MONEY CHANGERS IN THE TEMPLE

Ever since Constantine erected his banner "In Hoc Signo Vincis" over his hosts to acknowledge the religious supremacy of the Christian faith in his empire, the church has been wooed by designing men and women for subversive ends.

Why this attraction to the church? Why this appeal to its affections or its prejudices? For the very simple reason that the church, as an organization represents in the political and commercial sense a bloc, a community of common sentiment, a human stratum, a mass mind responsive to a common note which, if struck, will capture its affections for the man or woman who seeks a market, an influence or a vote.

The church is a great institution today because of its strength of character to remain true to its foundation, to hold itself aloof from such contamination, to keep its altars free of commercialism and separate its motives from any suspicion of economic gain or sinister intent.

There has lately sprung up in the land another effort to entrap the influence of the churches, a plan that bears the stamp of genius in its ambition and daring appeal. It is known as the Goodwin plan. Under the pious guise of certain "ethical commitments" which ostensibly would enforce Christian and Jewish ideals of social justice in the operation of the enterprises favored, the corporation formed to carry out these "commitments" would draft corps of workers from local churches who would enlist families of their churches to buy only such goods as are listed in the Goodwin catalogue—a range of commodities covering practically every need of life. Thus the Goodwin corporation, successful in its bald enterprise to "steal" the affections of the great bodies of American faith, would deliver a solid market of millions of souls to its listed manufacturers in return for:

- 1.—The manufacturers listed in the catalogue would pay two per cent commission on sales to the church women who may turn this commission over to the treasuries of their churches or local church societies.

- 2.—Three per cent of the total volume of business would be spent in NEWSPAPER or other advertising in the area, and

- 3.—The Goodwin Corp. would be paid one and one-half per cent of the church business for its supervisory duties in seeing that the ethical "commitments" agreed to by the listed manufacturers are faithfully observed.

The Daily News, regardless of the fact that three per cent of the gross business in its trade territory would probably swell its advertising volume, can see nothing but the most sinister suggestions in the scheme. In the first place to offer a church economic security is to contend its very reason for being. And that is just what the Goodwin plan proposes to do. In the second place, to put a great body of church people, whose religious object is not competition but the strengthening of the social and religious fabric that underlies sound economic life, in the position of a consuming bloc in competition is to throw a violent disruption into the solid body of its faith. There are few moves more calculated to stir dissension than would be the act of setting up a private corporation as the virtual dictator of what members of a church should purchase, often to the detriment of many of its supporting members in competing lines of trade.

The wise church and the wise pastor will maintain their religious functions too far removed from commercial or economic taint to permit such a dangerous invasion. They will appreciate the source of the strength of the church, and keep its course firmly in the path of the great principles by which it has come down the course of these thousands of years in an ever-broadening service to humanity, free of such motives as the Goodwin plan and similar plans would impute to it, and strong in the confidence of a people who, though they may often complain of its censorship and its refusal to compromise with material purposes, yet recognize and admire in it the mighty force by which the essential moral fabric of the nation is sustained.

Now as never, is it essential that the church shall hold true to its ideals and its tradition, and, if anything, recede even further from any suggestion of commercialism into an atmosphere of sublime authority from which it may exercise yet more and more the necessary influence upon which the country so vitally depends for its economic recovery.

The church was not organized to furnish a market for somebody. The temple is no place for the moneychangers.

BANKS RESTORED TO OPERATION

A federal treasury bulletin carries the news that 21 national banks with deposits of $17,000,000 were restored to full time operation during the first nine days of December. Many of these banks with $14,000,000 of frozen and $708,000,000 of unrestricted deposits had been in the hands of conservators and were issued licenses to resume business or were granted charters for new banks. In addition to this, eight national banks have received treasury approval for their reorganization plan. This is winter time but the thawing out process of bank securities will continue until spring time comes again. Hundreds of banks were placed in the hands of conservators. Hundreds have been thawed out and permitted to resume business.

Borah Will Lead Battle Against Tax Exempt Securities

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD

The American congress will convene for its first regular session in the month of January. There are democratic and republican senators and republican progressives who have banded together for a proposal that calls for taxation of $40,000,000 of tax exempt outstanding federal, state and municipal securities.

Washington is the seat of government of the republic. Washington temporarily at least, is the financial city of the American world.

Washington is going to be crowded with mourners as well as with lobbyists during the winter months and far into springtime when the real showdown takes place between the supporters of the New Deal administration and its policies and the so-called right wing of conservatives who are organizing for a gigantic struggle for control in the coming elections in 1934 and 1936.

Fifty lines in the senate were split and then re-split. There were bolters from all sides and factions.

When the showdown came the amendment was adopted by a vote of 45 to 37. Majority Leader Joseph Taylor Robinson and Chmn. Pat Harrison of the finance committee voted against the amendment which was sponsored by Sen. Bennett Clark of Missouri.

The Potomac ready for the emergencies. He has very bluntly announced that congress should impose the taxation and let the issue of constitutionality be decided by the supreme court of the United States.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE Three Cisco young men of varied tastes have been working at Hamilton on a pipe line job. They roomed together. One of them keeps a diary and writes in it every night a brief history of the happenings of the day. The habit is a splendid one. It provides for old age a life in retrospect, sharp and fresh in its details. It also, perhaps, may serve the utility of determining some vital issue in future contest. A court, peeping discreetly into its secrets, would accord its record more standing than a verbal recitation of memory. Not only in those fields is a diary a valuable asset, but the day-by-day keeping of such a record is a disciplinary thing. A great psychologist has said that the regular performance of some task has the effect of strengthening the will and character.

So one of the boys kept a diary and read good literature at night. The nocturnal scribbling and reading kept his roommates awake. One of them, who handles pipe lines as if they were matches and likes the outdoors, wants to go to sleep when the day's stint is done. He believes that the day was made to work in and the night to sleep — certainly not to be spent in hours of turning midnight oil merely to keep a record that somebody else might read.

He growled about the scribbling and the reading and spoke feelingly about "high-powered" literature, etc. But the more scholarly of the trio continued unsympathetic with his critic's complaints and devoured many pages of the "high-powered" literature.

While the one fed his mind with knowledge and the other complained because he could not feed his strength with sleep, the third, a mischievous scamp who once was named all-state basket ball captain, sat back and made devilish medicine.

And this is the letter George Van Hofn handed me to print in the Daily News:

Dear Santa Claus: I have been a good boy. Please bring me a diary and some high class literature. Thanking you, Santa, I am Your little friend, George Ernie Wilson. P. S.—I want one like Milton Connolly's.

NATURE AND HUMAN NATURE

RELAXATION Living under modern conditions has been described as "the strenuous life" in words used and illustrated by Theodore Roosevelt. Inventions have made distance to mean little any more, and time to mean everything. A man is enabled, and forced, to live nationally now where once he lived neighborly. Trying to occupy so wide a world leads to a tenacity that would have distracted completely the wits of our grandfathers.

It is nerve that gives tension to existence. That may take a little. But a bow or a harp may become senseless and as useless through over-stringing as though unstringing. Prolonged tension may break the nerves. Of course one cannot go back to a plodding, plenty-of-time sort of living. But since the same needs of man that were once satisfied by long days of machineless labor are now met in a quicker way, one has the advantage of leisure time. Leisure is an opportunity for relaxation. In relaxation the nerves find rest from their labors. One should not be distressed but encouraged to find himself occasionally with his work all done up. There is his chance!

THE first step is to throw the switch that connects with outside activities. That may take a little effort, but the remainder of relaxation to be comparatively effortless, for the reason that regular activities are strenuous effort. Don't fret because you don't relax. Instead of counting the sheep as they me their way one by one through the fence until they have lulled you into insensibility, you had better drop the gate and let the sheep go. Let every thing alone and let go. These times of leisure between times of activity are our opportunities to let the body and mind and soul come back. Then will we be readier for the next task. Work is necessary, but so is rest. "The sabbath was made for man." — W. F. BRUCE

The UNKNOWN BLOND by Laura Lou BROOKMAN

BEGIN HERE TODAY DAVID BANISTER undertakes to find out who killed TRACY KING, orchestra leader, in his hotel apartment. Banister is an author and former newspaper man. He works on the murder case with GAINES, star reporter on the Post.

Among those suspected are JULIE FRANCE, blond and pretty and known to have visited King shortly before his death; HERMAN SCURLACH who wrote King a threatening letter; and JOE PARROTT, down-and-out vaudeville actor. It is also known that MELVINA HOLLISTER, middle-aged spinster, had quarreled with King recently.

AL DRUGAN, friend of King's, is found dead in a wrecked automobile.

Bannister persuades the police chief to let Juliet come to his aunt's home, ostensibly as a guest, on the theory that if the girl believes herself free they can learn more about her.

Parrott is located in St. Louis, and a detective is sent to bring him to Tremont. Banister gets out the old wedding picture he found in King's bedroom, wraps it, addresses it and drops it in a mail box.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXI BANISTER met Gaines in the corridor outside the detectives' quarters. He asked, "Are they here yet?"

"Got here 20 minutes ago," Gaines told him. "I was looking for you. McNeal's going to let us know as soon as we can see him."

They went into the detective bureau office. Fleming was there and another reporter, Fleming said, "I hope this isn't going to take very long. I've got to get away from here."

A buzzer sounded then and the man at the desk arose. He went to the door of McNeal's office and a moment later turned.

"You can get in now," he said, motioning with his head. The four newspaper men filed into the adjoining room.

Two men stood almost in the center of the room. One of them was slender with stooped shoulders. He had dark eyes that were round and very bright, like small, shining buttons. The man's face was sallow and lined. There was nothing about the face that suggested youth, yet he might have been young. Anywhere from 25 to 40. His clothing hung loosely and was wrinkled. One arm he kept close to his side. There was a hand about his wrist, fastened by a chain to the wrist of the man who stood beside him.

McNeal said, "Well, Parrott, here are some newspaper men to see you. Boys, this is Joe Parrott."

The man with the stooped shoulders said nothing. His sullen lips twitched faintly.

Gaines stepped forward. "How're you," he said easily. "My name's Gaines—of the Post. Have a cigar?"

Parrott accepted the cigar, held it to the lighted match that Gaines provided. "Thanks," he said, but there was no gratitude in his expression.

"Won't you tell us all about it?" Gaines went on.

"I ain't got nothin' to say," the words were muttered, half-inaudible.

"Oh, but you must have! You're in a jam here and we want your side of the story."

"I ain't got nothin' to say!" Parrott repeated belligerently, "except that I didn't do nothin'. They've got no right to keep me here. They got no right to do it!"

"Well, then," said Gaines, "let's hear about it."

But that, apparently, was not Parrott's idea. His lips set in their sullen line again and did not open.

THE room was quiet for several moments. Then Fleming ventured a question. "Do you admit you were here in Tremont a week ago, the night Tracy King was murdered?" he asked.

"Still no answer."

"Well," said McNeal from his desk, "you've seen him, boys. I guess there's no use wasting any more time. Take him back to his cell, Joe."

The man whose wrist was attached to Parrott's turned. "Put out that cigaret," he ordered.

Parrott dropped the cigaret to the floor and Gaines stepped forward, crushing it under his heel. "So long," he said cheerily.

It was just before Parrott reached the door that he looked back. His eyes were on Gaines and Fleming. "Listen, you wise guys!" he said. "I'll tell you this much. They ain't goin' to keep me here! I got friends, see? I ain't goin' to stay in no jail. I got friends that will get me out of here. I ain't do nothin' and they can't prove nothin' and I ain't goin' to stay here—!"

The detective had his hand on the door and with a jerk opened it. "That'll do," he said. "Come on. Step on it."

Then the door swung shut. Gaines gave a low whistle. "Sweet customer," he said to McNeal. "Sweet, gentle customer!"

"We're used to 'em," the captain growled. His voice sounded weary.

"What's the dope on him?" Fleming wanted to know.

"We're holding 'im," McNeal told them "for questioning. We know he was here the night Tracy King was killed. At least we know he was here at 8 o'clock that night. I've got witnesses to prove it. We've got the stenographic record of Drugan's story that Parrott had made trouble for King. We've also got something else I'd rather not say anything about just now—"

THE reporters urged but it was of no avail. McNeal refused to say any more. Banister noticed again how tired the detective captain looked. Well, a strain such as he had been under for the past week was enough to make anyone look that way.

"Drop in again late this afternoon," McNeal told them in parting. "I may have something for you."

"A confession?" Gaines's grin, as he said it, was impish. Three times McNeal had predicted a confession and each prediction had failed.

"No, not a confession. Now get out of here!"

Bannister left the building and walked across town. He stopped at the Evening Post office and chatted for half an hour with Jim Paxton. They talked about the murder and affairs at Washington and the fallen art of boxing, and then Banister departed.

He ran into two friends he had known years before and had to do some quick thinking to avoid a dinner invitation. It was nearly

SISTER MARY'S RECIPES

This is the fifth of a series of six articles by Sister Mary providing choice food, candy and cake recipes, besides helpful suggestions, for your Christmas dinner.

BY SISTER MARY

NEARLY everyone has a sweet tooth and during the holiday season it's all too easy to eat too much candy. Although candy is an excellent food when eaten in moderation, too much of it tends to satiate the appetite while furnishing only one body need—fuel.

Consequently you will find a few confections made with dried fruits delicious and entirely satisfactory to mix with the usual Christmas candies. Dates, figs, raisins, prunes, apricots and peaches can be used to make inviting "sweetmeats."

Syrian Sweets One-half pound figs, 1-2 pound seedless raisins, 1-2 pound nuts, powdered sugar, 1 tablespoon strained honey, 1 tablespoon lemon juice over the figs and raisins and combine with the nut meats. Put through medium knife of food chopper. Add honey and lemon juice and mix thoroughly. Roll into a sheet about an inch thick on a board sprinkled with powdered sugar. Cut in squares and roll in sugar.

Candy Fruit Cake One-half cup stoned and chopped dates, 4 tablespoons shredded citron, 4 tablespoons each of candied orange and lemon peel, 1-2 can pean nut meats, 1-2 cup Brazil nut meats, 2 ounces dipping chocolate, powdered sugar. Put nuts and fruit through food chopper. Melt chocolate over hot water and stir into mixture. Work with a fork until perfectly blended. Pack in a buttered home-made loaf pan cut in small oblong blocks and roll in powdered sugar.

Stuffed Dates One-half pound dates (about 30), 5 prunes, 1-2 cup pean nut meats, 4 tablespoons preserved ginger, 4 tablespoons seedless raisins, strained honey. WASH dates and remove stones. Wash and steam prunes. Remove pits and put fruit and nuts through food chopper. Add honey to make mixture moist enough to hold together. Fill dates with mixture and roll in granulated sugar.

Tomorrow's Menu BREAKFAST: Baked apples with cereal and cream, fried dried beef, crisp toast, milk, coffee. LUNCHEON: Creamed oysters on toast, celery, brown Betty with hard sauce, milk, tea. DINNER: Stuffed hearts of veal with tomato sauce, potatoes with parsley butter, pineapple and cheese ball salad, mince pie, milk, coffee.

A good stuffing for either dates or prunes is made of 2 tablespoons orange peel, 4 tablespoons shredded coconut and 8 dates. Wash dates and remove pits and put through the food chopper with the orange peel and coconut. Mix well and add 1 teaspoon orange juice to make moist.

Spiced Fruit Balls One-half cup pitted prunes, 1-2 cup pitted dates, 1 cup seeded raisins, 1-2 cup nut meats, 1-2 cup figs, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Wash fruit thoroughly through several waters. Drain and dry between paper towels. Put through food chopper with nuts. Add cinnamon and lemon juice and mix well. Make into small balls and roll in powdered sugar.

The UNKNOWN BLOND By Laura Lou BROOKMAN @1932 NEA DEVICES. BEGIN HERE TODAY DAVID BANNISTER undertakes to find out who killed TRACY KING, orchestra leader. In his hotel apartment, Bannister is an author and former newspaper man. He works on the murder case with GAINEX, star reporter on the Post. Famous but unknown are JULIET FRANCE, blond and pretty and known to have visited King shortly before his death; HERMAN SCURLACH who wrote King a threatening letter; and JOE PARROTT, down-and-out vaudeville actor. It is also known that MELVINA HOLISTER, middle-aged minister, had they can learn more about her. A DRUGAN, friend of King's, is found dead in a wrecked automobile. Bannister promises the police chief to let Juliet come to his home, ostensibly as a guest on the show. But if the girl believes herself free, they can learn more about her. Juliet France is in St. Louis and a detective is sent to bring her back. Bannister, walking home one evening, sees Juliet France just ahead of him. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXII THE girl did not see Bannister. She was walking rapidly, her hands in her pockets. In the dim light from the street lamp, he caught a glimpse of the green suit, knew at once that it was Juliet France. But where had she been and what had she been doing? Bannister cursed at Jordan, the "house man" who was supposed to be keeping a constant watch over the girl. Then he saw the mail box. It stood on the corner, not a dozen feet from where she had been when he first noticed her. So that was the explanation! Bannister quickened his step and caught up with her. "Aren't you afraid of getting lost?" he asked. She turned. Was it fright or confusion that brought the girl's hand to her throat? It was suddenly she smiled. "Oh, it's you! I—I didn't recognize you." They walked along together. "It's dark," Bannister objected, "and you're a long way from the house. Aren't you afraid to be out alone?" Juliet France shook her head. "No," she said. "What is there to be afraid of?" "Nothing—I hope." She looked up at him and her eyes were not smiling now. They studied his face searchingly. After an instant she said, "I just wanted a little walk. I didn't think there could be any harm in that. I've been in the house all day—" coal on the fire. Bannister lowered his voice discreetly. "Listen," he said, "did you know Miss France left the house this afternoon?" Jordan's eyes were reproachful. "I know it, Mr. Bannister, but what could I do about it? Mrs. Hewlett sent me to the grocery store to buy some butter! I didn't know the girl had gone until after I got back. Listen, if I've got to be running around doing errands all the time I might as well not be here. How do you think I can keep track of what that girl's doing if I've got to be an errand boy?" Bannister interrupted, promising to do what he could about the situation. He'd have a talk with his aunt, he said. Jordan was right; he couldn't keep watch over affairs in the household if he were sent on errands. "She did it this morning too," the policeman went on, aggrieved. "Sent me to the dry cleaners. It took over half-an-hour and I ran nearly all the way back. No sir, I can't be responsible if things are going to go on like that!" Bannister assured him that they wouldn't. Privately he wondered how he was to manage Aunt Kate, but managed she must be. "I think the girl went out to mail a letter," he confided. "I met her over on Lawrence avenue right beside the mail box. Did she do anything telephoning?" Jordan shook his head. "I kept a close watch for that," he said. "When I wasn't running errands!" Evidently his pride had been offended seriously. "She didn't go near the phone while I was here."

PIONEER OF WEST TEXAS CATTLE RANGE BURIED HERE THURSDAY

Another of that vanguard of pioneer cattlemen who opened up this section of the state to modern civilization passed this week with the death here of R. F. Weddington, 83-year-old veteran of a lifetime spent in a ranching business that extended from Fort Worth, as a small hamlet, to the western fringe of white civilization in his younger days.

Mr. Weddington, who was associated with some of the most colorful characters of the early range in the ownership of great herds of cattle and farflung expanses of unfenced grasslands, was buried here yesterday in services from the First Presbyterian church. The Masonic lodge organized and consolidated his ranching interests in this section after having engaged in stock raising enterprises that began at Ft. Worth, where he once owned what is now Arlington Heights, and extended westward to finally spread over practically all of the land of what is now Terry, Yoakum and Runnels counties in the ownership of which he was associated with Cass Edwards, another noted west Texas cattle baron of the early days.

After his beginnings in Fort Worth, he moved to Fort Griffin, on the banks of the Clear Fork, a military outpost teeming with frontier life with its buffalo hunters, its soldiers, Indians and western bad men.

Moved Here
From there he moved to Albany affiliated at the grave. Dr. J. which, as order laid a firmer hand upon the wild elements of the west, was developing into an important cattle center, and continued to accumulate lands and herds. From Albany his course took him to Cisco where he remained until he died.

He was married at Albany to Miss Beatrice Hamilton who, with their two children, survive him. The children are Bob Weddington and Mrs. Theresa Weddington McMerrell. Bob has been in active management of his father's estate since about four years ago. Mrs. McMerrell is a well-known dramatic arts instructor and directs the department of dramatic arts at Randolph college.

Having lived a strenuous life, Mr. Weddington continued active until about five years ago when he was dragged by a horse at his ranch. Recovering from the effects of that accident, it was not until about three years before he died that he showed any noticeable effects of a decline in his physical energy. He was confined to his room only three days before death which came as he slept Wednesday afternoon at 5:55 o'clock.

He was born in Tennessee on August 3, 1844.

SISTER MARY'S RECIPES

BY SISTER MARY
NEA Service Staff Writer

SOMETIMES it seems that "tempus fugit" faster in the kitchen than any other place, and that if one takes one's eyes from the vegetables on the stove, they take it upon themselves to burn.

The best of cooks occasionally makes mistakes, but her true art is shown by her ability to turn the failure into a success.

Any vegetable that has just started to burn can be placed—in its cooking pan—into a larger pan of cold water. The vegetable then should be shaken out of the burned pan into a fresh pan or bowl, leaving any scorched material in the pan. If not cooked until tender, a little boiling water can be added and the cooking finished. Season and serve as usual. If things have not gone too far, most of the vegetable can be served without a taint of burn.

Shake Instead of Stir
An excellent habit of precaution for the new cook is that of shaking the sauce pan in which a vegetable is cooking. Often the smooth-cut, flat surface of a vegetable sticks and burns before the water is cooked. Shaking prevents this without crushing the vegetable as stirring might do. Potatoes and sliced carrots are examples of vegetables that often scorch because of this flat surface.

Too much salt often has spoiled the soup. A remedy for this is to add from half a cup to a whole cup of sliced raw potatoes to the kettle of soup. Let stand ten or fifteen minutes, remove potatoes and serve. The potatoes absorb the excess salt.

If the mayonnaise separates, take another egg yolk in a fresh bowl and slowly beat in the curdled dressing, continuing as usual until all the lemon juice and oil is used.

If a custard sauce curdles, beat it well with a Dover beater. The same beater often will beat the lumps out of white sauce that has been made in too big a hurry. If the sauce is very lumpy it can be rubbed through a fine sieve and reheated.

If the breakfast cereal contrived to lump despite vigorous stirring a heavy wire whisk or a strong Dover beater will beat out the lumps and make the cereal appetizingly smooth.

Remedy for Curdled Soup
A tomato cream soup that shows an inclination to curdle can be converted into a thick tomato puree by adding butter and flour rubbed together in the proportion of 1 tablespoon flour to each cup of soup. One tablespoonful of fine sifted soda cracker crumbs added to each cup of soup will correct the tendency to curdle, too.

A gelatine jelly that refuses to stiffen in the required length of time can be hurried if more gelatine is softened in cold water, dissolved over hot water and added at once to the stubborn jelly.

If jam becomes hard and sugary before it is used up, place it in a moderate oven until the sugar melts. When cool the jam is almost as good as new.

Boiled frosting that insists on running past on the cake can be made stiff by adding powdered sugar until the mixture will "stay put."

These expediences prevent waste and may save many an embarrassing situation. Consequently they are worth keeping in mind.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Currency inflation, if any, will come sugar-coated.

Such few presidential advisers admit the possibility discuss only one method of issuing additional paper money.

When the dollar is devalued by reducing its gold content and the price of gold finally is fixed, the dollar value of our gold reserves will be increased correspondingly.

If the dollar is revalued at 50 cents, the gold in Federal Reserve Banks, now valued at $3,600,000,000, would become worth $7,200,000,000. And the treasury's present gold supply would be worth $1,400,000,000 instead of only $700,000,000.

The government might or might not take the profit, up to $4,300,000,000, and spend it in currency. There's every reason to believe that Prof. George F. Warren, Roosevelt's chief monetary adviser, proposes that it do just that.

There'll be a hot argument as to whether such a course would be "inflation." One high authority says it would be "similar to inflation."

It was done in France and Italy when the franc and lira were devalued and the proceeds used to buy government securities.

The profit also might be applied to federal expenditures.

WALRUS-MUSTACHED Secretary of the Navy Claude

Swanson seldom is asked for expert opinion on kisses. But comment was demanded from him when a Naval Academy midshipman was sent to the brig for kissing his sweetie goodby in an "unseemly manner"—that is, too long and too ardently. Uncle Claude delivered this dictum:

"Of course a kiss can be an offense if it is bestowed in a certain way. It all depends on how it's done."

MILK and liquor are altogether different fluids. But they present the same problem in that you can put the price so high that bootlegging becomes profitable. AAA officials admit they found that out at the recent Chicago milk agreement hearing. They're disturbed.

Legal price of milk in Chicago is 11 cents a quart. But hundreds of small stores are selling it at 8 and 9 cents, below the code price, mostly to poor people. The problem of enforcement puzzles the AAA.

But the government has aid from the gangsters, who are in the milk racket as well as the booze racket. Low-price independents are terrorized and find their stores wrecked.

HIGH army officers will seek to make the Citizens' Conservation Corps permanent, under War Department control. They regard that body of 275,000 men as a nice little "nest egg" against emergencies.

THE NEW FANGLES (Mom'n Pop) By COWAN.

HOOKS AND SLIDES

Four Teams—Four Guys
FOUR of the All-America teams already selected agree on only four men—Warburton, Buckler, Crawford and Bernard. The four selectors unanimous on these choices are NEA Service, United Press, Associated Press and New York Evening Post.

The four unanimously chosen represent wide geographical differences. Warburton is the slippery little University of Southern California quarterback. Crawford is Duke's big rim tackle, his school being at Durham, N. C. Johnny Buckler is the slashing halfback from the plains of West Point. Bernard is Michigan's splendid center.

Lots of Ends
THE NEA Service team, which was selected by seven coaches, in seven different sections of the country, named Skladany of Pitt at right end, a choice in which only one other selector concurred. Other right ends named on the first team were Geisler and Smith, while at the left end of the line four men were named: Geisler, of Centenary; Matal, of Columbia; Manske, of Northwestern, and Larson, of Minnesota. Geisler, it seems, can play either end. In all, six ends were named for the two positions.

Rosenberg, the Trojans' big running guard, won three out of four selectors. Schammel, Iowa guard, carried two districts, and Schwammel, Oregon State tackle, did the same. Bill Corbus, Stanford's guard, got the call on three out of four teams.

Two Backfields
ENOUGH men for two backfields were named. Besides Warburton and Buckler, who were unanimous, the following men were nominated: Lund, of Minnesota; Franklin, Oregon State; Feathers, Tennessee; Sauer, Nebraska; Danowski, Fordham, and Purvis, Purdue. Two pickers named Sauer. Two named Lund. One

Despite a face and body scarred by countless falls, the "Iron Man" still can get up on those pedals and sprint with the best of them.

vote each was accorded Purvis and Danowski.

The consensus would be a team having Skladany and Geisler, ends; Crawford and Schwammel, tackles; Bernard, center; Rosenberg and Corbus, guards; Warburton, quarterback; Buckler and Lund, halfbacks, and Sauer, fullback. None of the individual selections agreed entirely with the consensus.

late from the movement of Hunk's gloves what plays Notre Dame was going to use next. Some of our guesses were okay, but now and then we were crossed up.

Inadvertence
SEVERAL times Notre Dame ran into difficulties. The wrong plays were used. Forward passes were called in dangerous positions. My companion and I wondered, if signals from the bench had been misinterpreted. For instance, that forward pass that Army intercepted, the one that resulted in a touchdown. Maybe Hunk's nose ticked as when he reached up to rub it, the quarterback happened to be looking at him and thought that a pass was being asked for. Anyway, that's what we figured.

"Finally the officials got wise to what was going on. In the last quarter, when the excitement was at its highest, Hunk's hands were going like a bullish broker's in the wheat pit on a bearish day. Hunk finally lost control of himself, stood right up and signaled for a kick. It was a signal you just couldn't miss. So the officials gave the team a 15-yard penalty for coaching from the bench."

"I am just wondering if Hunk was doing the quarterbacking in the rest of the games that Notre Dame lost this year."

Signals!
OPERATIVE No. X-42 hobs up with an interesting report on the Notre Dame-Army game. As a rule Operative X-42 has been reliable in his reports, so the story is passed along to you as it comes to me.

"My seat," says Operative X-42, "was directly across the field from the Notre Dame bench. It was a particularly advantageous position from which to observe the doings on the bench. It wasn't long before I was watching the bench more than the game."

Semaphore
HUNK ANDERSON was wearing large white gloves. The activity of these mittens increased with the progress of the game. I have seen Connie Mack waving his players to this position or that with a score card, but Mr Anderson could give Mr Mack cards and spades and still beat him at the gentle art of signaling from the bench. And if there ever was a game Hunk Anderson played, that was the game. Hunk was the best quarterback I have seen in action since Walter Eckersall was calling them.

"I called the attention of the man sitting next to me to the wig-wagging, and we began to specu-

EACH SECTION HASTROPHIES OF GRIDIRON

By FRED BAILEY
United Press Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO, Dec. 15.—Every section of the country has its traditional trophies of the gridiron. They serve to intensify the rivalry between many of the nation's leading football teams.

In the middle west two such time-hallowed trophies have been objects which enlivened annual gridiron battles. Both have tremendously interesting histories.

Between Purdue and Indiana the "Old Oaken Bucket" has been the object of mighty football struggles for generations of pigskin heroes. Michigan and Minnesota for nearly 30 years have waged desperate football battles for possession of the "Little Brown Jug."

The History
The history of the "Old Oaken Bucket" dates back almost a century. This midwestern receptacle, like the "Little Brown Jug," has a distressing habit of disappearing before, between and after the annual battle. It always has reappeared.

One of the most exciting and unusual jaunts occurred after the 1930 game, when Indiana scored a surprise 7 to 6 victory and was planning to use the bucket as the highlight of its celebration.

The trophy was started safely on its way by Purdue officials to Indianapolis, it was delivered to the Indiana messenger. He gave it to a group of young men, representing themselves as a "guard of honor."

That was the last seen of it for some time. Bewildered Indiana and Purdue officials searched in vain. Finally it appeared as mysteriously as it had disappeared.

Original Locale
The original locale of the moss-covered bucket was on the old Bruner farm between Kent and Hancock, Ind. Tradition records it that the Morgan Raiders camped near the farm during the Civil war. General Morgan and his officers quenched their thirst from the iron-bound bucket.

The "Little Brown Jug" dates back to the early days of Fielding Yost as Michigan coach. It was used originally by Michigan as a water container on the football field.

Many times it has disappeared, the result of student intrigues, and then reappeared just as mysteriously. During one long interval when it was given up for lost, a substitute replaced it. Then it reappeared. Michigan has held it in its trophy room most of the time.

Texas Topics

By RAYMOND BROOKS

AUSTIN, Dec. 15 — The legislature created a state bank deposit guaranty company, but this agency has been outdistanced by the federal government.

BROOKS

Bankers and spokesmen for state officials. Chmn. D. E. Lydick announced the state company will continue to function, if any of the state banks care to stay in it; but the banks specifically were told that any of the 130 that had signed up with it can withdraw and go into federal insurance—and further that they were encouraged to do so.

Just before Christmas the Texas bond commission will meet again to see if there are bids, on second call, for the issue of $2,750,000 of state relief bonds now being offered for sale out of the $5,500,000 authorized by the legislature.

So far, no official of the state has gone to Washington to negotiate for federal government acquisition of the bonds, though, in re-advertising for bids, it was indicated the matter up by correspondence with federal agencies.

Despite all the results that have been attained by legislative committees in taking testimony on a variety of things, it would seem fairer to limit these investigations to the period of actual legislative session.

It does not look fair to require lawmakers to serve on at great length without pay, merely on expense account... further, the committees cannot exercise all the authority they hold during the sessions in power to enforce requirements upon witnesses.

Under the six-year school age law of 1930, studies have been made of the comparative success of pupils entering Texas public schools at six and at seven years of age, with the result that it was shown the six-year old entrants did slightly better than those seven years old when entering.

This showing was part of a detailed analysis made by Fred C. Ayer, director of research for the Texas State Teachers' association, as reported to the recent teachers' convention in Austin.

AMERICA EMERGING FROM SLUMP AS YEAR ENDS, OUTLOOK HOPEFUL

By ELMER C. WALZER, United Press Financial Editor. NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—America, after nearly four years of devastating depression, slowly was emerging into better things as 1933 drew to a close, and the outlook for 1934, barring the unforeseen, was better than at any year end since 1928.

The course of the recovery, which began shortly after the new administration assumed office March 4, was not smooth. Every bank in the nation closed on inauguration day and remained closed for several days. The stock exchange was closed during the bank holiday. Then came in rapid order: abandonment of the gold standard; legislation for reopening the banks; a sharp drop in the dollar; legislation giving the president board inflationary powers, including devaluation of the dollar by 50 per cent and issuance of $3,000,000,000 greenbacks; drastic legislation on securities flotation; a vast government program to aid the farmer, and a system of regimentation of industry; legalization of 32 beer, and on Dec. 5 repeal of the 18th amendment.

New Deal Response. First response to the so-called "new deal" was a sharp uprush in stocks and commodities. The rise was inversely proportional to a drastic decline in the dollar. Everything moved up until the middle of July, when the year's peaks were made in business, stocks and commodities. Thereafter, the effects of dollar depreciation were less and less, but business began a sound recovery late in the year and things looked brighter all around.

Trading was active in shares in the summer boom and the year's total was around the 700,000,000-share mark, the highest in history since the boom years of 1928 and 1929, and the year 1930. Bond sales were sharply higher than in recent years.

Baer Arrives for Another "Conquest"

When Maxie Baer (left), the dashing actor-fighter, arrived in New York for a stage tour with this Napoleonic gesture, it was in the hope of making another conquest — of wooing and winning Edna Durham, the girl he's "been looking for all these years." With Maxie is his manager, Ancil Hoffman.

Taking April 17 as par. or 100, stocks in the industrial average rose to 176 on July 18; railroads to 216; utilities 181; 40 bonds 120; wheat 157, and cotton 155. Gold, meanwhile, spurted in the world market and the Reconstruction Finance corporation raised the price steadily until it crossed $34 per ounce, against former parity of $20.67. In terms of the French franc the dollar broke below 59 cents and then recovered part of the loss. At the highs the pound sterling touched $5.52 in dollar terms and the French franc 6.71 1-2 cents, against parity of $4.8665 and 3.92 cents, respectively. The pound back in March was quoted around $3.45 in dollar terms.

Business made remarkable gains, lost part of them, and resumed the recovery as 1933 drew to a close. Steel operations rose sharply in the summer boom, but steel companies failed to make a profit at the higher rates; automobile business was a feature, and General Motors corporation earnings in the first nine months of the year showed a rise of 67.1 per cent as compared with the corresponding period of 1932.

Factory employment and payrolls steadily increased, thanks to the government campaigns to put men to work. Building gained through the aid of the public works administration; car loadings made a good showing as compared with 1932, as did electricity output and other major indices. Most commodities closed the year higher. Farmers' purchasing power was enhanced by government aid. All in all, the foundation was laid for building a sounder business structure in 1934, and in-

HOW TO RECAPTURE BEAUTY

Good looks are often a matter of good health. Sparkling eyes and a smooth complexion are outward signs of an abundant vitality. To be charming, conserve your health. Guard against constipation. It so often brings wrinkles, sallow skins, dull eyes, pimples. Try the pleasant "cereal way" to protect yourself from constipation. Science has proved that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN also furnishes iron, which helps build up the blood. The "bulk" in this delicious cereal is much like that of lettuce. How much safer than abusing your system with pills and drugs—so often habit-forming. Two tablespoonfuls daily will correct most types of constipation. If not relieved this way, see your doctor. Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Staff Correspondent. WASHINGTON — "Young liberals" of the Roosevelt administration are girding for a finish fight. And the president himself has brought the matter of their revolt to a head.

The big issue, ramifying through NRA and other emergency agencies, is whether there shall be greater social control for industry, with safeguards against profiteering, or self-control for industry, without safeguards, under suspension of the anti-trust laws.

President Roosevelt, the other day, slipped the word to the AAA that it must rush through the food industry codes for his approval. That meant one thing to Assistant Secretary Guy Tugwell and other AAA liberals.

Previously they had been able to block codes from the food industries when they felt they were not fair to farmers or consumers. Now these codes, with price-fixing features and no provision for standards, would be jammed through over their disapproval.

So the "young liberals" decided that while they might be steam-rollered, it would not be without a fight. So, there will be fireworks.

PLAIN and fancy epithets aren't winning any battles under this administration. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson of NRA has been licked definitely in his ambitious attempt to "crack down" on Henry Ford. Johnson is the administration's champion bestower of epithets, but the Ford fiasco only made him look silly.

On the other side, there's Al Smith, the opposition's most accomplished wisecracker, who accuses the administration of an "alphabet soup" of emergency agencies and branded the public works-civil works program as a sour "grapefruit."

Administrators Ickes and Hopkins, with able assistance and figures showing 3,000,000 persons put to work, have succeeded in making Al look at least as silly as Johnson. That's the Washington verdict, anyway.

THE tightest-fisted mortgage holders are right here in the capital, headquarters and birthplace of the Home Owners' Loan System.

Chairman John H. Fahey of the Home Loan Board admits more trouble here than anywhere else in obtaining co-operation from those who want to stick out for the last red cent from folks who have mortgaged property.

Many instances of mortgage profiteering in more prosperous times have been found and in such cases the Home Owners' Loan Corporation insists on reduction of face value.

Some mortgagors, for instance, wrote up mortgages $1000 or $1500 above cost on properties costing $8000 or $9000.

ABSENCE of the usual hubbub over foreign debts as the payment date of Dec. 15 approaches signifies final tacit acceptance of the fact that we'll never collect.

This year even the most rabid anti-cancellationists have been quiet. Little could be said officially, because everyone realized our new monetary policy had killed off all chance of an early international debt agreement.

DAUGHTER HONORED DENVER, Colo., Dec. 15 — Helen Hokenhull, 18, daughter of Gov. A. W. Hokenhull of New Mexico, was elected "most popular" girl at Colorado Woman's College here this year. Automatically she becomes queen of the 1934 Skyline college year book.

4,000 PIECES
 HOQUIAM, Wash., Dec. 15 — Out of 4,000 pieces of fir, mahogany, walnut, Alaska cedar and Tennessee red cedar, Everett Smith built a unique card table with an intricate mosaic top. The tiny bits of wood were glued together on edge in such a way as to make a colorful pattern of five brilliant hues.

Bryans Find Thrill in Yachting

The orator's platform, where his father won glorious fame, holds no appeal for William Jennings Bryan, Jr. He chooses the lurching deck of a yacht for his thrills. He is shown here with his wife as they enjoy winter yachting on the cruiser Camin, off Catalina Island.

Dallas Still Has Street Lamplighter

DALLAS, Dec. 15 — Few people know it but Dallas still keeps alive the old custom of having a lamplighter even though the progress of civilization has made many changes since Robert Louis Stevenson immortalized the profession in the days of oil lamps.

Today the lamplighter in Dallas travels around in an automobile, keeps a watchful eye on the sun and sky, as well as the weather reports, and orders the whole city lighted up by a simple process of pushing a switch.

The job of lamplighter, though in its modern version, is as necessary today as it ever was, according to John W. Everman, supervisor of public utilities here and lamplighter for the city. An understudy in the form of an employe of the local power and light company carries out the routine for Everman.

The work of the lamplighter today not only is to assure plenty of light when darkness comes prematurely, said Everman, but it also is to save the city money by ordering illumination off when it is not needed as well as on when needed.

Through Everman's watchfulness the city of Dallas spent $141.73 less for lights last October than it spent the same month a year ago, with nine more lights in service this year.
