ECONOMY HITS RESTORATION OF TAPESTRIES

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Economy is threatening the survival of some of Britain's priceless art treasures. So the Office of Works has ordered the cessation of the repairing and restoration of the tapestries in Hampton Court Palace, ancient home of the orange-girl, Nell Gwynne.

For tapestry work is expensive. A single large piece, 25 feet by 16 feet, has occupied four or five skilled workers two or three years—a bill for wages alone of approximately $7,000. The work already has been in progress for 20 years, except for an interruption 10 years ago. In four more years it would have been completed, and the tapestries safeguarded.

LOBO BANQUET HEARS HOWARD PAYNE PREXY

"Football" declared Dr. Thomas H. Taylor, president of Howard Payne college, is not being improved by its critics, but by its leaders. That, to me, is the assuring fact that arises above all this criticism that we are hearing of the game today.

Appeal to Courage

Dr. Taylor's message was an appeal to courage and the will to win as an antidote for the "defeatism" and discouragement that he professed to find saturating much of American manhood.

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

THE HOPE OF YOUTH: — For thou art my hope, O Lord God; thou art my trust from my youth. — Psalm 71: 5.

BOAST NOT: — Boast not thyself of tomorrow; for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth. — Prov. 27: 1.

THE COLONEL'S PLATFORM.

Col. E. O. Thompson, aggressive mayor of Amarillo who is credited with saving his city hundreds of thousands of dollars in securing for its citizenship lower utility rates and in the reduction of municipal expenses, has entered the race for congressman-at-large for the state of Texas. Texas was awarded three additional congressmen upon the basis of returns from the 1930 census. Failure of the state legislature to pass a redistricting bill makes it necessary to elect the three new representatives in the congress from the state at large.

Over the north plains of Texas Col. Thompson is known as the little man with the colossal nerve. Red-headed, direct, but courteous, he typifies the vibrant virility of west Texas, the force that has conquered its obstacles and built its cities, its institutions, its industries and its character. Beginning as a newsboy when the tallest structure in Amarillo was three stories in height, Col. Thompson started upward with the plains metropolis and shortly after the World war in which he served with merit, having attained the rank of colonel and the distinction of having contributed new tactics in machine-gun warfare while commander of the 90th division's machine gun units, the energetic Colonel came back home to employ in the cause of peace the same clear judgment and energetic force that won promotion in war. Prompt to seize opportunity and vigorous in its realization he early attained eminence in the business world and today is one of the leading hotel men of the state as well as a man of large interests in other directions. Meantime he married May Peterson, noted opera prima donna, but unlike most other husbands of famous women, his is no reflected light from the fame of his wife.

He has announced a platform. If he continues the record that he has made as mayor of Amarillo, as a business man and a soldier, those who support the doughty colonel may be certain that his platform is no collection of idle words. He promises:

"To help those who produce something to earn a living, whether it be wheat, cotton, cattle or oil.

"To assist in working out a better distribution of our farm products, to the end that we may never again have the pitiful condition where farm products are plentiful and cheap, and millions of our people hungry and in want of bare necessities.

"To fight the cruel concentration of the wealth of our nation in New York city where it has been used for wild and reckless gambling and speculation.

"What we need in America is a fair price for what we produce—not gamblers who bet on the want and misery and suffering that comes from depressed prices.

"I will stand unalterably against any further meddling in European affairs, I am opposed to any further reduction or moratorium on foreign debts. We have been the sucker long enough.

"Instead of sending money to Europe we had better do some constructive work at home. Our government should give no aid whatever to the international bankers who have bled our country dry to make fabulous commissions in working off doubtful bonds on a trusting public.

"I would work for a more liberal policy in the issue of currency. The withdrawal of some $20 per capita from circulation by the present treasury department has cost our people untold billions.

"I believe it is time our congress should again begin to look after the interests of the common working people. The rich and powerful people of America have received more than their just due at the hand of congress.

"The prosperity of our country depends upon the well-being and contentment of the great mass of our working people. They do not want charity, but they have the right to expect a chance to work for a decent living.

"If elected I shall bend my efforts to the end of giving relief to this class of our people through a study of corrective legislation to take privilege from the few and restore our democracy."

ALL HONOR TO DR. UDDEN.

Dr. J. A. Udden gave a life of fruitful service to the University of Texas. The university has acquired most of its material wealth as a direct return from his labors. West Texas has seen one great industry built up and another started as the outcome of his labors and his knowledge and his service to the state.

As a geologist of broad training, he found that the university lands had beneath them a wealth of petroleum. He made surveys and examinations definitely locating the vast storehouse of wealth from which over $100,000,000 worth of oil already has been taken.

The character of the man is clearly shown in that. His knowledge of this wealth was in his possession exclusively. The buried treasure was vaster than any single strike of pure gold ever turned up by man. The distinguished geologist went back to Austin and reported his findings to the university and to the citizenship of Texas, rather than taking personal advantages of it. Results of his work are now transforming the university into a modern physical plant of high rank. The university has been given money with which to build toward its ideals into broader service to Texas and greater usefulness to more people.

So Dr. Udden lived and died, content in his labors, comparatively poor from a material point of view. And properly West Texas moves to honor him in naming for him a memorial upon the university campus. We think the university will do credit to itself, as well as honor to him, to join in such a tribute, with or without looking up the precedents.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university philosopher and critic of humanity at large couldn't let Christmas pass without telling the world the causes of the unhappiness he feels at the present muddled condition of education, politics and government at home and abroad.

Dr. Butler long ago began to blame for the lack of "political interest" in the youth of the country. Dr. Butler suggests that the sheer hypocrisy of party politics is conspicuous enough to affront the mind of youth and to give it a definite bent toward distrust and cynicism.

The faults lie higher up. "Theorists" are always mouthing over the lack of "political interest" in the youth of the country. Dr. Butler suggests that the sheer hypocrisy of party politics is conspicuous enough to affront the mind of youth and to give it a definite bent toward distrust and cynicism.

Speaking of the Weather--
by CHARLES TALMAN
of the U.S. Weather Bureau

How far upward does the air extend? That's one thing science is unable to establish definitely.

Although nearly the whole surface of the globe, including both poles, has now been reached by explorers, there are still three terrestrial regions in which a great deal of exploring remains to be done. One of these is the interior of the globe, another the bottom of the ocean, and a third the upper levels of the atmosphere.

The greatest distance any human being has yet been able to put between himself and his native planet is less than 10 miles, and was less than eight miles before Professor Piccard made his remarkable ascent last May.

The atmosphere is, however supposed to extend upward some thousands of miles. Nobody knows just how far. Through the greater part of its vertical extent it contains very little matter.

Air, like all gasses, is highly compressible. The lowest part of the atmosphere, pressed down from above, is relatively dense. With increased altitude the density falls off so rapidly that at a height of three and a half miles the air is only about half as dense as at sea level.

Above about five miles it is too rare for breathing; hence aerial travelers who go higher, must carry a supply of oxygen with them. At the 50-mile level the atmosphere is, according to calculation, less than one 75,000th as dense as at sea level, and at the 300-mile level, about one two-millionth as dense. This is a very good vacuum, though far better than are produced nowadays in certain industrial operations. Even at an altitude of 2000 miles a well-known English authority, Dr. J. H. Jeans, calculates that there are still something like 300,000 molecules of atmosphere gases per cubic centimeter—as compared with 30,000,000,000,000,000,000 in the same volume of air near the earth's surface.

Up to heights of 20 miles or so, the atmosphere has been explored by means of small balloons, carrying no human passenger, but a small set of self-registering instruments. At greater heights it is studied by observations of the aurora ("northern lights"), shooting stars and their trails, various optical phenomena, the transmission of radio signals, and in other ways.

Since the year 1902 it has been known that the atmosphere is divided into at least two layers, or shells, having different characteristics. At the bottom is a layer called the "troposphere," (literally, "turning sphere"), in which the air has upward and downward movements and changes of temperature associated therewith, and which enjoys a monopoly of storms, ordinary clouds, rain, snow and other manifestations that are generally classified as "weather." This layer has an average depth of between six and seven miles. Above it lies a region called the "stratosphere" ("spread-out sphere"), where the winds move only horizontally, and therefore, as the name implies, occur in layers. This region extends to an unknown height.

In the troposphere the temperature of the air decreases rapidly with increase in height; so that, for example, aeronauts always encounter frigid weather a few miles above the earth. This fall in temperature goes on until at the top of the troposphere, the thermometer reads 60 to 70 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit, in middle latitudes, and much lower over the equatorial regions. In the stratosphere there is no such vertical change in temperature—at least as far up as measurements have been made.

Similarly the president of Columbia contends that the failure of the family and the church as factors in education rather than any primary fault in the general educational system of the United States must be viewed as the basic cause of the loose discipline of the new generation. The schools aren't able to compensate wholly for the defects of family training and the vanishing spiritual influences of the church.

Dr. Butler is irritated by the major political parties. He sees them in a discouraging light. He can not readily understand why men of high character, who agree on principles of the greatest public importance, will nevertheless oppose each other at the polls in order to serve an outworn political tradition which calls for service not to the country or even to a party but to the party's name. In such conditions as these he sees little to inspire political interest in youthful minds. And he says again as every one has said at some time or other without effect, that political parties are organized nowadays only to obtain and hold power for those who manage them. — Paris News.

In the Political Arena

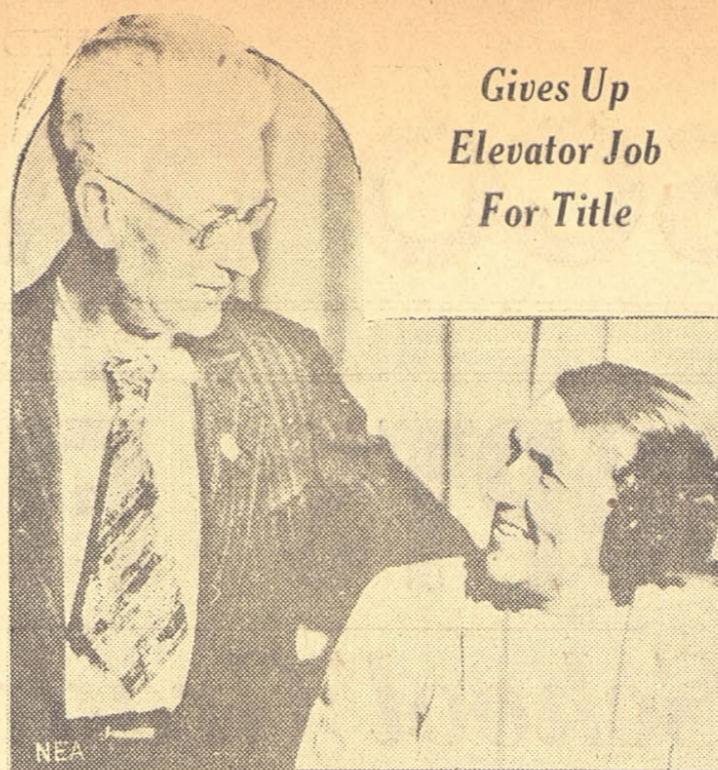

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD

Rep. Wright Patman of Texas is in his glory. He is baiting and bruising Andrew W. Mellon, "the second Alexander Hamilton in American history." As for Speaker Garner's Uncle Andy he appears to be enjoying the performance. As for the Texas iconoclast, he admits that he has no direct evidence but he claims the secretary of the treasury has exerted pressure upon the South American countries by opposing credit extensions to it in the United States. Now the famous financier and captain of industry may be invited to appear before the committee in his own defense. How will it be possible to impeach without evidence?

Mrs. H. H. Sevier national committeewoman for the Texas democrats, has returned from Washington. She predicts the passing of Hoover and the coming of a democratic administration in the fall of this fall; also that any well known and well behaved democrat would put the finishing touches on the G. O. P. and its trainers when the roundup comes. Incidentally, the victory drive for dollars calls for $1,500,000 in cold coin and Texas democrats are expected to contribute $50,000. The big men of the republican and democratic parties are getting ready for the big parade.

Mayor C. M. Chambers of San Antonio is going to plant Garner flags in all the North Texas cities. He has been assured by Maury Hudson of Dallas, a former Smith leader, that the Roosevelt and Taylor organizers will step aside.

Gives Up Elevator Job For Title

Sir Reginald Wolsley and Lady Wolsley are shown here as they decided to forsake life in Waterloo, Ia., where Sir Reginald was an elevator operator, for the title of a baronet.

Reginald in May, 1930, and he fulfilled his mother's dying wish by marrying her nurse, when the nurse came to America. However, he would not return to England, and his wife left him. Now all is forgiven and they are on their way to Devonshire.

Coalman of Colorado are backing a $750,000,000 appropriation to afford direct federal assistance for the unemployed. This bill has received the flat approval of the senate committee. Two democrats and two republican members of the sub-committee gave the measure their sanction and the fifth member, a republican dodged. The measure would authorize an immediate appropriation of $125,000,000 for the present winter and $250,000,000 for the fiscal year beginning next July. Should the senate and the house enact the measure, Pres. Hoover promises to veto it. For what reason? He brands it as a dole measure and anything in the shape of a dole is anathema to the chief magistrate.

Speaking of finances, F. D. Buck of the Taxes Reduction League of the United States appeared before a senate committee and submitted figures alleging that prohibition had cost the United States $24,000,000,000 in 12 years and that the bootleggers are receiving $3,000,000,000 to $4,000,000,000 a year.

Coming nearer home the San Antonio Express peremptorily demands a special session of the legislature for the redistricting of the state in order to prevent an unseemly scramble in the nomination

Alfalfa Bill Murray of Oklahoma is in the Washington spotlight. He appeared before the Anti-Saloon league convention and politely informed the leaders that prohibition is not the best solution of the liquor issue "but better than the saloon." Alfalfa Bill was president of the convention that drafted the constitution of Oklahoma. He stated at that time and he admits that it is his judgment now that prohibition will not prove the wisest legal solution of the control of the liquor traffic; that it is but the beginning of the solution of this vexatious problem.

Rep. Cross of Texas is in the picture. He has introduced a bill to penalize bankers who held foreign securities "that proved worthless." This should appeal to the international bankers as well as the distinguished financiers who have loaned billions to foreigners since the close of the world war.

Bishop James Cannon, Jr., and his very able colleague of the Anti-Saloon League, demand the retirement or self-effacement of Smith and Raskob and Cox and all who think as they think, "now and forever." Crusaders for the repeal and election of three congressmen-at-large. Is not tax reduction the order of the hour and economic expenditures of the taxpayer's money the demand of the day?

CHICAGO, Jan. 22. — Alexander L. Jackson, president of the Provident Hospital and Training School is contributing half of his salary to the hospital staff to prevent wage reductions. While the school is a nationally known negro center of medical education with a $3,000,000 endowment and the teaching staff under the direction of the University of Chicago, the depression has forced curtailment of expenses in line with similar acts by other medical institutions.

THREE KINDS OF LOVE

by KAY CLEAVER STRAHAN

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Ann and Cecily Fenwick have for years supported themselves and their younger sister, Mary-Frances, and their grandparents, known as "Rosalee" and "Grand." Because of this financial responsibility, Ann who is 28, is unable to marry Phil Leroy, young lawyer to whom she has been engaged for eight years. Cecily, 22, loves Barry McKeel, an engineer, but when he proposes she refuses to name their wedding date for the same reason.

Mary-Frances, 15, and still in school, strikes up an acquaintance with Earl De Armont, vaudeville actor, and meets him secretly. He tries to persuade her to become his stage partner.

Ann and Phil quarrel when she hears Lotty King, who works in Phil's office building, address him with endearment. Ann tries to forget Phil by going around with Kenneth Smith, rich and attentive. Cecily is disturbed when she learns Barry is set to be married without telling her about it.

Mary-Frances fails in an examination and promises De Armont she will go away with him. Next morning Cecily sees Barry outside the house in his car and against her grandfather's command rushes out to meet him.

Barry came to meet her, but this morning he did not ask whether she looked pretty, and that was fortunate, because he looked frightful. He looked white, and unpressed, and unshaven, and tired, and cross. He did not take her hands. He hung his own at his sides. His eyes were pounds too heavy to lift, and they pulled his shoulders down and forward.

He said, "I've been driving all night trying to get away from you." She said, "Grand is coming. He'll make a scene. Let's go—anywhere."

As she stepped into the car one of the mules dropped off. Barry stooped to pick it up, and she said, "Hurry."

What made Grand so hopping mad was that he could not recall a single speech of Lear's. To have been a lover, nay, more than a mere lover, a student, a disciple of the Immortal Bard's for a lifetime, and then in a crisis to have it all come to naught, was hard, very, very hard. True, the blow, blow, thou winter wind, was ready to hand; but in his opinion the Heigh-ho section, directly counter to his own philosophy, all but ruined the song. Nor had he been able, ever, to give his entire approval to Rosalie. So he had to live until Dr. Elm could come from across the river.

Mary-Frances, two big frightened eyes beside the telephone, whimpered as Ann hung up the receiver. "Ann, did Grand say she could never darken his door again? Did he, Ann?"

"Silly!" said Ann. "Of course not. Run on and see what you can do about breakfast. That's sister's baby. Everything will be all right."

Young Dr. Selberg and his bedside manner arrived together. After a dignified and deliberate examination he reluctantly gave out the news that, though Mr. Fenwick was suffering from shock, he seemed to have sustained no fractures, abrasions, contusions, or lacerations. It was so formidable a list that the negative did not help much. Rosalie continued rocking and weeping, and Mary-Frances, poking about the kitchen after eavesdropping at Grand's door, asked in a choked voice, when Ann came, "Will he die?" And, reassured, "Will Cissy ever dare come home again?"

"Of course, dear. Cissy didn't mean to hurt him. She's not to blame. She wouldn't have hurt him for the world—and he isn't hurt a bit. Except his feelings. She'll be home before long and tell him she didn't mean to, and that she's sorry, and everything will be all right. Don't worry any more about it. Your history examination is today, isn't it?"

"History..." said Mary-Frances vaguely. Not since yesterday afternoon had she considered any subject other than that which she and Earl were going to make together. Oration.

For the first time that morning Ann thought, "Cissy shouldn't have." To Mary-Frances she said, "Honey, all families have little fuses sometimes, and the only thing to do is forget all about them. Cissy will come home and be sorry, and by this time tomorrow everything will be as it has always been. Run along, now, if you've eaten your breakfast, and look over your notebook. Your history examination is a thousand times more important than this little affair."

"Would it be all right, then," asked Mary-Frances, "for me to go to Ermintrude's for dinner this evening and stay all night?"

"Surely, dear. That will be fine. And you and Ermintrude can study together for your English examination tomorrow."

Mrs. Hill would see to it that they studied, during examination week. If Cissy shouldn't come home until afternoon, and if there should be another scene—perhaps at dinner—Mary-Frances would know nothing about it.

Mary-Frances hesitated, hung around, "I guess I'll kiss you good-by, Ann, angel." "Sister's baby," said Ann, and hugged her. "Don't you worry any more now, will you, precious?"

"No," said Mary-Frances, and snuggled. "I love you, Ann. I love you and Cissy and Grand and Rosalee. I love you all, Ann."

"Of course," said Ann, trying to make it light and matter-of-fact at the same time. "Everybody loves everybody around here. Run along now, dear, and get to your studying."

Mary-Frances went as far as the door. "You'll remember that, won't you, Ann, angel? If anything should happen, or anything, I mean. And you'll love me, too?" Ann repressed a sigh, refused to allow herself to shake her head. "Of course, Mary-Frances. But don't be silly. What could happen?"

"Like," said Mary-Frances, "well—like if I should flunk in my exams or anything."

"You aren't going to flunk." She came back to Ann. "I'll kiss you good-by again, I guess. Will you and Cissy love me if I flunk?"

"Poker," Ann reminded him, is a man's game."

"Women can play," he grinned, "but most of 'em aren't so hot at it. They overbet their hands. They cheer when they get a good hand and holler when they get a bum one. They can't bluff—four aces beats a full house. They'll discard a pair and draw to a flush every time, and they'll bet a four flush as high as a good one. They throw away their operators. They hate to ante. That's the trouble with you, Ann. You won't ante. You have to get in the game before you can draw cards. You won't get in the game. You won't play. Now, listen, Ann..."

Ann did not listen, very attentively. She seldom listened to Kenny. She merely allowed him to rattle along and along, and so found a panacea for loneliness.

It was after three o'clock. She was beginning to worry seriously about Cecily. All day she had been expecting a telephone call from her, but none had come. Surely the child wouldn't go home and dress without calling her. Surely the child wouldn't stay out all day in her bathrobe and slippers. Surely the child—

"That's all I want, Ann. I wouldn't ask for a thing on earth but to be good to you and make you happy. I want to buy things for you—houses and cars and diamonds and things. I want to take you places and watch my wife knock 'em dead. I want to see you wearing black velvet and diamonds and white satin and pearls."

Efforts were made, but failed, in the last legislative sessions, to put a minimum of two cents per barrel on oil, recognizing a minimum of $1 per barrel value, if not price on oil. Then when the price was above $1, the state would get its tax on the greater value, but would be protected against losses when the prices range down to the 10-cent level of last July and August when it took five barrels of oil to pay the state one cent of taxes.

The state ought also to put a minimum of 4-10 of a cent per thousand feet on gas, recognizing the average 20 cent price at the well that exists over the nation. This 4.10 of a cent would be immaterial in the $1.50 per thousand-foot final price paid by the domestic users of the gas.

However unpopular with the dealers and merchants, and with the consumers, there is going to be a strenuous effort made at the next session of the legislature to extend the so-called luxury tax on cigars to cosmetics, luxury and semi-luxury commodities, including articles such as wearing apparel selling above fixed levels. A 50-cent necktie, as an example, might be exempt from taxes, but where a person insisted on buying a $2.50 tie, he would be required as part of that price to pay a sales tax of 25 or 50 cents.

It is said by people in public office, who have discussed taxes between debates on political races, that the trend will be very strong toward these indirect taxes on the theory that they will be comparatively painless. "The man who will complain if 25 cents tax is added on it," an official commented.

TEXAS TOPICS

AUSTIN, Jan. 22.—One section of the state's revenues has profited hugely by the decline in prices. It is precisely the factor that would have suffered most had the tax levy involved been upon the same basis as others.

Instead of gasoline tax revenues falling off as a result of strenuous conditions, they actually were more than $1,000,000 greater in 1931, than anticipated.

The reason was that gasoline prices dropped so low that people could afford to add and did use more gasoline than usual.

Highway Commissioner C. C. Johnson is authority for the statement that gasoline revenues were more than a million dollars above the estimates.

Now if the gasoline tax had been on the same basis as oil and gas production taxes, the highway department and the schools would have suffered seriously. Those are on a valuation basis, rather than a quantity basis.

When gasoline dropped to 11 cents generally, and nine and 10 cents in some places, the highway fund still got three cents out of each gallon, and the schools one cent. That was as much as they got out of 22-cent gasoline. But the low prices encouraged greater use of gasoline.

The state gets two per cent production tax on oil. At the present 72-cent barrel price, that means 1.44 cents per barrel. The state gets two per cent on natural gas. At a basis of 2 1/2 cents per 1000 cubic feet the state gets a 20th of a cent.

Efforts were made, but failed, in the last legislative sessions, to put a minimum of two cents per barrel on oil, recognizing a minimum of $1 per barrel value, if not price on oil. NEW DISCOVERIES CONFIRM VIRTUES OF BRAN IN DIET

Supplies "Bulk" and Vitamin B for Constipation; Also Iron for Blood

For ten years, now, millions have found Kellogg's ALL-BRAN a safe, pleasant way to overcome common constipation—with the headaches, loss of appetite and energy that so often result from this condition.

Recent laboratory tests show that ALL-BRAN supplies "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and Vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract. In addition, ALL-BRAN contains twice as much blood-building iron, by weight, as beef liver.

This "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like the "bulk" in lettuce. Inside the body, it absorbs moisture and forms a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes.

Special cooking processes make ALL-BRAN finer, softer, more palatable. It is not habit-forming.

Think how much better it is to enjoy this delicious cereal than to take endless pills and drugs, which often lead to harmful habits.

Two tablespoonfuls daily—in serious cases with every meal—are usually sufficient. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal with milk or cream, or use in cooking. Appetizing recipes on the red-and-green package. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By EDSON R. WAITE
Shawnee, Oklahoma.

That publicity is as necessary in city building as it is in any individual business.

The advantages of a city are its opportunities, and every effort should be made through the printed page to bring these opportunities to the attention of the largest number of people.

No city can expect to get very far on the road of progress as long as a majority of its citizens refuse to cooperate with its civic organizations.

The development of many cities will be retarded just as long as there is a division among its citizens on the things that are so necessary for its development.

A city will grow to the fullness of its opportunities only when every citizen cooperates in those efforts that are vital for the advancement of the city.

You should make your city known as a city of hospitality. Every citizen should be a booster. With a common purpose and united effort to make a city bigger, brighter and busier, there is no limit to its growth.

SOCIETY MAN FACES TRIAL FOR KILLING OF SISTER'S BETRAYER

By PAUL COMLY FRENCH
United Press Staff Correspondent
NORRISTOWN, Pa., Jan. 22. — Whether a father has the right to bare his daughter's life to save his son from the electric chair, will figure prominently in the murder trial of Edward H. B. Allen, 24-year-old society surfer.

The young social registerite is charged with the slaying of Francis A. Donaldson, 3rd, who, the boy's father, Horace Allen, charges, betrayed his 19-year-old debutante sister, Rose.

Allen, now held in the Montgomery County jail on a charge of first degree murder, probably will be taken before the grand jury, January 25.

District Attorney Stewart Nase said if Allen is indicted he probably will be placed on trial early in February.

Apartment Shooting

The fatal shooting in the Allen's fashionable Green Hill Farms apartment on November 9 climaxed a series of quarrels over Donaldson's attention to the Allen girl.

The Allen's have been prominent in Philadelphia society for many years, while the Donaldsons are comparatively newcomers to the Social Register, being listed during the past five years. With the publication of the 1932 edition of Philadelphia's Blue Book, however, the Allens were dropped while the Donaldsons still were listed.

As Lower Merion Township authorities reconstruct the shooting in the apartment, Donaldson had gone to discuss his attention to Rose with her father.

An argument followed and Edward was knocked down by Donaldson. He left the apartment police said, drove five miles to a friend's home in Devon and obtained his rifle. Returning to the apartment, detective officials said, he found Donaldson and Albert G. Lucas, a friend, still arguing with his father.

Struck in Chest.

Without a word he fired, the shot striking Donaldson in the chest, police charge.

Horace Allen, the once wealthy wool importer, who claimed he was living in the fashionable apartment as the guest of the manager, told police a different story.

"Before Mrs. Allen's death last April," he said, "she asked me to protect Rose from Donaldson. We feared him; feared his influence over Rose.

"After my wife's death my business failed and we were forced to leave our home in Haverford and move here as guests of the manager. Then one night Rose said that she was spending the weekend with friends at the shore.

"Later she was to join her other brother, William, in Virginia. When she failed to arrive, he became worried and called me. I phoned the friends where she expected to stop, but they said she had left the preceding morning.

Knocked Out Teeth

"Later that night she reached my son's home in Virginia in company with Donaldson and when William demanded where they had been, Donaldson struck him and knocked out two teeth.

"When Rose returned home I questioned her and she admitted that Donaldson had betrayed her in a hotel in Scranton, Pa. I talked with Donaldson and agreed that it would be best to let him see her once in a while to stop any possible scandal.

"Then one night several months ago I was aroused at 2 a. m. I saw a light in her room and went to see why she was so late, when both she and Donaldson had promised to be home by midnight.

"I found them sitting on the bed, and when I objected, Donaldson handed me roughly.

"On November 9, Rose left the apartment shortly before dinner and said she would dine with friends.

Apartment Fight

"I thought nothing of it until about 8:30 when Donaldson and young Lucas forced their way into the apartment. They were both abusive, swearing and cursing. Finally Edward was knocked down. He got up and left the apartment.

"I don't recall how long it was until Lucas and Donaldson started to leave.

"As they reached the foyer, I heard a shot, then Edward came in to the apartment, laid a gun on the chair and sat down on theavenport.

"Within a few minutes the police came and arrested him.

"I know that he was worried over Donaldson's betrayal of Rose because he had always idolized her and tried to protect her.

Former State Senator Fletcher W. Stites, who will actively handle the defense case, is believed to be planning a defense on the basis that Donaldson forced his way into the apartment and failed to leave when requested and on emotional insanity.

Attorney Old Friend

John R. K. Scott, best known Philadelphia criminal attorney, and an old friend of the Allen family, is in charge of the defense. Stites, however, as a resident of Montgomery county will be in charge during the trial.

Shortly after the slaying, Rose said that she would never forgive her brother or father for her sweetheart's death.

Later she visited Edward in the Montgomery county jail with her father, but refused to pose with him for pictures despite his willingness. For several weeks after the murder, Rose and her father lived with Henry G. Pierce, wealthy friends in Haverford, but recently took a small apartment in Merion.

Lobo Banquet---

The spirit of winning fairly, of giving the best that is in us, even to the death, is the sort of character that will make a great nation," he inculcates the ideals of true sportsmanship and high character and the doctrine of teamwork, he pointed out. The democratic party could learn a lesson from football he declared, referring to the democratic donkey as an animal with long ears who brays at the republicans with his front end and with its rear kicks at other members of the democratic party.

"I used to have serious doubts of intensive football," he said, "but all doubts vanished in 1917. When I saw young men, trained on the football fields, the first to report to Leon Springs, the first to volunteer for service in France I was convinced that football was doing its part in training American youths in patriotism." He pointed out its influence in the training of men to win in other fields, in the various professions, in the cause of what is right and in the field of helpful effort their lives might lead them.

Teacher of Democracy

He defended the game as a teacher of the principles of the democracy of men, the principle that the man beneath the coat and not the coat is what counts. Concluding, he declared that it fitted men to play the game of life in tune with the principle that "For when the one Great Scorer comes to write against your name, He writes, not that you won or lost but how you played the game."

F. D. Wright was roa-master for the banquet. Members of the Lobo band, directed by G. W. Collum, furnished music during the meal. Another feature of the program that "went over big" were vocal solos by Frank Reynolds, Cisco high school youth, who was accompanied by Mr. Collum at the piano. Mr. Reynolds was called back for two encores.

The Lobos were welcomed by J. A. Bearman with Coach R. L. Jefferies responding.

Supt. R. N. Cluck, called on for a few remarks, asserted that he did not think that athletics are being stressed too much, but that the other phases of school activity are not being stressed enough. "We must place emphasis upon the whole so as to bring about a well-balanced program," he declared, pointing out the value of athletics in keeping large numbers of boys in school who would otherwise refuse or neglect an education. The necessity of adhering to the fundamental principles upon which the interscholastic league is operated was emphasized by the superintendent.

The final number on the program was announcement of 1931 letterman by Coach R. L. Jefferies who paid tribute to the cooperation and work of Asst. Coach Leonard Hill, and the election of a captain of the team for 1932.

The roof garden had been decorated for the occasion by the girls pep squad.

Following the banquet the Citizens Athletic association met in a session to elect J. A. Bearman chairman unanimously. F. D. McMahon, who has been elected at a previous meeting, had declined serve because of business duties that kept him out of town so much of his time.

School Offering Classes for Adults

Night or afternoon classes for adults will be offered by the Cisco high school if there is a sufficient demand, Supt. R. N. Cluck said today. The time and character of the classes will be determined by the response that is received, he said.

His announcement:

"Because of the frequent requests for commercial or home economics subjects by people in town, the Cisco high school will offer courses in these subjects the next semester. "A small fee will be charged. If you are interested see or call me sometime this week so that the classes may start work next week with the others.

"We want you to feel that the school is yours; it is yours and we want to serve you.

"As to what will be offered and the amount of fee, these decisions will depend upon the demand.

"We are interested in adult education and feel that this year more than ever we should serve our community. We hope many will take advantage of these courses."

CROSSING TOLL HIGH

DETROIT, Jan. 22.—More than 25 per cent of the child traffic fatalities in Detroit during 1931 came as the result of crossing the street, according to an analysis of the Safety and Traffic Committee of the Automobile Club of Michigan. The next highest cause was playing in the streets, the analysis showed.

U. S. AUTOS IN ISLANDS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Ninety-five per cent of the automobiles sold in the Canary Islands are made in the United States, according to surveys conducted by the Department of Commerce. During the third quarter of 1931, 180 automobiles were placed in operation in the Canary Islands.

GETS WOOD SUPPLY

JAFFREY, N. H., Jan. 22.—For the 14th successive year, parishioners of the Rev. David C. Torrey, pastor of the First Congregational church, have furnished him and his family a winter's supply of fuel. This year's supply, 12 cords of wood, was chopped on a lot donated by Mrs. Frederick W. Greene.

WHY YOU NEED INSURANCE

It takes years to build up a savings account—only a few seconds to lose it in an automobile wreck with no insurance. Breakage of plate glass, crossed wires, leaking gasoline, back firing, cause automobile fires. Thieves and windstorms, catch you without insurance—it's your loss then.

Insurance is inexpensive and protects you from damage suits.
