First Fall Rodeo Offered Saturday By Cisco Merchants

FREE TICKETS FOR FARMERS ARE PROVIDED

The first of a series of three rodeos will be offered to the people of this section next Saturday. The entertainment will take place at Chesley ball park and the merchants of Cisco are providing free tickets to every visitor who applies for the tickets at the stores. P. L. Ulom, general chairman, said today that plans for the rodeo have practically matured. Some minor details are yet to be worked out, he said, but these will be shaped up by Friday evening. The rodeo proper will begin at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Two hours of entertainment will be provided, including bronc riding, calf roping, goat roping and variety of other features. Prominent on the program is a series of three horse races—a kid's pony race, a cow pony race and a free-for-all race.

EXTRA COPIES. Extra copies of today's special Rodeo edition of the Daily News and the American and Roundup are being distributed in the Cisco trade territory. In addition every house in Cisco will receive a copy of the edition.

The rodeo is being staged under direction of Sam Maynard who has secured the stock and will manage the program. At the park a saddling chute has already been erected, a goat pen is being put in place today and the grounds prepared.

Tickets have already been distributed to the merchants. The business men are paying for these tickets for the purpose of giving them to their friends from the rural communities about Cisco. During the week circulars advertising the rodeo have been distributed while groups of Ciscoans have visited community fairs in this part of the county to invite the people here for the Saturday entertainment. The business men are urged to make the most of the day by dressing up their stores and making the business district in general as attractive as possible. Music will be provided at the grounds by G. W. Collum and his Lobo band, it was announced.

SPECIAL RATES ARE OFFERED AT DUDE RANCH

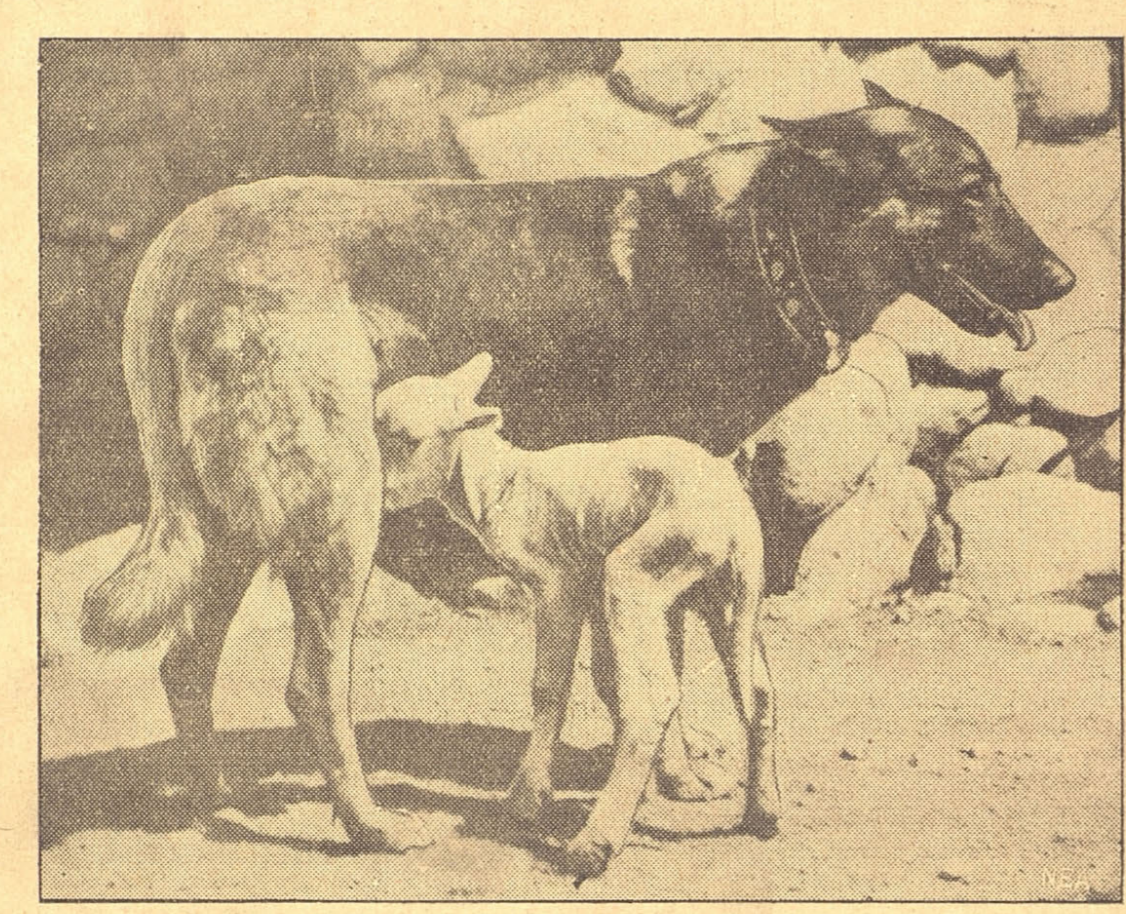

Beginning today and extending through September 20, a special party rate for horseback riding is being offered at the S-Bar Dude ranch, five miles north of Cisco out the Breckenridge highway, it was announced by Manager Clarence Keen. During that period, parties of four or more may ride at half price, or 25 cents an hour each, said Mr. Keen. This is being done in order to interest young people in the sport, said Mr. Keen, in issuing a special invitation to these to take advantage of the offer. Since the ranch was opened it has met with a gratifying response. The horses are in excellent condition and the trails unusually beautiful after the rains, he said. Those desiring to take advantage of this offer may go to the ranch or call 765 or 161 here or 566 at Eastland.

FRENCH SAY HOSPITALITY CAUSED FLOP

By RALPH HEINZEN
United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS, Sept. 15.—Boasting only few Olympic games laurels, members of the French team were lack in their routine lives today reflecting upon the lament of French sporting writers that the expedition to Los Angeles was a terrible waste of money.

The athletes did not try to blame their poor showing on the California climate, American food or unfair judges, but rather on California hospitality. "The teams' handlers said that the athletes acted like school children on holiday, but the best they could do against vastly improved athletes of all races.

There was solemn tribute to America's outstanding supremacy, but the French athletes feel that Japan will challenge America in the next games. There was nothing but praise for California, its blue skies and sunshine.

The French sports writers, who accompanied the team, deplored the organization of the games and were bitter in protesting the lack of interest among the French athletes, once they began to be lionized by French admirers in California.

"The American public is Franco-phile but the California press never said a good word about any French athletes," wrote Jacques Goddet, sports writer. "The sports writers in Los Angeles announced the first Olympic victories, two Frenchmen, Duverger and Hostin in the weight lifting events with the phrase: 'A dancing professor and a barcarol crooner win first Olympic victories.'"

HURON, S. D., Sept. 15.—Sec'y of War Patrick J. Hurley launched President Hoover's campaign for reelection today by picturing his chief as the pilot who brought the nation through one of our worst economic storms and has charted the way to recovery.

"The only workable plan to break the depression was made by President Hoover," he said. "Hundreds of ill-advised remedies have been offered the people. Most of these have in them elements that would have destroyed the economic system."

FEDERAL AID FOR THE NEEDY ASKED.

Gov. Ross S. Sterling will ask for a loan of $3,000,000 unemployment relief fund from the federal relief laws enacted by congress. Dallas needs $819,000; Tarrant asks for $625,000; Wichita $75,000. Blanks were furnished all county judges by State Labor Commr. Gragg. Preparedness is the thing. Winter is almost here. Those who are hungry through no fault of their own should be fed and housed until there are jobs, part time or all time, for all men and women who are not only able, but willing to toil for a livelihood. It is this to be a dole or borrowed aid and wherein is there a difference. There is one thing certain, an unemployed person who receives aid under the skies of Texas will not be disfranchised by courts or relief distribution agencies.

GROWERS OF THINGS IN REVOLT.

Growers of things, meaning the farmers of nine great farming states of the Northwest, the West and the Midwest, are in open revolt against conditions and prices as they exist today. Nine governors of these agricultural commonwealths held a conference in an Iowa city. They heard the demands of the farmers who are conducting widespread strikes. They flatly turned down a proposal advanced by the strikers that "the federal government withhold farming produce from the markets of the world until favorable prices can be obtained." Then the governors made a counter proposal. They recommended a plan, or project, that should ultimately provide for control of production of food products in the agricultural states. They would have none of the proposal of the Farmers Association for State Enforcement of an embargo on farm products until prices reach equitable levels.

Now the leaders of this remarkable movement of farmers predict picketing will be resumed on Sept. 20 on a more intense scale, and that it will spread like wildfire through every town and city in the Midwest. Of course, the nine governors of these nine agricultural states are politicians. For immediate aid to farmers the conference of chief executives proposed to the president and congress a tariff revision, currency expansion and financial aid through a moratorium on all loans made to farmers by governmental agencies.

In the year 1896 Bryan threatened to carry the West against McKinley. Wheat was 50 cents a bushel when the campaigning began. A week before the November election, the wheat price advanced to a dollar a bushel. What happened is ancient history. McKinley was elected. Bryan was buried politically. It is a matter of history that in the campaign of 1896 republican politicians and republican newspaper writers made the alarming discovery that the red flag of the Commune was in evidence everywhere in America and the reds were in violent opposition to the republican party and standard bearers.

Well, history repeats itself. Now the republican standard bearers and their newspaper propagandists have discovered ered that the reds are found everywhere in the United States; that they have invaded the camps of American Legionnaires and are threatening the stability of the government founded by George Washington and his rifle bearers.

Bunk is the word. Provide jobs for the jobless who are willing to work. Give all the people a square deal. Exterminate special privileges for the few. Provide equal and exact justice for all in the eye of the law. There are more red writers in America, writers for pay than in any land under the shining sun. They appear every four years. They are found close to the headquarters of powerful interests—or powerful politicians.

A RUSH TO COLLEGE IS PREDICTED.

Edward M. Craig of Chicago is a genius. In addition, he is a very imaginative person. He holds down the job of secretary of the Chicago Building association. After reading the stars, he predicts that an American crop of babies this year will stimulate the building industry. "As a measure of economy," he said, "many young couples are living in furnished rooms, but before long, especially when the baby crop is harvested, there is going to be a rush to cottages and apartments and this means building." Secy. Craig thus contributed to "The Cheerful Little Earful" column of the daily newspaper.

be held at the Chesley baseball park and the man who is in charge has gotten together a string of animals that promise to give the crowds a real thrill.

Cisco's rural neighbors are invited to be the guests of Cisco business men for the day. These business men have paid for tickets which they will give free of charge and without any obligation or contingency to farmers who come to the steeves and ask for them.

Cisco folk can help very materially in making this entertainment a big success. Merchants have only a limited supply of the tickets and if they give them to home people they will not have sufficient to take care of visitors. Admission costs are nominal.

Dr. J. Stuart Pearce, who pastored the First Presbyterian church, approached me today in Henry Drumwright's John H. Garner's store. He claimed me: "I want you to put in scarecrows this wide"—spreading his arms. Then he paused. "I know he said succinctly, 'you don't mind lying. I've read Spectacles too often.'" He paused and gave me the corner of his eye as solemn as the feathered effigy of wisdom.

"I want you to tell the people that I am going to preach a GOOD sermon Sunday."

I admit Dr. Pearce's charge. In a good cause I stoop occasionally to prevarication.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Court room procedure holds for me an invincible fascination. The most insignificant case produces for the spectator, interested in human nature, situations and incidents that are more entertaining than the sirs of the movie scenario and the adventure yarn. It is said that one can learn more of human nature in a newspaper office or in a bank than anywhere in the world, but with authority to speak for at least one of these symposia of experience, I contend that the court room is a laboratory offering far more profitable explorations.

Several times in this column I have offered amusing incidents arising out of jurisprudence. I regret my talents are not equal to the justice to which these incidents are entitled. But fortunately the readers who are kind to my efforts have the lively imagination to supply whatever lack my faulty technique suffers and I am emboldened today to venture further and trespass upon the sensibilities of my good friend, Judge J. D. Barker.

The Judge upon one occasion, I am informed, invited me to come forth out of a Ferguson crowd. The joke was on the Judge in that event, because who ever heard of Specs being caught in a Ferguson crowd? I hope I know on which side my bread is buttered. Particularly, I claim to know on which side it is buttered whenever the Judge is on the program. If I am to be skinned, I prefer to be skinned in private, where I may lick my wounds in solitude and salve them with my unmanly sympathy. The Judge is noted for a certain vitriol of tongue and a trenchancy of wit. His sarcasm has a biting quality that is mighty effective sometimes in breaking down the smug defense of a calm-witted witness. But out of the memoirs of his parvenu days before the bar comes account of one incident, the effect of which the Judge has not yet surmised. As is human the Judge prefers that this particular anecdote be forgotten. He himself has endeavored to destroy it, but in spite of every human agency, nature has a mischievous way of preserving good things in a liquor of tradition. I say "good things" for even pickles are good when not too indiscriminately served.

Now to the yarn.

Judge Barker, fresh from academic halls, was prosecuting a damage case for a client who claimed to have suffered concussion of the brain. The case was seeping along fairly profitably for the plaintiff when the defense called in a physician who qualified as a brain expert.

His testimony was damaging in the extreme and the Judge, by adroit interrogation, sought to throw a shade over the qualifications of the medico.

"You are entirely familiar with the symptoms of concussion of the brain?" demanded he sharply.

"I am," responded the unperturbed witness.

"Then," continued Judge Barker, "suppose my client here and myself were to bang our heads together, should we get concussion of the brain?"

"Your client might," said the witness drily.

For fear you folk might have not noticed it, I want to remind you that we are to have a rodeo here Saturday. This particular rodeo will

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
ASA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—Trying to figure out at this time of year which presidential candidate is going to win just which electoral votes is a rather silly performance, but what of it?

There is even some perfectly good evidence that it is a relatively silly business almost any old time. One recalls that in the last week or so of the 1928 campaign some of the most expert and experienced Democratic politicians were talking very seriously about (not merely suggesting) the possibility of carrying for Al Smith such Republican states as Iowa and Pennsylvania.

And wasn't it Dr. Hubert Work himself, chairman of the Republican national committee, who publicly conceded the loss of Texas and other southern states which Hoover subsequently won?

The "Surge of Hope"

THE party which is going to lose the election almost invariably experiences a surge of hope in the last two or three weeks before election. Possibly you remember the big "swing to Cox" just before the terrific Republican landslide of 1920.

Even after the votes are counted the realities are not always plain to the defeated faction. As astute a politician as he is—or was—Al Smith has been reminding us since 1928 that a few hundred thousand votes, "properly distributed," would have changed his defeat into victory.

He did not appear to remember or realize that the same had been or might have been said by most other defeated Democratic standard-bearers of the past and that two or three of them had lost out on the electoral count even after winning popular vote pluralities.

What with these evidences of the fallibility of politicians and the fact their predictions are never likely to be conscious underestimates, one is at least justified in asserting that state-by-state prognostications and the study of them at this stage of the campaign is merely a mild form of amusement.

Here's the Way to Do It

THE more cagey political observers, consequently, confine themselves to stating certain very obvious facts and reporting the estimates others in or on the sidelines of the political business who are willing to compute. That's one way to keep readers from arguing with you now or giving you the razzberry later on.

Unfortunately, your correspondent cannot at this time report any obvious facts that have only recently become obvious and which may be described as brand new. The old ones, which still persist, are chiefly:

There are more states generally regarded as "doubtful" than in any recent campaign. The Democrats have opened their campaign with more assurance than usual and the Republicans with less, although the Democrats are not as cockily confident as they were several months ago and the Republicans are not as depressed.

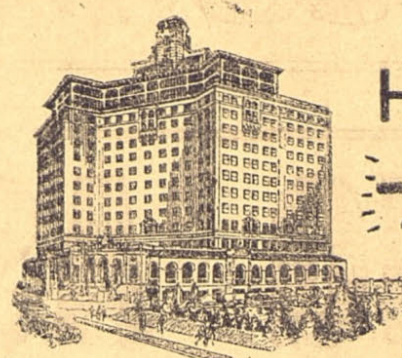

Much depends, as you have doubtless heard until you wish people would stop bothering to mention it, on the extent, if any, to which business improves. The Democrats are rather certain of carrying the 113 electoral votes of the solid south and Hoover undoubtedly will carry such recognized Republican states as Pennsylvania, Maine, Vermont, Michigan, Wyoming and Delaware.

Majority in Doubt

A MAJORITY of electoral votes, although some may now seem more likely to go one way than the other, can be regarded as in doubt until more evidence is available.

How great the doubt sometimes becomes among the master minds is indicated by the instance when, after Democratic Manager Jim Farley had publicly conceded Hoover's home state of California to the Republicans, Candidate Roosevelt allowed that it was real fighting ground and that he was going out there with the intent of putting it in the bag.

That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes. "It's toasted" That package of mild Luckies "If a man write a better book, preach a better sermon, or make a better mouse-trap than his neighbor, let him build his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten path to his door."—RALPH WALDO EMERSON. Does not this explain the world-wide acceptance and approval of Lucky Strike?

Keeping Up With The Boy Scouts

To College

Escout J. B. King of troop 101 in Cisco has entered Texas university. Scotts Lester Clark and Bill Allison of troop 18 in Breckenridge have entered Southwestern. Scout Lloyd Smith of troop 15 in Lampasas has entered Howard Payne.

Wins Cup

Troop 23 of Stephenville went over to Cisco Labor day and won a beautiful living cup by carrying off first place in a swimming meet at Lake Cisco. Hurrah for troop 23.

Receives Charter

Troop 11 of Farks received their charter this week with the following commission: J. A. Lee, scoutmaster; T. M. James, chairman; H. H. Brennan and C. D. Osburn troop committeemen. Troop 11 is a new troop and we wish them every success in scouting.

Two Eagles

Scouts Billie Wright Rankin of troop 5 and Ned Snyder of troop 7 both of Brownwood, received their eagles badges at a court of honor held recently under the chairmanship of Rev. Wm. H. Foster, pastor of the First Presbyterian church. Mr. Palmer of St. Louis, western district manager of the American Red Cross visited the court of honor and gave a talk to the scouts.

To Hold Meeting

The regular monthly scoutmasters pow-wow will be held at scout headquarters September 19th with Scoutmaster O. E. Winebrinner, chairman in charge. Following is the program to be presented: new games, bead work, plaster casting, the "How" of a troop barbecue and a supper.

Troop Reports

Troops 1 and 3 of Brownwood had a joint barbecue out at Lakewood last Friday night. All reported an enjoyable time. The scribe does not know just who furnished the goat.

Troop 2 held their regular troop meeting out at their troop cabin on the Lucas farm putting on an Indian fire building ceremony. Each boy bringing a part of a delicious stew which was served to the entire troop. Watermelons were served for topping. G. N. Quirl, scout executive was present and gave the boys humorous talks.

Troop 3 under the direction of Junior Assistant Scoutmaster Herman Britt in the absence of O. E. Winebrinner, reported a delightful meeting and through the assistance of the patrol leaders and their assistants an old fashioned pie supper was held. A good game played was the "Pirates Treasure."

Indian Dance

The scribe has an announcement to make to the effect that troop 115 of Rising Star will stage an Indian dance at their community fair Friday night of this week. The costumes worn will be like those used by the Indians in western New Mexico.

PARIS STYLES

By MARY KNIGHT
United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS, Sept. 15. — The "Transition Period" as a lot of people are calling the present, means little, fashionably speaking, to Lucien Lelong. While a number of French couturiers have designed their winter clothes with an idea of bridging the distance from some point in the past to another in the future Lelong continues the even tenor of his way doing nothing new and seeing to it that each item in his collection is definitely applicable and appropriate for today's need.

The question that is burning most fashion designers into a white heat — namely where to put the waistline — doesn't bother Lelong in the least. He puts it wherever it looks natural or logical and as the curves of the body make it fit most comfortably. Although circular in general effect skirts from this house show tracings of intricate workmanship. Hips are smoothly fitted and bodices carrying no extra material other than that needed to outline a clear-cut silhouette. Perhaps the chief attraction here is the irregular line given to the evening decoletages.

Tennessee Starts Phone Rate War

MEMPHIS, Sept. 15. — A spectacular concerted drive is in the offing among Tennessee cities to hammer down telephone rates.

Already two cities — Chattanooga and Knoxville — have taken steps in what is expected to be a state-wide movement to attempt to gain lower telephone rates from the Southern Bell Telephone company. Mayor Watkins Overton, of Memphis, has expressed himself in favor of such a state-wide move and Memphis is expected to join the drive. Nashville also is expected to favor a fight for lower rates, and Jackson, Tenn., also may join.

The first petition to be filed with the state railroad and public utilities commission at Nashville came from a group of citizens of Chattanooga, who have retained Fred Williams as their attorney. The city of Chattanooga also may take official action.

The Chattanooga petition alleges the telephone company made 13 per cent profit in 1931 and the state commissioner is asked to reduce rates so that earnings will not exceed 7 per cent.

Mayor John T. O'Conner, of Knoxville, heads a committee of three which is to file a petition with the utilities commission to demand lower telephone rates for Knoxville.

"The telephone companies and other utilities are the only groups failing to recognize the depression," Mayor O'Conner criticized.

CAFE OWNER MODEL

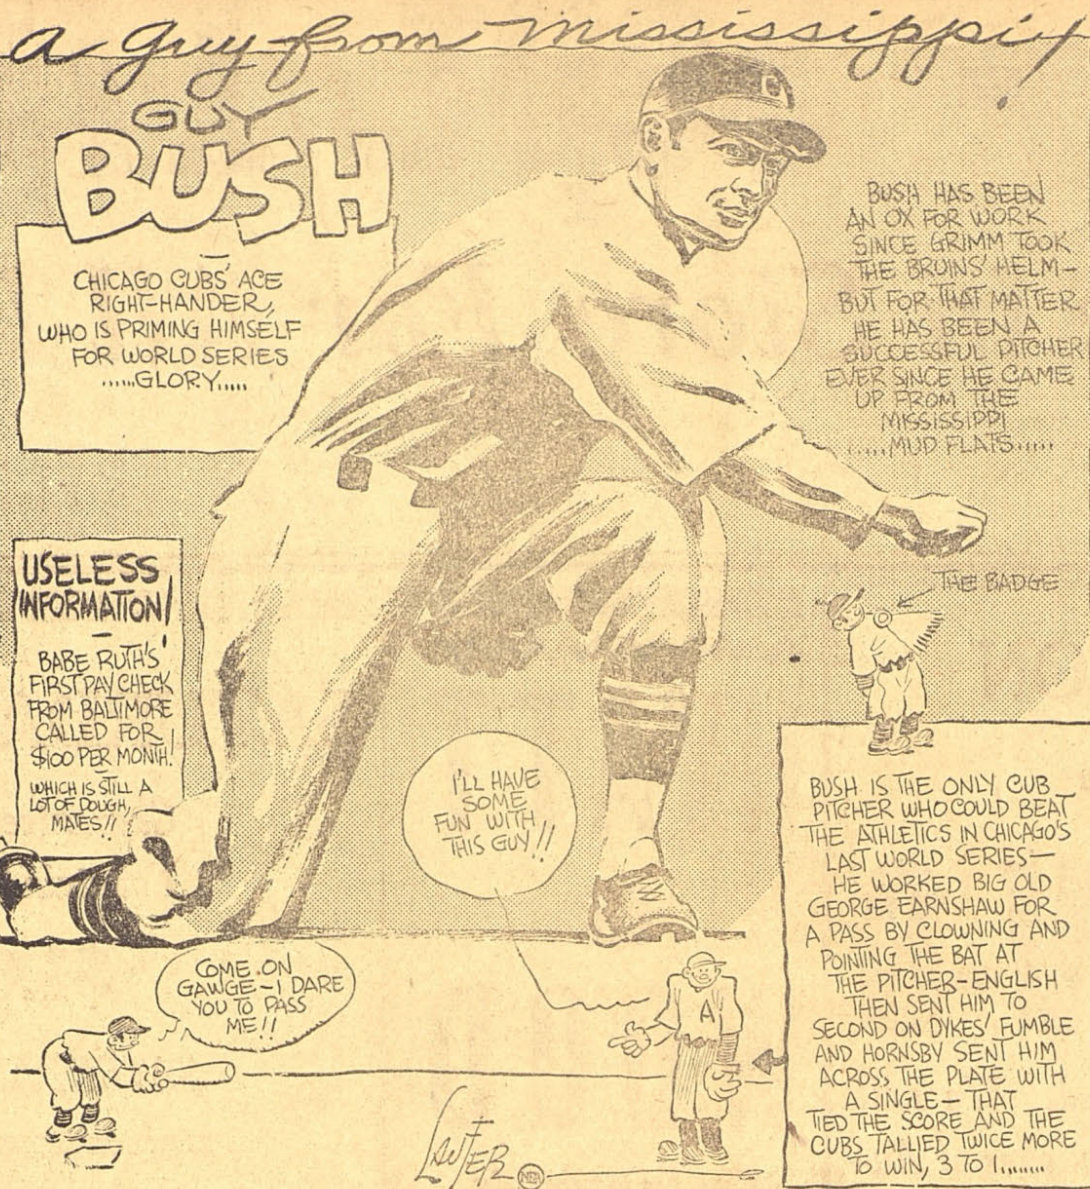

PARIS, Sept. 15. — Re-salle, retired Montparnasse cafe owner once was a model for Whistler. Her cafe was the gathering place of many famous artists in the days before their fame. She exchanged food for canvases and negotiated sales for some of the sketches at 2 cents apiece. Her favorite is said to have been Modigliano, who slept for days on her restaurant floor, overcome by poverty and drink.

AIDED DEPRESSION

WEST UNION, Ia., Sept. 15. — A nest of rattlesnakes proved to be good news to Roy Stephens. While working in a pasture, Stevens located the nest, which he said had been washed into the field by a heavy rain. He killed them with a club. When he took them to the county auditor to collect bounty there were 63 — five old ones and 58 youngsters. The bounty was $31.50.

HEIGHT CHANGES

PARIS, Sept. 15. — The Eiffel still sibs and trim after 43 years of watching Paris grow larger and larger, increased its height from 50 to 75 centimeters during the French dog days, when the excessive heat caused the steel structure to expand. When cold winds blow the tower shrinks below its normal 300 meters, due to contraction. The head sways from side to side as much as ten feet, but, like the Goddess of Liberty in New York harbor, whose head is empty and who sways noticeably from side to side, the Eiffel Tower is perfectly safe.

THERE'S NO "LIFE" IN STALE GASOLINE

ONLY fresh GAS PACKS FULL POWER!

FRESH-MADE gas packs "life," punch, power. But as staleness increases — power decreases. The "light ends"—the "easy starting" elements—evaporate. Besides that, a chemical change takes place—making gas sluggish, weak and "dead."

And the staler the gas, the stickier it is — the more apt to foul your motor. And the more apt it is to knock.

The entire petroleum industry has long sought ways to overcome gas deterioration. Gulf, after years of study, now announces a system that assures you of FRESH, full-powered gasoline! Here's how . . .

By making the best possible gasoline and refining out certain complex elements that cause early deterioration. Thus Gulf postpones staleness.

And by rushing this FRESH gas to you like some perishable food—giving it no time to get stale.

Gulf has spotted its huge refineries in many sections of the country—so that every Gulf filling station is close to a source of FRESH-MADE gasoline. Gulf has geared its whole distribution system to high speed. Fast trucks speed FRESH gas to Gulf pumps every day.

Get your money's worth—get FULL power. Get FRESH gas—delivered FRESH. Get Gulf—exclusively.

FORMER CISCO METHODIST P. E. DIES TUESDAY

Rev. E. P. Williams, pastor of the First Methodist church of Hubbard, Texas, died here Tuesday at the Methodist hospital following a serious illness of three months. He will be buried in Fort Worth.

Edmund Payne Williams was born at Collierville, Tenn., August 23, 1861, making him 71 years old. He was the son of Rev. Edmund J. and Almira P. Williams, and spent his childhood days on a farm in Mississippi. He was educated at the University of Mississippi, which he attended from 1883 to 1885.

Mr. Williams came to Texas in 1887 to teach school in Wise county. The following year he moved to Fort Worth where he became principal successively of two ward schools. After several years in Fort Worth, Mr. Williams served for 3 years as president of Granbury college, at Granbury, Texas, then a leading institution, which conferred on him the honorary degree of Master of Arts.

Presiding Elder Here Following this connection, Mr. Williams returned to Fort Worth, where he decided to enter the Methodist ministry and in which he served for more than three decades. He was licensed to preach at Mulkey Memorial Methodist church, Ft. Worth, and served as pastor of churches at Polytechnic, Ballinger, Corsicana, Taylor, Mexia, Weatherford, Georgetown, Taylor, Fort Worth, and Hubbard. Six years of his ministry were spent as presiding elder of the Cisco and Dublin districts of the Central Texas conference.

In 1897, Rev. Mr. Williams was married to Miss Amelia Cummings, who has been his co-worker in church activities. Surviving are his widow; two sons, Edmund P., Jr., San Antonio advertising man, and W. Frankie II. Fort Worth teacher; two granddaughters, Clare and Edmund P. III; a brother, Judge W. Erskine Williams of Fort Worth, and a sister, Mrs. J. Sam Barcus of Sulphur Springs.

Rev. Mr. Williams was an active member of I. O. O. F. for nearly 25 years and served as head of that order while at Taylor. He was a member of Sigma Chi fraternity.

BLUE PARROT'S BEAK Bluefield, Va., Sept. 15. — Bluefield people are paying plenty of attention to an English sparrow that lives in the Norfolk and Western Railroad signal tower. The bird, which was hatched this year, is normal in every respect, except that its bill is as large as that of a full-grown parrot.

RE-TIRES BUGGY COLUMBIA, Mo., Sept. 15. — C. N. Pratt, Columbia blacksmith, was reminded of the gay '90s when a buggy was brought to him, with the request that four new rubber tires be placed upon the wheels. Pratt recalled the buggy but said it was one of the few similar jobs he had done since the advent of the "horseless-carriage."

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By EDSON R. WAITE Shawnee, Oklahoma.

H. Galt Braxton, editor and publisher of the Kinston (N. C.) Daily Free Press, says: "The general advertiser is becoming more and more exacting in all of the time. There is a growing demand for so-called cooperation, such as window-displays, broadsides, circularizing dealers, circularizing and various other services which the average newspaper in the country is not in position to give except at a cost in excess of the actual amount paid for the advertising space bought."

"We had a striking example of this recently when an order for a small two and one-half inch ad to run weekly for four months was received with request for full position on preferred page at run-of-paper rates, window displays in our own building, window displays to be arranged by us, or by local dealers in their places of business, detailed reports of such interior and exterior and so on. The entire schedule will net us less than $13."

"General advertisers might as well understand that if they are to ask for such auxiliary service they must prepare to pay for it accordingly. Their appropriations for such service should not be budgeted to advertising but to field work or salesman expense, however they handle such items. "I am impressed with the fact that the newspapers must continue to specialize on the particular service of carrying the message of the advertising patrons to a substantial and bona fide clientele. They cannot even if the service is paid for, maintain an organization for such merchandising services; that is, the rank and file of newspapers cannot do so. A halt will have to be called somewhere."

MEXICANS PLAY BIG PART IN TEXAS VOTING

By GORDON K. SHEARER United Press Staff Correspondent AUSTIN, Sept. 15. — Former Mexicans, now citizens of Texas, and the descendants of Mexicans play a huge part in the Texas elections. Along the international border and in San Antonio, they frequently hold the balance of power. Figures of the United States census bureau for 1930 placed the Mexican population of Texas at 663,681 or 11.7 per cent. Percentages on participation in elections cannot be had. In 1922 the percentage of eligible Mexican voters was considerably reduced. Here before the wife of a Mexican who had become naturalized

Crazy Crystals A God-Send To Humanity

When I started taking Crazy Crystals I had rheumatism so bad I could hardly walk and suffered terrible pains all the time. I had tried every kind of treatment I could hear of without any relief. After taking CRAZY CRYSTALS one week the benefit was very noticeable and by the time the first box was used, I was entirely out of pain. CRAZY CRYSTALS are a God-send to suffering humanity.

ed in Texas was entitled to vote. Since that date she, too, must take out naturalization papers. If they were married before Sept. 22, 1922 and the husband naturalized, the citizenship automatically passed to her with him and has not been removed by the action. Those married since 1922 however, must secure individual naturalization papers.

Importance of the so-called "Mexican Vote" was emphasized in the recent state democratic primary contest between Governor Ross S. Sterling and former Governor Miriam A. Ferguson. Spanish circulars from both sides were widely distributed in San Antonio. The Ferguson circular recited the friendly treatment accorded Mexicans by Mrs. Ferguson during her administration and by her husband when he was governor. Mrs. Ferguson's pardon granted to General J. M. Rangel was also cited. General Rangel had been given a five to 99 year sentence on conviction of murder of Candelario Ortiz, deputy sheriff of Dimmitt county. Ortiz was killed after capture by a revolutionary expedition headed by General Rangel.

Were Captured The Texas officers who had attempted to interfere were captured and carried along by the expedition. Others were released unharmed and it was claimed Ortiz was killed by a subordinate officer because of refusal to obey orders. Mrs. Ferguson's proclamation said it seemed General Rangel was inspired by patriotic motives and was not in actual command when the captive was killed.

Governor Sterling's workers countered with reproduction in circular form of a statement by the Ferguson Forum, then published by former Governor James E. Ferguson, declaring Mexicans should be deported. It was contended by a Mexican running amuck on a train and killing passengers.

Similar appeals were made to the Mexicans in other cities. The so-called Mexican vote in many parts of Southwest Texas is really the true native vote. Many of the voters, so classed, are descendants of families who have been resident on the same soil since the days when it was a Spanish possession. Deeds direct from the Spanish crown attest their ownership of much of the land.

The real non-native vote in much

"BAY WINDOW" BAR SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 15. —The large, rotund "bay window" of Louis Dragells attracted the attention of two prohibition agents when he walked into a restaurant here recently. Dragells, noticing the officers' fixed gaze toward his middle, started a hasty exit. He was detained and inspected. A copper tank of two-gallon capacity containing liquor, was found underneath his trousers.

FIXED QUOTA FOR NITROGEN AIDS GERMANS

BERLIN, Sept. 15.—According to reliable information, the world export of nitrate was fixed by world producers meeting in London, Berlin and Scheveningen at 600,000 tons of nitrogen yearly.

The export quotas allotted to each country are estimated at 180,000 tons for Germany, 85,000 tons for England and 50,000 tons for Norway, while Chile probably will obtain a quota materially exceeding its 1931-32 exports, amounting to 130,000 tons for Germany, 85,000 tons for Chile are estimated at 450,000 tons, an export quota for Chile approaching 300,000 tons is expected here, because such an amount is required to assure disposal of the unsold supplies in two years without unduly cutting the country's nitrate production.

The producers of synthetic nitrate will probably grant Chile special import quotas to assure this increase in export.

Reduced Stocks.

The synthetic nitrate industry was comparatively better off during the crisis than the Chilean industry. Thus Germany was able to reduce her nitrate stocks by 100,000 tons since 1931. Despite this reduction, Germany still has unsold supplies amounting to 200,000 tons of nitrogen, or 50 per cent of last year's German consumption.

The German domestic nitrate consumption in 1931-32 amounted to 310,000 tons, or 120,000 tons less than that of the peak year, 1929-30. Producers' receipts, however, were cut by 40 per cent during the same period, because prices have sunk more than the quantities consumed.

Exports also have been cut considerably. While Germany exported 271,000 tons of nitrogen in 1929-30, the exports in 1931-32 amounted to 184,700 tons only, representing a reduction of nearly 32 per cent.

Recent Statistics.

Recent statistics show that Germany was unable to maintain her nitrate export even on this low level. During the first six months of 1932, she exported 61,500 tons of nitrogen, as compared with 84,100 tons during the corresponding period last year. Plants now are working at about 30 per cent of their capacity. Yet producers display a certain optimism.

Another country producing synthetic nitrate, namely Norway, was affected by the crisis to a lesser extent than Germany.

TWO PROBLEMS FACE S. M. U. GRID COACHES

By CHARLES A. BURTON

DALLAS, Sept. 15.—Two major problems face Coach Ray Morrison of Southern Methodist university as he goes about the task of preparing his Mustangs, 1931 Southwest conference champions, for another conference grid campaign. A dependable quarterback to guide the team and a center to replace Alfred Delcambre, all-southwest pivot man, and his understudy, husky Boyd Browning, will have to be developed before the team starts its battle to break the Southwest conference that "champions never repeat."

Ker Travis, Amarillo, who has directed the team during parts of the past two seasons, will again be available and will probably get the starting call at the signal-calling post. Travis may prove to be the sparkplug that is needed to put the fight and drive into the team that any championship contender must have. Travis, a speedy and elusive runner, developed wonderfully in his passing last year and is being counted upon by Morrison to do most of the leather-flinging. Little Charlie Hearn, Marshall, another excellent ball-carrier, is also being counted upon heavily to carry a part of the team direction and to furnish some of the spark. Jack McNutt, former Corsicana high school star, who was out of the lineup in 1930 with injuries, and was cut of school last year, will be given a chance at the quarterback post. Captain Howard Sprague, of Dallas, also being depended upon to call part of the signals from his full-back position.

Center Material

For center, Morrison will have Bud McLeod, 182 pound squadman from Houston, 200-pound Clyde Carter, former all-state basketball player from Denton, a freshman graduate, James Bradford, 189-pound San Antonio boy, up from the freshman ranks. All of these men look good but lack experience at that highly important position.

There is plenty of experienced material for the other positions. In the ball carrying department there are eight letter men, all of them seniors excepting Bert Baxter, who has another year. In addition there are two squadmen and seven sophomores ready to scrup the veterans for the backfield posts. Two lettermen, one squad man and three sophomores will be on hand to protect the wing posts. There are three letter men, two squadmen and a trio of freshmen graduates for the tackle berths. At the guard posts there are two letter men a squadman and two sophomores from which to pick.

HESSIAN FLY PEST BATTLED IN NEBRASKA

By DEAN HAMMOND

United Press Staff Correspondent LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 15.—Florida had its fruit fly, eastern states the corn borer, and now Nebraska the Hessian fly.

Wheat fields of 40 of the state's 93 counties were infested with Hessian fly this year, cutting wheat yields heavily and necessitating a declaration of "war" on the insect.

A control campaign, mapped out by the College of Agriculture here, will be carried on throughout the state by farmers to stop the insects. Every farmer in the infested area will be called upon to combat the fly during the fall sowing time for winter wheat.

Crop experts have set up two observation stations in the state—at Geneva and Holdrege—where infestation was very heavy.

By observing the emergence of the fly from flaxseed, the entomologists will determine "fly safe" planting periods in each of the counties showing heavy infestation. Experiments were carried on to prove that wheat planted just following the fly safe date is less liable to be infested with the Hessian fly than wheat planted early or late in the season.

O. S. Bare, extension entomologist, in charge of the Geneva observation station and Dean Eckhoff, in charge of the Holdrege station, will report daily on the emergence of the flies. Then, from the College of Agriculture, the "fly safe" dates for planting of winter wheat will be broadcast.

The Hessian fly infestation has led to the development of a new variety of wheat in the state. The new wheat, "Cheyenne," is more resistant to the infestation than the other common varieties.

Rubber Tires For Rail Bus

ECORSE, Mich., Sept. 15.—A rubber tired rail bus, designed for use on short spur railway lines is industry's latest contribution to the railroad's war against the depression.

Designed to permit economical transportation along short lines, many of which have been shut down temporarily, the pneumatic rail-tire wheel is the product of a large tire manufacturer.

At a demonstration here before officials of the Detroit, Toledo and Ironton Railway, a small sedan with steering wheel locked, was employed.

The tire is of eight-ply construction, contains 90 pounds of air and is held to the rails by a rubberized flange. Unlike the steel wheels now used on similar machines, the new tire is practically noiseless. In the event of a puncture a solid rubber core interior of the new tire permits cut three-quarters of an inch deflation.

Two automobiles equipped with the new tire have been placed in service on the road, officials said.

At last a gasoline has been made that gives the highest usable level of performance in all kinds of weather and at all altitudes. Climatic Control is the greatest thing that has ever happened to gasoline!

In addition to the outstanding advantage of Climatic Control, Mobilgas has an unusually high ANTI-KNOCK rating. All this at no increase in price. Mobilgas is a regular-priced gasoline!

There's a new driving sensation waiting for you at the Mobilgas pump. Fill your tank today and breeze ahead.

*CLIMATIC CONTROL is the preadjustment of the specifications of Mobilgas, before it is placed on sale in your locality. It automatically adapts itself to the variations in "engine heat", caused by changes in temperature, altitude, humidity and road "pull". In the Mobilgas Research Laboratories all these changing climatic conditions have been "manufactured" in hot and cold testing-chambers. The road performance of Mobilgas is thus scientifically verified at different "engine heats".

CHAPTER I

The offices in the Equity Building are spacious and attractive. They have the atmosphere of successful business. The corner offices overlooking Tenth street are equipped with homogany furniture, easy chairs and convenient ash trays. A great glass-topped desk stands almost in the center of the deep rug. In spite of this atmosphere on a Friday afternoon at 10 minutes past one the air in Suite 216 was surcharged with something almost explosive.

"Mr. Ball from Blind River, eh?" Asper Delo's face was purple with anger. "Mr. Ball, you are a dirty Irish snoop!" The owner and operator of the Delo Timber Company sprang to his feet and moved ponderously around his desk.

The target of his wrath, a lean young man with a freckled nose and wide, firm mouth, looked the big boss over with amused gray eyes. He shoved his Stetson back as though to allow a shock of unruly, dark hair a little more freedom. It was plain that he was a man more accustomed to the saddle than to the soft carpets of Suite 216.

"I never knew a squarehead who could keep his temper," Stan Ball drawled with mock gravity.

Asper Delo smacked the glass top of his desk with a huge fist and exploded wrathfully. "You came here to insult me!" His words choked him.

"I came here to tell you the truth and I aim to get it out of my system." Stan Ball grinned, showing a set of even, white teeth. With an easy swing of his booted leg he seated himself upon the wide window ledge overlooking Tenth street.

Asper Delo's bony jaws worked until his blue eyes bulged but no words came.

"You have committed several murders and you are a prime thief." Stan Ball made the statement easily. As he spoke his eyes wandered down into the crowded street. He gazed thoughtfully at the tops of the hurrying cars while the timber king spluttered and strove to gain control of his voice.

A shiny limousine pulled up at the curb below. Stan's firm mouth twisted into a sneer as he watched a liveried driver step out of the car and walk across the street with two very attentive companions. Old Asper Delo, two-fisted lumber man, had gone swanky with a town car and a uniformed driver.

The young man's thoughts were rudely interrupted. "You'll eat those words!" Asper Delo's nose was thrust almost into Stan Ball's face.

The lanky cowboy slid from the window ledge and his high-heeled boots clicked on the polished floor beside the rug. With a short laugh he roused himself and faced Asper Delo. The amused light left his eyes and they glinted as he shoved the timber king away with a lean arm.

"Maybe you never shot a man in the back yourself but your straw boss up at Three Rivers has hired it done. Not once but three times!" Stan Ball's thrust out aggressively. "You own that outfit and you're responsible." He leaned toward Asper Delo and his eyes were hard. "I'm going up there to get a report of your workings, an honest report—get that?" Stan pushed his hat back a little farther. "I came up here to tell you so that you could call your man, Swergin, and have him hire a breed to shoot me in the back."

Asper Delo was past words but he was not past action. In the days when he had run his own crews he had ruled with his fists. Now his Viking blood boiled within him. With a rasping roar he swung a fist at Stan Ball's chin.

That irritating young man sidestepped with lightning smoothness. Without seeming effort he slid in nearer and in a second Asper Delo was neatly tied with his own big arms holding themselves. Stan Ball shoved him back against the desk and his wicked grin returned.

"You will fight, won't you? But you haven't the sand to do your own killing." There was a taunting edge to the words.

Breathing heavily, Asper Delo collected himself. He was not licked by any means but he realized that he was no match for the lean youngster who faced him. He shook his fist impotently and retreated around his desk.

"You'll never set foot on the Three Rivers cuttings, you lying whelp! We have that tract inspected and the timber checked by a government man and we don't allow fools meddling with our business." Asper gripped the top of his desk and his words jerked from between his teeth.

"Yes? Inspected and reported? Well, Mr. Delo, we are getting our own report and we are turning it over to the Department of the Interior. You game is up at Three Rivers." Turning upon his heel, Stan Ball left the room with the speechless timber king glaring after him.

Stan halted on the sidewalk outside the Equity Building, a smile twisting at the corners of his lips. He had given Asper Delo fair warning of what he was going to do. No doubt the timber king was already rushing a long-distance call through to his boss, Swergin, at Three Rivers, apprising him of the fact that another snoop was on his way to look the operations over.

"I bet the old hard-fist tells Swergin plenty," Stan thought as he fished into his pocket for the makings of a cigarette. "The old fire-eater would be a real timber baron if he weren't a crook."

Stan halted at the edge of the sidewalk beside the Delo town car. He frowned upon a package of "tailor-mades" that he had fished from his pocket. He'd have to get out of town or they would be selling him a suit of store clothes.

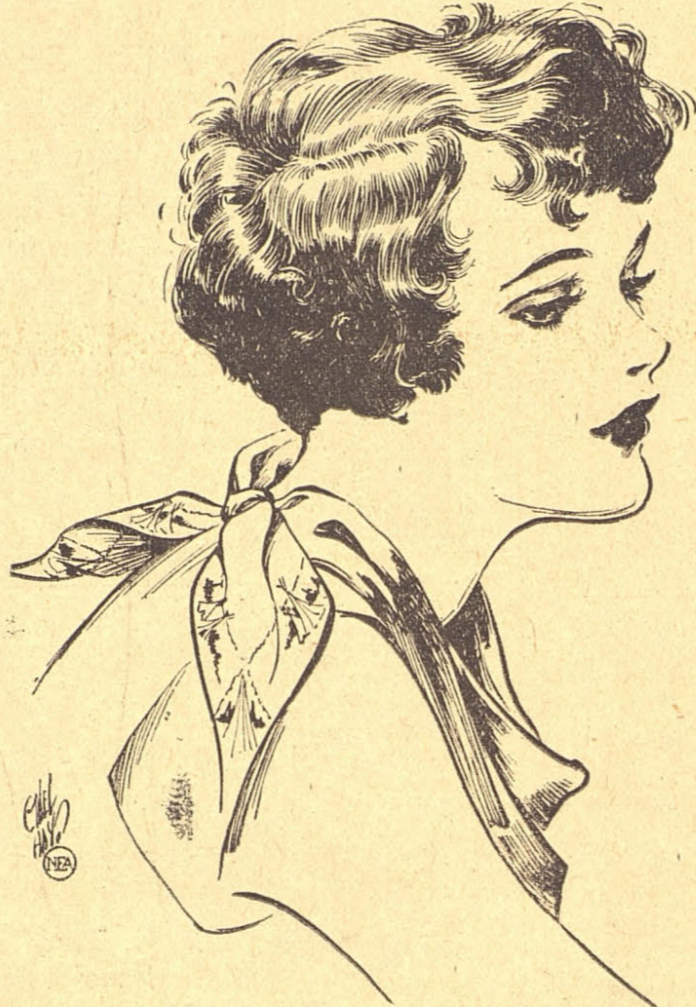

The liveried driver of the big car was not at the wheel and his place had been taken by a heavy-set man who wore a driver's cap. Stan eyed the man for no reason at all except that he was trained to notice anything unusual. The fellow cast a fleeting glance past Stan and reached toward the dash of the car. An instant later a couple brushed against him. Stan was pushed rudely aside. As he moved he saw a carefully dressed young man hurriedly guiding a girl to the open door of the car. Stan stared at the window of the car as the door slammed shut. A pair of shapely ankles and two trim slippers rose above the sill. A man who had been crouching in the back of the car rose into view and bent over the girl. There was a flashing of kicking slippers and a muffled scream. Then the car leaped away from the curb.

It rocketed into the traffic like a mad thing but it did not get away before Stan Ball had leaped on the empty trunk rack behind the spare tire. The little curtain at the back window was up and he was able to crouch down so he would not be easily seen should it be lowered.

The car sped away, darting through the traffic while curious pedestrians grinned at the spectacle of a big town car dashing along with a cowboy riding the trunk rack. Stan grinned at three successive policemen who deferentially allowed the big car to cut through their warning signals. It was plain all the men on the beat knew Asper Delo's private limousine. Two of the officers waved threatening clubs at Stan and promptly dismissed him as an impudent hitch hiker. He had caught a glimpse of a tip-tilted little nose, a pair of red lips and a mass of brown hair as the girl had been rushed past him. He was sure he had a very diverting half hour ahead.

The car swerved and shot into a side street. As the traffic thinned its speed increased. The back curtain was raised a little but Stan could see no faces. For 10 minutes they raced west, then made a right turn and sped into a tree-lined avenue. From the avenue the driver swerved into a country lane and the dust began to roll up in clouds.

DONA DELO

Stan shut his eyes and clung to his precarious seat as the car lurched and bumped along. The dust was stifling but he grinned and hung on.

When the car turned again the dust clouds lessened and he opened his eyes. They were sliding along an old road choked with grass and weeds. Thick brush and willows crowded close on each side as though striving to close the trail. Their branches switched Stan with a stinging sharpness as he leaned out to see what was ahead. He ducked back when he saw that the road ended abruptly at the door of a dilapidated cabin.

Picking a thick clump of willows, he unloaded feet first and rolled into cover beside the road. Instantly he scrambled to his feet and peered after the car. A wide grin cracked through the dust around his mouth. The car was stopping at the door of the cabin. Both its doors swung open and the three men leaped out. Without delay they pulled the girl after them and rushed her into the cabin.

Stan slapped his belt with a sigh of regret. He had not thought he would have use for his gun in the city and had left it in a saddle pocket at the home ranch. Now he found himself about to tangle with three armed kidnapers. He slid back into the willows and headed for the cabin.

"Elegant!" he muttered as he thrust aside the long willow leaves and looked through them. Two of the thugs ran out of the cabin, a well-dressed fellow and a tall companion. They leaped into the big car and started the engine. With the motor racing madly they swung around and headed back down the narrow road. Stan gave them only a glance. "Now for the rescue of the fair one," he grinned and began a stealthy approach to the cabin.

He advanced upon a brush-covered side of the building and leaned forward to peer through a crack that had lost its chinking. What he saw made his lips pull tight and his eyes darken.

A slender girl sat on a backless chair facing a heavy-set man with beetling brows. The fellow had taken the only chair with a back for himself and was talked back watching his captive with evident enjoyment. He was armed with a short, black automatic and looked capable of using it.

"You most likely won't get mussed up none, lady. Leastwise not for a spell. When the boys get back with a flivver you can write a little note to your old man telling him to slip us 25 grand." The thug spat accurately through a knothole in the floor.

Stan Ball's hands closed hard as he shifted his eyes to see the girl. She was shaking her head and stamped her feet. Her hands were tied with a silk scarf and her mouth was gagged with a handkerchief but her blue eyes were uncovered and they were wide and angry while her nose were untipped up defiantly. Even in his haste to go to her aid Stan paused to note the finely chiseled nose and the curved throat exposed below it. The girl was not afraid. Stan noticed that at once, but she was furiously angry. Noiselessly he slid around to the door which stood open and inviting.

The heavy-set thug had placed his chair close to the opening and his back was partly turned. It was evident that this enjoyment of his captive's irritation had diverted him from his job of watching the clearing and the road. Possibly a feeling of security made him lax. At any rate he was totally surprised as a lanky form shot through the open door and descended upon him.

Stan landed at the fellow's side at one leap. With a smashing blow to the butt of the ear he sent the kidnaper reeling from his chair. Grinning a hard smile, and with a boot ready to kick the automatic out of the ruffian's hand should he go for it, Stan Ball stood over the wilted man and waited for him to rise. The prostrate enemy failed to move a muscle. Stan's blow had been a knockout punch and what had looked fair to be a he-man fight had fizzled.

Gurgling sounds from the captive caused Stan to start guiltily. He sprang across the room and freed her. She did not faint or fall into his arms. Instead she stamped over to the prostrate thug and bent over him. With a savage jerk she relieved him of his gun. Stan Ball burst out laughing and his freckled nose wrinkled until the brown spots danced.

"You have a way with gunmen, Ma'm." He bowed with a flourish of his wide hat, then held out his hand for the gun. "Better let a man from the mountains have that gat, Miss."

They faced each other for a second. Then the girl joined Stan's laugh with a soft alto voice. "It is really funny, isn't it?" She passed him the gun without hesitation.

"Great fun, but we better herd ourselves out of here,

"Better let a man from the mountains have that gat, Miss."

Miss——?" Stand was no glib-tongued modern youth. Women were beings to be met properly in his little world. Even such unusual circumstances did not alter the case.

"Delo. Dona Delo." They were at the door as she spoke. Stan had his hat off again and was about to present himself but her words halted him abruptly. He looked upon her slender beauty and her wind-blown tan that had not come from city air and his lips parted as he realized who she was. "Old Asper's daughter—with all the old boy's spunk," he thought as he followed her outside without speaking.

Dona Delo did not notice this omission. She was still angry and excited. She wheeled and laid a small hand upon his arm. "You must not think me silly or unappreciative but I'm mad clear through. That cad, Graham, put it over on me that he was a college chum of Dudley's and got me out to the car. But for you I'd most likely have stayed tied up and Dad would have had to pay." She smiled up at him so radiantly that Stan became at once aware of his dust-covered clothing, his freckles and his shock of unruly hair.

"Nothing out of the way that I did," he stammered uneasily.

"How did you happen to be here?" She removed her hand but continued to smile.

Stan opened his mouth, then closed it and gripped her arm. "I hear a car coming. We'd better hit for cover." With a strong arm he pushed her into the willows. He struck through the timber in the direction he remembered the highway to be. A half hour's breathless hiking brought them to a main road and Stan flagged a passing motorist. Dona was eager to get to a telephone and call her father. They stopped at a lunch stand and filling station and Dona rushed inside with Stan at her heels.

Asper Delo was appraised of the kidnaping and rescue at the same time. Dona turned from the phone and called to Stan. "You haven't told me your name?"

"Stanley Black," Stan lied without batting a single freckle. He was not going to have Asper Delo hand him the keys to Three Rivers on a platter. He would get his report and make the old war horse like it.

Ten minutes later he was kicking himself for what he had done. Her anger gone, Dona Delo was a very alluring, feminine creature. As she munched a hot dog and sipped soda from a bottle Stan thought her the most attractive girl he had ever seen. He made up his mind to tell her so as to be able to see her again. Of course she was unattainable for one of his standing but he was sure she would be friendly. He just sat and looked at her for what seemed only a few minutes. She broke into his thoughts abruptly by leaping up.

"There's dad!" With a wave of her hand she darted outside.

Stan looked through the window and saw Asper Delo striding across the patch of gravel between two red pumps. He watched Dona smothered in her father's arms and saw her take his hand and lead him toward the lunch room. With a half smile at the turn of his luck Stan slipped through the back door, tossing a dollar on the counter as he hurried by.

"He's gone!" There was more than surprise in Dona's voice as she entered the lunch room with her father behind her.

"What's his name?" Asper Delo pulled a green-backed memo book from his pocket. "I'll mail him a check." He slumped down heavily beside one of the tables.

"His name is Stanley Black but I didn't ask his address." Dona was close to nervous tears now.

Old Asper grunted and wrote down the name. "He'll be underfoot from now on, don't worry. He and Dudley will be fighting a duel." He squeezed Dona's hand affectionately. This had been a hard day and he was tired.

Dona shook her head. "He's not that kind, Dad. I won't see him again unless I find him."

"Well, I haven't time to look him up now. I have to go to Three Rivers on business. A dirty-mouthed whipsnapper insulted me not two hours ago and I aim to settle with him personally." Asper's spleen rose as he remembered his conversation with Mr. Ball of Blind River.

"But you have Swergin at Three Rivers and you've always said he was your most efficient man! You haven't been up there since the work started. Why go now?" Dona protested. She was more interested in locating Stanley Black and repaying him in a proper manner than in having her father rush off to an obscure timber camp. She felt he would be just the person to handle Stanley Black. They seemed to have many traits in common.

"Swergin is all right but this is a personal matter." Asper Delo's face began to purple again as he remembered.

"What was it all about?" Dona asked resignedly. It was clear that the Three Rivers affair would have to be heard before anything else could be considered.

"A whipsnapper nosing around for a report on the Three Rivers tract," Asper grunted.

"That is supervised timber. Why not let him help himself?" Dona was impatient.

"The Three Rivers tract is paying and it's been handled right but that brat doesn't get to check it over or anybody else! It is a tough stand to make a profit on. That's why I have Swergin there." Suddenly Asper bent over and patted Dona's hand. "I'll leave orders to find Mr. Black and have him shipped out to the house tomorrow." He rose and held out his arm. "Now we must get back and report this mess to the police."

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

WILLIAM C. DEMING, president of the Cheyenne (Wyo.) Tribune-Leader, says:

"Most people think there is something mysterious about a newspaper and the manner in which it is assembled and prepared for the public. Perhaps that accounts for the fact that the average person thinks a newspaper is a paper regardless of its news service, where it is published or the total of its circulation.

"It is no exaggeration to say that there are business men who cannot understand why an advertisement in the Denver Post or the Cheyenne Tribune costs more per inch than an advertisement in the Pine Bluffs Post, for instance.

"Only the other day a young and inexperienced representative of a Colorado product called upon the Tribune-Leader and seemed perfectly amazed that our rate per inch is higher than that of the Loveland and Longmont weekly papers. To him an 'ad' is an 'ad,' regardless of circulation, which, as the Tribune-Leader has stated before, would mean that the New York Times or the Chicago Tribune, with their hundreds of thousands of readers, should publish a page ad for the same price as the Cheyenne Tribune.

"The circulation and good will and confidence of the community in established newspapers are not of a mushroom growth. They are the result of years of effort. A newspaper, for instance, grows in circulation and influence with the community it serves.

"When the present ownership and management took the Wyoming State Tribune, it had about 500 subscribers and less than eight employees. Today it has nearly 8,000 subscribers, which means that more than 30,000 people read it every day. The Wyoming Tribune likewise has more than 40 full-time employees and more than 40 newsboys. That means that, at least, 200 people in Cheyenne are supported wholly or in part by their positions with the Tribune-Leader and patronize Cheyenne business men.

"No, a newspaper is not the result of magic. "Having listened to an old-fashioned campaign orator, a member of the audience rushed up and exclaimed, 'Great! I call that the result of genius.' The speaker replied, 'I call it the result of hard work.'

"That's the way newspapers are made."
