"Motor vehicle manufacturers have long realized the need for a "spring housecleaning" for the car and a change in the grade of lubricants with each change in the season," Mr. Angus said. "But it remained for Magnolia to systematize this essential service and to popularize it under the name of "Summer-ize." This spring Magnolia "Summer-ize" service is in greater demand than ever before as increasing numbers of car owners learn that it is cheaper to protect their autos against hot weather trouble than to pay expensive repair bills later. "Seven vital points are covered in the Magnolia "Summer-ize" operation which is performed by trained men who work from charts showing the correct grade of Mobiloil or Mobilgrease for each part of each make and model of passenger car and the correct grade for the climatic conditions under which the car is to be operated." Mr. Angus said. "This combined service also provides a complete check-up of such important units as the radiator, battery, tires, steering gear and other safety elements."

BEGIN HERE TODAY MONNIE O'DARE, who loves DAN CARDIGAN, rich and handsome, discovers her friend, SANDRA LAWRENCE, is trying to win him from her. CHARLES EUSTACE, a newcomer in town, pays a good deal of attention to Monnie, and helps her when her brother, BILL, gets into difficulties. Bill plans to marry ANGIE GILLEN, who works in a candy shop, as soon as she gets her divorce.

HETTY, housemaid at the Lawrence home, dislikes her mistress, suspecting her of "vanishing" the handsome chauffeur JAMES. Monnie starts out with Charles to find KAY, her younger sister, who has gone away with CHESTER BIGELOW, traveling salesman. Kay, frightened, wants to turn back from the adventure before it is too late. Monnie and Charles find Kay and bring her home again.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XV. SANDRA LAWRENCE was giving a party. Not the ordinary sort of Belvedere party but a very special one, with caterers from the city, flowers from the same place and an orchestra reputed to have come all the way from Chicago! Mrs. Peterman, grumbling below stairs about the "goings-on," was nevertheless enjoying herself hugely, bumping into the caterer's men with their trestle tables and their white coats, bullying Hetty.

"Why'n't she have her parties at the club? That's what I want to know!" Hetty complained, polishing silver. "Forty people to supper—it's fierce, that's what it is!"

The cook immediately took up the cudgels for her employer.

"Hasn't the young lady a right to do as she pleases in her own house? What's it to you, anyway? You'll have your afternoon off, same as always. You've got no kick coming."

"Me answering the bell in that gray outfit and tending to the ladies' things," whined Hetty, "when I oughta be off having a good time for myself. She's just a pain—that's what she is, giving herself airs like nobody in town."

"You get along upstairs in plenty of time to make yourself neat, miss," warned Mrs. Peterman, inflamed by the reference to the new uniform of taffeta with a musical comedy apron and frilled cap.

"Who's all coming?" Hetty wanted to know, interrupting.

"The cream of the place," said the older woman with relish. "Judge Martindale's two, and the Blairs, the Slimmonses and Watermans and Oliviers—and the Cardigans, of course. And 10 young folks from the city, coming by the 6 o'clock. James'd better not forget to meet them."

"Mister Cardigan, I'll bet, is invited," Hetty opined, giving a vicious rub to a fruit bowl encrusted with ornamentation.

"Of course. And his sister, Miss Geraldine. That new Mr. Eustace—"

"You saw the list," Hetty broke in, eyes glittering with a true gossip's relish. "How about that pretty O'Dare girl?"

MRS. PETERMAN shook her head. "Not her. This is for real swells, didn't I tell you? The O'Dares are nice enough, but poor as church mice."

"Her ladyship had her 'round the house plenty all last winter," Hetty said coldly. "If you ask me, she's better than the lot of them. She knows a person when you meet her on the street. She ain't afraid to say 'good morning' like a Christian when you see her." Mrs. Peterman's manner became slightly unctuous. On all matters of social precedence in Belvedere she, having been general of the Lawrence household affairs for many years, felt herself eminently qualified to speak.

"Nice enough, as I said, but her station in life is quite different from the rest of these people. My mother always said to me, 'Nannie,' she said, 'always keep to your own station in life.' And I did. It's better so."

Hetty sniffed. "This is a free country," she contributed negligently. Then she wheeled, flushing deeply, as a masculine voice called her name.

"Jimmy, I didn't expect you back so soon!"

The big, grinning young man in chauffeur's uniform lounged in the doorway.

"Thought I'd keep my eye on you girls, so's you wouldn't get into mischief. How's things going?"

Hetty said virtuously, "We've been working like slaves all day. Be glad when this is over."

"Gonna be swell music," the young chauffeur said, jerking his head in the direction of the sun porch, whither the grand piano had already been conveyed. This room, too, was banked with all manner of flowering trees, roses in tubs, and the like. The drawing room and the library beyond had been cleared for action.

Rings had been rolled up, highly polished floors given an extra gleam, furniture pushed back. In the dining room which had an oval glassed-in breakfast room beyond, the caterer's men were madly busy. A hum of activity, tangible as the whir of bees, pervaded everything.

Sandra Lawrence, fresh and trim in white linen riding tights, now came briskly down the stairs, surveying the scene.

"Everything's going well," she said, with a nod to her retinue. "James, you'll bring those people up from the 6 o'clock. Then, Mrs. Peterman, they'll change—the rooms look very nice—and we go on to the club for dinner. We'll be back by 9:30. I don't expect anyone until 10, really, for the dancing, but it's just as well to be safe. I've borrowed Mr. Eustace's man, Kong, to do the cocktails. Show him where everything is. He'll be here before 7—"

AND she was gone, leaving behind her a faint, delicate scent. Everything Sandra did was well done. She was cool, competent, correct. At 22, she had the poise of a matron twice her age. She loved this sort of thing—the whir and scurry of a big party. It was the very breath of life to her. Ever since her return from Europe the last time, she had complained bitterly to her father of the dullness—in fact the lack of social life—in Belvedere. Now, in mid-July, she prepared to bring a little gaiety to the somnolent town. She would give "a smart" party, the sort of affair a Gotham debutante might give at the Ritz. Everything would be perfect—cold food, drinks, things in aspic, music—everything!

As she went out the side door into the terraced and landscaped garden with the special pool her father had been goaded into having built for her the year before, her eyes took in the scene approvingly. Sondberg, the ghastly handyman, was at work on the flagged paths, trimming away the ragged grass. The roses were in full burst. There was a misty blue background of delphinium. It might, Sandra reflected, be a true English garden, with at least 10 generations of culture behind it.

At the stables she found James, who had slipped around the back way as she went out the front. He was running a cloth lightly over the hood of an unnecessary polish to a gleaming chromium-plated car who sprang, in full flight, from the nose of the engine.

She gave him a dazzling smile. "Thanks—James. You're sure I've plenty of gas? I've got to get back in good order this afternoon."

"Yes, ma'am, Miss Sandra. It's O. K."

She did wish American servants were more formal. Perhaps she could teach James, sometimes, not to say "O. K." But he was a stunning-looking boy, no doubt about that. A dash of the Gary Cooper flavor about him. His uniform fitted him perfectly.

SHE slid into the driver's seat, slapping her pockets, boy fashion. Sandra was an unconscious actress. When she wore riding clothes she adopted a gently masculine air. James sprang to attention.

"Match, miss?"

"Yes, thanks very much." She flipped a cigaret from her pigskin case and stuck it into a corner of her mouth. The young man came close, holding the flame for her, cupping it with infinite care with one brown hand. Sandra felt his nearness—a little tingle went down her spine. She inhaled deeply. This wouldn't do. She would have to show James his place. Just because they'd picked together, quite informally, on Summit Hill, that day the distributor acted up, just because she'd been—well, friendly and democratic to the boy—she needn't misunderstand. That was the trouble with servants in this country. Give them an inch and they'd take a yard.

As the engine roared, leaping to be off, she gave the chauffeur a cool glance.

"Don't forget the 6 o'clock," she sang, making a turn.

Yes, he must be reminded that he was, after all, only her servant. She was the great lady. Why had she been so foolish, that day on Summit Hill? It had been spring—he had reminded her, in his bigness and leanness, of Dan Cardigan. Was that it? Anyhow, for the fraction of an instant she had let him hold her in his arms. It had been the veriest accident. She had tripped, stumbling over a tree stump. He had caught her. She had lain there for an instant longer than necessary. Oh, she had been mad, mad! That was all—but it had been encouragement enough.

The man in olive green stared after her curiously as the dust hid the car from view.

"She's a cool one and that's the truth," he muttered to himself.

A girl in maid's uniform, watching from the pantry window, caught her lip within her teeth.

"If she don't leave him alone," she threatened to no one at all, "I'll—I'll—" She did not finish her menacing sentence.

Former Ciscoan Is Seeing New Cisco

Dr. J. M. Britton, of El Paso, is in Cisco visiting his friend, Charlie Fee and others of the days when the doctor was a familiar figure in Cisco. Many will remember him as a friend and for his professional services which were in demand far and near.

The doctor is seeing the sights of a new Cisco. There were no dreams of a dam, a bridge a swimming pool or a fish hatchery; no boating, fishing or bathing revues in his day in Cisco. Neither were there any large, well equipped high school buildings as now, nor any telephone nor federal buildings, nor paved streets or paved highways in every direction bringing the traffic through from New York to California, from Canada and the great lake regions to the south ports and Rio Grande valley. Indeed, there were no Rio Grande valley and citrus fruit cities in Texas at that time to draw this traffic through the little old city of Cisco. He is seeing it all and his old friends, too, enjoying every moment of it, he says.

But Dr. Britton expected some of it, because he has all these years kept in touch with Cisco's improvements through reading the American and Roundup and the Cisco Daily News. One of the first things he did on arrival was to renew his subscription to the Daily News.

SHIPMENTS OF LUMBER OVER PRODUCTION

AUSTIN, May 13 — Increases in shipments considerably greater than the increases in production characterized the activities at southern pine mills for the month of April, according to reports of the Southern Pine association to the University of Texas bureau of business research.

Average weekly shipments per unit rose 16.8 per cent from the March figure to 225,244 feet for the month of April, the highest since October, 1932. This gain is substantially larger than can be accounted for on purely seasonal factors and brings the total for April above that for the corresponding month a year ago by 7.3 per cent. Furthermore, shipments were 23 per cent greater than output, which is also the highest margin since October, 1932.

Average weekly production was 182,856 per unit, an increase of 11 per cent over the figure for the preceding month, 165,238 feet. Last year in April, average weekly output per unit was 191,240 feet.

Unfilled orders at the close of April averaged 596,584 feet per unit, or slightly more than three weeks' run at current operating schedules. Average unfilled orders at the close of April were 2 per cent above those a month earlier and are greater by 19 per cent than those on the corresponding date a year ago. Furthermore last year unfilled orders were only two and one-half weeks' run.
