

'Unspeakable' Life Led By Women Under Soviet

MRS. PHILLIP SNOWDEN, NOTED ENGLISH SUFFRAGIST, TELLS OF CONDITIONS IN THE RUSSIA OF TODAY FROM THE FEMININE VIEWPOINT.

International News Service. LONDON, Aug. 10.—'Life for women in soviet Russia is unspeakable hard,' said Mrs. Phillip Snowden, noted English suffragist and wife of the former labor Member of Parliament, who has returned from Russia, where she spent as one of two women members of the British Labor Party's delegation.

'There is no public criticism of Communist principles or policies,' she said. 'Those who criticize are classed as counter-revolutionaries and the Extraordinary Commission takes care of them. The Communists thought to use us as propagandists and arranged demonstrations at which we were advertised to speak.'

'The bolsheviks have convinced the people that both Great Britain and the United States are on the verge of revolutions. I took every opportunity to tell the people how they had been misled. Bolsheviki officials did not like it, but the applause from the people was surprising.'

Speaking of women and conditions generally, Mrs. Snowden said: 'I got first-hand information about the American newspaper woman. I was unable to learn where she was from, or whom she represented, but her name is Mrs. Harrison. She has been held in Russia for three years and will not be permitted to leave until after the war is over. She is not in prison, but is treated as a spy.'

'Emma Goldman, compared with the bolsheviks, is a spotless lamb of mildness. She is very unhappy and is entirely out of sympathy with the communist administration; its rigidity is alien to her principles. She is spending her time looking out for the comfort and interests of the other deportees and quarrelling with the bolsheviks. Her treatment of the anarchists has made her very bitter.'

'The theatres are one bright spot. The care which the soviet government takes of children is another. Country houses have been turned into centres for the little ones, and they are well cared for. I never saw a miserable child all the time I was in Russia.'

'But life for women is unspeakably hard. Every woman whose services are not absolutely essential at home—that is to say, every woman who has no small children—has been conscripted to work in the fields or factories. In addition to this work, they still have to care for their home—to stand, in long queues for the meager scraps of food; to build fires without firewood. They have no clothes except what they have had for years. There are no styles in Petrograd later than 1914. The efforts which the women make to appear presentable are pathetic. When I was in Petrograd I went to a birthday party, given in honor of a distinguished poet. One of the lady guests wore a cloak of sable which was simply priceless, but her dress was coming through her shoes.'

'I saw almost no young people on the streets of Russia. The girls, they told me, were all at work in factories, and the boys were at the front. But I learned that many of the girls were at the front, as well. I myself saw at least fifty women, who were volunteers, serving in the ranks of the 'red' army. Some of them wore men's uniforms. Some wore no uniforms at all—any kind of clothes they could get.'

'The bolshevik administration, as I saw it, is neither democratic nor social. It is a merciless war machine. And the people are supporting it, first, because they are intensely patriotic and fear that division may mean conquest from an outside foe, and second, because they do not dare to oppose it.'

'I found nothing in the rumor that women had been nationalized. There is absolutely free divorce. In the United States if both parties wish a divorce that is an almost certain bar to obtaining it. They are accused of collusion. In Russia that is the only reason which

EASTLAND WINS THIRD FROM SCOUTS IN GAME FEATURED BY ERRORS

Bad Day on Pitchers — Ninth Inning Rally By Cisco Falls One Short — Players Cannot Agree With Umpire.

In a poor exhibition of baseball, featured by costly errors on both sides, Eastland walked away with the third game of the series by winning Monday's game, to the tune of 8 to 7. It was a hard day for pitchers—it seemed a hard matter for any of them to find the plate, and when they did the man at bat usually laid on it for a drive. Cruse was the only one of four hurlers that met without anything near success, and he walked three men and allowed one hit before he tightened up. From then on he had things going his way.

Yesterday seemed like a day set aside for players to 'rag' the umpire. It might be that the umpire was bad, or rotten, or whatever term you wish to use in passing the compliment, but the fans spend their hard-earned mazzama to see what is termed the cleanest of all American sports, and the continual arguing on the diamond is not what they want. An umpire's decision can be disputed by the proper man on the team in such a way that it does not look so bad to the grandstand, and at the same time have the desired effect, but the practice of different players on each side to take matters in their own hands every few minutes should be eliminated.

The judges started their bombardment, as usual, in the first frame, and chalked up a lead which they kept the entire game. Gross walked, Gray laid down a perfect sacrifice on the third base line, but Gross ran by second too far and was caught in a chase and put out before he could get back. Payne hit one over Thrash for two sacks and went to third on Hartwick's hot sizzler through Beard. Hartwick, in stealing second, drew the throw, Payne starting for the plate and scoring when Flagg threw high in making a quick return to Griesenbeck to cut him off. Hartwick scored when Bratcher singled. Ross Johnson retired the side when Kotzelnick made a pretty catch of his long fly to right field.

In the fourth Maloney's dug-out had the distinction of putting two across with the aid of a single hit. Hartwick was safe at first on Mathes error. Fuller got hold of Bratcher's drive, but failed to hold it. Johnson hit a slow one to Mathes, who threw to Beard, forcing Hartwick, but Beard threw wild to first in an attempted double, the ball going over to the rail. Bratcher scoring. Johnson came in on Berkley's sacrifice fly. Browning flew out to King for the third out.

In their half of the fifth it looked like the Scouts would even things up, but two runs was the best they could do. Beard opened up with a grass-cutter through third. Anderson doubled to left, sending Beard to third. Kotzelnick singled to right field, scoring Beard. Mathes sacrificed Kotzelnick. Fuller was out short to first. Anderson scoring on the play. Flagg killed hopes for further runs by grounding out, Hartwick to Berkley.

Eastland batted all the way around and one over in the sixth, netting four runs and sewing up the game. Three successive hits and errors by Mathes and King allowed the visitors three runs. Mathes was then relieved by Cruse, who allowed one more tally when Word singled to left, scoring Berkley. Although Cruse walked three men at this point, he tightened up and struck out Payne for the third out, retiring the side. In the eighth he struck out three in a row and held them tight in the ninth, but the good work was started too late.

In the eighth Cisco scored three runs. Fuller walked, Flagg walked, but was forced at second when King hit to first. King was forced when Griesenbeck hit to short. Thrash walked filling the bases. Beard singled to right, going to third, as all men on scored when Johnson led the ball go through him. Beard died on third when Anderson flew out. A rally in the ninth looked good for a while, but fell one short of tying up the game. 'Lefty,' first up, was safe at first on Gross' error. Chapman batted for Cruse and popped out. Fuller was out on a pop-up to first. Flagg walked. Then a little fun happened. Browning failed to stop one of Darrough's dirty drops, which hit the ground just behind the plate. King, who was at bat, wanted to act nice and show Browning where the ball went to, pointing out several spots with the end of his bat, but, strange to say, when Browning would dive in the grass it would not be there. After Browning followed King around until Kotzelnick had strolled leisurely to first, he decided King was 'spooting' him and did not really know where the ball was at all and commenced to look for it on his own hook, locating the pill just in time to hold Flagg on third. Flagg came on in, though, on King's single to right. Griesenbeck retired the side when he laid down a hot one to Gross, who threw him out to first on a pretty play.

KELLY'S COMMENTS

Cruse has the right kind of stuff in him. On the two last times he went against Eastland they knocked him out, but he went in yesterday and struck out five men in three and a half innings, putting a stop to the Judges' hitting rally.

If anybody else in the world but Tim Griesenbeck had failed to get that pinch hit in the ninth inning yesterday, with one man on, two out, and one run needed to tie the score, we could possibly have overlooked it, but the big catcher is SUPPOSED to hit, and he is in bad until he redeems himself.

Now comes Mineral Wells with their 'Class D' (?) ball team. We are all gorry to hear that Josh Billings is sick and will be out of the game for several days. This comes at a critical time, with the Resorters coming and 'Uncle Josh' one of our best bets for a victory.

Have you heard the latest musical hit? The newest thing in chin music is entitled 'Ragging the Umps.' But what we want is baseball.

Gray, third baseman for Eastland, is showing some pretty work. His whip swing the diamond to first is hard to beat, and he has a bad habit of getting on first base. By the way, Gray is Cisco's man, only loaned to Curley Maloney, and it is more than probable that we will get him back in the next few days.

'Unspeakable' Life Led By Women Under Soviet

MRS. PHILLIP SNOWDEN, NOTED ENGLISH SUFFRAGIST, TELLS OF CONDITIONS IN THE RUSSIA OF TODAY FROM THE FEMINE VIEWPOINT.

International News Service. LONDON, Aug. 10.—'Life for women in Soviet Russia is unspeakably hard,' said Mrs. Phillip Snowden, noted English suffragist and wife of the former labor member of Parliament, who has just returned from Russia, where she spent one of two women members of the British Labor Party's delegation.

'There is no public criticism of Communist principles or policies,' she said. 'The who criticize are classed as counter-revolutionaries and the Extraordinary Commission takes care of them. need be given. But if only one party desires a divorce the couple are put on probation for three months and so given an opportunity to reconsider and 'patch it up.' Then, if one still remains dissatisfied, the divorce is granted.

'Russian women still find consolation in religion. The reports that the churches had been closed by the bolsheviks and the ikons and ornaments confiscated were untrue. It is true that the soviet government has forbidden the use of the word 'God' in the public schools and that the church is no longer under the control and protection of the state, as a privileged institution.'

'I found that Russian women, like English and American women, were chiefly interested in education, child welfare, and those matters of public interest which affect the home. I found them divided politically, but silent when they held views in opposition to the government, because the country was at war. Until Russia is again open to the trade of the world and at peace with her enemies no one will know how Russian women really feel about bolshevism.'

These are the views of Miss Pauline Floyd, twenty-two, divorcee specialist, and acclaimed the youngest woman attorney in the country. To show that she has the courage of her convictions, Miss Floyd is preparing to move her office from Washington to Reno, Nevada, where she hopes to find divorce cases worthy of her talents.

EASTLAND WINS THIRD FROM SCOUTS IN GAME FEATURED BY ERRORS

Bad Day on Pitchers — Ninth Inning Rally By Cisco Falls One Short — Players Cannot Agree With Umpire.

In a poor exhibition of baseball, featured by costly errors on both sides, Eastland walked away with the third game of the series by winning Monday's game, to the tune of 8 to 7. It was a hard day for pitchers—it seemed a hard matter for any of them to find the plate, and when they did the man at bat usually laid on it for a drive. Cruse was the only one of four hurlers that met without anything near success, and he walked three men and allowed one hit before he tightened up. From then on he had things going his way.

Yesterday seemed like a day set aside for players to "rag" the umpire. It might be that the umpire was bad, or rotten, or whatever term you wish to use in passing the compliment, but the fans spend their hard-earned mazzama to see what is termed the cleanest of all American sports, and the continual arguing on the diamond is not what they want. An umpire's decision can be disputed by the proper man on the team in such a way that it does not look so bad to the grandstand, and at the same time have the desired effect, but the practice of different players on each side to take matters in their own hands every few minutes should be eliminated.

The judges started their bombardment, as usual, in the first frame, and chucked up a lead which they kept the entire game. Gross walked, Gray laid down a perfect sacrifice on the third base line, but Gross ran by second too far and was caught in a chase and put out before he could get back. Payne hit one over Thrash for two sacks and went to third on Hartwick's hot sizzler through Beard. Hartwick, in stealing second, drew the throw. Payne starting for the plate and scoring when Flagg threw high in making a quick return to Griesenbeck to cut him off. Hartwick scored when Bratcher singled. Ross Johnson retired the side when Kotelznick made a pretty catch of his long fly to right field.

In the fourth Matoney's dug-out had the distinction of putting two across with the aid of a single hit. Hartwick was safe at first on Mathes error. Fuller got hold of Bratcher's drive, but failed to hold it. Johnson hit a slow one to Mathes, who threw to Beard, forcing Hartwick, but Beard threw wild to first in an attempted double, the ball going over to the rail. Bratcher scoring. Johnson came in on Berkley's sacrifice fly. Browning flew out to King for the third out.

In their half of the fifth it looked like the Scouts would even things up, but two runs was the best they could do. Beard opened up with a grass-cutter through third. Anderson doubled to left, sending Beard to third. Kotelznick singled to right field, scoring Beard. Mathes sacrificed Kotelznick. Fuller was out short to first. Anderson scoring on the play. Flagg killed hopes for further runs by grounding out, Hartwick to Berkley.

Eastland batted all the way around and one over in the sixth, netting four runs and sewing up the game. Three successive hits and errors by Mathes and King allowed the visitors three runs. Mathes was then relieved by Cruse, who allowed one more tally when Word singled to left, scoring Berkley. Although Cruse walked three met at this point, he tightened up and struck out Payne for the third out, retiring the side. In the eighth he struck out three in a row and held them tight in the ninth, but the good work was started too late.

In the eighth Cisco scored three runs. Fuller walked, Flagg walked, but was forced at second when King hit to first. King was forced when Griesenbeck hit to short. Thrash walked filling the bases. Beard singled to right, going to third, as all men on scored when Johnson let the ball go through him. Beard died on third when Anderson flew out. A rally in the ninth looked good for a while, but fell one short of tying up the game. "Lefty," first up, was safe at first on Gross' error. Chapman batted for Cruse and popped out. Fuller was out on a pop-up to first. Flagg walked. Then a little fun happened. Browning failed to stop one of Darrough's dirty drops, which hit the ground just behind the plate. King, who was at bat, wanted to act nice and show Browning where the ball went to, pointing out several spots with the end of his bat, but, strange to say, when Browning would dive in the grass it would not be there. After Browning followed King around until Kotelznick had strolled leisurely in for a tally, he decided King was "spoofing" him and did not really know where the ball was at all and commenced to look for it on his own hook, locating the pill just in time to hold Flagg on a ninth. Flagg came on in, though, on King's single to right. Griesenbeck retired the side when he laid down a hot one to Gross, who threw him out to first on a pretty play.

KELLY'S COMMENTS Cruse has the right kind of stuff in him. On the two last times he went in against Eastland they knocked him out, but he went in yesterday and struck out five men in three and a half innings, putting a stop to the Judges' hitting rally.

If anybody else in the world but Tim Griesenbeck had failed to get that pinch hit in the ninth inning yesterday, with one man on, two out, and one run needed to tie the score, we could possibly have overlooked it, but the big catcher is SUPPOSED to hit, and he is in bad until he redeems himself.

Have you heard the latest musical hit? The newest thing in chin music is entitled "Ragging the Umps." But what we want is baseball.

Gray, third baseman for Eastland, is showing some pretty work. His whip across the diamond to first is hard to beat, and he has a bad habit of getting on first base. By the way, Gray is Cisco's man, only loaned to Curley Maloney, and it is more than probable that we will get him back in the next few days.

Now comes Mineral Wells with their "Class D" (?) ball team. We are all sorry to hear that Josh Billings is sick and will be out of the game for several days. This comes at a critical time, with the Resorters coming and "Uncle Josh" one of our best bets for a victory.

We were in error yesterday in stating there were five games billed with the Crazy Water boys. There are only three, and the pitching line-up looks like: Kotelznick, Johnson and Cruse. Let us all go out this afternoon and give "Lefty" a lift.
