SOUTH AFRICA BANS EXPORT OF GOLD.

South Africa is one of the important gold producing countries. Now the South African government has decided to adhere to the gold standard but to prohibit the export of gold from the South African union. Americans have large investments in South Africa. Indeed, it is said that at the end of 1929 their investments were approximately $40,000,000 in the Union of South Africa and this amount is believed to have been increased in the last three years. There is a new labor party in the South African union. Its leaders plan to form a new coalition government. They threaten to throw out of power the Hertzog cabinet government. All of which is a reminder that South Africa gold, like the supply in India, rarely is sold in the New York gold markets and the South African union has not sold any of its own securities in the United States.

CONTRIBUTIONS OF PHILANTHROPISTS.

According to a financial journal of New York more than half of the $54,500,000, given away by 102 American philanthropic foundations in 1931, $29,634,000 came from the Rockefeller fortune. This was revealed by the publication of the annual survey of the 20th century fund. Medicine and public health received $17,135,000; education, $13,579,000; social science and physical science, third and fourth, with $5,832,942 and $4,667,600 respectively. Now read this item which is most significant: "Prohibition received $100, the smallest amount of the 27 fields represented." John D. Rockefeller, Sr., the founder of the Rockefeller foundation, has given away upwards of $2,000,000,000 since he closed his very active career to get a little enjoyment out of life before he touched the century mark. He is playing golf and enjoying life as he sees it and plays it under the skies of Florida. Praise him or damn him, he has contributed a greater number of golden dollars for the uplift of those who needed uplift than any great colossus of industry since the beginning of time.

HOOSIER MARRIAGE CROP ON BLINK.

Hoosier marriage crop seems to be on the blink. Hoosier divorce crop is hiking to a new high level. Indianapolis is the chief city of Hoosierdom. Marion county is the richest and most populous of all Hoosier counties. Well, the president of Butler university made the alarming discovery that Marion county has a divorce rate of 40.55 divorces for each wedding as compared with the rate for the nation of a whole of only 16.6 divorces per hundred marriages. Well, the Hoosier educator has a remedy. He has decided that some special degree of education is now needed "for happiness in marriage." His lectures will be on the physical, psychological, economic, social and religious aspects of wedded life. It will be the first time that any American college will have offered such a course for general registration, and the course will be open to students and non-students and single and married persons. It may be possible to change human nature—in Indiana or elsewhere. There are millions of happy marriages—marriages where the life partners go through to the finish. There are thousands of unhappy or unmatred marriages. A majority are not 50-50 players. They go on the rocks. Very little newspaper space is devoted to the millions who are happily married, face all responsibilities, stand together in the battle of life—and every play the game as it should be played. As for the failures, the more sensational the finish the more pictures and glittering generalities for the boys and girls who make the news for the readers of the daily press.

JAMES A. REED READY FOR COMEBACK.

James A. Reed for 30 years has been the lion-hearted leader of the old school democrats of Missouri. He retired from the American senate to become a candidate for the democratic presidential nomination—in 1928. He failed to win the prize, but he continued to be the outstanding orator of democrats of his creed as well as their idol of democracy the country over. He went down fighting for Smith four years ago. This over he returned to the practice of law, and added to his laurels and fortune as one of the foremost of the followers of Coke and Blackstone. He was for Franklin D. Roosevelt and backed him to the finish. While the campaign was on, the greatest sorrow of his life came to him. His beautiful and accomplished wife partner crossed the river to land invisible. He carried on. He is built that way. It was known to his close friends of the years that Mrs. Reed cared little for the social frills or follies or fads of official life. She preferred her home in Kansas City to a gay life on the banks of the Potomac river. Now leaders of democratic factions in Missouri have decided to send their fiery and brilliant leader back to the senate in 1934. It is no secret in Missouri in democratic circles that "Jim" Reed has given his consent to return to the public service and will make the race as the nominee of the united democracy of his adopted state. There is only one James A. Reed. He is almost alone in his class. He was a leader when he wore a toga, an outstanding leader, ever courageous and ever the champion of the ancient traditions and fundamentals of a democracy which came in with this republic.

OUT OUR WAY

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

For the past week Specs has been under the weather with the "Flu". I was unable to tell whether I was coming or going, walking on my head or on the extremities nature intended should support and transport me. In the state of mind that such a situation implies this column was temporarily relegated to the untouchables. It wasn't a matter of laziness. It was a matter of caution.

During its quiescent period several things happened. George D. Fee lost $15 to a midnight prowler and the next morning his fever was up to 110. He has survived the ordeal with credit to his stamina, however, and doesn't fear a relapse. Principally, George says, because he doesn't have another $15 to be lost.

That is the beauty of being broke. When one hasn't anything to be lost one can rest in ease of the losing.

Among the visitors to Cisco during the holidays were Mr. and Mrs. Don Sivalls and their little daughter. I caught a glimpse of Don through a shop window Saturday. Specs wishes them a happy and prosperous New Year and that they will shortly come back to a good town to make their home.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By EDSON E. WAITE
Shawnee, Oklahoma.

Advertising is the most effective weapon in the fight for business.

No city can prosper when its citizens do not patronize home stores.

Business must think in the days of today and not in the days of yesterday.

Watchful waiting does not bring business. It takes advertising to turn the trick.

You should let the world know the good things your city is doing.

All Pueblo, Colorado, school children regularly enrolled in school, regardless of age, ride on street cars for half fare during months school is in session, according to an announcement by W. N. Clark, president of the Southern Colorado Power company. A card signed by an official of the school must be presented. This action was taken to assist children in attending school under present conditions. This is a fine public spirit and the officers of this company are to be commended in taking this method of helping the school children.

Newspaper advertising adds prestige and profit to any business.

When a city presents a gloomy appearance the world stays away.

Newspaper advertising lights the pathway to better business.

TEXAS TOPICS

By RAYMOND BROOKS
AUSTIN, Jan. 2.—If people picked out all-conference teams from those who handled important work well, on the practical, serious and essential side of affairs, it is probable that a young woman in the Texas capitol who got her first training in the old suffragists' ballot campaign would land on such a team.

She is Mrs. Irma Johnson Graham executive clerk of the state department. Last week, she completed the tabulations of the extensive and intricate returns on the constitutional amendments and all state office except governor and lieutenant governor. This work was done in three days, and every figure on each race from each county checked back and proven accurate.

Mrs. Graham was employed in office work of the suffragists' lobby led by Mrs. Jane Y. McCallum a decade ago. When Mrs. McCallum became secretary of state six years ago, Mrs. Graham was in the department of education, and was immediately called to the executive clerk's desk of the state department.

Among her duties is the keeping of registers of all public officials and the issuance of certificates and commissions and keeping of the official records of all public proclamations. Several thousand notaries alone are commissioned by this desk each year.

A line in an article by Gen. Pershing must have sent horrified chills up the spines of those manning the coach factories of many modern colleges.

Gen. Pershing suggested the possibility of turning college athletics over solely to the students, and dispensing with all professional and paid coaches. This, he said, is the way he sees to build leadership into the youth who are being trained in the colleges.

He wasn't discussing the cost side which may receive attention along with other phases of his idea; but Gen. Pershing advanced the idea there is plenty of leadership in a student body, if drawn out by the requirements of placing students in charge of the athletic affairs to handle intramural and intercollegiate sports wholly.

Regents of the University of Texas say they want to see at least two more dormitories put up on the campus, supplementing the one with which a program of housing freshman men was started.

But, since these are not the general type of university buildings for which legislative appropriations are forbidden the land-grant institution, they say the university will have to look to the legislature for them.

It is improbable that money will be provided for such structures, but in the past a self-financing system of building dormitories was found workable, and new legislative authority may open this course again, without requiring appropriations.

New Legislature---

cent saving with least possible damage. More than $50,000 has been spent by a legislative committee, with assistance of experts, in devising ways to eliminate, consolidate and efficiently operate state departments and institutions. Another committee has spent nearly two years studying fee abuses, both legal and illegal. The state board of education will report on saving, consolidations and possible eliminations in the educational system.

Based on these economy plans, another committee which has been investigating taxation will recommend a cut in the state ad valorem tax rate from the present 27 cents on $100 valuation to 18 cents. It will recommend also submission of a constitutional amendment that would make the maximum rate 15 cents.

The 18 cent rate will have approximately $3,000,000 a year to be raised from other sources to "balance the budget." It will thrust before the legislature the question of a sales tax, a state income tax, or raised rates on special taxes now existing.

Reaches Limit. The gasoline tax seems to have reached its limit with a four cent state levy and a federal tax of one cent a gallon. Division of the gasoline tax will be before the session, however. It is levied as an occupation tax, so under constitutional provision schools get a fourth of it, which, with the present rate, is one cent a gallon. Another cent goes to pay interest and retire bonds issued by counties and road districts for highways now part of the state system. This has been found insufficient to meet all the bonds coming due in 1933.

New laws for the state highway department, which receives the balance of the gasoline tax together with a portion of the registration fees of motor vehicles for road work, are likely to be prominent before the session.

Mrs. Ferguson has vigorously attacked the present highway commission of three members. One term only expires during her term. To gain control, either more members must be provided by legislation or the entire commission be made elective, as proposed in her platform.

Oil and cotton, leading state industries, both caused special sessions of the last legislature. The cotton legislation was entirely nullified by court action. The oil legislation, once amended, still is under test. The success with which it meets in stabilizing the industry will probably determine if new oil laws are to be made. The present law controls production, as Mrs. Ferguson, proposed. It does not regulate retail prices, a proposal which she made a part of her plan.

Cotton Control. Agricultural Commissioner J. E. McDonald is expected to ask the legislature to agree to cotton control under a federal compact, since individual action by the states has failed. Plans for pink boll worm control will also be before the session.

Motor truck laws of the last legislature, apparently have stood the test of the courts, both state and federal. Efforts to liberalize some of the provisions are being planned. Plans for a Texas Centennial in 1936 will be laid before the legislature, the constitutional amendment to permit state participation and support having been adopted.

Location of this celebration and restricting bills presage a spirited fight. Efforts of the last legislature to change congressional and legislative districts failed. They will be revived and judicial districting will be added, this session, unless there is submitted a constitutional amendment to abolish district courts.

Abolition of the fee system of paying public officials will require submission of a constitutional amendment but fee reforms may be expected to form a lively part of the session. Already organizations of fee officials are urging legislation along this line.

Renewed efforts may be made to pass bills permitting consolidation of city-county governments, as a saving to the taxpayer. County consolidations also have been proposed.

Business Laws. Renovation of the business laws also promises to have a prominent place before the new legislature. The state anti-trust law, among others, will come in for attack as no longer in line with commercial needs. Efforts to create a public utility commission are almost sure to be revived as well as the efforts of various industries including the ice manufacturers to have them declared utilities, with the consequent fixing of rates and regulations.

Repeal of the Robertson Insurance law is being agitated. This law requires life insurance companies to invest a certain percentage of their reserves in Texas. Instead of encouraging Texas investment, the advocates of repeal say it has kept money out of the state.

But law making is not alone the duties of the house and senate. Each branch faces some individual duties.

The house session will open with a spectacular fight between Coke Stevenson, Junction, and A. P. Johnson, Carrizo Springs, for the speaker's post. The two are on opposite sides of the state road bond issue fight and many other hard fought measures of the last legislature. Lines are being sharply drawn.

The senate, which does not choose its presiding officer, will have the task of approving or disapproving the appointments of the governor.

Impeachment. If Rep. W. E. Pope, Corpus Christi makes good on the threat of impeachment proceedings, the house would have to consider whether charges are to be preferred. If preferred, the senate would try them.

Pope led factions in the special session of the legislature convened to consider the oil situation against Gov. Ross Sterling. The impeachment would have to be brought up in the first few days of the session as the governor retires from office Jan. 17.

There is rumor, too, that at the close of the session the senate may resolve itself into an impeachment court—this time not to impeach but to set aside the old impeachment of former Governor James E. Ferguson.

The supreme court held a governor's pardon and an amnesty act passed by the legislature could not remove the impeachment. Some lawyers declare it is possible that the senate, sitting as an impeachment court might do so and might even expunge the record of the old proceedings. They argue there must be power lodged somewhere to undo what has been done, although they admit there is no precedent for the suggested course.

Abolition of the fee system of paying public officials will require submission of a constitutional amendment but fee reforms may be expected to form a lively part of the session. Already organizations of fee officials are urging legislation along this line.

PARIS STYLES

By MARY KNIGHT

United Press Staff Correspondent PARIS, Jan. 2. — A gown, which is making the women sigh with envy in London's most aristocratic society is a Paris creation worn by Madame la Comtesse de Fleuriau, wife of the French Ambassador to the Court of St. James. It is a Worth creation in her favorite shade night-blue satin.

This dress has the crisp - cross draped decollete in the front, with a rather high decollete in the back and four small diamante buttons just below. The dress has no definitely marked waistline but fits the figure snugly. With it Mme. Fleuriau wears a long mink coat.

One of the most successful models of the Worth mid-season collection for evening is "Argentan", a heavy black pebbly crepe gown with a straight, form fitting silhouette, a square decollete in front with gold and silver rings at the commencement of the shoulder straps and a bolero effect in the back, leaving a triangular cut out that is most alluring. With this gown is shown a jade green velvet hip length wrap — a new length for evening wraps, with a shaped band of silver fox around the bottom — its only fur trimming. Mrs. Henry Sanderson, Mile. Blanche Derzen the Comtesse Elie de Ganey the Duchess de Nemours, and many others have chosen this gown.

MAKE CLOTHING AMES, Ia. Jan. 2. — Iowa's farm women are doing less shopping in cities and are making more of their own clothes, according to the extension division of Iowa State college, which last year gave short courses in making garments, to 7,500 women. This winter more than 4,000 farm women in Iowa have made all their own dresses and coats, as well as the garments of their children, the division reports.
