STOCK SHOW OPENS TODAY AT FT. WORTH

FORT WORTH, March 4. — Ten-gallon hats high-heeled boots, chaps and the guffaws of cowboys intermingled with the more sophisticated chuckles of wealthy visitors and city-dwelling ranchers here today. For the 36th Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show, one of the largest in the world opened. More than 150,000 spectators will attend the show, ending March 13. A record number of livestock entries has been received.

The first exposition, in 1896 was held under a tree near the then small cattle town of Fort Worth. Covered wagons, arranged in a circle served as grandstands and the greensward as livestock pavilions.

From this unpretentious beginning, the show has expanded until it now ranks among the four largest in the world. Its rodeo, attracting cowboys from Wyoming, Arizona and New Mexico, leads all rodeos in the number of participants.

The poultry show is the largest in the southwest and its college track meet, one of the outstanding athletic contests in the middle west.

Although the principal contestants in the rodeo are vigorous young cowboys, a few old timers, who rode the old cattle trails from Texas to Kansas, 40 years ago, refuse to quit. Each year they strive to recapture their fading glories.

Fort Worth, known as the most typical cowboy city of the west and center of the livestock industry of the southwest, became even more western as the groups of cowboys lariat thrown across their shoulders and spurs shining, stride along its streets. Exposition officials believed a new attendance record would be set this year. The number of requests for reservations far exceeded other years and the gate payments were expected to keep pace.

$10,000 TAKEN FROM BANK AT SHAMROCK

SHAMROCK, Tex., March 4. — Two bandits bound five employees of the bank as they waited for the time lock to open the safe in the First National bank today and escaped with $10,000. The men gained entrance to the bank by a back door last night and waited for the employees to arrive, keeping some of them under threat of their guns for almost two hours. The loss was covered by insurance.

Conflicting reports as to how the men left town hampered officers and pressed in their search for them. The bandits are believed to have escaped toward the west in a coupe.

Farm Pays Way Through College

ELY, Nev., March 4. — Jimmy Jensen, University of Nevada freshman, will go far in this world, if his early achievements are a criterion. Jimmy put himself through high school and is now financing his way through college. He made his money farming. He rented 30 acres from his father on a half-share basis and netted over $800 the first year. The next two years he leased a much larger area on the same share-crop basis and again made a good profit. Part of this money was spent on building up his farm. He bought five dairy cows, two heifers, a team of horses, a quantity of hay and grain and other equipment. All this time he was paying all school expenses and putting aside a fund to finance his college education.

Jimmy now has enough money for his college education the first two years. His farm is a going proposition and he anticipates profits accruing from it will provide him with funds for the full course. He will not sell any of his dairy herd, or other farm assets. Rather he will increase them, so that when he finally receives his degree, he will have the nucleus of a farm.

PLANS MADE FOR B. OF A. CONVENTION

EL PASO, March 4. — Active preparation for the annual Broadway of America association convention is now under way, according to information from association headquarters in this city. This year's meeting will be held in San Diego, western terminus of this famous trans-continental route. Officials said today that information received from San Diego indicates that the coast city is preparing an unusually varied and interesting program of entertainment for the visitors and delegates to the convention.

Among the many projects to come before this meeting, is one looking toward an extended campaign of national advertising of this all-year ocean to ocean highway. No trans-continental highway has as many inducements to offer the cross country motorist as the Broadway of America.

Already officials say, this highway is becoming the most popular coast to coast route in America as a result of its highly improved condition, the comfortably low altitudes of the sections which it traverses and the multitude of scenic wonders of which it gives access.

Because of the importance of the 1932 convention, large delegations are expected from all Broadway cities and officials of the organization are urging that everyone who can begin making plans to motor over the Broadway of America to San Diego.

By continued publishing of the advantages of the Broadway in the North and East, thousands of tourists will be attracted to this splendid route. Many motor clubs in those sections are now advising their members to use the Broadway. With the Olympic games in Los Angeles this summer, an increase in traffic over the Broadway is expected.

HOOVER VISIT STARTED FLOOD CONTROL WORK

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth article dealing with flood control in the Mississippi Valley.

By MERRILL E. COMPTON United Press Staff Correspondent MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 4. — Mellow evening sunlight flickered about the sturdy, bluntnosed river boat, lighting up the ship's saloon one day several years ago.

At the table sat a company of tired faced men, who gave attention to Herbert Hoover, then secretary of commerce and representative of President Coolidge, as he talked.

The secretary had surveyed conditions over the flooded areas and it was his last visit during that dreadful spring of 1927, when state and county government, exhausted, called upon the federal government for aid.

Unification of flood control efforts, supervision and constant maintenance of levees, adequate supplies and millions and millions of dollars, with which to carry on flood control work may be said to have resulted from the visits of the secretary of commerce and other Washington officials. These were incorporated in the congressional bill which appropriated $325,000,000 for a ten year program of river work.

The biggest share of this fund, $225,000,000, will be spent for control of flood waters. Revetment construction, dredging and maintaining channels, operation of river piers, dredge boats and diking also are provided for.

The spring of 1931 found this project working under war-time pressure. Thousands of men were employed. In the lower areas crews were attempting to complete the construction of the Bonnet Carre Spillway, which in time of high water will carry a volume of water as great as the flow of Niagara Falls into Lake Pontchartrain and thereby save New Orleans.

Banks Protected Hundred of men were laying willow "mattresses," which are anchored down along shore lines to keep the banks from crumbling. On the Missouri the drive to deepen the channel to afford economical and profitable shipping as far as Omaha was under way.

The project is divided into districts. Each district is ahead of its schedule, and the Memphis district now has completed 30.5 per cent of the levee work laid out under the 1923 plan, finished 27 per cent of the revetment and 30 per cent of the dykes called for under the plans.

Since 1922 there has been constructed in this district 156.7 miles of levees, 17 miles of revetment, 24 miles of wood piling dykes.

Lowest Ebb This January the work reached its lowest ebb. High water drove contractors off levee jobs. The dredge boats were docked. The flood, while not causing damage to Memphis, inundated hundreds of acres.

While construction work slowed down the task of the government engineering corps did not slacken. Protective measures against levee breaks were taken. Emergency funds totaling upwards of $300,000 were voted by Congress for flood protection and flood control work.

USED WAGON 65 YEARS JACKSON, Mich., March 4. — A farm wagon may not be the fastest means of locomotion but it's about as safe and dependable as any other in the opinion of Almarian Hatt, 76 years old. Hatt has been using one wagon for 65 years. During that time, he said, the wagon has been repaired once. A new tongue was placed on it 20 years ago.

LINDBERGH'S APPEAL FOR SON'S RETURN

By BATES RANEY U. P. Staff Correspondent HOPEWELL, N. J., March 4. — Protection and a $50,000 ransom in cash were promised the kidnapers of Baby Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., today if only they will return the child to its grieving parents.

Official assurance that the law will not seek to penalize them came from the county prosecutor, E. E. Marshall only a short time after the parents, Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh, had sent out a broken-hearted appeal to the abductors to surrender the fair-haired baby — on the abductors' own terms.

The money is sequestered in Newark, N. J., ready to pay at a moment's notice.

RANGERS OFFERED.

AUSTIN, March 4. — The picturesque Texas rangers were offered today to join in the search for the kidnapers of the baby of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Adj.-Gen. W. W. Sterling wired Lindbergh today as follows: "I wish to place at your disposal the services of all the Texas Rangers. Please command us if we can be of any assistance in watching Mexican border points or in any other way you may suggest. We sincerely trust that your baby may be speedily returned to you."

The way is now clear fully and freely for the kidnapers to give back to its mother and father, the child seized Tuesday night from its crib in the Lindbergh country home. The Lindberghs want only a word from the kidnapers that they will return the baby. They are willing to arrange this in any way suitable to the kidnapers — and they pledged their word that they will not act beyond this in the matter.

The public letter given out today and signed by Anne and Charles ended as follows: "Pledge Themselves. "If this is accepted we promise we will keep whatever arrangements that they make with their representatives and ours strictly confidential and will not betray ourselves that we will not try to injure in any way those connected with the return of the child."

The appeal came after more than 60 hours of torture. The Lindberghs previously had permitted the broadcasting of an appeal by air and in the press during the night. But today's fervent plea was the first over their signature — a notice to the kidnapers that they can be safe and trust in the Lindberghs.

It was said that the original ransom note contained definite instructions regarding payment, that Col. Lindbergh made every effort to live up to its stipulations, but that the kidnapers were frightened off by the hue and cry that arose after the baby's disappearance.

ASKS POLICE CONFERENCE. TRENTON, N. J., March 4. — Gov. A. Harry Moore today issued a call for police heads of ten of the country's major cities to meet at his office tomorrow to confer on the Lindbergh kidnaping case.

Governor Moore's telegrams for help were sent to mayors of Newark, Philadelphia, Jersey City, Buffalo, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Boston and New York.

COUNTY ECONOMY.

The list of county expenditures as approved by the commissioners court for the month ending February 15, 1932, and published yesterday in the Daily News offers opportunity for interesting perusal by the citizen who takes his citizenship seriously enough to be concerned about what goes with his money. There are some of course, who, astonished by the length of the list, will simulate the reaction of a bull irritated by a red rag. But a sane second thought will compel a different attitude.

The fact of the matter is that the expenditures as oked by the commissioners for the period, excluding the payment on warrants and interest, total less than is required to run the city of Cisco over an average month. Hence it cannot be said that the county expenditures are out of line but rather that they follow pretty well what established custom and the complicated political machinery have fixed. It should, therefore, be put down in the record in black and white that these expenditures constitute no reflection upon the character of the commissioners court, and that whatever criticism there is to be made should be directed at the system for which all of us are responsible.

With respect to two items in the report the printing firms of the county, it appears to us, have a right to raise vigorous objection and it should be done. It will be noted that one item represents payment of $46.43 to the Collie Printing company, for stationery. Now, the Collie Printing company is a Lubbock concern. The printer who pays his taxes in this county and contributes his share to the support of the county government may well pause to inquire whether or not he has been made the victim of a rather ironical joke in that the very money he has paid in taxes is used to pay a competing foreign concern for the same work that he is just as capable of doing—and doing the more satisfactorily by virtue of being near at hand. If it is the case that family relationships enter into the transaction, that county business is being sent out of the county because the distant competitor has relatives in office here, the public is entitled to be informed of the extent to which its officers regard their responsibility to county institutions. Even if it is the case, as may be argued, that the supplies were more cheaply secured from the distant firm it seems to us that the responsible county officers should be profound enough to realize that the county government is supported by county prosperity and that that prosperity is being undermined rather than assisted when county funds are used to support business in other sections. We are leaving aside the fact that home industries can supply the materials needed just as cheaply as they can be secured elsewhere.

A similar item represents payment of $49.90 for election supplies to the Comanche Chief, newspaper publishers in Comanche county. There are instances where quantities of stock forms and supplies which must be furnished by publishing houses that specialize in such forms are purchased, but the purchase of these supplies, often through state departments, is not brought into argument. It is that printing which the county has done of itself that is questioned.

There is much agitation at this time for economy in government and this agitation has taken the direction of demanding consolidation of various offices whose activities and duties in instances overlap. The first thing that impresses the critic in digging into this question is the great tangle of red tape and political ineffectiveness that he brings up. He is struck with the fact that to cure one apparent evil he must needs go to the bottom of the whole problem of the political machine and tinker with its fundamentals. That is the case with the auditor's office which, on first impression, could be combined with the office of county treasurer and thus eliminate the expense of an entire department. It seems unnecessary to have two offices, similar in duty, each with its head, who draws a comfortable salary and has assistants to do the work. Certainly the county treasurer could perform the functions of the auditor in connection with his duties of stewardship of the county funds. But here we are faced with legislative requirements and with, what is more serious, political disabilities. The county treasurer is not elected upon his ability as an auditor, but upon his ability to get votes. If the county was assured at all times of getting an auditor in the county treasurer's office the combination would be practicable. Unfortunately, however, such is not the case. Nevertheless, there are counties which do conduct their affairs successfully without this duplication and it is reasonable to believe that Eastland county can effect an arrangement that will result in relief, not only in this particular but in other and similar directions.

The stark truth of the matter is that something is going to have to be done about it if the county is able to maintain financial integrity.

In a Hawkward Position, to Say the Least!

In the Political Arena

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD

Speaking of politics, the big procession of the national democracy is on the way and the paraders the country over are whooping up the cause of favorite candidates who have been listed as possibilities or avowed seekers for the presidential nomination or stoppers. On the congressional firing line under the big dome in Washington Speaker Garner discharged a load of grape and rammer in the direction of the White House. Sen. Tom Connally played the republicans in a manner characteristic of a veteran of the Spanish-American war and the World War. Of course, all this is political sniping. It is paving the way for big gun thundering later along in the campaign.

Samuel Seabury, who calls himself an anti-Tammany democrat, is manufacturing ammunition in the city of New York and upstate. Samuel Seabury is a brilliant lawyer. He classifies himself as a follower of the party of Jefferson. He has a grievance which he has nursed through the years. In the remote past he was the democratic nominee for governor of New York. He was the political and personal friend of William Randolph Hearst. It was a republican year and the republicans and independents scalped Seabury. It was the ambition of his life to be governor of New York. That ambition, never has been gratified.

It is a betting proposition that, it never will be gratified.

Now republican investigations in New York are Simon Pure partisan brand. A republican legislature refused to order an investigation of up-state cities and counties which are controlled by the republicans. Their investigation is purely a one-party and one-sided affair. There are political grafters in Tammany; truth is there are political grafters everywhere in all party organizations. They are found in every American state. In the days of Warren G. Harding, the top notch grafters were in Washington. It required three years' bombardment by Thomas J. Walsh and his senatorial associates to drive the grafters out. A scapegoat was found, Albert B. Fall was the goat. He is wearing stripes now. All the others escaped punishment.

It is said that Seabury will be paid $100,000 for his services as chief attorney of the republican investigating committee. Investigations are all right but they should cover republican as well as democratic office holders. They should cover a state and not a portion or a section of a state.

Unless all the signs are misleading, the democrats will face a deadlocked convention in Chicago this summer. Alfred E. Smith has always been strong in certain New England states. If the political propagandists of the East are telling the truth, Smith is going to make an aggressive battle for the control of the delegation in the states of Massachusetts, Vermont, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Main, and New Hampshire. There will be two contenders in these states — Smith and Roosevelt.

William Gibbs McAdoo made two very aggressive attempts to win the presidential nomination. First in 1929 in the city of San Francisco, and again in 1924 in the city of New York. He lost. Smith was his rival in the Madison Square Garden convention and in 1928 won the prize under the skies of Texas. McAdoo is 68. His face is in the picture again. Texas backed him in all his campaigns in days gone by. Thomas B. Love was his authorized mouth-piece. Cato Sells modestly claimed half the honor. Not long ago Love predicted the re-election of Herbert Hoover to the tune of five million majority. Cato Sells has not spoken to date. His lips are sealed but when the jumping is good and an opening presents itself Cato's smiling countenance will appear on the firing line as of old.

Under the skies of Texas the campaign will be officially opened in Fort Worth March 9. Chmn. W. O. Huggins of the state democratic executive committee issued the call, and said the committee would determine whether candidates for congressionalmen-at-large should run for designated places and also select the city for the May convention of the democratic party. Chmn. Huggins is not a straddler. This is his personal viewpoint as to designated places: "My personal opinion has been that since the legislature last year had this question of positions before it and refused to act, the committee should not designate positions. My views is that the law of the state regarding elections has not been changed since 1919." Four Texas cities, including Austin, will battle for the convention prize.

All this is a reminder that Sen. Tom Connally is making a noisy as a "sheller of the political woods, with the president and his administration as shinning targets. Texas landed in the Hoover camp in 1928. Sen. Connally predicts that it will never happen again. It will never happen again if democrats who are democrats, invade primaries, take the pledge, toss into the political discard the dark age religious issues, let the state settle the prohibition issue, name a candidate who has the qualifications and who is a vote getter and then march on to victory in November. Truth is, there are more republicans than democrats in states where votes count. New York liberal republicans elected Grover Cleveland the first time. Theodore Roosevelt the great paved the way for the election of Woodrow Wilson on the first time. Wilson won his second election on account of his masterful financial policies and the slogan of the women of the West who had voted "He kept us out of war." Now will the democrats again snatch defeat from victory or will they follow the flag after the nomination has been made and return the party of the people to power in the nation?

The dime-a-dance girl

EU JOAN CLAUTON

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Beautiful Ellen Rossiter, salesgirl in Barclay's Department store works at night as a dance hall hostess at Dreamland. She lives with her extravagant mother, Molly Rossiter, her older sister, Myra and her young brother, Mike.

Steven Barclay, 57 and owner of Barclay's is in love with Ellen. Twice she refuses to marry him because she loves Larry Harrowgate, an artist. She loses her heart to Larry in spite of the fact that his engagement to Elizabeth Bowes, a debutante, has been announced. Ellen agrees to pose for Larry. At his studio she sees a photograph of Elizabeth Bowes. He explains causally that Elizabeth is a friend.

Ellen decides to break with Larry but he comes again to the dance hall and asks her to lunch with him and his mother the following day. For the first time she kisses her next day at the store she receives a letter saying he will be unable to see the date.

Heart-broken, Ellen reads in a newspaper society column that Elizabeth Bowes has returned from Europe.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXV

Ellen's heart burned with a sort of never ending fire. She was bitter, rebellious, tired, and unhappy. Above all she was bewildered.

It was unthinkable that she should have been so close to happiness only to miss it in the end. Larry must have meant to tell her that his engagement was broken.

Why else should he ask her to meet his mother? Nevertheless there was a cruel, cruel note. Why had he written her? What circumstance had caused him to change so suddenly? To the wretched girl only one answer suggested itself. The return of Elizabeth Bowes from Europe.

Ellen flung herself into work at the store; flung herself with wild abandon into her duties at Dreamland. She would forget Larry; she must. She tried to fill every moment so there would be no time to think no time to remember that she had lost the man she had never owned. But there were times when she was shaken with envy and jealousy.

While these thoughts seethed and belled in her mind the girl laughed and danced and chartered how she talked these breathless August nights to men whose faces faded to nothingness even as they turned away. Tony, the gamine-like little hostess who had become Ellen's best friend, was not deceived by this gaiety.

"There's lots of fish left in the sea," she ventured to say once.

"I don't know what you mean Tony," Ellen had replied, lifting brilliant eyes.

"Never mind," said Tony and dropped the matter.

Someone else was unwilling to drop matters so easily. Steven Barclay had been watching the change in Ellen, had seen her growing pale and listless even as she burned with energy. Steven had suffered with her. Toward the middle of the second week he called Ellen into his office. He spoke directly.

"I thought you trusted me," he began.

"But I do, sir," Ellen protested uncomfortably.

"Then don't call me sir."

"It's just habit. I won't do it again, sir."

They both laughed. After that it was easier. All at once Ellen saw Steven Barclay again, saw him in all his kindness and gentleness for the first time in weeks. During that time she had had hurried engagements with him but always his image had been blurred by the image of the man who was absent.

"You're working yourself to death and I won't have it," Steven said sternly. "I'm too fond of you to see you deliberately drive yourself to a nervous collapse."

Ellen found his anxiety comforting, found it sweet to forget the fears and fevers which had consumed her and to be wrapped in this infinite gentleness. She roused abruptly.

"It won't be for long now," she said with a grateful smile. "Two weeks from tomorrow I'm giving up my job at Dreamland. I've slackened at the store. I know. I've been so tired but I'll do better soon."

"Give up both jobs tomorrow," Steven suggested suddenly. "Give them up and marry me. Let me take you to Switzerland where it's always cool and the whole world plays. Let me give you leisure. Let me take over the responsibilities that are wearing you to a shadow!"

Switzerland in mid-summer, Molly and Mike cared for Myra able to marry — oh, it was an alluring vision to the weary, heavy-eyed girl. She saw herself with the world for a playground, saw at her side a man who adored her, a man who could give her everything except the will-o'-wisp she had fancied she found in Larry Harrowgate's laughing eyes.

"I can't do it," Ellen whispered. "For the first time Steven experienced the sharp shock of jealousy. He asked in deadly earnestness the question Larry Harrowgate not three weeks before had put so lightly.

"Ellen, is there someone else?" "Not now," she murmured. "The fawny head came up. "There never was," she amended defiantly. Myra's eyes on Barclay's face left her should read her shame and pain.

Steven dared not continue. He watched her as she murmured a goodbye and slipped away from his office. That was on Wednesday. Ellen pleaded off from her duties at Dreamland and went directly from the store to the Brooklyn apartment. Molly, stretched out on a couch in the cool blast of a tiny, noisy electric fan, greeted her languidly, closed her eyes and was asleep again.

Ellen bathed changed into a house frock and pulled her mop of hair straight back from her forehead, rigorously taming the rebellious curls at the nape of her neck.

By that time Myra was home from the library. They were having a cold supper. She and Myra prepared it in the kitchen, the coolest room in the apartment because of its northern exposure. Myra chopped ice for the tea and made thin bread and butter sandwiches. Ellen sliced chilled tomatoes, cucumbers and onions and daintily rubbed the salad bowl with a bit of onion.

"It's nice to have you back again!" Myra observed, smiling at her sister's cautious efforts to avoid being smeared with the garlic.

"Funny, I have the same sort of feeling," Ellen said absently. "We don't seem to have had any real talks for weeks. It's been too hot for anything."

"Well, it will be September soon." "It's hard to believe that it will ever snow again and that we'll freeze running for the subway isn't it?"

Ellen sighed at the thought of chrysanthemums and football games and days when hot chocolate would seem delicious. Incredible tonight that great fires would roar again, that snow would come pelting through the air, that violets would be born on first!

"Is everything all right—now?" Myra asked lightly after a long absorbed silence.

Ellen felt a familiar stab of pain. "It seems to be," she said carefully. "But I don't know—it may be the heat. I couldn't at the moment shed a tear if all New York fell to ruins and you and I with it."

She poured olive oil and cider vinegar into the yellow mixing bowl and sprinkled paprika with a lavish hand. As she began the blending she remarked with studied carelessness:

"Miss Bowes is back from Europe."

"I saw it in the paper," Myra replied unwillingly. "But you don't care so much do you honey?"

"Oh, no, I don't care."

Ellen went at the salad dressing with such vigor that the oil and vinegar separated and she had to bind them together with an egg. She made so much noise further conversation was impossible. But when the dressing was blended and perfect she spoke once more, carelessly this time.

"Steven Barclay asked me to marry him again today."

"That's not news," Myra laughed covering the awkwardness she felt. "The news is," Ellen remarked somberly, "that a single feather would have shoved me over the edge and I'd have accepted."

"There's no sense advising people," Myra began, "but just the same I'm going to put in my oar. I think honestly that women whose husbands love them too much are usually happier than when—well, when it's the other way around." She concluded.

"Maybe," Ellen responded briefly.

They decided to eat in the kitchen because the room was cool. Molly came in presently, dew-eyed and freshly bathed. Mike burst in from the street, his face red as fire his hair burnt almost straw color. Ellen had never seen him look so well. The bicycle had succeeded in doing what all their concerted efforts had been unable to accomplish. That shining toy had torn Mike away from his endless reading.

"Tonight he was huddling with plans to spend the money he had earned running errands for the corner grocer. It was his first job and already he had over $3. Apparently he meant with this sum to buy out Tiffany's to deck the women of his household. He was fairly bursting with masculinity and pride as he described to Ellen the necklace he had picked out for her.

"That's grand," she said enthusiastically. "But suppose right now you wash your face and hands for dinner."

As he dashed off, Molly, who was sitting on the window sill and languidly fanning herself shot a triumphant glance at Ellen.

"Now admit it," she commanded gayly. "You were wrong about the bicycle."

"I suppose I was," Ellen conceded. "I've certainly never seen Mike look so well."

"The best of it is he's away from that street gang now," Molly continued happily. "He's well and busy and full of fun."

"Hush, here he comes," Myra interrupted.

"Don't you think, Ellen," Molly asked quickly, slipping in a last hasty question, "that you might be wrong about other things too?"

Ellen continued to pull up the chairs. She did not answer. They gathered about the porcelain table that looked out on the fire, escape and Ellen's geraniums. They talked languidly, laughed occasionally and passed back and forth the bread and butter sandwiches while outside the hot twilight slid into hot, velvety night. Molly had shaken off her momentary pettiness. She was proud of both girls and of her young son.

"This isn't so bad," said Myra at last, yawning.

"Rather nice in fact," Ellen agreed sipping the last dregs of the iced tea.

"Do you know, I think good luck has come to us at last," Myra continued, half jestingly. "The insurance is almost paid again. Ellen's about to give up that horrible job at Dreamland and she's had a grand boost at Barclay's. Fair weather ahead."

"Certainly we'd had our share of bad luck," Molly sighed wistfully sending a little prayer out into the night. "There can't be any more in store for us."

But there was.

At noon the next day, Mike, riding his new bicycle, was run down by a truck.

Worth Offers Big Stock Show Bill

FORT WORTH, March 4. — The management of the Worth theatre, in anticipation of the tremendous crowds that will visit the city over the weekend to attend the Fat Stock Show celebration, has booked the biggest screen, musical and vaudeville show obtainable.

The screen offers that handsome hero of the great outdoors, George O'Brien in "The Gay Caballero" with Victor McLagler and Conchita Montenegro in a colorful action drama. The plot takes place in the old west. It deals however with the modern life on the border rather than with that of the old days.

"Dream House" is the stage show. This attraction comprises big time vaudeville act in a revue of mirth, melody, dancing, and beautiful girls. Besides this thirty minutes of joy the Worth offers Maurice and his Modern Rhythm band with Even Hall, the voice that thrills. There is also a Laurel & Hardy comedy on the bill.

This stage, screen, and musical program starts next Sunday for a four day engagement.

Ellen sighed at the thought of chrysanthemums and football games and days when hot chocolate would seem delicious. Incredible tonight that great fires would roar again, that snow would come pelting through the air, that violets would be born on first!

COLLIE MAY BE CANDIDATE FOR SENATE

EASTLAND, March 4. — It was reported in Eastland today that Wilbur E. Collie would likely become a candidate for the state senate in this 24th senatorial district opposing Oliver Cunningham, of Abilene, incumbent.

Mr. Collie, when approached about it, said he had no announcement to make at this time. "I will state that the people desire some changes in the administration of their affairs in Austin, and I concur in these sentiments. Something has to be done to relieve the people of the burden of exorbitant taxes, and I would be willing to help them do it. The shift should be made to those best able to pay and relieve the heaver of wood and cultivator of the soil. Some of these changes could be brought about by refunding to the counties the money expended on state highways and the assumption by the state of outstanding court bonds on such roads, and it could be financed by a portion of the gasoline tax; the exemption of home-steads from taxation up to a reasonable amount of value; the passage of an income tax law."

Regulating public utilities is another thing Collie strongly urges as a necessity; he would endeavor to abolish some of the "boards" down in Austin which he says would be a "plank" in his platform should he be a candidate; he favors consolidating all offices, bureaus and commissions which are now operating in "competition" with each other; he is for abolishing the fee system for public officers and place them on a salary commensurate with the work and responsibility of the office. "I am for the idea of a law providing for the assessment and payment of taxes on mortgages, liens, deeds of trust, etc., and providing that the owner and mortgagee shall render and pay only upon his equity in the property."

"When they go to talking about million dollar bond issues and billion dollar congresses, it is time for the people to do something. If all that money was in silver dollars it would take a hundred years to count it. Pile them one on the other and you'd have a silver shaft to the moon. I don't propose to climb it but if I could I imagine I could see many things — some of which is causing this depression and oppression. From the top I could see the many other pyramids of expense erected by the State, County City and Schools. Some of them are already giant shafts at that. When I come down to earth there is no wonder in my mind that the workman, the farmer and the small business man carries in his pocket only an elegant assortment of holes. Every year the more they add on and the higher the shaft the tighter the rivets in the shackles about it neck."

Winston Clarifies Statement on Meters

Editor Cisco News:
In the paragraph of my announcement yesterday referring to reading water meters it seems I did not make clear what my position is on that point. Please let me explain for the information of the voters that my meaning is simply this: I believe that the readings taken from the meters should be written on the cards so that the patrons may know the exact gallons for which they are paying. I did not intend to leave the impression that the meters are not being properly read and regret that this impression seems to have been gotten by some. Thanking you for printing this in your paper today, I am,
W. R. (Bob) WINSTON.

"In announcing my candidacy for commissioner of your city, I feel justified in doing so because of the urgent requests of my numerous friends, realizing of course, the responsibility that accompanies the position of honor and trust that, if elected, shall be mine. I believe that during the present period of depression our city should be run on a sound and economical basis. I have been a tax payer in your city for 10 years.
