Secy. Harold Ickes and Gasoline Prices

Secy Harold L. Ickes of the department of the interior may call oil men to Washington in May. He may tell them that either "wholesale gasoline prices must be increased or crude oil prices slashed." There is a reason for it. The Western Refiners association is in session at Excelsior Springs, Mo. A big ace of the United States bureau of mines furnished the information that it was the general opinion of oil code heads that such a meeting and such a course of action would be necessary "unless gasoline prices at the refineries are raised very soon." In addition to all this the bureau of mines economist placed it in the record that for several months the wholesale gasoline prices "have been so low that few if any of the refiners have made profits." And, "during this time crude prices have remained pegged at $1.08 for the best grade mid-continent crude oil." As for the big aces of the Western Refiners association, they agreed that the crude price would have to be cut to a top of between 75 and 80 cents a barrel, "to justify present refinery prices."

Petroleum treasure and how to handle it for all the people should interest all consumers of petroleum and gas as well as all the major and minor companies and the landowners and leaseholders who have a financial interest in the game. Petroleum today is the first basic industry of the commonwealth. Cotton has second place. Livestock, third. Manufacturing, fourth. Some day Texas will lead as a manufacturing as well as an agricultural state if the men who are responsible for its laws are men of vision as well as men of common horse sense.

The Faults of Our Brothers

The motto of the Order of Elks is a beautiful fraternal doctrine that embodies, in brief but striking imagery, the very foundation principle of the order: "The faults of our brothers we write upon the sands; their virtues upon the tablets of love and memory."

There is, perhaps, no organization which so consistently adheres to its declared policy with respect to those brothers who have passed away. The annual Memorial Services in honor of their memory, and the daily tributes to "Our Absent Brothers," are sweet and wholesome evidences of virtues affectionately recalled and of faults fraternally forgotten, as they relate to those who walk no more in our midst. But the motto would scarcely be worthy a place in any ritual if it meant no more than this. Its real significance is in its application to the living; who may yet be moved, by the charitable disregard of error, to more worthy conduct; who may yet be thrilled, inspired and strengthened by expressed appreciation of fraternal conduct that is worthy of commendation.

Do we not too frequently overlook the real meaning of our oft quoted motto? Even though it is comparatively easy to recognize virtue, and even though it is a natural impulse to applaud it in our hearts, we are sometimes neglectful of the obligation to acclaim it in a manner to make that appreciation of double value, to him who expresses it as well as to him who merits the acknowledgment.

And do we not, even more frequently, neglect the harder duty of forgetfulness of fault? Human nature is prone to criticize of error; to nurse resentment and the feeling of personal injury. And yet, just there lies the true beauty and value of the Elks Creed.

Every honest-minded Elk will admit at once the fraternal duty involved. No lengthy essay could add to the effectiveness of the mere suggestion of obligation. Yet it cannot be too frequently repeated, that the motto of the order is not a mere ritual expression to be used upon formal memorial occasions, but is a principal that should control every Elk in all the relations of his daily life.—Elks Magazine.

The DARK BLOND

By CARLETON KENDRAKE © 1935 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
MILICENT GRAYES, secretary to GEORGE DRINGOLD, sends her employer in his office dead. JARVIS HAPP, a stranger, offers to help her. He sends her to beauty shop where she is transformed into a brunet. She takes her home, introducing her as his secretary. She meets HARRY FELDING, his stepson, ROBERT CAISSE, MRS. HAPP, and VERA DUCHENE, Mrs. Happ's maid.

That night a note under her door informs Millicent, "The woman in black came in here." Millicent sees the woman, tries to follow, but loses her. Millicent goes to the chauffeur's quarters. The chauffeur is dead from a bullet wound.

Next morning SERGEANT MAHONEY takes charge of the case. He questions Millicent. Later when she is in the corridor talking to Norman they hear Mrs. Happ answer the telephone downstairs. A moment later Mrs. Happ screams.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXIX

MILICENT remained rooted to the stairs, staring with wide, incredulous eyes. It was Norman who roused down the stairs, picked up Mrs. Happ, holding his hands beneath her arm-pits.

"What is it, Cynthia?" he asked.

Twice she started to speak, and twice words failed to come from her lips.

"What is it?" Norman demanded again, alarm in his voice.

"Your father," she said.

"What about him?"

"They telephoned."

"Who telephoned?"

"The men who had him."

"What do you mean?" he asked.

Millicent suddenly came to life. She sensed something of the significance of the words, ran down three or four stairs. "You mean he's been arrested?" she asked.

Mrs. Happ shook her head and said, "He's been kidnaped."

"What?" Norman Happ exclaimed.

"Kidnaped."

"How do you know?"

"They said so over the telephone."

"Who said so?"

"The men who had him."

"What did they say?"

"They said they had him, that he was safe for the present, that there was no use trying to look for him, and that under no circumstances were we to notify the police—that if we notified the police he would be killed."

"But what did they want?" Norman Happ asked. "Was it money?"

"They didn't say. They said they would communicate with me later, and that when they got in touch with me they'd give instructions as to what they wanted. They said I was to keep Mr. Happ's disappearance completely concealed from the officers in the house."

"They knew that officers were in the house?" Norman Happ asked.

opened! He brought you into the house and look what's happened. My husband is kidnaped. His chauffeur has been killed. We're all involved in scandal. There are police officers trooping about the house, asking questions and prying into things that are none of their business. And who's to blame for it—who's responsible?"

Cynthia Happ's voice rose to a crescendo of hysterical accusation and her rigid forefinger fairly quivered as she pointed at Millicent.

"You are!!!"

Norman Happ said, "Now listen, Cynthia, calm yourself. This isn't going to do anyone any good."

The woman pushed him to one side. "You're responsible," she screamed at Millicent. "Don't stand there with that meaty-mouthed look on your face. You can't bluff me with any of that kind of stuff. You're responsible for Harry Felding's murder! It's because of you my husband's been kidnaped! You . . ."

Sergeant Mahoney's voice, from the head of the staircase, sounded as professionally cheerful as the voice of a doctor entering a sick room where the patient is lying on his death bed. "Well, well, well."

"So 'there seems to have been a kidnaping. Tell me about it, Mrs. Happ."

At once Cynthia Happ regained control of herself. She took a deep breath, stared at the head of the stairs with resentment glittering in her eyes.

Sergeant Mahoney moved from the head of the stairs, walking around the corner of the banister so that he was plainly visible.

Mrs. Happ's face wreathed itself in smiles. "It happens," she said. "that you overheard me telling this young mix exactly what I thought of her. I'm afraid I wasn't mincing words."

"Indeed you weren't," Sergeant Mahoney said, coming down the stairs, "but you said something about your husband being kidnaped."

CYNTHIA HAPP laughed. "I'm afraid that I was very much worked up," she said. "I'm certainly thankful to you for the interruption, Sergeant. Regardless of the provocation I may have had, I certainly had no license to talk to a servant as though she were an equal. After all, the child is nothing but a hireling—one who does my husband's work, one who is in my house because it is necessary to have her here—just as one would have a painter, a scrubwoman, or a window washer."

Millicent realized Mrs. Happ was trying to make her lose her temper, to create a scene in the hope that such a scene would distract the attention of Sergeant Mahoney from what Mrs. Happ herself said. Millicent refused to make a scene.

For a moment Sergeant Mahoney looked puzzled. Then he said, "But what about the kidnaping, Mrs. Happ?"

Mrs. Happ's smile was the smile of a perfect hostess welcoming guests. "I'm sure," she cooed in her most seductive tones, "that I know nothing whatever about any kidnaping."

"Under those circumstances," Sergeant Mahoney suggested, "suppose we have a little talk together. I want to use the telephone for a few moments, and then I would like to talk with you."

"It happens," Mrs. Happ told him, "I have other plans."

"Surely they're not so important that they can't wait for a few moments."

"I'm afraid they are."

"His face became stern. He said, 'I'm afraid I'm going to have to insist, Mrs. Happ.'"

"How strongly would you insist?"

"As strongly," he told her grimly, "as it became necessary for me to insist, in order to carry my point." She had played too much bridge not to know when the cards were stacked against her, and she was too practised a hostess not to know how to carry off the situation.

"Oh, under those circumstances," she said, "it is so important I will be glad to alter my plans. Where did you wish to go for our little chat?"

"First," he told her, "the telephone."

Both Millicent and Norman Happ remained on the stairs, their ears strained, listening.

A BRUPTLY, from the lower floor, Sergeant Mahoney's voice drifted up to them.

"But, madam," he said, "this telephone has been knocked from the stand. I heard it ringing a short time ago and I'm quite certain I heard your voice answering it."

"It was," she told him. "wrong number. I'm afraid I must have knocked the stand over when I turned away."

"But the stand hasn't been knocked over," Sergeant Mahoney said insistently. "It's the telephone that was knocked or thrown to the floor. How do you explain that? And I heard you scream. How about that?"

"Really, Sergeant, there are some things one just can't explain—matters of carelessness, perhaps . . ."

Her voice trailed off into silence and Norman Happ, taking Millicent's arm, turned her gently about on the stairs, started ascending them.

"They'll just talk around in circles," he said. "Cynthia won't tell him anything, but you and I have got to have a talk."

She found herself welcoming the touch of his palm under her elbow.

"He'll know that she's lying."

"That won't make any difference," Norman Happ said grimly. "He won't get any information out of her, but she will go to do something."

"What do you mean?" she asked.

"They were in the corridor now, Norman Happ looked about him, then lowered his voice.

"She's a wonderful actress," he said. "She's got plenty of poise. Sergeant Mahoney will never get her story."

"Don't you believe it," Millicent retorted. "Sergeant Mahoney will read her thoughts. He's playing with her as a cat plays with a mouse."

"Perhaps you're right," Norman Happ agreed, "but the time has come for you to put all of your cards on the table. We've got to play this thing together. Have you enough confidence in me to tell me everything?"

Millicent suddenly found herself staring into his eyes. He had grasped her shoulders, whirled her about so that she was facing him. His arms were around her.

"Millicent," he said, "can you, will you tell me everything?"

The Editor of the Trinidad Guardian, Port of Spain, B. W. I., says that Keskidees are in the news.

He further says that one of these characteristic Trinidad birds recently flew into the hall of justice perched on a pillar above the witness stand and looked down on the proceedings with a jaunty air. The editor thinks that most birds in similar circumstances would have maintained a discreet silence, or might have permitted themselves a shy wink at the judge or listened to the Counsel's arguments with head cocked on one side.

But this Weskidee could see no reason whatever for silence. If others could speak, he could see no reason why he should not sing. So he thrilled and he thrilled as he sat aloft until the rattlers rang with his melodious cries.

The effect was almost magical. Legal arguments that had seemed tedious and uninteresting took on a new hue. The judge's stern countenance relaxed. Then, as a particularly penetrating bird note seemed to challenge a question flung by learned counsel at a witness, he permitted

Mother Advised Taking Cardui

"I had a severe pain in my side and felt nervous all the time," writes Mrs. Floyd Ferrell, of Thomsville, N. C. "At times, I felt so weak and had a dull, sleepy feeling, not energy enough to do my work. I had been advised by my mother to take Cardui as she had obtained good results from using it. I took three bottles of Cardui. It increased my appetite, built my strength up, helped my nerves and the pain in my side."

There are many similar cases. Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

Pay no attention to gossipers who wouldn't want to see you the slender woman you can be if you'll only take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a cup of hot water every morning (tastes fine with juice of half lemon added).

Kruschen is SAFE—it's a health treatment and when your body abounds with Kruschen fitness—excess fat leaves. Far lasts 4 weeks and costs but a trifle. Moore Drug Store.

PHILLIPS DELICIOUS CANNED PRODUCTS ARE FLAVOR-TESTED

Canned soups and vegetables, for the first time in the history of the industry, have just been deliberately subjected to a dramatic and sensational "quality-and-flavor" test, simultaneously, at the South Pole and along the Equator.
Results of the test have just been announced by the Phillips Packing company, Inc., Cambridge, Maryland, following the receipt of cablegrams and official photographs from the Byrd Expedition in Little America and the schooner Seth Parker, captained by Philip H. Lord, radio and screen star, now cruising along the Equator.
Official tests of a number of Phillips Delicious Soups and Vegetables created in the Southern Kitchen of the Phillips Packing company, were made in temperatures 72 degrees below zero in Little America by Stevenson Corey, chief supply officer of the Byrd Antarctic Expedition, and 100 degrees above zero by First Officer John O. Ives, aboard the Seth Parker, at the Equator.
Because the supply ships of the Byrd Expedition also crossed the Equator en route to the Antarctic country, Supply Officer Corey was able to double check the same canned foods after they had been exposed to both the fierce heat of the tropics and the intense cold of the polar regions. He called:
"Quality and flavor of the Phillips Delicious Soups and Vegetables unaffected by extreme heat crossing equator en route or temperatures of 72 degrees below zero here in Little America."
The cargo of canned foods aboard the Seth Parker passed from the temperate climates of the states to equatorial waters. After being carefully checked First Officer Ives wirelessed the following report:
"Although stored in holds where temperatures always hover around the 10-degree mark, flavor of Phillips Delicious Soups and Vegetables has remained unaffected. Have demonstrated their wholesomeness and complete dependability."
Many American products, from cigarettes to motor cars, during the last few years have been subjected to innumerable new and novel tests to prove points of superiority in performance or service. But this is the first instance where any American food packer has deliberately discarded artificial laboratory methods and obtained an official

College To Celebrate Annual Randolph Day Saturday

EX-STUDENTS WILL RETURN FOR PROGRAM

Randolph college this week was laying plans for a big celebration in connection with annual Randolph day and homecoming Saturday.

The program calls for a parade, a barbecue for hundreds of students and friends of the college, a chapel program, the annual ex-students' banquet, and the coronation of Queen Badger II.

The celebration is scheduled to open at 10 a. m. Saturday with a parade through the city. Students, exes, and friends of the college will form the procession at Randolph Heights and will follow highway 23 to the city, then parade through the business district.

At noon the college will have its annual homecoming barbecue, with Dean E. B. Isaacs again in charge. Plans are being made to have 500 persons at the luncheon.

"We are making the same preparations for the barbecue as usual," the dean said this morning. "We fed more than 500 last year, and expect the same number Saturday."

Free Barbecue
He pointed out that the barbecue will be free and that all Ciscons and friends of the college, as well as students and former students, are invited. Admission, however, will be by tickets in order to avoid confusion. The tickets are being distributed by the dean and students. An effort will be made to reach everyone who will attend the barbecue, but the dean suggested that to facilitate this, all persons desiring tickets contact someone distributing them. Seniors of nearby high schools are especially invited.

Cisco merchants and business men are cooperating, as in previous years, to make the barbecue a success.

The program of welcome will be at 2 p. m. in the college chapel when exes mingle with students and Cisco people to hear a greeting from President David P. Tyndall. Most of the program will be musical, with short talks from former students.

At 3 o'clock there will be a baseball game on the campus. Coach H. R. Garrett this morning was making arrangements for the contest.

Ex-students will hold their annual banquet at the girls' dormitory at 6 p. m. Last year 60 attended the dinner.

The closing event of the Randolph day will be the coronation of Queen Badger II at 8 o'clock at the college. The queen's identity will not be revealed until the ceremonies begin, it has been announced.

Queen Badger Will Be Crowned At End Of Homecoming

The President's Welcome Message

We, the faculty and students of Randolph Junior College, extend to you, the ex-students and friends of the college, a most hearty welcome.

We want you to feel that you are still a part of Randolph College, and it is a part of you. We know that you will always be an honor and a credit to Randolph.

On April 20, our Homecoming Day, we sincerely wish, and hope, that every ex-student of Randolph will be present, to greet old classmates, drift back over the hours of time, and recall memories which are so dear to all, after school days are over. May you ever keep alive that spark of fellowship which was kindled in the past on Randolph campus. Your loyalty to your school in the past has helped to make the school what it is today; we feel sure; and it is our desire that you enjoy the past and present of Randolph on April 20.

As president of Randolph Junior College, I extend to you a most hearty welcome to be with us on April 20, as our guest to help celebrate this great day.

Scenes at Last Randolph Day Celebration

RANDOLPH IS PLACED UPON COLLEGE LIST

F. Buford Isaacs made a trip to Dallas last weekend to keep Randolph up to date in college requirements and rating. There were three meetings going on simultaneously, one for senior colleges, one for junior colleges, and one for all deans. Randolph was again placed on the roster of approved junior colleges with Class A rating. Dean Isaacs stated that a number of new requirements had been approved for the teacher training course. As soon as it can reasonably be worked out in the colleges, prospective teachers will be required to take courses in public school music, writing, drawing, art appreciation, and nature study, in addition to requirements in physical education announced last year. This makes it necessary for teacher students to devote practically all their time to teacher training and little time degree requirements.

The association of Colleges went on record as approving a large increase in the percentage of students allowed to work under the FERA projects, from 12 per cent of the student body that has been receiving government aid for work done around the school to about one-third of the students in school. It is the desire of the federal government to aid as many worthy young men and women as possible to secure an education and also to make room for family heads who need the work that students might have.

Randolph Notes

Roy Chambliss admits that his way with the women is due to his "personal magnetism".

Fancy something greater than Novell Barnhill's opinion of himself. We are afraid that if Lowell Burke does not quit playing with fire he will get a burn(s).

Richie Davis is wavering between a life long ambition to be a cowboy and his sense of duty to be a preacher. Nevertheless, he is searching his dictionary for bigger and better vituperative adjectives to hurl at the wayward of the species.

Nell Alexander and Joe Bob Winston are agreeing quite nicely now, having reached the point of religious toleration.

We still wonder why Ruby Russell says she has only one friend in Randolph. Some say that Forrest Bailey holds the key to the solution. If we remember correctly Percy Thornton and Ola Sikes were the Prince and Princess of Randolph during the festivities conducted at Jacksonville.

Dixie Bills is trying so hard to fill our departed Mary's place that she even staked her chewing gum behind her ear and actually types when a faculty member is present.

"Pop" Garrett is having a hard time wearing a college president's habit, secured again. He shoo on one foot and a dean's on the other. For your sake "Pop" we'll

Randy Ruralites In State Capital

Dr. Clark walked into an office at Austin and said to the man at the desk, "Pardon me, sir, but..."

The man interrupted: "Reference please." It was the Board of Pardons.

The delegates all went into the office of the assistant superintendent of schools. When he saw them he exclaimed, "Well, when did you all get to town?" I guess he didn't have to ask where they were from.

Francis Barnes is certainly blowing off the hot air after the trip. Maybe he got it from that flat he had to fix at 1:30 in the morning.

In the Santa Fe hospital at Temple, Crystal Jackson encountered the first nun she had ever seen. "Am I sick too?" she stammered as the sisterly nun escorted her to the front door.

Ask Rubie Vaughn if she likes to shake hands with the notables of our state.

Dr. Clark must be a great man. He went into the offices of our state officials and invariably they would say, "Why, hello, Brother Lee. How are you and how's your family?"

As they went through the governor's mansion, the Randolphians on one side of the royal bed was a Bible and on the other side a stack of detective magazines.

be glad when your moral support returns.

She may be A. G. to Francis Barnes but she is Oh Gee! to Harrison Shelton.

Some of the Dean's students in his education classes wonder sometimes how they ever managed to live before coming to Randolph. No es verdad?

Some of the students and faculty members are wondering why the spring fever is hitting so many but it is as clear as Crystal to Francis Bruce.

We never dreamed that Tennyson knew Ruby Vaughn when he wrote:

"Woman is the lesser man,
And her passions matched with mine
Are as moonlight unto sunlight,
And as water unto wine"

Is that right Elmer?

Forrest Bailey, one of the aces of Randolph's preaching staff filled the pulpit Sunday in the absence of Dr. David P. Tyndall, who is now in Stamford conducting a revival. Forrest really seems to "have something on the ball" and we predict a wonderful future for this ministerial student.

The student body met in chapel Saturday morning to select some rural representatives for Randolph on Randolph Day, April 20. Harold Sharpe and Mary Jane Morehart were chosen as the Duke and Duchess for the Seniors and Clark Webster and Tenella Nance as Duke and duchess for the Juniors.

Percy Thornton, who now has a princely habit, secured again. He will be our King. Come to the coronation and see who the queen is.

MEANINGS OF RANDOLPH ARE POINTED OUT TO BRING BACK OLD MEMORIES

Occasionally a year has some special meaning. Many causes these days claim importance enough to have a week set apart for consideration of their merits. Other institutions are satisfied with one day. And amidst a multitude of claimants for attention a college must show good cause if even one day out of the busy year within the limits of its constituency be granted for attention to its activities.

The institution that gives the name to the day presented on this page of the Daily News has asked support from this community and beyond for thirteen years. Randolph college has about as many meanings as there are individuals; for no two of us have the same experiences with, nor the same notions of anything. Almost every kind of attitude and almost every shade of opinion has been held about this institution; incriminatory, cynical, indifferent, tolerant, laudatory, flattering. But there must be some persistent value amidst its changes in administration and faculty, the coming and going of students from the very best to the very worst, its ups and especially downs in financial experience, to have kept it to this hour still working at its task.

One can get the actual opinion of folk about a thing by catching spontaneous expressions, neither vengeful nor flattering, but worth face value. During the years I have tried to gather from incidental and unguarded comments of students, patrons, friends, and critics just what Randolph college means as a factor within its own territory and among its own constituents. What are its faults and what are its virtues? Wherein does it fail and wherein succeed? What do people think it is, and what do they think it ought to be? Not that an enterprise must adopt its policies or guide its activities solely in the light of these expressions. But it can at least take them as a cue to its next act.

First I conclude that Randolph college is not a business enterprise and disappoints generally if it deals in a cold and calculating spirit. Yet, since its operation must be undergirded by a business system, it wins respect by a firm and fair uniform dealing with every patron and commercial institution alike. Its ethics ought to be on a level with, if not above that of any party of the second part with which it may transact business. Its return may be financial to some extent but is largely far more than money can measure. Hence, any exacting of cash returns from the institution by its community is a wrong appreciation of its value. Those who carry on the school ought to be willing to sacrifice, but those who are benefited ought not to be willing to let them.

STUDENT GIVES HIS THOUGHTS UPON LEAVING

By THAD DOTY

Lately things about us that some of us have accepted as a matter of course have taken on a new significance. Strolls up and down the sidewalk in front of the "old" building with certain parties are strangely different. There is a strained quality in the air. We look at each other more fixedly than before as if we are afraid the image of our friends may slip from the view of our mind's eye. Autograph books are circulating, eager to catch the least little bit of the personalities, mannerisms, and moods of its owner's friends. Why is all this? The reason can be summed up in one word—"parting." That word is worse than it looks at first, as any Randolph seniors can testify. It means goodbyes! Goodbyes! That are hard to make; it means heartaches, as we aren't ashamed to admit; it may, mean even tears, and we're not ashamed of them either.

Science says man is a gregarious animal. We can tell science that he's not only gregarious, he's affectionate. When we were freshmen at our first chapel someone mentioned "one big happy family."

Some of us smiled behind our hands or openly since we were just out of high school. Now we see the error of our ways. We feel as a family must feel when it is about to be broken up. We love each other and we resent and dread being separated. Maybe that is the reason for Randolph Day. We can forget our sorrows and dry our tears with barbecue. Anyway, what I'm trying to say is that we think, we know, that Randolph is the greatest, grandest school this side of Timbuctoo, and we're about to become orphans, to be cast adrift in the world, and we feel just a little blue about it.

Fortunately, as always, there are two sides of the cloud to be considered. We've had two glorious years of assimilating, more or less knowledge. We will fare forth to seek our fortunes feeling that we are the better for our two years spent here. We have enough happy memories to last a lifetime. So really, our emotions must be a mingling of happiness and grief with the latter predominating right now, perhaps; but we'll leave really, happier and wiser men and women.

Student Sketches Describe Randolph College and The Spirit Found There

Students who have been about the campus and halls and classrooms of Randolph college will become reminiscent and young people who are looking college-wards will anticipate appearances from the following competition description in the actual words of students in English 332A.

On the northern border of Cisco is a hilltop that can be seen from afar. Coming down the highway an archway can be seen in the distance. — as we turn off the highway — the new arch of natural rock — across the top written "RANDOLPH COLLEGE;" on each side smooth, gray pieces of stone inscribed with names of the class of 1934 who dedicated it to the college. — As you mount the hilltop — by a road which winds its way — the president's home is on the left. — Green shrubs lining both sides of the driveway; then the buildings — the old administration building like a giant hen between two overgrown chicks. — Or, looking through the arch — a narrow winding path — lined with rocks and flower beds all along the edges — built in terraces, which seem endless when a pupil attempts to walk up them. — The hill is steep and the climbing is slow, but the student is willing to keep pressing upward and upward for the sake of an education.

Weeping Willow
How unlike its name is the weeping willow — said for its branches have failed in examinations — or for the ones who have gone — but it bows and nods in friendly welcome to all who come up the hedged driveway or in friendly farewell to those who depart. — A road, boulevard-like, parallel with the buildings; and the space between them landscaped with grass, shrubs and trees — East of the Administration building, south of the walk to the girls' dormitory, the water fountain with its porcelain mouthpiece in the center of a small, rough concrete basin set upon a seemingly unstable and grotesque foundation of native stone.

Two fish ponds, a smaller one in front of the girls' dormitory — and a triangle-shaped pond of native rock — two overhanging willows that seem to sigh in a soft breeze and dance in a storm. — A fountain in the center; the sunshine on the spray makes it sparkle with the colors of the rainbow — a pot with a fern spreading over the pond and the fish hiding under it — fish, large and small, snails like small rocks and the color of the bottom — A hard-worked bench beneath the willows beside the pond — a refuge where one can let the dreamy world roll by and can — think!

Hill in the Spring
The shouting of voices in the distance, and in the direction of the shouting — when the gust of wind has passed and the dust — a field with a crowd milling about on it, Randolph's baseball field and Randolph's baseball team.

No time of the year is the hill more pleasing than when the oaks and

BATHING WAS CRIME IN BOSTON LESS THAN HUNDRED YEARS AGO

Bathing, less than a hundred years ago, was a crime in Boston and was taxed in many cities and states to prevent its spread. This was all because a man in Cincinnati, Ohio stimulated interest in bathing in 1842 by inventing a water heater consisting of a crude coil of pipe in his fire place chimney which warmed water for a lead lined bathtub, according to sanitation historians.

Healthful results of the bath, however, defeated the anti-bathers. More water heaters were invented and improved until now one only has to turn a faucet and an automatic gas water heater instantly sends a stream of steaming water to bathroom or kitchen.

Rome used no medicine except baths for 600 years. Bathing ceased with the fall of Rome. Pestilence, disease, and death found unclean bodies easy prey in Europe for the next 10 centuries. Then, crusaders, coming back from the far East where bathing was still practiced, returned the bath and Europe began to emerge from personal filth and consequent plagues. Soap is only 300 years old, and the modern bath-com less than 100. Ancients used olive oil, sand, and scrapers made of bone, ivory, or precious metals in place of modern soap. Certain Arabs still roll in sand and use it to scratch off the dirt.

The skin, a mass of valves which release body poisons and assist the lungs, should be kept clean, health experts advise. This is best accomplished by means of a daily bath plus a good soap and brush scrubbing once a week, an effective means of retaining good health, ambition, and pep.

Gas water heaters are important units in modern homes. Local dealers and the Community Natural Gas company are featuring newest developments in automatic gas water heaters, including storage and instantaneous types, this month, according to H. L. Dyer, local gas company manager. Gas is so economical, half a cent will buy enough gas to heat water for one bath if used in one of the efficient new automatic gas water heaters, and gas for a bath a day for one week costs

MOTHERED 140 KITTENS
BERLIN, Conn. — Snowball, 12-year-old alley cat, might have tackled the Pier Piper's job single handed, had she been living at the time. Snowball has given birth to her 25th litter of kittens — 140 mousers in all. She makes her home in a grocery store.

REPAIRS BICYCLES IN BED
WILSON, N. C. — Although his back is paralyzed and he has been bed-ridden for eight years, Eddie Williams, 25, is happy — and busy. A large board on his bed serves as a work bench. There he repairs bicycles makes toys, and does "little odd jobs" for neighbors.

RANDOLPH AND W. O. W. LEAD IN SOFTBALL

Randolph and W. O. W. got off to flying starts yesterday when they snowed under their opponents in the first games of the city softball race.

Randolph came through with a 17 to 7 victory over the Lobos, while the Woodmen pounded out a 26 to 1 win at the expense of the Daily News.

Coach Pop Garrett's collegians found the weakness of their crippled opponents and rapped out a good lead early in the game.

Over in Chesley park the Woodmen were putting on a fine hitting exhibition, slapping the ball all over the lot, and displaying plenty of fielding support.

Randolph is scheduled to play Nance at Chesley park Wednesday, while the other two teams which have not yet seen action, City and Garner's will meet on the grammar school diamond.

The Rural Community Has Come to Town

The rural community and small city faces a new future. Electric service and all that electric power and light mean to home life, commercial and industrial development is now available for a more constructive and wider field of achievement.

Much work, planning, testing, engineering and large investments of capital was necessary in order to make this possible. Our 2600 miles of power transmission lines, interlacing 49 counties in West Texas and serving 160 towns and communities provide an adequate and economical source of dependable electric service with precise regulation to meet the requirements of modern day appliances.

Today hundreds of small West Texas towns and communities can offer to industry this modern electric service in proximity to its raw materials . . . two very necessary prerequisites for industrial progress.

We point with pride to our part in assisting the small towns and communities in this way, thus guaranteeing to them the same opportunities in respect to power as the larger metropolitan cities enjoy. It is our policy to fully co-operate with the small towns and communities we serve so that they may realize the full benefits accompanying and made possible by electrical development.
