Troops Remain in East Texas; Sterling Awaits Opinion

APPEAL FROM COURT RULING TO BE TAKEN

AUSTIN, Feb. 19.—No order to remove troops from the east Texas field has been issued by him, Gov. Ross Sterling said today. "I do not know what the court ruling is other than press reports summarizing a 40-page opinion."

He said he would issue no statement until his attorneys received the opinion, though he expects to have an appeal taken.

The governor understood that the opinion does not constitute an order of the court and that the plaintiff's attorneys have been notified to file some information with the court before the court order is issued.

The opinion entered by the three-judge federal court at Houston yesterday afternoon held in effect that the governor had exceeded his authority in enforcing martial law in the east Texas field by military orders.

Discussing the declaration of martial law in the field, effective last August 17, the court held the troops were called out to act as civil officers. It said specifically it was not inquiring into the property of calling the troops.

"We hold not that we may, or that we do, inquire into the property of the governor's calling out the troops to enforce the law," the decision said, "but that they were called out to act as civil officers, with no greater power than civil officers would have, that in their actions they are amenable to inquiry as civil officers are, and that neither the proclamation of martial law, nor the purported military actions constitutes any defense to the plaintiffs' suit."

The decision further declared the military power of the state is subordinate to the civil and the military "can not in any state or case take the initiative or assume to do anything independent of the civil authorities."

"Our is a government of civil, not military, forces," the decision held. "The military in active service and in every emergency that arises in such service is subordinate to the civil powers. The soldier and the citizen stand alike under the law. Both must obey his commands, and be obedient to his mandates; we are not willing to concede that in any emergency that may arise the military is superior to the civil authorities."

ENFORCEMENT CONTINUED.
KILGORE, Feb. 19.—Brig.-Gen. Jacob Walters today said no injunction papers had been served on him and that troops will continue to enforce the present production allowance.

Wells in this vicinity were producing only their usual allowable today and no disorder was expected.

REQUESTS FOR TROOPS DENIED.
OVERTON, Feb. 19.—This area of the east Texas oil field was quiet today despite the federal court ruling declaring martial law illegal in the oil fields. Telephone calls to 20 small operators revealed no disobedience yet to military orders, though all of the operators said they were ready to run more oil if permitted to do so.

J. D. Wrathe, president of the Overton Refining Company, and one of the plaintiffs in the injunction suit, said he has not called for soldiers, does not need them and has complied strictly with military orders. H. J. Poup, superintendent of the Constantin Refinery, said he had not called for troops and had no fear of disorder.

Auto Injuries Fatal To Aged Attorney
FORT WORTH, Feb. 19.—Peter Arnold, 84 years old, Fort Worth attorney and former Dallas county judge, died here today of injuries received in an automobile accident in December.

He is survived by one son, L. Arnold, of San Angelo.

Await Trial in Hawaii Slaying

FUTURE FARMERS CHAPTER WILL ENTERTAIN "DADS"

With preparations having been made to take care of an attendance of 70 or more the Cisco chapter of the Future Farmers of America, under direction of E. H. Varnell, high school vocational instructor, will present tonight its annual "Father and Son" banquet at the high school gymnasium. The hour for the banquet is 7:30 and the meal will be served by the girls of the domestic science department under direction of Miss Willie Snyder, instructor.

These banquets are annual affairs with Future Farmer clubs throughout the country and are designed to bring the fathers of the boys in closer contact with the work that their sons are doing in vocational student activities.

The Rev. H. D. Tucker, pastor of the First Methodist church, will be the principal speaker of the evening under the subject "A Boy and His Dad". Other parts of the program have been announced as follows:

Song, Avery Holt and Ray Kinard; "My Lamb Project," by Byron Ray; "Our Future Farmer Program," by Rayford Richardson; Music, by G. W. Collum; Thrift talk.

BAPTISTS TO HEAR YOUNG PREACHER SUN.

The congregation of the First Baptist Church will have the privilege of hearing their own young preacher boy Sunday morning when Elwin Skiles of Simmons university, Abilene will fill the pulpit in the absence of the pastor. Elwin is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. A. I. Skiles, 1510 Leggett avenue. It will not be the first time Elwin has preached here. He spoke to this congregation on two occasions before this and was greeted each time by a large and appreciative audience. Each time he has spoken his message was well outlined and well delivered. All those who have heard him commend him very highly and anticipate for him a great future in the ministry.

At the evening service the Baptist student union of Simmons university will have charge of the worship period. This is an organization of Baptist students which goes from place to place presenting programs for the edification of the churches. Everywhere they have gone in the past they have met with splendid reception and have witnessed great success in their endeavor. Since Elwin is the secretary of this organization it will be a happy coincidence that these two services can be arranged together.

Mrs. P. L. Ulom will sing a solo at the morning service while good gospel singing by the choir and congregation will be an added delight in the evening hour. The public is invited.

KITTENS MEET CHAMPIONS AT DALLAS SAT.

Saturday night at 9 o'clock the Randolph college Kittens will meet the Golden Cyclones, national champions in Dallas in a game that will go a long way in determining the standing for the national tournament to be held in March. Earlier in the season the champions defeated Randolph by eight points but the Kittens had just returned from a 1500 mile trip and were in poor condition. Comparative scores in recent games gave the Kittens a slight margin. The collection defeated the Dallas Shoe company by seven points while the Cyclones managed to eke out a one point victory over the Shoe sextet in the last minute of play.

Agnes Robertson, Kathleen Peace, Gypsy Butcher, Babe Dirdickson and Captain Mansfield, five all-Americans, will feature the Cyclone attack while Coach Pop Garrett will have three All-American performers to start the game in Delma Fulford, McGhee and Greenlee. The Kittens are gradually rounding into shape and will take the court in the best condition of the year. Marie Russell, center, whose knee was injured at Houston, will probably see action sometime during the game. McGhee who had ankle has slowed her down considerably is expected to lead the scoring for the Kittens. Johnson and Fulford have recovered from the "flu" and will give the All-American trio of the Cyclones a battle in the forward court.

Coach Garrett has not decided definitely who will make the trip, but it is likely that Greenlee, D. Fulford, and McGhee will start at forward with Johnson, L. Fulford and Cross at guards. Russell and Swindle forwards and Farleigh and O'Neill will be ready to go in case the starting line-up fails to hold the champions.

REMAP MICHIGAN

DETROIT, Feb. 19.—The aerial survey of Michigan begun in 1931, is revamping the map of the state. Hundreds of lakes which were not included on other maps, have been discovered and various bodies of water were falsely represented before.

FIRE RAZES HOTEL HERE EARLY TODAY

Another of those interesting landmarks left to Cisco of oil boom days succumbed to the ravages of fire today when flames breaking out early this morning reduced the Cottage Hotel on West Tenth street to a pile of charred ruins, rated as a total loss both of building and contents.

The alarm was received by the city fire station at 5:30, sent in by members of the night police patrol, almost coincident with the discovery of the flames by Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Elder, owners and occupants of the building, who escaped from their bedroom by tearing a screen from a window and crawling through the opening onto the porch. Mrs. Elder saved only such clothing as she had time to snatch from a closet in the room.

Quick and efficient work by the fire department, aided by the fortunate absence of wind, confined the fire to the structure in which it originated. The coffee roasting plant operated by Mr. Elder in a tile building only a foot to the east of the hotel, and between it and the Blease Motor company, was saved from damage, while a residence on the lot adjoining the burned property on the west was hardly scorched, although flames towered twenty feet above the property hotel and a drift, carried above the building, and rushing through the hallways of the frame building at a rate that the firemen in spite of numerous streams of water poured upon it could not check further than confine them to the hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Elder were the only persons in the hotel at the time. The building, 104 West Tenth street, had been built about 1918 by Dr. Milling. Mr. and Mrs. Elder had owned it for about 10 years. It contained about 25 rooms.

The loss was partially covered by insurance.

Girl Advertised to Sit on Pole Here Only Tyro, Mother's Protest Reveals

When Cisco women's clubs and other organizations prevented the flag-pole sitting exhibition scheduled here early this month by their vigorous protests of the stunt they kept a tyro from ascending to the aerial seat for her first attempt at defying the elements and the natural laws by remaining aloft for 100 consecutive hours, a news story appearing in a Fort Worth paper yesterday revealed.

Advised as a veteran of the profession who earned her way through college by similar exhibitions, "Betty Fox" was declared in the story to have been only a maid to the "sitters" who would have undertaken the stunt for the first time in her life here. The promoter of the stunt announced here that the girl was his half sister, but the story yesterday reported a Fort Worth woman as claiming "Miss Fox" to be her daughter whose real name is Blanche Brown, and who had been with the troupe only a few days. The woman, Mrs. James DeVries, had telephoned an El Paso hotel owner to prevent the girl going aloft for a scheduled engagement there after she had learned for the first time that her daughter meant to undertake the feat.

Last Wednesday, however, Mrs. DeVries received a letter posted at El Paso in which the girl informed her mother that she intended to go aloft herself. Mrs. DeVries learned for the first time that her daughter had made an engagement to sit on a pole in Cisco which she was prevented from undertaking. She immediately got busy, telephoning the El Paso hotel, but learned that the troupe had left that city en route to Los Angeles.

Her daughter is in ill health and Mrs. DeVries said she feared the girl would contract tuberculosis if she exposed herself to the elements on a pole. She appealed to the police.

Blanton Demands Justice for Bishop

APPEAL FROM LAND TITLE SUIT PLANNED

AUSTIN, Feb. 19.—Attorneys today prepared to appeal a district court decision favoring the state in its trespass suit against R. B. Whiteside, et al, to settle title to 2,486 acres of valuable oil lands in the Yates field.

The judgment enables the state school fund to retain one-sixteenth royalty in oil produced on the contested land. This royalty interest aggregates the $20,000,000. Land Comm'r Walker has estimated. The disputed area includes the site of the famous discovery well of 1937, which already has produced oil worth $13,000,000.

"We are mailing today the fourth payment on the school apportionment amounting to two dollars per capita less the remainder of the assessment for county administration purposes. "This warrant is payable on presentation to the state treasurer and therefore should not be discounted. All warrants drawn on the state available school fund or textbook fund will be paid promptly on presentation; rural aid warrants are drawn on the general fund and will be paid by numerical order as that fund is now on a deficiency.

"The state treasurer desires me to call attention to the fact that some warrants drawn in favor of certain school districts are being received in that office not properly endorsed. ### ANOTHER HORNET'S NEST.

The Japanese have served another ultimatum upon the Chinese which means that the Japanese are preparing a justification for doing what they intended to do all along, use a ruthless military power for the economic conquest of the Chinese nation. They are pretty smart fellows, those Japanese. Having impressed even themselves with their national power by a crushing defeat of smug old Russia under the monarchy back in 1904 the virile young nation of the Rising Sun took advantage of the absorption of the rest of the powers in the conflict of the World War to seize concessions and commercial advantages previously held by the German nation in the far east.

With Manchuria economically subjugated and concessions in other parts of China extending the Japanese influence over a wide area of the east, Japanese found the worldwide economic depression doing things to their commercial program that wasn't in accordance with Hoyle. Too, the rising patriotism among young China's millions, stimulated by the nationalist movement, put an irritating checkmate upon that program, manifesting itself in a serious boycott of Japanese industry. A boycott is a weak but populous nation's most effective weapon against an aggressive country. The cost of forcing goods upon another people with guns and bayonets is a pretty heavy item of expense for business to absorb.

Japan has found it necessary to deal severely and suddenly with the situation in the hope of overawing the Chinese with the threat of military conquest drastically prosecuted. By overshadowing the principal Chinese marts of trade with this threat of military force the Japanese hope, under the excuse of protecting the lives and property of their nationals, to impress upon the Chinese the alternative of buying Japanese goods or suffering the consequences. Later, it is to be expected, the Japanese program contemplates an adroit appeal to the Chinese racial instincts to the effect that the Orient is for orientals and therefore they should cooperate with the Japanese to the mutual advantage of the yellow race and the particular prestige of the Japanese.

Such a program can be divined from the records of recent Oriental history and present apparent objectives; nor is it to the condemnation of the Japanese nation that such a goal is in their view, considering the examples that the history of the rest of the world provides. Germany was charged with a similar objective in its notorious "blood and iron" policies of Bismark perpetuated less shrewdly by the exile of Doorn. Nor has Germany been the only aggressor. World history has been marked repeatedly with trails of blood that were left of ambitious efforts at political and commercial expansion, the subjugation of markets that ordinary and peaceful competition failed to annex as rapidly as avid nationalism or the pressure of expanding populations required.

Japan has plenty of precedent for her present ambitions. But what Japan has failed to take into consideration, apparently, are the results that have invariably attended these instances of a belligerent persuasion. Invariably they have threatened world peace and well-being because they have brought the aggressor nation into violent conflict with other peoples of similar desires and have led eventually into flare-ups of ghastly destruction.

Unless the good offices of the more peaceful minded powers can avail to establish some permanent and peaceful adjustment of the situation in the east today the world can look with apprehension upon that clime as the arena in which is developing the features of another holocaust such as that which shook the world from 1914 to 1918 and whose dread repercussions have not yet subsided upon the shores of the forgotten past.

If Japan's purpose is to exploit for selfish purposes the some 400,000,000 Chinese, that purpose, in view of the principles that the enlightened nations of the earth agreed with in Wilson, is a direct violation of international justice and decency and demands the stern and unrelenting opposition of these nations.

If China, by some heroic inspiration, could vigorously repel the invasion that act would accomplish the purpose of a peaceful adjustment more effectively than words and protests, but, unfortunately, the big eastern mandarin is too fat and inept—too rich a prize to be an effective fighting machine.

In the Political Arena

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD

Texas democrats are reminded that Speaker John N. Garner will be presented to the Chicago convention as a democratic presidential candidate. Sen. Morris Sheppard and Tom Connally advanced his name as a favorite son possibility to the democrats of the nation and appealed for national support for their fellow Texan as a rugged and militant champion of the people. There address was broadcast to the democrats of the 48 American commonwealths and a most sweeping endorsement given by the Texas senators "without reflecting on any other democrat whose name has been mentioned in connection with the presidency."

Speaking of the distinguished speaker of the house, the senators said: "We have no hesitation in averring that Speaker Garner by training and experience in national affairs and by his wide grasp of national problems is the most highly qualified of all who are being mentioned for candidates in either the democratic or republican parties." This was the conclusion of the address: "The democrats of Texas will send a delegation to Chicago instructed to vote for his nomination. They welcome the support of democrats everywhere in his banner. The mention of his name has aroused spontaneous enthusiasm and support in many sections of the country. His candidacy will continue to grow in strength as his services and character become more intimately known to the democrats of the nation."

Now it is said that 16 states will send delegations instructed for favorite sons. Oklahoma will instruct for Bill Murray; Arkansas for Joseph Taylor Robinson; Missouri for James A. Reed; Louisiana will send an uninstructed delegation headed by Sen. Huey P. Long. As for Speaker Garner he did not lose his poise when Washington correspondents informed him of the statement issued by the Texas senators. This is what he said: "I have not talked to either Sen. Sheppard or Sen. Connally about the presidential situation. My job is speaker of the house and I am confining myself solely to the job of running that house. I did not have the slightest knowledge that such a statement was being issued. Any statement issued about me is done so voluntarily and on the author's own accord. I have no spokesman and I desire that to be clearly understood."

Speaker Garner emphatically declined to discuss the presidential candidacy situation. A native Texan, he has 30 years to his credit in the house of representatives, and before his election as a representative he served with ability in the senate of his native state. Yes, the political pot is boiling the country over and the Chicago convention promises to be a history making event in the annals of the American democracy.

By NEA Service
Capture of Lord Cornwallis' army at Yorktown, Va., which brought the war to a virtual close, was chiefly due to Washington's far-sightedness.

After unsuccessfully pursuing Lafayette and destroying property in Virginia, Cornwallis entered Yorktown and fortified the city, unwittingly building his own prison to escape from which he was forced to surrender.

Washington decided to strike swiftly with every soldier he could obtain, including Lafayette's army and the French fleet. He obtained nearly $1,500,000 from Robert Morris to finance the tremendous maneuver.

The British thought Washington was preparing to attack New York. He unexpectedly broke camp and led his whole force from the Hudson to the head of Chesapeake Bay and from there to Yorktown by ships.

When Cornwallis looked out from Yorktown's fortifications, he saw the French fleet on one side and the American army of 9000 and the French army of 5000 grouped together on the other.

Cornwallis held out for a week, but on October 21, 1781, his 7000 British regulars were forced to surrender, practically ending the war.

Washington was kept busy for the next two years winding up his military affairs. He urged congress to demand greater liberty for the colonies and also to settle claims of the soldiers and officers. He bade farewell to his closest staff members in New York on Dec. 4, 1783, and on Dec. 23 resigned his commission in the state senate chamber of Maryland in Annapolis.

Within a few hours, Washington has home again at Mount Vernon, where his affairs as a gentleman-farmer occupied his time for the ensuing four years.

The hostesses must wear evening dresses and Ellen does not own one. Steven Barclay, 57, and Ellen's employer, sees the girl crying and discovers the situation. He lends Ellen a lovely frock when she refuses to accept it as a gift. Ellen forgets her wealthy admirer's kindness when at Dreamland she meets handsome Larry Harrowgate, an artist. Ellen discovers Larry is engaged to Elizabeth Bowers, a debutante, she is hurt that he has failed to tell her this. Though she believes him to be a philanthropist she continues to see him. Myra and her mother openly favor Barclay. Ellen quarrels with her mother and refuses to break an engagement with Larry to accept one from Barclay. She and Larry go to Coney Island.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XIII
Ellen had not expected to enjoy that afternoon with Larry Harrowgate. She would have said that her mother's hysterics, her own dissatisfaction with the state of affairs between them, had spoiled the afternoon. But when at 4:30, only 20 minutes late, he appeared leaping up the stairs she saw that she had been wrong. "I'm a mountain goat," he shouted when he caught sight of her in the doorway. "I'm good for 10 fights yet."

Ellen laughed. "You're panting just the same," she jeered. "Did you by any chance see Mrs. Barclay as you were coming up? She generally opens her door to investigate all callers."

"That the party with the red face and the mob cap I flew past on the second floor?" he inquired as he reached the landing and paused panting. "Sure. She was so interested I thought she meant to join me on the last lap."

"You're lucky she didn't," Ellen advised him with a little giggle. "You'd have had to carry her. I'm sure."

"That was a break."

They stood for a moment laughing in the room where afternoon sunlight shone mercilessly on the hedge-podge furniture and leveled its rays as well on the shabby, worn carpet and faded wall paper. Ellen had thoroughly swept the apartment and folded up the Sunday papers but she had changed nothing. She felt an obscure determination that Larry Harrowgate should see them as they were. Now that he was there, as thoroughly at ease as though he were in the home of a millionaire, she breathed with relief.

He was no snob. Molly and Mike had disappeared but Myra was there. She refused their urgent invitation to join them on the score of some dancing she must do. So Ellen and Larry departed alone.

"Your sister's swell," Larry observed.

"Yes, isn't she?" Ellen agreed eagerly.

"She could see that we wanted to be alone," he went on. "I bet my hat she had no darling to do—wanting to forget a word of all this. She knew she would want to remember often what he had said. It would have been a little better if he had not laughed so. Still there it was—he had said they wanted to be alone."

They giggled when Mrs. Barclay opened the door and peeped out at them. Ellen did not speak. That would have been too embarrassing for the kindly neighbor who was pretending she was invisible. Then they reached the street where a collection of grimy urchins, their

Sunday clothes already hopelessly soiled, scrambled over a shining blue roadster.

"What a marvelous car," Ellen breathed.

"What you can see of it isn't so bad. At the moment it looks something like a human ant hill," he remarked, adding carelessly. "Doesn't belong to me. I wish it did. But I've the use of it till seven."

Larry dug into his pockets for change and came out with a handful of nickels and dimes. For all the world like a pitcher preparing to hurl a fast one, he swung his arm, whispering to Ellen to watch. Coins sprang from his hand and clattered to the street in all directions, some of them rolling half a block away. At once the roadster was abandoned by the shouting, shrieking youngsters who pounced after the elusive coins. Several fist fights had begun by the time Ellen and Larry, laughing helplessly, stepped into the empty car and drove off.

"You'll never be rich if you throw away money like that," the girl said after a while.

"Ho! Ho! So you're another one of those people who's going to tell me things for my own good," he commented with a sideways and delighted glance at her.

"Certainly not!" she assured him with indifference.

Nevertheless her color rose and even as she entered her swift denial she was wondering why those others were. Certainly this charming irresponsible young man needed to be told things for his own good. Was he referring to Elizabeth Bowers, his fiancée? Briefly Ellen experienced a twist of pure pain. Then she determined sensibly that such speculations should spoil the afternoon. For a few hours at least Larry belonged exclusively to her. She must get what fun she could from those hours.

"You did tell me that you were poor," she ventured.

"That's right. A poor man with a rich man's habits. Don't you feel sorry for me?"

"Can't say that I do exactly," he laughed and called her hard-hearted. Soon they were wrangling gaily, pleased with each other and with themselves, pleased to be together, riding in a smooth luxurious car on such a glorious day.

"That's a nice frock," Larry said

as they swept out of Fine street and toward Manhattan.

"I wore it last night," Ellen responded innocently. "This is the same one with the jacket added."

"You're a smart little girl, aren't you, Ellen?"

"Girls have to be smart about clothes," Ellen confessed, hiding her exultation with the compliment.

"With or without the jacket, that dress is just your ticket," Larry summarized it.

The car slid over Brooklyn bridge. Ellen, glancing up, surprised an odd expression on Larry's face. He spoke but the roar of Sunday traffic drowned his voice. Helplessly the girl shook her head.

Lower Manhattan was quieter. Empty office buildings frowned down into empty canyons that on week-days were filled with scurrying stenographers and clerks and brokers and customers' men. Nothing open, not a restaurant, not a drug-store, not a news stand. A few pedestrians idled along lower Broadway, a few cars idled along the deserted streets, but everywhere was the peace of Sunday. Ellen waited for Larry to speak. He had wanted to say something; he had said something on the bridge. His persistent silence disturbed the girl, made her nervous and absurdly anxious.

"Well," she said at length.

"Well," he repeated after her.

"You said something to me on the bridge but I couldn't hear," she told him a little stiffly.

"So I did," he agreed exasperatingly.

"What was it?"

"Something I hadn't any right to say to you."

"Oh, for heaven's sake!" she cried in irritation. "You have a right to say anything you want to say to me."

"Do you really mean that?"

"Certainly I mean it!"

The car slowed; his speech slowed. "I was only thinking," he said lightly. "That I like your dress today a good deal better than the one you wore the first night I met you."

That dress again!

"Most people thought the other one was lovely," Ellen put in faintly. How she wished she had not forced this issue!

"That's not quite what I was getting at."

Just then he turned a sharp corner and Ellen, caught off guard was literally flung into his arms. She gasped, exulted herself and moved back to her own corner with an uncertain laugh. She hoped the man would laugh too; hoped his attention would have been diverted from the dress. It had not been.

"You know what I was getting at, don't you?" he inquired idly.

"How should I?"

"Very well then, I'll tell you," he began briskly and in a manner most matter of fact. "It's none of my business and I'm rushing in where angels fear to tread and all that but it seems funny to me that—well—" he continued stubbornly after a breath—"that was an expensive dress, wasn't it?"

"This is an expensive car, isn't it?"

"Oh, I see! Meaning that at just this point a young man watches his step?"

"Meaning precisely that!"

Ellen was annoyed as much with herself as with him. She wanted to be furiously angry. Larry had no right to question her when she could not question him. Her affairs were as much her own as were his. But she could not be really angry; she dared not risk severing the slender thread that bound them together. Still her pride meant something. She would not explain.

"I'm sorry. I've no right to be so curious," he apologized unexpectantly and almost as if he were reading her secret thoughts. "I don't know what got into me. Let's drop the subject and talk about the weather or what we're going to do this afternoon."

The apology also failed to satisfy. Ellen was conscious of a certain disappointment, baffling and displeasing. She would not admit that deep in her heart she had hoped Larry would insist he had the right to know everything about her.

There was a rather flat interval. Then Larry began driving at such terrific speed that the girl could think of nothing except keeping her hair up and her frock down. The pins showered from her hair. She pleaded with the speed maniac in vain.

"How's for some dancing?" he shouted, grinning.

"Too hot for dancing," she shouted in answer. "Have you ever been to Coney? Why don't we rent suits and have that kind of a rowdy afternoon?"

Immediately he whirled the car in the direction of Coney Island.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By EDSON R. WAITE
Shawnee, Oklahoma.

It is the duty of every citizen to support the Chamber of commerce because it is the peoples' workshop for the building of the city.

It occurs to me that the different governments should turn elsewhere than to gasoline for new revenue. Automobiles are no longer a luxury, but a necessity. Few people in these days use their cars for pleasure alone, and any extra tax must fall most heavily upon the man of moderate means. Today the city man and the farmer are compelled to use automobiles to go about their daily business. In the same way, schools are not built on every corner. He must pay more for the transportation of his children if the tax is raised. Raising taxes on gasoline is hitting directly at every person, rich or poor.

Adequately supported newspapers are the most potent agencies for community development.

The Pecan Valley and Oil Belt areas of Boy Scouts of America are to move. All arrangements for consolidation of the two areas, hereafter to be known as the Comanche Trail area, were made by committees from both areas in a meeting at Cisco Friday night.

Guy N. Quirl, executive of the Oil Belt area with headquarters at Eastland for several years, was elected executive of the consolidated area. Headquarters for the area will be in Brownwood in the present location at the courthouse. Mr. Quirl will move his family to Brownwood to make his home and will be in charge of both areas by March 1st.

Pouncey Assistant Executive
C. L. Pouncey, Pecan Valley Area executive for more than a year, was elected assistant executive and will work with Mr. Quirl in directing the activities of the combined area.

Dr. Jewell Daugherty of Brownwood was elected president of the council. Other officers were named as follows: Russel Jones of Brockridge, commissioner; J. K. Wilkes of Brownwood, treasurer; H. C. Anderson of Ranger, vice president and Earl Fairman of Goldthwaite, vice president.

The majority of the people are conservative is true, but this trait of conservatism should not blind them to the importance of buying the things they need at the present time. A dollar will now buy more and better things than ever before. Just glance through the advertising columns of your newspaper and see what bargains you can get. Just as soon as this depression, caused by the economy scare, is over you won't get so much for your money. Read the ads and buy what you need now.

It's just too bad that in this day and time some towns are afflicted with some distorters of the truth—citizens who have no better judgment than to say all the mean things they can about the home-towns by finding some fancied faults and, with a vivid imagination, en-

Ayres' Sensational Rise to Film Fame

The most sensational rise to a stardom during the past year has been that of Lew Ayres, at the Palace theatre Saturday starting in "Iron Man," Universal's stirring picture...

One picture made him an idol in the eyes of film goers throughout the world. The picture was "All Quiet on the Western Front." Today he is regarded as the "find" of the year...

After Hollywood had been combed by Universal, he was chosen for the lead in "All Quiet," and signed to a five-year contract.

He has lived up to every prediction made for him. He received applause in "Commagene" and was a sensation in "The Doorway to Hell." Following "East Is West," "Many a Slip" and "Up For Murder," Carl Laemmle, Jr. in charge of production, promoted Ayres to full fledged stardom.

"Iron Man" is a stirring love story of the prize ring, with Jean Harlow, Robert Armstrong, Eddie Dillon and John Miljan in the cast. Tod Browning directed.

MARIE DRESSLER IN "EMMA" Marie Dressler, idol of the screen will be seen Sunday at the Palace theatre in her newest starring vehicle, "Emma," an intimate story of American family life.

The picture presents Miss Dressler in her first straight character portrayal since "Min and Bill," which won her the Academy award for the best performance of any actress in the industry in 1931.

Miss Dressler is seen as the faithful servant in the home of a rich man. She is a second mother to his children but in the end they turn against her as the result of a dramatic will contest.

What is the PRICE OF BEAUTY? HELPS KEEP YOU FIT

Without health there can be little natural beauty. The wise woman knows that the condition of her body shows itself on her face, her complexion, and in her eyes. She takes care to avoid constipation. This treacherous ailment frequently causes headaches, sallow skin, pimples, premature aging. Try the pleasant "cereal way" to protect yourself from constipation. Science has proved that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN also furnishes iron, which helps build up the blood. The "bulk" in this delicious cereal is much like that of lettuce. How much safer than abusing your system with pills and drugs—so often habit-forming! Two tablespoonfuls daily will correct most types of constipation. ALL-BRAN is not habit-forming. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor. Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg's Battle Creek.
