ATTACKS UPON UNEQUAL OIL TAKING HEARD

AUSTIN, March 30.—Attacks on alleged unequal takings of oil under the state railroad commission's pro-ration and conservation orders marked the opening here today of hearings preliminary to issuance of new oil allowable orders for all Texas oil fields except Van East Texas and the Panhandle.

J. E. Parnell, of Wichita Falls former state senator, called for a statement of the number of wells in each district and what total production is permitted in those districts.

Particular inquiry was centered on the Gulf Coast district for which there is now no production limit enforced but for which an order is to be issued after this hearing.

R. D. Parker, chief of the oil and gas division of the state railroad commission, answering questions from Carl Estes, of Tyler, confirmed the report that 7,100 barrels had been coming from nine wells in the Rab Ridge field, recently purchased by the Humble company for a reported $20,000,000.

Parker said no past allowable had been fixed for some time, because the field was producing less than allowed in former orders and no drilling was in progress.

When Beeman Strong asked if it were not a fact that restricting wells in that field to 100 barrels would ruin many wells W. A. Wise, of Tyler, asked why similar injury would not result by limiting wells in other places. The question was not answered.

APPETIZING RECIPES, ECONOMICALLY PREPARED, FEATURE OPENING SESSION OF COOKING SCHOOL

The opening session of the Daily News Free Cooking school, being conducted in the old M. System building on West Eighth street, was a marked success as was shown in the large and representative crowd attending. The outstanding purpose of the school, which is to simulate buying and cooking interest, was stated by W. H. LaRoque in an introductory speech in which he also told of the splendid cooperation being given by the various merchants of Cisco.

Miss Zella Allen, noted home economist in charge of the school, in her initial lecture of the series, Miss Allen stated that economy is to be stressed. She said she will endeavor to show the housewife of Cisco how to reduce expenses and still serve the most appetizing foods. She brought out the fact that a dish does not have to be expensive to be good.

Miss Allen pointed out that the housewife of today does not bear the burdens of her predecessor, as shown in the modern equipment of the school. On the stage which was built by the Cisco Lumber and Supply company, is every modern kitchen convenience. The Community Natural Gas company is featuring the Garland Range, and has installed a hot water heater for Miss Allen's use.

DON'T EXPECT REPORT UNTIL FIVE O'CLOCK

A decision on efforts to bar the Cisco high school from football contests of the Texas Interscholastic League for one year was not expected to be made until late today.

Roy B. Henderson, executive secretary of the League, said that no action would probably be announced before 5 o'clock this afternoon.

Cluck, of the local schools, Principal H. Brandon, of the high school, and F. D. Wright, a member of the school board.

The executive committee of the oil belt district recommended to the state committee suspension of Cisco on the grounds that Cisco high school had violated Interscholastic League rules by playing Fred Hightower, quarterback, in the Breckenridge-Cisco game last October 23 a game in which Breckenridge was defeated but which was subsequently awarded to the losers by the district committee.

A SECOND BIG LOAN FOR MISSOURI PACIFIC LINES.

An additional loan of $12,800,000 to the Missouri Pacific Railway company has been okehd by the Daves reconstruction corporation. All rail loans must have the approval of the interstate commerce commission and the I. C. C. granted permission to approve the second loan to the company.

This was the pledge made by the administration when the president signed the reconstruction act: he declared it to be for rail relief, industrial relief, closed bank relief, and for the relief of agriculture.

BEER NOT WANTED AS A REVENUE RAISER. "An unbridled house" brushed aside a beer tax approval but approved a one cent a gallon levy on imported oil as part of the new income revenue bill.

Now the home folks who produce petroleum insist if it is a good thing for the manufactured products it is a good thing for the petroleum refined and otherwise.

A tax on imports has been the play all along the line for years and years. A mighty argument has been that a high tariff protects American labor as well as the manufacturer or maker of things.

Well, a billion dollars has to be taken from the pockets of the American people. The other alternative is a new bond issue of a billion dollars or more to hit the deficit next year on the nose and knock it out, until prosperity returns and the jobless have been given jobs, the purchasing power of the farmer has been restored, the wheels of industry are flying, the factories and mills and mines are busy and the house of steel has been made again the great barometer of business activities the country over.

FINDING JOBS FOR THE JOBLESS.

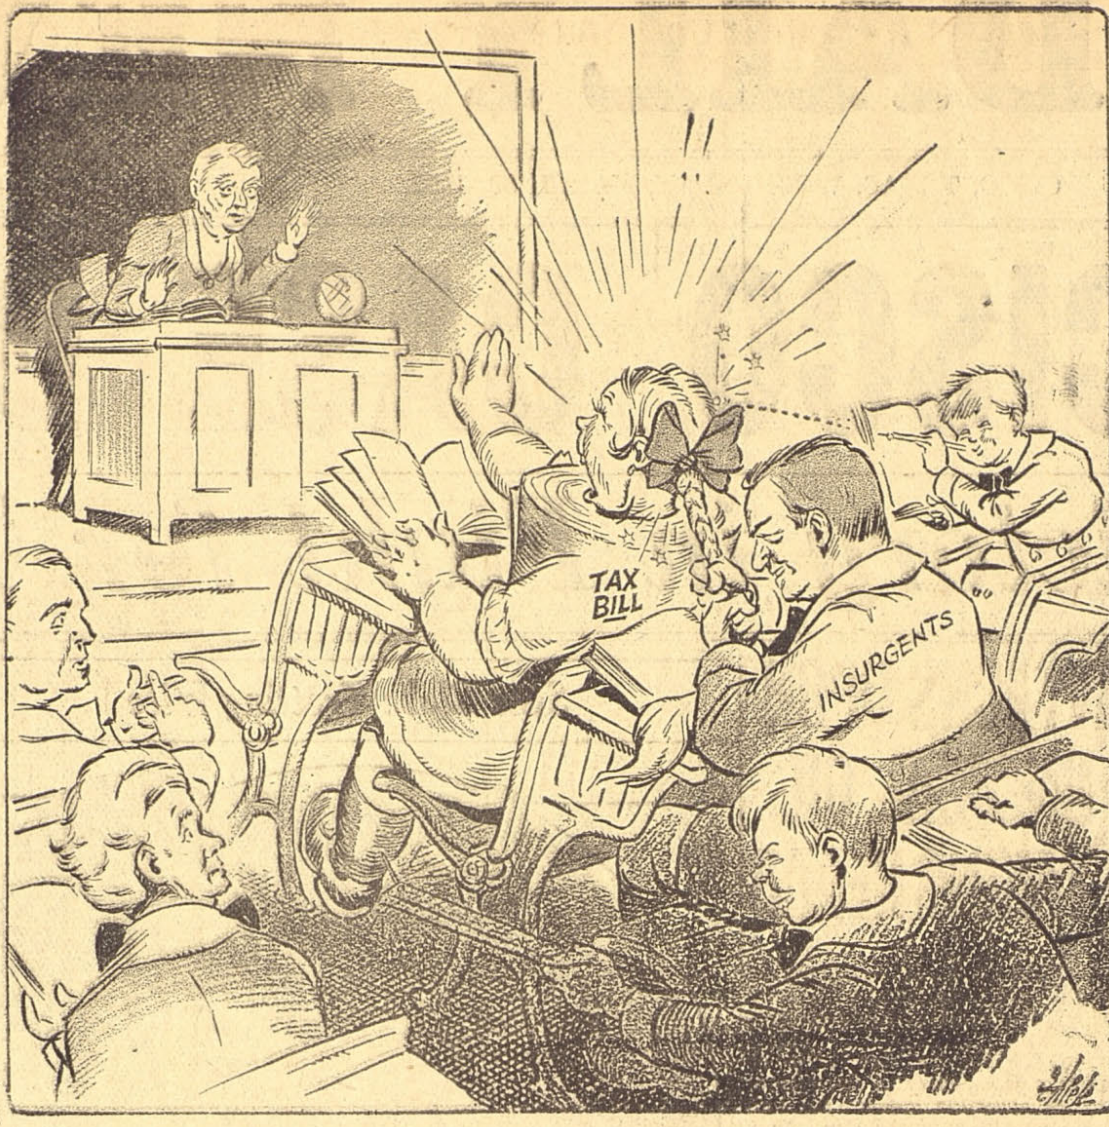

In the closing days of March the national campaign launched to provide jobs for a million jobless ones reported 307,000 had been placed. The stunt of the committee is to find a million jobs for a million idle men and Minnesota, a farm state, has led all the rest.

FINANCIAL LOANS TO DATE.

General Charles G. Dawes is busy. His reconstruction finance corporation has lent a total of $243,981,000, speaking of March 24. A total of 587 banks and trust companies received $127,000,000; building and loan associations totalling 18 revived $3,000,000; a total of 13 insurance committees received approximately $6,000,000; railroads $56,975,000; two joint stock banks, $775,000; and three mortgage loan companies, $1,400,000.

A republican congressman has introduced a resolution calling for information. He wants a list of the corporations or individuals favored with loans or advances. He wants to know what action has been taken to thaw out frozen assets. He wants to know what relief has been extended to banks which were closed by runs made by wild depositors.

Teacher's Pet!

finance and its importance to the little fellow as well as to the big fellow. They are reminded that the big fellow has been given acute financial pains as well as the little fellow who has lost a job or the tillers of the soil who have faced the lowest price levels in years.

TEXAS TOPICS

AUSTIN, March 30. — The Texas statehouse, like the national capitol, has its "little cabinet," the group of executive assistants and chief aides to office-holders who represent a substantial part of the real operating machinery of the government.

The affairs of government would run on smoothly if every elected and chief appointive official in Austin were to be called away or leave on vacation all at the same time. In Washington the "little cabinet" is specific in its limits of the under-secretaries and administrative aides. In the Texas capital it is a little more indefinite, in that some departments have executive officers appointed by boards or commissions, such as the highway engineer or the executive secretary of the game commission, who rank along with the game commission, who rank along with the governor's appointees and the elected officers in authority.

The little cabinet is made up of the second-trench men. . . . As illustrative of this set of state workers, but not as an exclusive list, might be named some of these:

Watt L. Saunders; and John Martin, in the state department; Secretaries Pat Daugherty and Paul Wakefield, in the executive office; Col. Carmichael and Col. Nicholas, in the adjt. general's department; R. D. Parker, Mark Marshall, O. D. Hudnall, L. A. Gueringer and Laten Stanberry, among division heads in the railroad commission; L. W. Rogers, in the department of education; Bruce W. Bryant in the elected attorney general's department; J. D. Hall, long-time budget director, in the board of control, with Major Clark Wright, new secretary, rapidly coming into the group; A. P. Dooley, in the comptroller's department; Clerks Fred Connerly, in supreme court, and Bob Connerly in the third civil appeals court, and others.

When James V. Allred, attorney general, sets out upon a campaign, he makes it with vigor and directness. So, after Clem Calhoun of the Panhandle announced against him for attorney general, he took the fight straight to Mr. Calhoun's doorstep, and has visited, Pampa, where he has a brother; Amarillo, where he was to handshake the voters and make a speech.

At points between, and back at his old home city of Wichita Falls, it may be assumed he was making hay under the western sun.

And if there should be a race for governor this year, he'll be in it. Representative Elbert Barron, Sherman, is back in Austin for further work of the tax survey committee. . . . Members of the senate fee committee are grinding away, with numerous out-of-city witnesses present to testify.

Judge W. C. Davis, Bryan, who knocked out the cotton acreage law, intends to run for supreme court. Former Treasurer Gregory Hatcher will run for railroad commissioner or for congress.

The federal land bank for Texas has loans of $2,954,700 during 1931, leading all the other 11 banks of the system, according to the report of President M. H. Gossett.

This brought, after payments for the year on former loans had been deducted, the Texas land bank loans to $156,000,000 in effect at the end of the year.

Twenty-five million dollars of the new federal appropriations to land banks has been made available to the banks for use in extending of instalments of loans owed by worthy buyers, and the rest of approximately $63,000,000 was made available to all the banks of the system to improve their position so as to encourage the sale of land bank bonds, from which the bulk of their funds for loans are secured. The Texas bank is to share in these additional credits, so as to improve the condition of borrowers temporarily unable to meet instalments, and of credits to new borrowers for purchase of land as well.

By RAYMOND BROOKS

AUSTIN, March 30.—The tidings of "dollar oil" in sight again brought reassurance to Texas that its tax revenues will rise, and gave indication that maybe the legislature wasn't so wrong in its judgment last year when it declined to fix a flat two-cent tax rather than a 2 per cent levy, on crude petroleum.

At a dollar, the levies are the same, but if oil continues back up the rising curve from the ten-cent bottom last August to the present dollar level, soon the state will be getting larger production revenues at 2 per cent than it would have on the flat basis.

"A form of condemnation proceeding," was the legal formula into which the issue resolved itself before a federal court in Houston trying the case involving validity of the common purchasing of natural gas law.

"Is this a law trying to require somebody to buy natural gas?" it was asked during the hearing. "No, your honor," Robert E. Hardwick, one of the attorneys defending validity of the statute, replied to the court, "it is a means by which it is sought to require people to pay for something they already are taking by drainage."

The companies, having pipeline privileges, have the right of eminent domain, it was pointed out. If they condemned a piece of land, the question to be determined would be the fair price. . . . And if they are, as set out in provisions of the law, actually depleting gas from adjoining lands, a similar question was left for judicial determination as to the fair price for the gas they are taking from adjoining leases—the same price as that they would pay as purchasers if the gas were produced through sellers' wells

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—This national capital is either the best or the worst place in the world for bachelors, depending on how you look at it.

The going gets especially heavy during leap years when it is supposed to be every single woman's privilege to make proposals of honest matrimony to such eligible males as remain in circulation. And, although your correspondent is not privy to the intimate, personal lives of Washington's several nationally famous bachelors, one imagines that they are suffering many harrowing experiences along with the trials and worries of statesmanship.

Men Are Scarce

THE reason bachelorhood here is always tense is that men are relatively scarce. The average mixed gathering here finds women in the majority.

But hostesses in the upper reaches of the social racket try to make things come out even so every damsel and dame will have a partner, and the working out of that problem tends to place a certain premium on almost any gent who owns a dinner coat.

The numerical spread between the sexes begins in the government service with its army of girl clerks and secretaries.

Then you find that the politicians, the middle-aged women who move here, and the wealthy families which choose the capital to launch social careers usually bring their daughters but leave their sons outside in the business world.

"Men on Call"

SO you have a capital where professional social secretaries keep lists of satisfactory young men on call for debutante and other parties, where unattached diplomatic attaches and State Department boys dash from cocktail party to cocktail party, dinner to dinner and dance to dance. Latin-American diplomats, especially, are said to make more conquests here than in any other capital in the world.

Bachelor Charley Curtis THE matrimonial competition may only be described as keen instead of being drained into those of the common purchaser. Gas operators held strong belief the laws has proven itself valid. Technicalities were waived, and the question before the federal court became: Whether the law is fundamentally valid or void.

J. Frank Doble, who has written many tales of buried treasures, recently dealt in a victorious way with an actual case in which the treasurer, if any, was deeply buried. By action of a market house he became the involuntary buyer of a contract of 200 bales of cotton. He repudiated the purchase in his name, and litigation followed, in which one of the actions was a claim by the company for several hundred dollars loss on the cotton transaction. . . . But Mr. Doble won, when it was recited that his final permission to sell the cotton bought for his account had not validated the purchase as one of his sanction.

Drug Victims Arouse Police

LONDON, March 30.—Attacks on women and girls by men who surreptitiously drug them and carry them away have reached such an alarming proportions that Scotland Yard plans to send out a squad of plain-clothes women detectives.

Hundreds of women have been drugged by the slight prick of a needle in the last few months. The attacks are often made on them in the most public places, while riding on a bus, or shopping in a crowded store. Sometimes they are unaware of the needle. They grow faint and are assisted away by the attacker.

Purse-snatching thieves, who knock women to the pavement, have been one of London's most troublesome criminal types, but the drugging is even more dangerous and harder to catch. One even decoyed a woman to a church on the pretext that she was wanted to help with the cleaning operations inside. There she was drugged and attacked.

A girl helping an older woman cross a busy street was pricked in the arm, and another was drugged as she was alighting from a bus at Victoria station. One was found weeping outside a public house and charged with drunkenness. In court she said she had been drugged.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By EDSON R. WAITE Shawnee, Oklahoma.

Buffalo, N. Y.—The only safe way to advertise is through local newspapers. They are the only advertising mediums that will bring you sure results.

A lot of people are now thinking about this word, "Economy." The preaching of this little word has done much in keeping the depression with us. Official calls for economy here and there by different city, state and government officials are very fresh in the minds of the people—so fresh that they are economizing to the best of their ability, with the result of the hoarding of dollars and cutting down ordinary expenses so much that millions of dollars are kept from circulation and business is crippled so that we have a big army of unemployed. Many of these people now find that while they are expected to correctly interpret the word, "Economy," many of our officials reserve to themselves the right to place their own construction on the meaning of the word. Economy means to avoid waste, and waste is any expenditure which is unnecessary.

The men who make the greatest success in business are the men who have the courage to dare, ambition to succeed, grit to fight, and who have the desire for the best things life has to offer their business and home city and have enough nerve to fight for them.

George D. Murphy, editor of the Manteca, California, Bulletin, never loses an opportunity to tell about that splendid little city. It is in a very rich agricultural section. If you ever get near that city, you will see in Mr. Murphy one of the liveliest among the live city builders.

Reckless automobile drivers are enemies of all mankind.

Mail order houses never do much business in sections where the local merchants are continuous newspaper advertisers. They cannot compete with local merchants who advertise.

Advertising speaks for you. Speak often!

Urban Allen, editor of the Hilo (Hawaii) Tribune-Herald, says:

That the wise merchant today turns to the advertising columns of the newspaper to maintain his sales volume. He has several good reasons for his confidence in today's reckless summer days of 1929.

Today, the merchant reasons, and rightly, that Mrs. Average Householder is more careful how and where she spends her husband's money. Assuming this, it is obvious she is not in the habit of rushing pell-mell to the nearest store, hurriedly glancing over the stock, and purchasing an article which seems to fill the need. Rather, she will scan the advertising columns of her newspaper in search of values, and when she finds what she wants at a price that is right, she'll spend her money and not before.

And that's why, when the 19th century merchant is spending their time bewailing the depression the progressive businessman is consulting an advertising specialist and busying himself with copy and layouts for the next edition of the local newspapers. He realizes that his next edition of the local newspaper. He realizes that his advertising dollar goes farther today than it has in many, many years past.

MODERN PRISON UNIT BUILT AT CENTRAL FARM

By STUART E. JONES
United Press Staff Correspondent
HOUSTON, March 30. — Eighteen miles west of Houston on the Old Spanish Trail dungaree-clad wards of the state are moulding into shape a project which, prison officials declare, is destined to become a monument to prison industry.

Chairman W. A. Faddock of the Texas Prison Board describes it as the first step in an elaborate plan to make the state prison system as self-sustaining as possible. When it is completed, Texas will boast one of the most modern prison units in the country.

Under construction at Central Prison farm is a huge combination barracks, dining hall and administration building immediately adjoining the site of a packing and preserving plant planned to serve the 5,500 inmates of the 23 prison units as well as a large portion of the needs of other state institutions.

The barracks building is the major project within the unit of construction. The first unit of the barracks, to house 250 men, will be ready for occupancy within a few days.

The barracks have been modeled to permit a maximum of safety and sanitation. The structure will be fireproof throughout, the only inflammable material permitted inside it being the inmates' clothing and bedding. Each prisoner will have a steel locker in which to keep his personal possessions.

Central Control

Each of the four wings of the barracks, which form a cross, is arranged for central control. At the junction of the cross the end walls form an octagonal room, opening into the alley leading to the main dining room and the administration building. Hung from the ceiling of this room is a bullet-proof steel and glass control booth, from which the guard on duty can open or close doors to each of the four squad rooms.

The living quarters of the convicts are to be kept with the plans of other buildings in the unit and are the first of their kind to be constructed under the rehabilitation program by the prison board with funds provided by the legislature at its last session.

Slowly, because of the vast amount of material to be moved, a group of convict workmen are raising the system's first industrial unit at Central farm. The packing and preserving plant will be ready to operate at full capacity within a few weeks.

The preserving plant, housed in a huge, modern-tile building of steel, was completed several months ago and during the season just closed and canned 50,000 gallons of fruit and vegetables for prison fare.

Just across a quadrangle from the preserving plant the prisoners practically completed and equipped a large packing plant. This unit housed in a two-story reinforced concrete building, will have a capacity of 100 hogs and 60 beeves daily and will reclaim all edible portions of the animals.

In the center of the quadrangle is located a second concrete building the power plant and prison laundry. This is ready to begin operating as soon as the wheels of the packing plant begin to turn.

Equalization of Rail Rates Sought

HOUSTON, March 30. — Galveston and Texas City interests next Monday (April 4) will apply for a general equalization with Houston of rail rates on foreign and coastwise traffic at a meeting of the Texas section, Texas-Louisiana tariff bureau.

The hearing was originally to be held at Dallas but was transferred here at the request of Houston shippers. At the same time the tariff bureau will hear arguments relative to the inauguration of proposed rates on shipments of cottonseed products between Texas points.

Plan underway for completion of Highways No. 79 and No. 129 to Throckmorton county line and contracts for hard-surfacing expected to be let at early date. — Graham Leader.

MENUS FOR THE ENTIRE FAMILY

BY SISTER MARY
NEA Service Writer

ALTHOUGH food value in the terms of calories, mineral constituents and vitamin content is of prime importance in the planning of menus, the color of the various foods chosen enters into the general scheme of things.

Try visualizing your menus as you read them over. Foods of contrasting color usually combine excellently, since the color contrast speaks contrast also in flavor and texture.

If you see the menu in your "mind's eye" as you plan it you will find a new interest in serving it. In this day of colored linens and glasses, the family luncheon or breakfast table can be made a veritable picture. You yourself may be the only one at the table who fully appreciates the color effect, but every member of the family, blindly, perhaps, will enjoy his meal more than usual.

Contrast is such an important factor in meal planning that it should constantly be kept in mind. It is this definite difference in foods that makes a meal appetizing and well balanced. Repetition is always monotonous and soon sates the appetite regardless of the merits of the various dishes.

Light and Dark Menus

Cookbooks of fifty years ago in their "hints" on meal planning advised housekeepers to serve "light-colored vegetables with dark meats and dark colored vegetables with light meats." And while there are some vegetables we serve with any and all meats, the rule is worth remembering.

The following luncheon menu is for a simple family meal, but it is colorful and offers opportunity for experiment.

Cream of spinach soup, croissants, English monkey, jellied tomato salad, gingerbread waffles, milk, tea.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Stewed rhubarb, cereal, cream, scrambled eggs with crisp bacon, graham muffins, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON: Left-over lamb baked with rice, spinach, rye bread, canned strawberries, sugar cookies, milk, tea.

DINNER: Broiled boned herring, horseradish butter, potatoes au gratin, buttered green beans, button radishes, caramel custard, milk, coffee.

good hard cheese and the finished dish is a warm golden color.

Of course the jellied tomato salad is a dark red. Served on vivid green shredded leaf lettuce with a golden mayonnaise, the effect is colorful and inviting.

Crisp brown gingerbread waffles with gleaming whipped cream add the finishing touch. Can't you see the whole menu and doesn't it look good?

Gingerbread Waffles

One cup molasses, 5 tablespoons shortening, 1 1/2 teaspoons soda, 1-2 cup sour milk, 1 egg, 2 cups pastry flour, 2 teaspoons ginger, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon baking powder.

Mix and sift last four dry ingredients three times. Heat molasses and shortening to the boiling point. Remove from heat and beat in soda. Add sour milk and egg well beaten. Mix well and add dry ingredients. Stir until smooth and bake on a hot waffle iron. Serve hot with whipped cream lightly sweetened and flavored with vanilla.

Most Impudent Prisoner of World War Is Sought by Author of War History

LONDON, March 30. — The whereabouts of the most impudent prisoner of the war is being sought by Crtis-Kommandur Rudolf Stampf in his newly published war reminiscences.

The former prisoner, a British "Tommy," apparently walked right out of jail under the very noses of his guard and Stampf, in his admiration, is anxious to trace him.

"There were 400 prisoners in the Belgian camp," writes Stampf. "One morning a Tommy stole a suit of engineer's overalls and a cap. Donning them and picking up a pair of pliers and an electric bulb, he walked calmly to the main gate, overhung a huge arc lamp. For a moment he stood under the great light examining the bulb.

"The sentries took him for a civilian electrician — as he had foreseen. Then he calmly walked down the road — and that was the last we saw of him.

"I heard later on that he had gone to the house of a Belgian coal factor in Brugelette and had hidden there until in November when the British troops occupied the village. I learned afterwards that every evening he used to go out for a walk as bold as brass, flirting with the girls and talking to the men as if he owned the place.

"If I could meet that Tommy I would welcome him to a holiday at my home and congratulate him on his superb insolence. He walked right out of a camp with a 12-foot wall around it and over 20 armed sentries guarding it. Magnificent!

"His number was Kreisgefänger 1221, and at the time of his escape there was a small amount of about 33 pfennigs owing to him from the three pfennigs a day pay which we paid to prisoners who worked. He may claim that 33 pfennigs and a good interest from me if ever this book should come to his notice."

BULK BUYING FOR STATE IS WALLACE PLAN

AUSTIN, March 30. — State purchases aggregating $15,000,000 a year for state institutions can be cut several million dollars by efficiency methods, John F. Wallace, new member of the state board of control believes. He, as purchasing member of the board, will try it.

Failure to purchase in large quantities, Wallace says is a fault of present operation, according to his study of the state purchases since taking office this year.

He is now preparing forms by which the demands of each state institution by months will be shown. When it is definitely ascertained what are the usual needs, Wallace plans erection of a state warehouse on railroad tracks. Distribution to the institutions about Austin will then be made from this warehouse.

"I am confident that I can save the cost of a fireproof warehouse out of one state eleemosynary appropriation bill," said Wallace.

Carlot Purchases

Saving can also be effected in purchases for state departments Wallace believes. Instead of buying a single desk on requisition of a department, a single typewriter for another, as need arises, and other scattered individual purchases, Wallace proposes a conference of department representatives to schedule their likely needs for a given period. Carlot purchases then will be made for distribution among departments.

Work of learning the monthly needs of eleemosynary institutions in good supplies and dry goods is already under way.

Superintendents are being notified to make out a list of their requirements. If they fail to do so they need not expect rush orders to be put through to supply them, Wallace says.

Rush orders, he said, prevent careful consideration of the goods offered and also result in much extra work for the board of control forces. With proper system emergency requisitions can be reduced to one third of the present number, he estimates.

A state dairy herd to supply the group of state institutions about Austin, is also advocated by Wallace. A small herd now supplies the state hospital.

Hat Gave Garner His Reputation of Being Rancher --- Mule Is Only Stock on Ranch

UVALDE, March 30. — It must be his hat and not the "great number" of head of livestock on his ranch that has given Speaker John Garner the reputation of being a rancher.

For on Garner's place near here that they call a ranch is only one head of stock — a mule. In contrast surrounding Garner's one-mile ranch are the many-thousand acre ranches of the sheep and cattle princes of West Texas.

The fact that his reputation as a rancher comes from his wide-brimmed soft hats is one of the many tales they tell here about "Cactus Jack".

In the garage of Ross Brumfield hangs a tin drinking cup of Garner on its peg — the only private drinking cup in any Uvalde county place of business. On the cup is a tag:

"This is the property of John N. Garner so keep your dam hands off by order of the Chief of Police."

"John's a cussin' man but he never put a 'n' on 'dam' in his life and he never will," said Brumfield. "He don't cuss that way."

Garner's hunting and fishing companions congregate frequently at Brumfield's garage to swap tales and plan pleasure expeditions.

The Shortening

One of the favorite tales they tell is of Garner's cooking achievements in making biscuits.

"They were the best biscuits I ever ate," Brumfield recalled. "We were about through eatin' when someone said, 'Say, John, how did you make such good bread without shortening?'"

"Oh," says John, "I got the shortening out of that bottle over there."

"Good Josephat," his questioner gasped. "That's my rattle-snake oil that I use for the rheumatiz."

"But old John ate the rest of those biscuits just the same."

Garner's favorite car is a model T Ford. Garner mottoes, such as "Let Garner Darn 'er," "Cactus Jack is Coming Back", and other Uvalde invented expressions are written all over the side of the car.

He never would get another car so his wife and son bought him a Chevrolet roadster. This he drives on fishing trips because it has a canoe rack on which the canoe rides like a car top.

Sod Houses Stump Kansas Historian

TOPEKA, Kan., March 30. — Kirk Mechem, secretary, Kansas State Historical Society, is in a dilemma. He wants to build a sod house, and doesn't know how.

The history books say that the Kansas prairies were dotted with sod houses and that thousands of early-day Kansas lived in them.

Mechem, whose job calls for much familiarity with the history books, decided to build a sod house in the state museum. But now he can't find anyone who knows what the buildings were like.

Other states have log houses, stone houses and other types of pioneer structures in their state museums, but Kansas wants one of the typical "soddies." But how to build one is the question.

How thick were the walls and of what were the roofs made? What kinds of windows and doors did the soddies have and were the rooms plastered inside? What kind of grass makes the best sod, and what time of year should the sod be cut?

MEETS TRAIN COPS.

FORT WORTH, March 30. — Policemen here keep in trim for chasing law violators by holding track meets. Besides the criminal angle to encourage the racers, prizes are usually given to the winners. Twenty-five turkeys went to winners in the last meet.

GERMAN RADIO PROGRESS FROM 1899 IS TRACED

BERLIN, March 30.—Progress of radio in Germany from the first wireless transmission to ships in 1899 to the latest feature of broadcasting the ultra shortwave for city use, is traced in a calendar just issued by the Telefunken Company.

The list of the more important achievements shows the advancement of German experiments in the early days of wireless, and the delays, partially due to financial difficulties in the post-war period, and to the fact that technical improvements naturally became more difficult as radio advanced.

The high spots were: First wireless telegraphic service over longer distances, between Cuxhaven and the express steamer "Deutschland" 112 miles out to sea, by means of a spark transmitted, 33 years ago.

First wireless telephone transmission, between Telefunken laboratory in Berlin and Neuen, 24 miles away, by arc transmitter and crystal detector receiver, 25 years ago.

First regular broadcast service installed in Berlin with 1,580 registered listeners, nine years ago.

First wireless picture transmission, between Berlin and Leipzig (103 miles) through Telefunken apparatus, six years ago.

First wireless television of living people, between Nauen and Gellnow (30 miles), one and one-half years ago.

First ultra short-wave city broadcasting (with a multiple-stage ultra short-wave test transmitter of 0.3 k. w.). This service, which is on a length of about six meters, extends only about 30 miles, and eliminates interference between cities, one year ago.

Midsummer will see many more towns and cities in Great Britain with their municipal airdromes. There are 171 already directly interested; 11 have licensed airdromes perfectly equipped; and the remainder are negotiating either with local authorities, the Air Ministry, or property owners.

Four hundred new pilots will probably be qualified this year. In 1925 the number of pilots holding licenses was 117. At the end of 1931 it was 2,091.

There are 57 subsidized and unsubsidized flying clubs in the country today; the movement started with five subsidized clubs with 489 flying members.

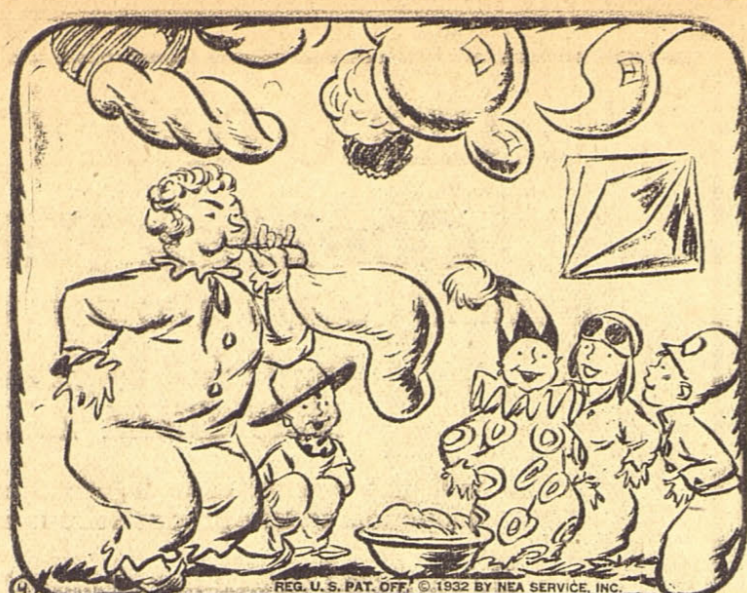

Twenty-two subsidized flying clubs have a civilian flying membership of more than 3,000, and other membership of 200. The number who qualified as pilots in 1931 was 372. Privately owned aircraft number 385 today; there were but 6 in 1925.

Women Voters' Heads to Meet

The main feature of the President's Evening, scheduled for April 27, will be the annual address of Miss Belle Sherwin, national president.

The special program for presidents will begin with five supper conferences, at which groups of State League chairmen with common problems will meet. Among those presiding at these discussions will be Mrs. Royal C. Taft, of Providence, R. I.; Mrs. Paul Savage, of Bangor, Me.; and Mrs. Frederic J. Corl, of Louisville, Ky., each of whom is the president of the League in her state.

Miss Sherwin's address will be delivered at an open meeting, at which Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle of Washington, D. C., regional director and former president of the "Voteless League" of the District of Columbia, will preside.

"WELL, who are you?" wee Scouty cried. "Please tell us how you got inside the great big bubble that just broke. And, also, what's your name?"
"You are real friendly, I suppose. We all like new friends, goodness knows. Regardless, sir, of whom you are, we're very glad you came."
"Well," said the man, "Suds is my name. I, too, am very glad I came. You see, for days I have been lost within a cake of soap."
"I had to wait till someone blew a bubble. So, much thanks to you. I don't mind telling all you lads that I had near lost hope."

"BUT, here I am! I feel just great. And, if you lads will kindly wait until I've stretched my joints a bit, I'll furnish heaps of fun."
"You've blown some bubbles, I am sure, but most of them are rather poor. I'll take a bubble pipe and show you how it should be done."
"Hurrah!" cried Windy.

"That suits me! In fact, I will be thrilled to see some pretty bubbles in the air. Please make them float up high."
"I'll bet that you can blow real strong and I just hope that naught goes wrong. Gee, try and make a bubble float away up in the sky!"
"It wasn't long until the best I can," said, "Now I'll do the man I can." He took hold of a bubble pipe and dipped it in the soap.
And then he blew and blew and blew. One Tiny cried, "Hurrah for you! I wish that it was possible to tie one to a rope."
"Now, look at these," the man cried out. And, shortly, floating all about were bubbles of most every shape that bubbles could be in. "Some look like doughnuts," Copsy said. "And, see that big one overhead." The man then blew some other shapes that made the Tinties grin.

Student Politicians Supply Practical Pointers for Public Office Candidates

By VERNON M'GEE
United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN, March 30.—Candidates for state or even national offices could get some practical campaign pointers from the busy candidates for University of Texas student honors. Election day will be April 5. Speeches, advertising, handshaking, caucuses and all the best methods of vote getting are being utilized by the student candidates.

Joe Spurlock of Fort Worth and Allen Shivers of Port Arthur are rival candidates for president of the Student association. For vice president Truman Pouncey and Hill Maddox, both of Austin, are rivals. The co-eds have a race for secretary with Zula Williams, San Antonio, and Lucy E. Field, Calvert the contenders.

Fred Korih, San Antonio, and Joe R. Pool, Dallas, are candidates for Student Council chairman. The co-ed candidates for the council are: Esther Marie Halm, San Antonio; Ruth Thornton, Chicago, Ill.; Madge A. Stewart, Harlingen, Hazel DeWeese, Austin; Sadie Frances Starr, Dallas; and Ida Houston, High Bridge, N. J. The prohibition question has not been injected in the campaign though Johnny Walker of Berger is a candidate for the council. His opponents for the men's places are: Brown Booth, Timpson; Arthur W. McCrory, Oak Park, Ill.; Dewitt Kinard, Port Arthur; Chris Malwald, Rock Island, Ill.; Simon Frank and Kent Rider, San Antonio; and Marcus Williams, Austin.

Editors To Be Elected
Editors of student publications also are to be elected. The Daily Texan will have a woman editor if the friends of Mary Lee Watson, Hearne, succeed. Besides her work on the student daily in various staff posts she has contributed to College Humor, The Sportsman, the Austin Statesman and is a columnist on a local society paper, The Gossip. D. E. Hardeman, Goliad, and Bob Baldridge, Clifton, also are seeking the office. Hardeman is college correspondent for the San Antonio Express and Houston Chronicle and was sports editor of the Texan this year. Baldridge is the son of a publisher, has had college and professional experience and is a member of the Longhorn football team.

For associate editor of the Texan candidates are: Mildred Cooke Granger; Joe Hornaday, Austin; W. A. Coffield, Waco; and R. N. Fuller, Bryan; Joe Riley, Greenville, and Roy Hatley, San Antonio, are running for editor of the Cactus, student yearbook. J. J. Deiss, Ambrillo, and Chilton O'Brien, Beaumont seek associate editorships.

State Ballots Will Carry Biographies

LINCOLN, Neb., March 30.—Candidates for office in Nebraska may have a five-word biography attached to their names on the ballot if they choose.
When the voters go to the polls April 12, many of the candidates will be identified under the provisions of a state law passed after the United States Senator George W. Norris — Grocer Clerk George W. Norris' tangle of two years ago.

The law provides that where two or more surnames of candidates for the same office are the same in spelling or sound, the secretary of state, county or city officer who prints ballots may on request of either of the candidates print on the ballot immediately after the name not to exceed five words the post office address and occupation of the candidate.

Two years ago, an obscure grocery clerk, George W. Norris, of Broken Bow, Neb., filed for the United States Senate against Senator George W. Norris. The filing brought Senator Gerald P. Nye's senatorial campaign investigating committee to Nebraska.

Dan Swanson, present state land commissioner, is the first candidate to use the new law. He has an opponent, Gus Swanson, of York, Neb.

Land Commissioner Swanson asks that the words, "Present Land Commissioner, Fremont, Neb." follow his name on the ballot.

American Girl Is Hit in Opera

COLOGNE, March 30.—The opening of Max Reinhardt's revival of Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffmann" early in March brought an added pleasure to the American colony here in seeing an American girl in one of the leading feminine parts. Miss Margare Halstead, daughter of the United States Consul-General in London, Albert Halstead, sang the role of Julietta with a temperament and poise which convinced critics of her future success.

Miss Halstead has been engaged in the ensemble of the Cologne Opera since the beginning of the season, but this is the first solo part she has taken. Julietta, the Venetian courtesan, who, under the malignant influence of Desperutto, steals Hoffmann's love and then scorn him, is not easy to portray. Miss Halstead presents her convincingly in her varying moods with her lovers avoiding the exaggeration, or affectation, to which the role might easily lead.

Although the solo parts are somewhat brief and do not give a full opportunity to her voice, Miss Halstead carried them boldly, singing clearly and without effort in both upper and middle registers.

Many members of the English colony, in addition to the American, greeted Miss Halstead enthusiastically at the close. She will complete the season with the Cologne Opera.

PREMIER DAIRY FARMER SAULT SITE MARIE, Mich.

MICHIGAN, March 30.—Miss Ruth Dennis, 30, has been named premier dairy farmer of the upper peninsula. Her father left her the farm, heavily mortgaged, 15 years ago. Since that time she has paid off the mortgage and established a herd of 60 of the finest cattle.

Garland Beauty is More Than Skin Deep

Please inspect the new Garland DeLuxe in our Show Room

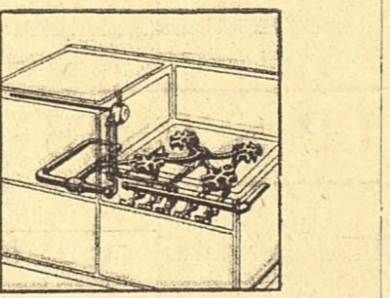

"The new Garlands are mighty good-looking," said Mrs. M. in our show room, "but my old one still cooks pretty well."
"But Garland beauty is more than skin deep!" we told Mrs. M. "The whole engineering is improved, from the linings to the burners. This Super De Luxe model turns out much better food than the old styles do, and it lops off hours of your kitchen schedule."

Mrs. M. then proceeded to inspect the Porcelain Linings, the Insulated oven walls (that get barely warm on the outside), and the Temperature Dial. She was delighted with the Automatic Lighter.

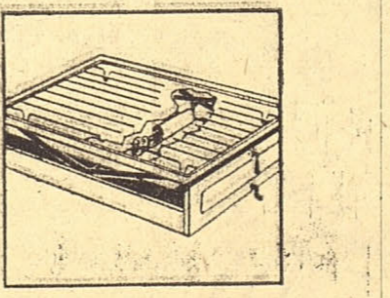

And when she discovered the porcelain Broiler that glides out, she bought the Range on the spot.

Sunday Supper Suggestions

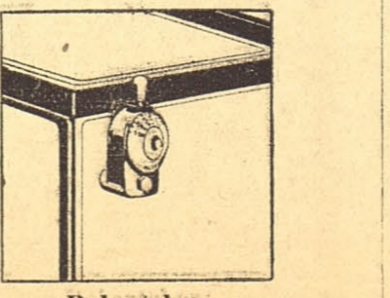

- A rich-looking supper dish is chicken broth, very rich and strong, served with melted cheese floating around on large dice of toast.
- Steamed brown rice in casserole crushed with cheese and thick with tomato (not juicy) and butter. Before serving, touch up with bits of ripe olive and walnuts.
- Pecan waffles, served with hot spiced grape juice in cups.

Insta-flame Lighter
Just turn on the gas and the Range lights itself!

Gliding Broiler
Porcelain broiler glides out. And by turning a small handle (that never gets hot) on the outside, you raise or lower broiler to the flame distance you need.

Robertshaw Oven Heat Control
This cuts down gas consumption and prevents oven-watching. Simply spin the dial to the CORRECT temperature, and you can trust the oven for a smooth performance. No guess-work.

The dime-a-dance girl

BY JOAN CLAYTON

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Ellen Rossiter, beautiful, 20-year-old, loves Larry Harrowgate, young artist. When he becomes engaged to another girl, Ellen agrees to marry Steven Barclay, 37 years old and wealthy. Her impoverished family is indebted to Barclay who has been married before. Scandal accompanied his Mexican divorce from Leda Grayson, dancer. To avoid talk Ellen and Barclay are secretly married.

The drive to his Long Island home deserted except for Barclay's butler. There Barclay suffers a heart attack. Louis Symes, Barclay's lawyer, arrives with doctors and nurses. Barclay dies at dawn.

Symes tells Ellen her marriage is not legal because papers proving Barclay's divorce have been stolen. Ellen yields all claim to Barclay's fortune to avoid scandal. She begs the man to keep her marriage secret to protect Barclay's honor and her own.

She learns Larry Harrowgate is Barclay's nephew. Heartbroken, she returns home. Larry seeks her out tells her that his engagement is broken and asks her to marry him. Ellen lacks courage to tell him of her marriage to his uncle. She goes with Larry to meet his mother in the Harrowgate apartment she sees Fergus, the butler. He follows her home and demands money.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLVII

It was all like a horrible dream to Ellen. That she should be discussing Larry and her engagement with this man whom she despised! Why didn't Fergus leave? Why didn't he go to Larry and get the whole thing over?

"Are you going to give me the jack?" Fergus demanded.

"No!" Ellen replied.

Someone knocked at the outer door. Fergus sprang to his feet, his face deathly white.

"It's my brother-in-law," Ellen told him. She was amazed at his panic.

She opened the door and stopped in surprise. The visitor was Symes but a Symes whom Ellen had never seen before. The man seemed transformed by rage. He strode past Ellen into his living room and faced Fergus.

"Get your things together!" he said sternly. "You've pulled your last trick. I have men below. You're going to jail."

Fergus gave a squeak of dismay and terror. He raced to the window locked down and perceived two figures, muffled in great coats, at the apartment entrance. The rest happened with the swift and shifting horror of scenes in nightmare.

Ellen had scarcely turned when Fergus shot beneath Symes' detaining arm and straight toward the open door into the hall. Instinctively she stretched her arms to bar him.

He clawed upward toward his vest. The gesture stopped the blood in her heart. Frozen, rigid, she looked straight into the muzzle of his gun.

"Get out of my way," Fergus screamed.

"Duck, Ellen, duck! He's gone crazy."

It was Symes' voice but the girl did not move. She could not move. This for an endless second.

The wide eyes of the running man were like the eyes of the blind. He had almost reached the door when he tripped and lost his balance. His body pitched forward and instantly Symes was at his back, had pinned his arms to his sides. Fergus' hands beat the air in a flurry of agony. The gun clattered to the floor. Symes kicked it across the carpet and into the kitchen.

"All right, I surrender," Fergus whimpered.

For a moment his face seemed almost peaceful in its profound despair. Suddenly he ducked his head and sank his teeth into the lawyer's wrist. Symes howled, relaxed his hold and reached out too late to grasp empty air. Running frenziedly, with the fleetness of desperation, Fergus dove into the kitchen and banged the door.

"Where's the key?" Symes shouted. "We'll lock him in."

"In the door," Ellen gasped.

She heard the rasp of the key. Symes braced the flimsy wooden barrier with his body. Ellen reached his side. There was a crash of glass and metal from within.

"He's trying to get out to the fire escape," the girl sobbed hysterically.

Ellen sat at the scarred porcelain table, gazing through checked gingham curtains at the white world outside. Myra busily shelling peas was sitting on a low stool beside her. The elder sister's head rested against the younger girl's knee. Molly was at the stove, trying her expert hand at a new dish of tomatoes, eggs and rice.

It was a peaceful scene with no hint of discord except the cloud on Molly Rossiter's brow and the moody listlessness of Ellen's pose. "I've never heard of anything so silly in my life," Molly declared spiritedly. "Why you should put Larry off now and be upset and wretched when that miserable man's death seems to have settled everything is beyond me. Simply beyond me."

Ellen did not reply.

"Exactly what did you say in that note to Larry?" Molly demanded turning her flushed face to Ellen.

"I've told you a thousand times"

"I'll break through the glass".

"It's barred! Oh, what's come over him? He's gone crazy?" she sobbed.

At that instant they both heard a rattle of footsteps within. felt the shock of a body slamming against the wooden door. The hinges groaned.

"Run downstairs," Symes ordered Ellen. "There are men waiting in front of the house, men from my office. Bring 'em up!"

"You can't get away!" he shouted through the door to Fergus.

The words were lost in the sound of a single shot. The color drained from Ellen's face and she and Symes faced each other for a wordless instant.

"He did it," Symes said slowly. "He did get away."

"They opened the door. The butler's body lay on the scarred linoleum, his head resting in brown dirt from the window box among broken red and pink geraniums.

In a few moments police filled the small apartment. Ellen sat, pale and shaken, in her own bedroom while Symes held off the questioners. Molly and Myra and Bert arrived from the movies. They did what they could for Ellen. There was not much that could be done.

Fergus' body was taken away. It was after one o'clock when Symes, heavy-eyed and weary, saw Ellen. Molly and Myra left them alone together. Ellen looked at Symes and he looked at her. The lawyer cleared his throat.

"The police have satisfied themselves about Fergus' suicide," he told her.

"I can't forget his face!" Ellen whispered. "I can't forget the way he looked when he saw the men down in the street."

Symes nodded. "I didn't dream my bluff would have such tragic consequences. When I got your message late this afternoon I determined to give Fergus a good scare. I picked up a couple of men from the office to be on hand in case he turned nasty. Intended to threaten him with jail if he wouldn't agree to leave town and let you alone. But I didn't dream he had a reason, a terrible reason, for fearing jail.

"The police believe he has been wanted in Pennsylvania for five years on a charge of murder," Symes went on. "It's a matter of checking the fingerprints before they'll be sure but his suicide when he thought he'd been trapped bears out the story. Yesterday the police here had a tip to pick Fergus up on suspicion of homicide. They were going to Mrs. Harrowgate's place last night—said so in fact—but he had disappeared. Somebody must have got the information to him."

"He knew—he knew!" Ellen whispered. "He knew when he came through the door that he was a hunted man."

"He was a wicked man as well," Symes said sternly. "Not worthy of your sympathy."

"I know."

Tears were in Ellen's eyes. The man spoke quickly.

"The police will be here to talk to you tomorrow," he said in a matter-of-fact tone. "They'll want verification of what I told them."

"What did you say?"

"I told them you'd seen Fergus only twice in your life," Symes stated firmly. "Once as the guest of Mr. Barclay, his former employer, and yesterday as the guest of Mrs. Harrowgate. I told them that Fergus sought you out as the last desperate impulse of a desperate man, hoping you'd lend him enough money to get away."

"Then they needn't know why he thought I'd let him have the money?" Ellen faltered.

"They needn't know anything," Symes assured her in relief. "Fergus is dead and the case is closed. I'll admit I had to pull a few strings to make my own appearance on the scene plausible—but I pulled them and the thing is ended. You have nothing to be afraid of, Ellen—nothing."

"Nothing except my own conscience," the girl reminded him. Then she added in a slow, halting voice, "Will you mail this note as you go out, please? It's to Larry."

Three days passed, three wretched days for Ellen. Fergus was buried, and his suicide was written down as another victory for the law. Police and reporters came no more to the street. On the third morning Molly and Myra and Ellen were gathered in the kitchen where Fergus had spent the last desperate moments of his life. It was a different room today, warm, cheerful and pulsing with life and domestic activity.

Ellen sat at the scarred porcelain table, gazing through checked gingham curtains at the white world outside. Myra busily shelling peas was sitting on a low stool beside her. The elder sister's head rested against the younger girl's knee. Molly was at the stove, trying her expert hand at a new dish of tomatoes, eggs and rice.

the girl answered lifelessly. "I told him that for a month I'd rather not see him, that there was something I wanted first to decide in my own mind. You know what I want to decide. The fact that Fergus is dead has nothing to do with it."

"As I was saying," Molly resumed, energetically stirring the mixture on the stove, "I can't see that there's anything to decide. The whole thing's ended. Symes told you so and we've all told you so. By writing that letter you've probably succeeded in making Larry think you're plain crazy."

"Oh let Ellen alone, mother," Myra intervened.

She set her bowl upon the floor, reached out for Ellen's hand and cradled it beneath her own chin. The younger girl's face shadowed with memory.

"Poor Fergus," she whispered.

"I don't feel sorry for him," Molly said sharply. "A murderer, a black-mailer and heaven knows what else!"

"I didn't mean that I feel really sorry for Fergus himself," Ellen said. "It's just the idea of there being people in the world like Fergus—people who have to live and die so meanly."

"I can't be so impersonal!" Myra declared. "It's you I'm worried about honey. Mother and I want you to be happy. You've earned the right to your share of happiness, and ever since this thing happened you've been like one off he began yourself."

"It's no use—" Ellen began thickly.

Tears filled her eyes. She arose suddenly and walked from the room. Myra and Molly exchanged glances but they did not follow.

Frog Culture Not Proving Successful

AUSTIN, March 30.—Frog farms do not flourish in the southwest, a brief issued by the State Game, Fish and Oyster commission here claimed.

Although attempts at the artificial culture of frogs have been made, such attempts have not proved a commercial success, the brief declared. Many farmers, faced by sagging market prices, and poor credit, have written the department recently for information on commercial frog farming.

"Raising of frogs from the egg to maturity by artificial means has been too expensive, except in some countries where labor is very cheap," the report said. The state commission also pointed out that frogs have a great economic value in addition to their edible quality. Farmers were encouraged to construct artificial lakes or ponds near their truck farms in order that frogs might keep down the insect menace.

"MAD ARTIST" PICKS PAINTS TO FREEDOM

By DAN ROGERS
United Press Staff Correspondent
McALESTER, Okla., March 30.—A "mad artist" depicts Christ and nature scenes in oils behind penitentiary walls rather than accept his freedom from Oklahoma authorities. Charles Matthew Conrad Maas German, has spent 33 of his 77 years in prison. In 1899 he was sentenced to life imprisonment for murder of his wife, Martha. Records show Maas thought he detected poison in his breakfast food. He fired three charges of buckshot through his wife's body.

Tried at El Reno, the court found him guilty.
Early Talent
Many think he is insane. Others say he is a genius for behind prison walls he has developed early talent with brush and canvas. His paintings decorate the penitentiary and state capital.

Years ago interested persons took his case before the clemency board in session at the prison. Maas was called to appear in the interests of a pardon.

"This is my studio," the German replied, without pausing at his canvas. "If they want me, I am here."

Finally prison guards took him by force to the audience.

Sixteen of his paintings, the largest 12 by 18 feet, decorate the prison mess hall. Included are the Resurrection of Christ, mother and family groups, Warren Harding, a copy of Gainsborough's "Blue Boy" Oklahoma Indian groups, and others.

Maas' Christ
The Christ depicted by Maas is square-headed, with heavy jaws and blond, Teutonic hair. His animals and landscapes are considered his best works.

A life term murderer, the old map is a favorite with prison officials and fellow prisoners. The mule barn loft, outside the prison walls, has been made his studio. He goes to the trusty buildings, also outside the walls, for irregular meals. He sleeps on a cot in his studio. The convict artist makes no report to prison officials, does no work except with his brush.

He wears his hair cropped in the style of the Prussians, in whose army he once served. He never was naturalized and war-time prison records list him as an alien enemy.

BUCK RESCUED
MARSHFIELD, Ore., March 30.—John Smith saw a buck deer swimming in Coos Bay—almost exhausted. He hauled the buck into his rowboat after it had sank once and was near drowning. Smith rowed to the wooded shore and released the animal.

50 Per Cent Wheat Damage in Kansas

TOPEKA, Kan., March 30.—Reports of crop damage ranging as high as 50 per cent were received at the state capitol today as wheat growers completed their checks of damage done by windstorms yesterday. Wheat was damaged most in those sections of the state where there has been little moisture. In the districts the dry soil drifted like snow exposing some wheat and burying other fields.

"DORMS" NAMED.
AUSTIN, March 30.—Names of the famous ranches of Texas will be perpetuated in naming men's dormitories at the University of Texas. First of seven such dormitories now is being built. It likely will be named for the famous King Ranch, the headquarters of which is known as Santa Gertrudis, or the XIT ranch in the North Plains. Suggestion for this plan of designation has been made by the Scribblers' club, University organization.

DINNER GIVEN FOR IDEAL CLUB.
The lovely home of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. McClelland on West Seventh street was the scene of a most enjoyable affair Monday evening when they entertained members and guests of the Ideal forty-two club. But the arriving guests were hardly prepared for the pleasant surprise which they found in the form of a sumptuous repast served in two courses. Places were laid for sixteen, and the tables, with their pretty appointments, made an attractive setting. The menu consisted of baked chicken and accessories, cream peas, salad, hot rolls, and iced tea, with a desert course of ice cream and cake. The remainder of the evening was spent in games of forty-two, in which Mr. and Mrs. McClelland won high score. Mrs. C. W. Hanson won low score for women, and C. M.
