Unidentified Man Fatally Wounded In Robbery

BANDIT IS SHOT DEAD AT KILGORE

KILGORE, July 29.—An unidentified man was shot to death early today when he and two companions approached the widow of a confectionery near the Shell Petroleum Corporation team tent here and ordered the proprietor to throw up his hands. John B. Jenkins, middle aged owner of the establishment told officers he blazed away five times at the would be bandit, one of the shots from a 38 calibre pistol piercing the man's heart. The others fled into the darkness and were sought today by Gregg county officers. The unknown hijacker was rushed to a hospital here but died within a few minutes. He made no statement. A 32 calibre pistol and a flashlight were found in his pocket.

RANDOLPH'S FUTURE IS DISCUSSED

(Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of articles by E. Buford Isaacks, dean of Randolph College, concerning the Cisco school. Other articles will appear from time to time.)

By E. BUFORD ISAACKS
For several months the question has been uppermost in the minds of Cisco residents. "What about the future of Randolph?" Many times this question has been asked me and it is in answer that I am writing this statement. Randolph has the best prospect for next year that it has ever had, is briefly my answer to the question. That is my firm conviction and is not just an optimistic statement. I will try to outline some of my reasons on which I base this conviction. Since Randolph is dependent on the support and good will of the people of Cisco, I feel that a statement of the exact situation as it exists today is in order and will do more than anything else to assure this support and good will. So things that otherwise might be out of place in such an article will be mentioned as I enumerate my reasons why I believe the college will have the best year in its history. The first reason I will give is that more people are interested in and working for its success than before. By this I refer to the larger credits of the college. Some of these have just come to the conclusion that their best and probably their only chance to get their money is for Randolph to succeed. If it should close its doors, no creditor would get one cent of his money except the company who owns the mortgage on the buildings. They would have the building and grounds, which, with no use for them, would be worth only a fractional part of their debt. They do not want them and have said as much. They have stated as have other creditors that their only hope is for the college to succeed and that they are doing all in their power to help it to succeed. No one profits if Randolph should close. Everybody profits if it succeeds. So with this company and other larger creditors realizing this and working hand in hand with us rather than constantly threatening to foreclose on us, the prospects are much brighter than before. The operation of the college must and will have right of way over old debts and obligations. Expense Cut. In the second place, Randolph will succeed because it has, as have other business institutions, cut its operating expense to where the income will meet the expenses and the school can operate on a cash basis. Without in any respect lowering its standards, Randolph has cut off overhead expenses, surplus teachers, traveling expense, promotion expense and other costly items, until its budget for next year is less than one-half what it has been. Different members of the faculty have taken over extra work, economies have been effected here and there, and more economical methods of carrying on the work have been instituted until the operating budget will be about $13,500.00 instead of

GANGSTERS BLAMED IN BOY'S DEATH

NEW YORK, July 29.—Machine gunners for warring beer gangsters shot and killed one youngster and wounded four others playing in a dirty, muddy east 107th street playground of Harlem's Italian children, police indicated today. The intended victim fled unharmed during the staccato of slugs which plattered their lead over walls of a house where the children were at play. Of the five innocent victims of the gangster gun fire, Michael Vengelli, 5, died today as a result of a jagged wound in his thigh. His brother, 7, was given a blood transfusion.

Textile Strikers Picket Mills in New Jersey

Hundreds of striking mill workers are picketing the great textile plants at Paterson, N. J., in the hope of getting all of the 18,000 workers to join in a united protest against wage cutting. Communist labor leaders anticipated plans of A. F. of L. unions to strike August 3, and their pickets are shown above at the gate of a mill, trying to persuade other workers to join them. A complete tie-up of the textile industry is possible unless some agreement is reached.

WEATHERFORD BEAUTY AND PRINCE WED

WEATHERFORD, July 29.—At high noon today in London a Weatherford girl became the bride of the heir of presumptive to the throne of the smallest principality in Europe. As the fulfillment of her romance, Miss Aleene McFarland now is the Princess of Prince Johann und zu Liechtenstein. Her future home is a tiny country lying in a bend of the Rhine between Switzerland and Germany. Miss McFarland met her prince about three years ago in Paris where she and her mother, Mrs. Charles McFarland had spent much of their time recently. Mrs. McFarland was reared in Weatherford. Her father, the late Charles McFarland was one of the best known cattlemen of this part of the state. After a short stay in London the couple will come to America for an extended honeymoon. They will visit Weatherford.

EASTLAND MAN, CREDIT SOLON CLUB SPEAKERS

President W. H. McDonald, of Eastland Lions club and J. C. Lacy, of the Credit bureau of Texas, were principal speakers at the Lions luncheon today. Mr. McDonald told some of the high lights of Lions International convention at Toronto, Canada. His talk was entertaining as well as educational. Mr. Lacy's talk was on the subject of credits and the proper functioning of a bureau in securing the credit rating of the individual. "A man verifies his own rating and we simply verify his statements," said Mr. Lacy. He further stated that Cisco was very fortunate in the personnel of its bureau and should give it every aid in securing a proper balance in the granting of credit to whom credit was due. Mr. Lacy had the close attention of everyone present and many expressed the wish that he could have had more time to elaborate on the credit situation of Cisco. Other visitors present were, Rev. J. S. Stuckard, of Sulphur Springs, and George Bryant, of Eastland.

CLIPPED COLLIE KILLED FOR MOUNTAIN LION

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, July 29.—"Shep," a congenial collie, lay beneath the sod today because his clipped locks and bushy tail transformed him into something faintly resembling a mountain lion. Vern Earls, special policeman, reported he had shot at a "lion" but that the vicious beast had "loped" away. After sweating through miles of brush, searching for the "lion," the officers finally came onto the body of "Shep," dead from the bullet fired by Earls.

SLAYER OF HARRIS IS IDENTIFIED

TEXARKANA, Ark., July 29.—Heavily armed posses today searched the thickets southeast of here for the moonshiner who late yesterday shot Sheriff Walter Harris to death as he led a raid on a still, nine miles from here. Joe Watson, 19, Texarkana negro, who was found wounded in the underbrush after the encounter told officers that a white man with a criminal record here fired the shots. Watson said he had nothing to do with the still but had stopped to get a bottle of beer. Sheriff Harris went to the still accompanied by Deputies Charles Bearden, Ben Branch and J. C. Crain. Upon arrival Sheriff Harris and Branch went to the east side while Bearden and Crane approached from the west side. As Harris and Branch neared the still a concealed gunman opened fire with a pistol. Harris replied until he fell wounded fatally in the head and also shot in the right knee. Four pistol cartridges were found in the brush which had concealed the slayer.

Ex-Judge Peels Pen Potatoes

HUNTSVILLE, July 29.—John E. Brady, prominent Texas jurist, who broke into the limelight two years ago when he was charged and convicted of the murder of Miss Leblia Highsmith, has dropped the judicial dignity of the court and now peels potatoes, teaches, and performs other odd prison jobs, as he serves his sentence. Brady was sentenced to three years in the state penitentiary, and has served more than six months of his term. He said he did not remember killing the girl, a 23-year-old court stenographer, with whom he acknowledged he "had an affair." He said he was intoxicated at the time. The former judge was classified, as are all convicts, according to his physical condition. He is now 60. Prison officials have made use of both his extensive legal training and his high education. He has not been made a trusty, although prison officials say he follows every prison rule.

It's a Man's Job --- Done by a Girl

This picture, purported to have been smuggled out of the Soviet Union and taken to London as evidence of conditions in the northern lumber camps, shows a young Russian girl trimming a tree which she has felled. Note her heavy boots and masculine attire, except for the shawl about her shoulders. It has been charged that young girl workers like this one receive only two scanty meals a day for their arduous toil.

BROADCASTING OVER JUAREZ STATION A HARD ASSIGNMENT WITH THE OVERHEAD SOARING

Broadcasting in Old Mexico may prove interesting and entertaining to the listeners, but it is anything but a bed of roses for the American entertainer, avers Mrs. Lulu Paschall, who has returned from El Paso and Juarez, Mexico, to Cisco. While in El Paso, Mrs. Paschall gave programs over radio stations XEJ in Juarez; KITSM, El Paso; and KOB, a remote control station owned and operated by the New Mexico College of Arts at Las Cruces, New Mexico. Radio broadcasting over the Mexico station, declared Mrs. Paschall doesn't exactly pay huge dividends. In fact, the overhead is more than likely to clash deeply into the profits, if any. An American entertainer must pay $11 for a permanent passport; join the musicians union, with fees; pay for a license and perhaps reside in the country to the south. Toll also may be demanded on all instruments. Mrs. Paschall was advised to stay out of Mexico as a radio entertainer, and to visit it only as a tourist. Antagonistic feeling between El Paso and Juarez as to Mexican labor was blamed. While in El Paso, Mrs. Paschall, with her guitar, broadcast unique programs consisting of old time instrumental music and folk-lore songs.

CROYDON, England, July 29.—A Bellanca airplane apparently either the Herndon-Pangborn plane bound for Moscow or the Boardman-Polando plane bound for Turkey was reported to have passed Dublin at 10:30 a. m. central standard time today. NOT SIGHTED LONDON, July 29.—Two more American planes were believed to have flown across the Atlantic today. The planes, one flown by Hugh Herndon, Jr., and Clyde Pangborn and the other by Russell Boardman and John Polando had not been Island on the southwest coast of Ireland but reports from Valentia Ireland indicated that one or both of them had been heard flying over there. Both planes left New York at dawn yesterday and were due over Ireland at about the time the unidentified planes were heard. Herndon and Pangborn were headed direct for Moscow on an attempt to beat the Post-Gatty record around the world, and the other fliers were headed for Istanbul, Turkey, seeking the world straight line long distance record.

TINY EUROPEAN COUNTRY FREE OF ALL DEBTS

WASHINGTON, July 29.—The smallest European principality, overlooked in all debt negotiations because it has no debts, and omitted from all arms conferences because it has no standing army, is practically the only country in Europe to report healthy treasury surplus—and this in spite of the fact that it has no taxes. Lichtenstein, five square miles smaller than the District of Columbia, is a piece of Austria about 30 miles east from Lake Constance, on the banks of the Rhine. The 12,000 inhabitants spend most of their time in agricultural work, although there is considerable weaving done, much of it with imported American cotton. Lichtenstein has been singularly free from wars. Right in the way of heavy troop movements in the World war, she remained unscathed. Her last attempt at a scaled war was in 1866, when the Lichtenstein army of 80 men joined the Austrian army in settling its difficulties with Prussia. But the Lichtensteiners arrived too late for the battle and returned without ever having fired a gun. The helmets and arms from that "war" are among the most prized possessions in the ancient castle of Vaduz. For those who wish to evade taxes, Lichtenstein is a paradise, because they have no taxes. Once in the last 50 years they assessed a small sum to pay for a dyke to hold back the waters of the Rhine, but the rest of the cost of their government is paid by the princes of Lichtenstein, who are among the largest property holders in Europe. As a matter of fact, their property holdings in the rest of Europe are greater than the size of little Lichtenstein.

STERLING'S COTTON MEET IS GREETED

AUSTIN, July 29.—Governor Ross Sterling's cotton states acreage reduction conference to be held here August 4, was hailed today by leaders of cooperative marketing associations as the first step toward national and possible international concerted action to control cotton production. Governor Sterling today had invited governors of the nation's 15 cotton growing states to come here for the conference, requested by the Texas legislature.

College Road Being Worked

In preparation for the opening of school in September, Commissioner Joe Clements is having the road leading from highway 23 to the Randolph college building worked. For some time this road has been rough, and since a large number of people travel it, especially during the school year, Clements is giving it a thorough working, according to Dean Isaacks of the college.

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

THERE IS NO DISCHARGE:—There is no man that hath power over the spirit to retain the spirit; neither hath he power in the day of death: and there is no discharge in that war.—Ecclesiastes 8: 8.

THE TWO BILLS OF OKLAHOMA.

Oklahoma furnished to the American world the two leading humorists of the period. First the pride of Claremont, known to the international world as Will Rogers, Col. Arthur Brisbane in a short biography of the pride of Claremont let it be known that after pushing his way out of the schools in the old Indian territory Will was polished off by English professors at Oxford and Eton. Then he became a rider and a rope twirler, an actor and a vaudeville performer, a writer for newspapers and syndicates, a million dollar a week screen favorite and maker of pictures, an ace of the air with a marvelous record, and lastly, an entertainer whose quaint humor and biting satire makes the people think as well as laugh. Now the pride of Claremont is a multi-millionaire and on the tongues of all. His father and the other Bill, known around the American world at least as the governor of Oklahoma, were makers of the Oklahoma constitution when statehood came.

Bill Murray is just as remarkable in many ways as Will Rogers. He has a history that is rich and romantic as well as poverty stricken. He is in the pictures all the time and in the press headlines daily. His latest was an invitation for an Amazonian march on the part of the women of Texas to go to Denison, brush aside the ranger guardians of the toll bridges, and let the world know that the spirit of the Alamo isn't dead in a land where heroes fought and died for liberty and the rights of man. Governor Bill pulled a dud. There is to be no Amazonian march. There is to be no tossing of the rangers into the Red river. There is to be no closing of the toll bridge on the Texas side at least with hat pins directed by cultured tongues. As for the ladies they know their rights and never hesitate to tell the brute male kingdom where to head in. They stand for clothes, culture, and a constitution.

Mrs. Ferguson, a former governor, snubbed Governor Bill. She is neither a cheer leader nor a march leader in free bridge upheavals or toll bridge dismissals. James E. Ferguson, a former governor, refused to be the bugle blower of the proposed Amazonian march on the turbulent Red. Mr. Ferguson is for the constitution and the law. He is for the down-trodden whether the down-trodden are toll bridge monopolists pledged the protection of the law, or the down-trodden who are not monopolists, crawling out of the ditch. If one doubts it the doubter is advised to read the newspapers, the interviewers and the interviewed. Long life to the laugh maker! It was said in the long ago by an American poetster, "Laugh and the world laughs with you; weep and you weep alone." Yes, a mighty tempest in a small tea pot.

INDIANS APPEAL TO THE GREAT MANITOU.

Many Oklahoma Indians have not forsaken the Manitou god of their fathers. They cling to the traditions of old and there are medicine men among them. A queer tale comes from Hughes county, that states, "Standing waist deep in water and mud of the receding rivers, Indians petitioned the Great Spirit to send rain as tom-toms beat and camp fires glowed along the river border. Prayers unknown to the white men, but voiced generations ago by the Indians, were offered as the red men gather several times each week on the banks of the South Canadian and other small streams to implore the Great Spirit for rain to save their crops from drouth.

"It is said the ancient tribal custom of praying for rain is picturesque and colorful. It is first time in years that it has been witnessed in Oklahoma. Usually it is the medicine man of the tribe, dressed in spectacular fashion, who leads the rites." Well, white men pray to their god for rain. Why not the red man? He has his god and his tribal rites. It is a matter of record that the prayers are always answered—those of the white as well as the red. It always rains after protracted drouths, just as depressions are finally dashed aside by rolling waves of prosperity.

GREATEST NEGRO CITY IN THE WORLD.

According to the New York Herald Tribune Harlem-in-Manhattan is not only the greatest negro city in the world today but the greatest negro city in history. The Herald-Tribune cites figures from the recent census to show the growth of the negro population of New York. In 1920 there were 73,061 negroes living in the Harlem section just north of Central Park. In the 1930 census the number is given as 224,670 and the tide has flowed west of Eighth Avenue and up to Washington Heights. Chicago has a black belt with a population of 150,000. Philadelphia has its black belt. Washington, capital of the nation, has a huge negro population. In war time a vast army of negroes deserted the South for the cities of the North. They never returned to the cotton patches of the Southland.

THE FAMOUS PROSECUTOR IN CAPTIVITY.

"Red Bill" McCraw, the famous prosecutor and district attorney of Dallas county, has adopted the manager form of government. He was led to the matrimonial altar by Miss Louise Britton, a fascinating as well as cultured young lady, prominent in Dallas social and theatrical circles. Now that "Red Bill" is in captivity he will be in a position to give expert testimony as to the efficiency as well as the blessings and booms of the manager form of government in home and city and county and state.

It must be true that the bigger they are the harder they fall.

OTHER OPINIONS

THE REVOLT OF SILVER

The British report of the MacMillan committee on finance and industry, and the comments on it made by British financial experts, give a foundation for Mexico's radical action respecting silver. Those experts assert that the gold standard is too rigid, that gold-ruled countries are being ruined by currency scarcity and falling prices, that the banking systems of the United States and France are draining gold from the rest of the world, leading on to the breaking down of the gold standard; and that "the whole world is face to face with the prospect of at least partial repudiation of debts."

Mexico is a debtor country and is gold poor but silver rich. The great scarcity of gold along with the extremely low price of silver bullion makes a heavy burden on finances, holding the nation in financial trouble, so that it has difficulty in meeting obligations payable in gold, either at home or abroad.

In the emergency ex-President Calles was called to the help of the government and was given large authority as President of the Bank of Mexico. At once he had a law passed retiring gold from circulation and making silver the only legal tender. Domestic debts therefore even though by agreement payable in gold may be paid in silver thus radically reducing the amount of the debts to the amount of the debts, to the great advantage of the debtor. It is a form of repudiation of debts, made necessary, in Calles' opinion, by the deplorable situation existing in Mexico. Foreign debts payable in gold are, of course, on a different basis.

Undoubtedly many domestic debts will be paid at once, in the silver peso. The price of silver may rise and the price of commodities will go up, thus enabling the farmer to get higher prices for his produce, though at the same time he will pay more for what he may purchase.

Calles has set an example that many other semi-bankrupt states will follow in revolting against the gold standard of the present. They will either go on a silver basis, like Mexico, or agitate for bimetallism. Even in the United States some agitation is bound to arise against the existing system, and cheap money may become a campaign issue in 1932.—Dallas News.

In the Political Arena

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD

Well, the judicial ax has fallen and the petroleum atmosphere has been clarified. Decision striking down the authority of the Texas railroad commission to enforce oil proration orders in East Texas in the MacMillan corporation suit against the state railroad commission was a knockout for the rail body. Hearing of the case was before a special court of three judges. Those sitting in the case were Judge Duval West of San Antonio, Judge J. C. Hutcheson, Jr., of Houston, and Judge Randolph Bryant. In its decision the judges said that the order of the commission was struck down because it was "in the attempt to exercise not delegated but usurped power."

All three judges are native Texans. West and Hutcheson are democrats. Bryant is a republican. The plain English of this is that the legislative department did not delegate to the rail commission the power or authority to issue a proration order; according to the lawyers who are concerned, there is a way out of it. It calls for the enactment of a proration law armed with double rows of shark teeth which will catch all alike, meaning the big fellows as well as the little fellows.

Now the Texas lawmakers have their work cut out for them. They are asked by the governor to create a state conservation commission, appointive instead of elective in order that the natural resources of the commonwealth may be conserved and oil and gas waste prevented by the strong arm of the state. They are asked by the governor to enact conservation laws.

The governor recommends. A legislative body enacts. Since the beginning of the special session, a campaign of education has been conducted. Many of the big figures in the petroleum world have testified. Many have given their views as to that which should be done in the way of legislation. Lawyers for the most part, make the laws. Judges who are necessarily compelled to be lawyers interpret the law. Foreign crude is on the free list.

Attorney General Mitchell has ruled that the president is without authority to place an embargo on foreign crude. This is a hint to the national lawmakers that additional legislation is necessary to prevent foreign competition with the domestic fields and the decision of the three-judges court down here in Texas a hint to the railway commissioners that they "usurped" power not delegated to them by the legislature.

And now it is a free field for all in East Texas to "go as they please" until the necessary measures have been enacted to conserve the oil and gas wealth of the state.

"Let there be light," thundered the lawmakers on opening day.

"Let there be an investigation," thundered Attorney General Jimmy Alford.

Well, the legislative machine has been grinding and will continue to grind, it is said, with the Alford semi-judicial machine doing its best to find out if the anti-trust laws have been violated by the big fellows or the little fellows in their pursuit of the black gold under the surface of the earth.

Will there be a second called session? There will be unless the senators and representatives hammer into constitutional shape the pending bills and rush the work of enactment in the near future. All this is a reminder that former Governor Dan Moody declared early in the proration game that the order was not worth the paper on which it was written. Three federal judges agreed with his contention. Then came the knockout and now all concerned are up in the air—again.

ROBOT HEN TO EXPLAIN HOW EGG ARE PRODUCED

BOSTON, July 29. — A "talking hen" which might have stepped out of the pages of Mother Goose, will be a feature of many agricultural fairs in Massachusetts this year.

The robot hen will tell her own story of how eggs are produced and supplied to the consumer.

Her tour of the cattle shows will be sponsored by the state department of agriculture.

Heart of Liane

By MABEL MCCELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Liane Barrett has been warned by her actress mother, Cass Barrett, not to have anything to do with the fascinating Van Robard, who professes to be in love with her. Muriel Ladd debutante, announces her engagement to Van and Liane tries to forget him. Cass is taken seriously ill on tour and Liane rushes to her side. Cass babbles in her delirium of some mystery concerning the girl's birth. Mrs. Cleespaugh, Liane's rich patroness, brings Cass back to her Long Island home to recuperate. Because she knows it will please her mother, Liane accepts Clive Cleespaugh's proposal of marriage.

Tressa Lord, house guest at the Cleespaughs, dislikes Liane and tries to break the engagement. She conspires with blackmailers but they fail to succeed through the intervention of Shane McDermid, police officer who befriends Liane. At a ball for the Prince of Slavaria Liane is kidnapped. Clive, McDermid and a reporter named Chuck Desmond, suitor of Muriel's, start a search. At a lonely house on the shore she struggles with her captors, falls and cuts her head. The captors leave her with an old woman. Liane escapes while the woman sleeps, but drops her pearl necklace, which Clive finds stained with blood. McDermid finds the girl just before Clive rushes up. McDermid arrests the kidnappers who had planned to hold Liane for ransom and Clive takes Liane home.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXX

Cass persisted, "I don't like it, I tell you, it's queer." It was a day or two after the Hunt Ball. Liane, still a little weak and spent after her great adventure, lay dummed among the pillows of her damask chaise longue.

Cass repeated the words, "I don't like it."

Liane asked languidly, "What?"

"Oh, the whole business. There's something ugly and frightening about it. It looks as if someone particularly did not want you to marry Clive. As if you had an enemy—"

Liane sighed.

"Mother, please don't worry."

dear, I'm safe and it's all right and all those wretched people are safely behind bars. Fourth offense, it was, for the men and the girl's been sent to reform school or some place like that. Clive said they found cases of opium hidden away in the house."

But she shuddered a little, in spite of her brave words. She did not like to think of that fetid house in the clearing.

"When I think of what might have happened to you," Cass went on, shaking her head.

"Don't think of it. It's foolish. I'm out of their reach."

"Oh, it's not those miserable people I'm afraid of," Cass said. "They don't count. But what this man McDermid said to Clive makes me believe that you have an implacable enemy some place."

Liane shivered but she managed to laugh.

"How silly! Mums, you're playing a melodrama."

"All right, child. But I'll be relieved when you're safely married."

Why, Liane wondered, did they all use that phrase, "safely married?"

"By the way," Cass went on, "as soon as you're able Mrs. Cleespaugh wants you to look at some samples for the wedding dress. Moire, satin, velvet. Oh, they're lovely! You'll never know which one to choose."

"Lordy," Liane moaned, "I wish I might put on a dark blue suit and slip away somewhere and have it done. But I suppose that would be considered dreadful."

"I know," Cass sympathized. "But you must remember your wedding is in the nature of a state function. It's of great importance."

Liane looked at her mother curiously. She had never known her to be so firmly set on anything as she was on this formal wedding. "But it's natural," the young girl thought. "She thinks of it as a pageant with me as the main figure. A drama with me in the leading part."

"All the same," Liane insisted aloud, "I shall hate the display and all that fuss. I wish I needn't be married quite this way."

"You owe it to your new position, darling," Cass said quietly. "That's something you mustn't forget."

She was silent a minute. Then she murmured with apparent irrelevance, "Miss Lord hasn't gone south. I wonder why."

Liane said, "Oh, she likes it here. She has such a gay time. So many beaux. I suppose she hates to leave."

Cass's eyes were on the ceiling. "Mrs. Cleespaugh is rather annoyed with her. About the way she acted the night of your — the night of the ball."

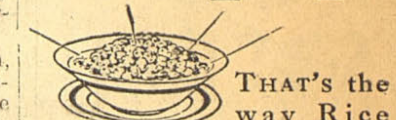

Liane laughed. "What was it?"

Did she refuse to marry?"

"I don't know what she said but"

"It so happens I don't smoke..."

BUT I've noticed recently that more of my girl friends are smoking CHESTERFIELD, and I asked why.

"One of them said that CHESTERFIELDS really are milder and taste better—that there is nothing strong or sharp or bitter about them.

"Another one spoke up and said that she too liked the taste of CHESTERFIELDS; but that she was especially pleased with the package—so neat and attractive. Chesterfields—she added—are made right—properly filled—and burn evenly; and she thought possibly they were using a better cigarette paper.

"Still another one agreed with all we'd said. She'd been smoking CHESTERFIELDS for a long, long time, and had always liked them; but she also liked the way they were advertised. The advertising seemed to her to be the truth and the whole truth—it wasn't always knocking somebody or something!"

there's a coolness between them. Mrs. Amberton admitted to me that her sister lacked tact.
There was silence for a few minutes while Liane continued to regard the landscape with languid eyes.
Just the same, Cass burst out at length, "I hope she goes soon. She's a mischief maker. She likes Clive too well for her own good."

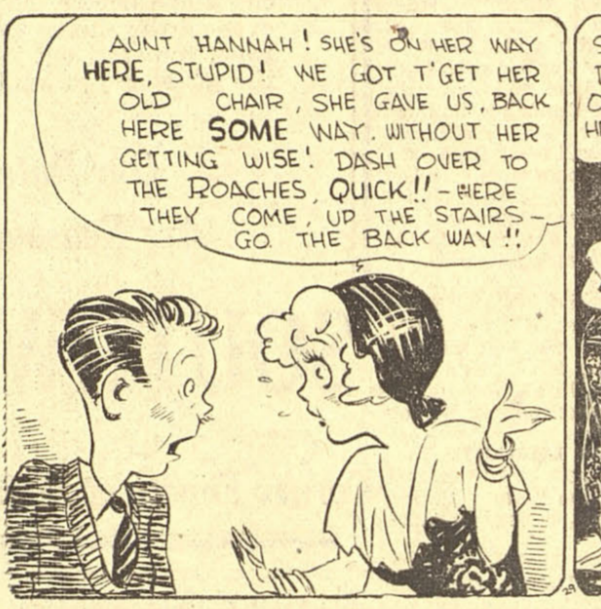

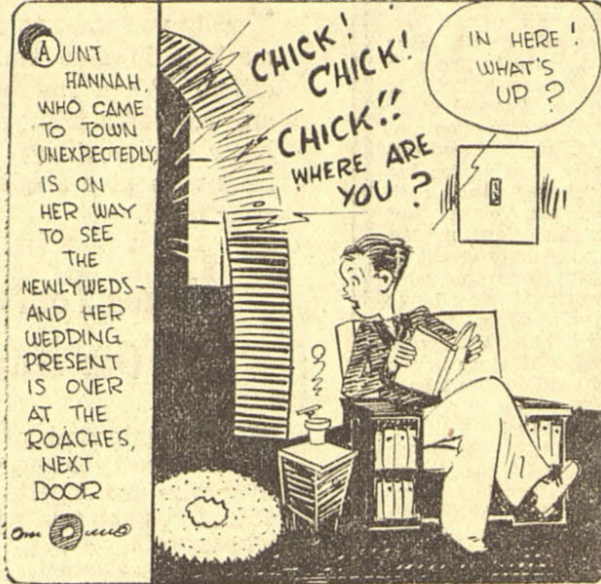

forehand," Cass was saying in a troubled tone.
Liane stopped. She scarcely knew why. Mrs. Cleespaugh's reply was not entirely clear but the young girl heard the last few words, "no surprise to me. I was aware of it from the first. I am glad, however, you told me yourself."
Liane felt herself trembling. Almost she turned back but the sound of Tressa's voice and the opening of the great front door forced her onward.
The two women looked up guiltily, she thought, at her entrance.
"Why, my dear!" Mrs. Cleespaugh began in a tone of benevolent concern. "Are you sure you ought to have done this? You look quite shaken even yet."

ed hand in his, for good-bye.
"Mayn't I say good-bye to you properly?"
"Out here with Kelly and all the grooms standing around? She shook her head at him, all maidenly prissiness. "I'll see you Tuesday."
"Dear, such a stupid thing! One of Christine's girl called just now to say your fitting is today at 11 instead of tomorrow. I'm so sorry. You might have gone in with Kelly but it's too late for that now. Kelly will have to take you. I've just rung the garage."

ing light. His young mouth had a passionate curve to it. She liked his voice. She liked his sense of humor, his kindness. But the spark—well, it just wasn't there.
She met Mrs. Cleespaugh on the landing.
"Dear, such a stupid thing! One of Christine's girl called just now to say your fitting is today at 11 instead of tomorrow. I'm so sorry. You might have gone in with Kelly but it's too late for that now. Kelly will have to take you. I've just rung the garage."

"Yes, I have to go. A fitting."
"Too bad. Thought we might have some bridge."
Liane was puzzled by the other's change of front. Tressa had scarcely spoken to her for a week. Then the car drove up and she dismissed the matter, climbing in, waving her hand. Tressa went down the steps and disappeared around the rear of the car. "Probably going to the stables," Liane thought.
Kelly was a careful driver so it was with a sensation of real alarm that Liane observed shortly that the big car was bumping and careening raggedly over the ruts. The chauffeur glanced back at her before drawing to a stop.

BELEED BUZZARDS TO FLOAT OVER OHIO

LANCASTER, O., July 29. — A buzzard which soared and dipped to the tinkle of a small ball around its neck became a legend in Fairfield county. It disappeared and news came that an Indiana farmer had killed the "belled" bird.
Now three Lancaster boys propose to restore the "belled" buzzard to the county's list of unusual phenomena. The boys trapped two mated buzzards, placed bells around their necks and released them. They then discovered a buzzard nest with four young buzzards which they are guarding and will "bell" before the birds are old enough to fly away.

"SORRY, MADAM, ... WE WON'T HAVE ANY 'TIL NEXT WEEK"

WHILE shopping for some household supply, you have often been advised, "Sorry, Madam, but we won't have any 'til next week." Perhaps you thought little about this incident, but there are many reasons why you were not supplied the article you wanted—when you wanted it. Someone may have forgotten to replenish the supply; or neglected to provide enough to meet the demand; or inadequate transportation facilities delayed the delivery. Any one of these reasons may have caused you inconvenience.

Imagine your gas company telling you in the middle of a "blue norther"—"Sorry, Madam, but we won't have any gas until next week." Sounds absurd, doesn't it? Yet there are definite reasons why LONE STAR SERVICE is uninterrupted. It is there when and as you want it, because a quarter of a century has been spent in building a faithful gas service . . . the lowest priced dependable fuel service obtainable.

LONE STAR GAS SYSTEM
Even during summer months, when the domestic consumer requires very little fuel, Lone Star Gas Company is maintaining its facilities to combat weather hazards of the bleak months of winter.

BABY THRIVES WITH SAFETY PIN LODGED IN THROAT

EL PASO, July 29.—Gary Varnor Turner, nine-weeks-old baby, has an open safety pin lodged in his throat, but thinks little of it. When the baby was six weeks old he swallowed the pin. For several days he was in a critical condition as doctors attempted to remove the pin. Failing in that, they allowed the baby to rest, to regain his strength, and Gary grew, despite the pin in his throat.

So improved is his condition that he was discharged from the hospital and no further attempts will be made for the present to remove the obstruction.

Randolph College---

the approximately $30,000.00 it was previously. 135 students paying the school $100.00 each would enable the school to pay all expenses. Never but once in the last five years has the enrollment been that small. If it should fall below that figure there are several other sources of income to make up the loss. One of these is the summer school next summer. This summer it brought the school over $1,000.00 income and it should do even better next summer. Another source of income is church pledges, bonds, gifts, and interest on notes from individuals. On face value these should bring in about $10,000.00 a year but the financial depression has curtailed them so that $3,500.00 would be a conservative estimate. The dining hall which in previous years, until last year, has always shown a loss, should make a small profit. Our rates for board are low in order to attract students but are sufficiently high to break even. Several other sources of income are also open and it seems that with our reduced expenses it is hardly possible for the income to fall below the cost, especially student enrollment but these things are difficult to predict prospects look exceedingly bright at this time. It is easy to see that with the teachers receiving their salaries in full, and with the college paying in cash for what it buys, the people will have renewed confidence in the institution which will in itself be a big step toward success.

Cisco School

A third reason why Randolph should have a successful year is because the people of Cisco have come to the conclusion that it is their school and they must help to make it a success. More of them realizing this will send their boys and girls to Randolph rather than to some school away from here. More of them realizing this will have a niece or a nephew or a cousin from another place, come and live with them, and go to Randolph. Support of this kind for the institution, which I believe will come from the citizens of Cisco more than ever before, will do much to make it a successful year. If every citizen will be loyal to Randolph and each do his bit toward its success, its future is assured.

I believe in Randolph and I believe in the Citizens of Cisco and I believe that they will join me and the others of the board of trustees in the board of trustees in all working together for the success of the school.
