners and discourtesy that were ugly?

The street signal flashed red but Norma was so preoccupied she did not notice it for several moments. Then she realized the others about her had gone on. She crossed the street hurriedly.

"Funny clothes" that girl had jeered. Norma caught the reflection of herself in a plate glass window. Well, she probably looked "funny" to Natalie Price's crowd because her coat wasn't an exclusive creation from Fanchon's or Monet's. Her hat too— that was "funny" because it had been bought from a bargain table and reshaped according to Norma's own taste.

She forgot her morning's errands and walked a block past the five-and-ten store where she was to begin her purchases. What right has Natalie Price to set herself up as a judge of other people? Norma raged inwardly. "What has she ever done to make herself better than anyone else?" She knew without need to hesitate the answers to those questions. Natalie's father was rich. Natalie was "in society," her name and pictures in newspaper society columns frequently. But those were not the things that mattered. What gave Natalie Price her tremendous advantage was the fact she belonged to the life Mark had always known before his marriage. If Natalie sneered at Mark's bride it meant others would do so.

Was she so pitifully a failure? Was she a hindrance to Mark? "But he married me!" Norma told herself defensively. "He knew Natalie first and instead he married me."

The mood burned only a little less fiercely when later she stood at a counter piled high with dishes and selected a blue-flowered saucer to take the place of the one she had broken. Lucky to find the same pattern in stock. Well, the oil cloth was next on the list.

told herself a little too insistently. She was remembering that only yesterday she had declared nothing was lacking from her happiness. That was when Mark had praised the Thanksgiving dinner she had cooked.

She said to the blond girl behind the counter, "I want a yard and a half of that blue oil cloth. No, the plain piece."

Mark Travers looked up as the newcomer leaned his elbows on the lunch counter.

"Why—Johnson! I'm a blue-nosed hobo if it isn't the old boy himself! How're you, Johnson?"

The newcomer drew back and thrust out a hand in greeting.

"Glad to see you, Mark," he said heartily. "This is a surprise! Didn't recognize you when I came in. I—I'm very well, thank you. Looking first-rate yourself!"

Mark laughed. "Sure, I'm O. K. Tell me, Johnson, how's the old place bobbing along? Miss me down there?"

They were sitting at a drug store lunch counter. A half-consumed sandwich lay on the plate before Mark. He raised a heavy porcelain cup to his lips. The man beside him was middle-aged. He wore a gray hat and dark overcoat. Beneath the rim of the hat the close-clipped hair showed a grayish tinge. Johnson had the manner of a quiet, efficient man who has spent most of his life executing other men's orders. He had done that. Johnson for 15 years had been a reliable cog in the smoothly operating mechanism building up F. M. Travers' real estate holdings and F. M. Travers' annual dividends. At 55 Johnson was in charge of the department to which Mark had so casually and briefly lent his services the few months he had been in his father's employ. And at 55 Johnson received a salary considerably less than that which had been paid to Mark.

Traditional homage to all persons and things associated with the name of Travers, Mark repeated. "Oh, we're getting on about as usual," he answered Mark's question. "Never very much changed, you know. Yes, indeed, we miss you."

The big boy in the white coat across the counter paused significantly—almost beligerently—in front of Johnson. "Whassa order?" he demanded in a voice with a nasal quality.

Johnson hesitated. "Let me see—" He studied the menu chalked on the mirror-lined wall. "A fried egg sandwich," he announced. "And coffee. No cream please. And apple pie!"

The order given, he turned again to Mark. "You know, I'm really glad to see you," he repeated. "We've missed you. I read—er, about your marriage. Of course I wish you and Mrs. Travers every happiness."

"Thanks. Guess I haven't really been missed around the office, though. Little enough I ever did there."

"But you'd been with us such a short time. You were getting the thing very well—doing splendidly—"

Mark was not interested. He interrupted. "Tell me, how's Dad looking?"

"Oh, he's well. About as he always is, should say that."

"Glad to hear it. You probably know a certain unpopularity rests about his one and only son—"

"Oh, I'm sorry! To tell the truth I had heard a little something of the sort. But it will clear away, I'm sure. It will clear away in just a little time."

Mark's eyes had suddenly rested on the clock across the room. He was on his feet, reached in his pocket and shoved some coins across the counter.

"Got to beat it!" he exclaimed. "Got to be back at 1:15. See you again soon, Johnson. S'long!"

Before his companion could frame a reply the outer door swung shut on Mark's departing back. A girl in a red coat climbed on the seat the young man had vacated. Johnson looked futilely over one shoulder, readjusted his spectacles and attacked the wedge of pie.

That night Mark spoke to Norma about meeting his former associate. "Funny old duck," he described Johnson. "Good-hearted, though. Oh, well—he probably liked to get away from the place occasionally."

It was the third day afterward that Mark, entering the drug store lunch room, heard his name called. He glanced about. There on the third chair from the end of the row sat Johnson.

"Hello!" Mark sang back cheerfully. "Getting to be a steady customer, aren't you?" He climbed on the nearest seat.

wants to see you about an important matter. What that may be I wasn't informed. I judged, though, that it might be about business. He seemed very anxious about this matter."

"Listen, Johnson, this is on the level, is it?"

"Oh, absolutely! You know me better than to doubt me. You know I wouldn't interfere in your private affairs nor those of your father. I'm carrying out instructions, Mark."

"But I've got a job. I don't have time to go down there."

"Any time you set I'm sure will suit Mr. Travers. If you could stop at the office when you've finished this afternoon he'll be waiting for you."

"I couldn't make it until 5:30. Might be after that."

"Then I'll tell him you'll be there at that time! He'll be pleased. I'll tell him to expect you at 5:30."

Johnson had risen. He seemed delighted that his mission had been a success. Before Mark could interrupt the man was gone. The food Johnson had ordered remained untouched on the counter.

Mark frowned. Here was a situation indeed! Johnson had rushed away assuming Mark was committing himself when in actuality he had done nothing of the sort. "I don't have to go," Mark told himself. "I don't have to go just because Johnson thinks I will. Now, what in the world is Dad up to? Does he really mean it, I wonder?"

Complete surrender on the part of F. M. Travers seemed too much to expect. Yet his father had sent for him. There was consolation in that thought. If Mark went it would be because his father had made the first move toward reconciliation. That was indeed a triumph!

"And if I don't go," came the afterthought, "old Johnson will probably get Hades!"

Mark lunched with the problem still unsettled. He thought of it repeatedly throughout the afternoon. At 5:45 he was standing in his father's luxuriously carpeted private office.

"You mean," Mark said, slowly, "that you'll do all that? You really mean it?"

The older Travers leaned back in his desk chair. "I will. That and more! I'm only asking you to meet my terms and here they are—"

When we pay what we borrow we make progress . . . we build up . . . we acquire. When we merely pay interest on what we borrow we mark time. We all have a certain unsound feeling about a loan that runs on and on—never getting any smaller.

Obviously a loan is something that should be repaid . . . otherwise its usefulness has been destroyed.
