DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

THE FEAST OF HARMONY:—Better is a dry morsel, and quietness therewith, than a house full of sacrifices with strife.—Proverbs 17: 1.

OUTLAWS OF THE OZARKS.

Missouri authorities demand that the bodies of the Young brothers shall be sent from Texas to the Ozark county for interment. 'Tis well. Texas has its own murderers, living and dead, and Missouri should not be robbed of the honor of planting two of the most desperate criminals the nation has known in the sacred soil of the state of Thomas H. Benton and a small army of gallant sons who distinguished themselves on the side of law and liberty and advancement. In ancient days the Ozark mountains of Missouri sheltered many of the most desperate men that America has known.

As for the Youngs, they slew in a bloody battle six gallant officers of the law and then in a murder and suicide pact rid the earth of their presence, thus saving the taxpayers lots of money. They are assassins as well as murderers and suicides for the six gallant defenders of law and order were shot down from ambush. It is not necessary to go to the underworld of great American cities for desperate murderers and hijackers and bank robbers of high and low degree.

Green county, Missouri, is a beautiful spot. Thomas B. Love was born in the Ozarks and in his youthful days he played a star part as a democrat in the history of that commonwealth. Temple Harris McGregor, born and educated in Tennessee, after he had been admitted to the bar moved from the old volunteer state to Green county, Missouri, and there he received his early lessons in politics, both practical and of the intellectual brand.

Men, bold and bad, infested the hills of Missouri and the hills of Oklahoma. They rob with impunity; they shoot to kill, and when they kill themselves they lift a load off the taxpayers. Ring down the curtain. Never point the finger of scorn at the great cities of America. There were three or four hundred killings in Texas in 1931. There were as many bank and hijacking acts of plundering and law violation. It is well for a people to keep their own door steps clean before they point in scorn and derision at their fellowmen in other states.

HOOVER READY WITH HIS AX.

Speaker John N. Garner and Joseph Taylor Robinson and their close co-workers are responsible for the democratic tariff bill. They predict that it will be sent from the house to the senate and that the senate will enact it as it comes from the lower branch of congress. President Hoover has promised to veto it. Andrew W. Mellon is opposed to its enactment. Speaking through Under-Secretary Ogden Mills of New York, the administration has announced its flat opposition to the measure and promises to give it the ax, should it reach the White House.

JAPAN IN THE SADDLE.

Secretary of State Stimson notified Japan it cannot permit the legality of Japan's occupation of Manchuria, nor recognize any resulting regime imperiling the open-door policy. No voice of the administration would forecast what actual steps might follow for the protection of American interests and the terms of all the international agreements invoked are vague with respect to penalty. A Japanese army occupies Manchuria. "To seize and to hold" has been the policy of all European nations of the Orient and the real master of the Orient. Now how will Secretary Stimson go about it to drive the Japanese from Manchuria and maintain what the late John Hay was pleased to call "an open-door policy" in China.

As for poor old China, with its population of 500,000,000, it has been the fat oyster for the European nations for ages and ages; it is the hot bed for revolutions and revolutionists, and a stable government has been unknown since the royal house was toppled over and rival heads of rival armies of Chinese have been plucking the golden flowers by the wayside and playing havoc with many sections of Mongolian land. Japan is a very large buyer of American cotton. Japan has a vast surplus of population. Japan always knows what she wants. She is getting it, and if she continues to control Manchuria, she will at least give it a stable government and protect to the utmost life and property of natives as well as foreigners.

OTHER OPINIONS

WRIGHT IS WRONG
The impeachment charges filed by Representative Wright Patman of the Texas, Texas, district in Congress against Secretary Andrew W. Mellon of the Treasury Department would merit much more consideration than they are commanding if they had been inspired by a somewhat more worthy purpose than that which actuated the impulsive and impetuous young Texan when he prepared and presented them. Whether the charges will ever go further than the judiciary committee is doubtful, in view of the urgency attending the consideration of other matters now before the two houses of congress. Perhaps the committee is as far as they should go.
Patman bases his charges upon an ancient law prohibiting the Secretary of the Treasury engaging in business or commerce. He contends and with some reason, that Mr. Mellon is actively engaged in both business and commerce, although he fails to show that such activity involves any infidelity to his responsibility as a cabinet officer. What the Texas congressman really has in mind is a punitive action designed in reprisal for Mr. Mellon's vigorous opposition to the ill-timed demand of ex-service men for cash payment of their bonus certificates a year ago. The Treasury Secretary's protest against the bonus loan scheme was ignored by Congress, but he earned the antagonism of a number of former soldiers who, like Patman, think he should be punished. Mr. Mellon, however, can "point with pride" to the present Treasury deficit a very large part of which is the direct result of congress' failure to heed his advice.

The retirement of Mr. Mellon from the Treasury Department is certain within a little more than a year, and if his only offense is that he has engaged in business and commerce it would seem to be hardly worth while to impeach him. Even if the Hoover administration triumphs in this year's election, which seems now to be very doubtful, Mr. Mellon would go out of the cabinet at the end of the present term in March, 1933, on account of his advancing age and his heretofore expressed desire to retire from active public life. Why should Mr. Patman not be willing to let Nature take its course?—Brownwood News.

AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION NEWS

From the Office of the County Agent and The Home Demonstration Agent.

Club Boy Makes Big Corn Crop
Fifty bushels of corn per acre was produced on the two acre demonstration plot by R. L. Tucker Jr. Pleasant Hill club boy in 1931. The use of improved farm practices is credited with this outstanding corn yield. A properly prepared seed bed good seed sowing with 50 pounds per acre of commercial fertilizer and correct cultural methods account for the success of the demonstration.

Farm Short Course at Eastland.
Motion pictures, slides charts and exhibits will help the four agricultural leaders in making the two day Farm Short Course one of the finest programs ever presented in the county. The dates are February 14th and 15th with three programs daily. No person in the county lives too far from Eastland but that it will be of great value to attend all of the six meetings. L. A. Hawkins who is an authority on fruit growing asks that specimens of fruit diseases and insect damage be brought in for identification and recommendations for treatment. An elaborate list of committees has been named to see that every agriculturally minded person in the county has a personal invitation to take in this Short Course. No matter who you are, Farmer, Banker, Merchant, Teacher, Housewife these meetings are planned for you.

What About The Rabbits
Why wait until spring to begin the rabbit drives. Now is a good time to set the date for the drive in your community and get the word around that there are plenty of rabbits for all. The sportsman will like to take part in community drives as do all of your neighbors. Each jack rabbit will eat up approximately $4.00 worth of crops per year and the cotton taffs take their toll in garden truck, potatoes and peanuts not to mention peas and beans. There are people all over the country that could make good use of rabbit meat. A rabbit drive with the kill donated to charity is a worthy undertaking. Doubtless the ice plants would be glad to hold the rabbits in cold storage until needed for charity cases.
Traps placed in rabbit runs have been effective in catching them in great numbers. A hole may be dug in the ground and this covered with a lid that trips under the rabbits weight and then comes back into place ready for the next one. This hole may be about the size of a barrel head. We have good reports on this type of trap. The boys will have fine sport working out such a trap and keeping it in operation. A chute placed in the run with a small corral built of poultry wire has also been recommended. This should work fine if several of the runs are stopped with brush or wire and the rabbits made to find the one run on each side of the field that has the chute prepared in it.
Cultivating Slobby Hillsides
Deep plowing or sub-soiling slobby hillsides will mix clay with the sand and help dry and warm it. Deep plowing will allow the excess water to get into the ground to be held for use in later dry seasons. This opening up of a small trench in the clay subsoil will allow under-drainage and aid in disposing of surface moisture. Subsoiling is becoming a necessary practice also on other than slobby soils. It brings up the plant food that has accumulated several inches below the surface. One recommended method of subsoiling is to bed the land then follow with a bull tongue in the furrow as deep as it can be pulled, then bed back on this. This bed is opened when planting and the seed placed above the furrow made in subsoiling. Increased yields are assured.

Potatoe Pools
Announcement was made last week of the farmers pool of orders for Certified seed Irish potatoes, which is being handled by W. E. Starr and the Cisco Chamber of Commerce. This pool will close in sufficient time for shipment to be made on January 25th. Those planning to use this seed are urged to get their orders in at once. Prices are reduced this year. Orders may be placed with any chamber of commerce or agricultural worker, by making the required deposit.

Jack Rabbit and Cotton Tail Rabbits Canned
With the rabbit drives in the near future, there will be an excess of fresh rabbit meat in the communities. There is sport in killing the rabbits, why not make it valuable to others than the sport hunters, by canning the meat. The rabbits furnish good food and many families are short of meat this fall. When the rabbits are killed, they should be dressed and put on ice and thoroughly chilled. After this the meat can be prepared for canning by searing (fried rabbit) cooking until tender and removing from bone (stewed rabbit) and the meat cooked until tender and ground and packed into cans (meat for salad or sandwiches). The following complete methods may be used:
Fried rabbit: Dress the rabbits (cut in pieces as for cooking) chili thoroughly, roll in flour, sear in very hot, deep fat, just until browned and put in cans; add 3 table-spoons hot fat and 1 teaspoon of salt and pepper mixture to No. 3 cans; seal and process 1 hour at 15 pounds pressure. Remove from cooker and put cans into tub of cold

Speaking of the Weather

by Charles Fitzhugh Talman of the U.S. Weather Bureau

Don't See Your Doctor if You Find Red Snow — It Really Occurs in Many Parts of United States and Europe.

The discovery of red snow is reported from time to time and is a subject of unflagging popular interest. Such snow occurs chiefly in the polar regions and among the snowfields of high mountains, though it has been observed occasionally at low levels.
De Saussure, in the eighteenth century, described its occurrence in the Alps. In 1818 Sir John Ross discovered the Crimson Cliffs on the northwest coast of Greenland near Cape York. The dark red snow of the cliffs was many feet deep. Specimens of the melted snow that he brought home were found to owe their color to a minute organism.
Several other lowly species of plant and animal life impart to snow different shades of red (as well as green and yellow). Broad stretches of yellow snow were found on the ice of the Kara Sea by the Arctic expedition of the Duc d'Orleans; green and blue varieties have been encountered elsewhere.
Snow colored by dust is another story. Showers of reddish dust, to which southern Europe is much subject, are shown from the Sahara, and explain some cases of red snow in the Alps.
Patches of red snow sometimes occur in the mountains of Washington and Oregon. In July, 1914, vast fields of it were found in the Yosemite National park. The snow looked as if carmine ink had been spilled over it. Elsewhere in the same region a white snowfield was reddened, as if with blood, wherever the hoofs of the pack mules broke through the crust.
Apart from the various coloring organisms, snow is known to have extensive flora and fauna. Among its most remarkable inhabitants are the so-called "snow worms" that are sometimes strewn by the millions over the snowfields and glaciers of high mountain regions.
They dislike warm sunshine and burrow deep in the snow in the middle of the day. Tiny insects known as springtails may be seen—anybody who looks closely for them—on the surface of melting snowfields in any part of the northern United States.

Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.
Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

THREE KINDS OF LOVE

by KAY CLEAVER STRAHAN

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Ann, Cecily and Mary-Frances Fenwick live with their grandparents. The sisters have been orphaned since childhood. The grandparents—known as "Rosalie" and "Grand"—have long since lost their wealth and the household is supported by Ann's and Cecily's earnings. For this reason Ann, 28, and Philip Ecroyd, young lawyer, are still postponing their marriage though they have been engaged 8 years.

Cecily, 22, is in love with Barry McKeel, an engineer, but when he proposes she refuses to name the wedding date because she cannot leave Ann with the financial responsibility of the home.

Mary-Frances, 15, and still in school, strikes up an acquaintance with Earl De Armonth, vaudeville actor. She meets him secretly and he tries to persuade her to become his stage partner.

Phil takes Ann to dinner. A girl she has never seen before sends him a note. Phil's explanations are vague. On the way home Phil stops the car to investigate engine trouble. Letty King, who wrote the note, and Kenneth Smith, her escort, come along in another car. Letty addresses Phil with endearments and Ann, angry, gets in Smith car and asks him to take her home. Next day he sends flowers.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXXI

Cecily had looked up the number in the telephone book on Friday, the day before yesterday. She knew it by heart. She dialed it with key, trembling fingers. The muted ringing sounded again and again in her ears. She prayed, "Let him answer it. Dear Lord, let him answer it. Let him answer it. Let him answer it." "Hello?" A woman's voice, agreeable, cheerful.

"May I please speak to Mr. McKeel?"

"Mr. McKeel is playing golf." A note of interest was added. "I am Mrs. McKeel; may I take a message for him?"

"I mean—Mr. Barry McKeel?"

"Barry?" The interest changed to amusement, faint but audible. "He isn't in town now."

"Oh, I didn't know. Where is he?"

"He is in Albany," Cheery again, almost hearty. "He has been there—just left—since Friday."

"I didn't know. Do you expect him back soon?"

"No. Not very soon." sympathy was added. "He is supervising the work on a building that his uncle is putting up there."

"Could you give me his address?"

"I am sorry," sincerity seemed to be indicated, "but when he telephoned yesterday he said that he was leaving the hotel and would find a boarding place today. So, just for the moment, I don't know where he is. We'll know in a day or so; if you'll call again I'll be glad to tell you."

A day or so! There could be no answer to that.

Curiosity came at last, with a touch of crispness. "Is it seriously important? My husband had spoken of driving to Albany this evening. He had given it up. But, perhaps—"

"No," said Cecily, and tried again and said, "No—thank you," and hung up the receiver and went upstairs to her room and darkened it to shut out anything the June month might have to offer, and rolled down into the deep hollow of her bed.

Ann found her there when she came in at seven o'clock that evening.

what he'd send a quarrel. I told you, you know, that he said raised voices, and squawking sarcasms, and things like that. I'm sure I didn't raise my voice. I never do scream—do I, Ann? Truly, do I?"

"Honey, honey, of course not." "It began about the party. Or did I tell you about that?"

"Not all about it," lied poor Ann.

"I didn't say a word, you know I didn't, when he went to Gretchen's party in April, though he knew I hadn't been invited. He'd promised to go before—well, before we'd found each other. I didn't let him know I cared a bit—it was pleasant and nice about it as I could be. And he said he didn't have a good time at all, and was bored to death, and kept hoping that he could get away early enough to see me later. But I took the notice that he didn't. And when the picnic came up in May I didn't say much, either. I said a little; and he explained that the crowd had been nice to him ever since he'd come back to Portland, and all—I guess I told you—about how he was going to put a girl something like Gretchen in his next book—a self-made sophisticate, he called her—and, well, I didn't fuss even about the picnic. But when this third affair came up it simply got to be too much of a good thing. I couldn't understand why he wished to go places, constantly, without me. I wouldn't have gone near any place where he hadn't been invited. I didn't say that he should not go. I just tried to find out, if possible, why he cared to go. And he said—What did I say he said, exactly, Ann?"

"That he didn't care to go. But that the Steigerwalds had been very good to him, and that he'd rather sacrifice an evening than lie to them. And he reminded you that you'd rather get in early than late to Grand and Rosalie in the morning. Wasn't that it? And that if you'd allow him to say that you and he were engaged, he'd be glad to say that he couldn't go, and why?"

"All that stuff! Conventional—absurd. It wasn't Barry. Barry never takes the conventional attitude about anything. I can't understand it. And I can't understand how we could have—well, even disagreed about so trivial a thing as Gretch Steigerwald's darned old party. Ann, we couldn't have quarreled over a thing like Gretch Steigerwald's party!"

It has been a valuable gasser all the past 12 years.

More Cash Crops and Economic Planning Suggested for Agriculture Improvement

AUSTIN, Jan. 14.—More rather than fewer cash crops and economic planning by regions are two suggestions that have been made by Dr. A. B. Cox, director of the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research, as a necessary step in the stabilization of agriculture.

"The Bureau of Business Research offers no panacea for the present ills in either agriculture or industry," Dr. Cox explained. "The problems are far more fundamental. They lie deep in natural resources, and in their areal distribution and the characteristics of people. A careful analysis of these in their relationships as the basis of a long-time program in which the constructive efforts of all agencies can be coordinated is at least the path of progress."

The Bureau does not work in technical agriculture, Dr. Cox pointed out. Its primary interests in agriculture are along the lines of agriculture as a source of raw material for industry, the buying power of agricultural populations for finished goods, and the coordinated relationships between industry and agriculture.

"These external phases of agriculture, the relationship problems, are the outstanding ones today," he said in emphasis.

Modern economic life and economic relations are more complex and subject to much wider circles of influence than formerly. Production primarily for market has brought about an interdependence of agriculture, industry and trade that has become the structure of our economic life.

"Viewed in the light of the facts just cited and the broad aspects of the problem, the biggest need of agriculture today is an agricultural policy and program based on a partnership relationship between agriculture and trade and industry. What I have said of agriculture in general is peculiarly true for agriculture in Texas.

"The goal of agriculture, at least from the standpoint of the farmer, is improved standards of living for those engaged in it. Living costs according to the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics are classified into those for food, clothing, rent, fuel and light, furniture and furnishings, and miscellaneous. About 56 per cent of all incomes of the city family is spent for food, rent, fuel and light, things ordinarily obtainable by farmers from farms. However, nothing like this 56 per cent is obtainable from any one farm. It is evident, therefore, that few, if any, farmers in Texas are in position to produce on their farms those things which constitute half the cost of an average American standard of living. That is the case in the case of a vegetable, a cash crop, crops, or other cash enterprises must play a very significant role in Texas agriculture or any other agriculture above that of the peasant. The hope of Texas agriculture, therefore, is not less but more emphasis on cash enterprises. Texas needs more, instead of fewer such crops.

Biggest Asset "The farmer's time is his biggest asset, and no farmer can occupy all his time effectively with one crop. Neither will the addition of a vegetable garden, a chicken yard, and other home supply enterprises, essential as they are, make efficient agriculture. The point I wish to make is that it is more commercialized agriculture we want and not necessarily more cash producing enterprises and not fewer. It is inevitable that cash enterprises must play an increasing role, not only in American but in world agriculture, because as the standard of living increases, the smaller the percent of income spent for food, rent and fuel and light. Cash enterprises mean first, inter-regional, national, and international markets, and second, adjustments of production to market demands and world competition.

provide the market for supplementary cash enterprises on our farms to fit into an agricultural program built around our staples. It turns out, therefore, that a well-balanced agricultural program depends heavily on developments outside of agriculture.

"The most effective key to our agricultural problems as well as those of industry is a new approach, a new method of analysis and a new policy and program based on the fundamental relationships discovered. The agriculturist alone cannot solve the agricultural problem.

Regional Economics "Briefly stated the new approach must be through what we are pleased to call 'regional economics.' The method of analysis must be statistical. The new policy and program must be based on vertical cooperation of industry, trade and agriculture, or briefly stated, industry cooperation and coordination.

"The approach to these problems through regional economics is new and has been developed in the Bureau of Business Research. Business, speaking broadly to include agriculture, trade, and industry, and all other economic activities, is a product of or is dependent on the utilization of natural resources by people. Therefore, the essentials of the method of regional economic analysis involve, the areal location of all important accessible surface and sub-surface natural resources such as minerals, natural vegetation and varying qualities of land, an understanding of the underlying facts of the association of resources which make possible regional grouping, a setting forth of the principles governing succession in the economic utilization of these regional combinations of resources, and an evaluation of the influence of business and social institutions set up in the region, or exterior to it in modifying economic development and sphere of operation.

"Controlled production is a necessity, but it must not destroy individual incentive and initiative. To put it briefly, such control can and must come through regional economic planning. Economic planning for agriculture in Texas means the formation of an agricultural policy based on the complete utilization of the available complementary, supplementary and competitive relations of agricultural enterprises on the individual farm, in the community and as between nations to attain maximum efficiency in physical production, the formation of an agricultural policy designed to coordinate agricultural activities with the commercial and industrial development of the community, the regions in the state, the nation as a whole, and the world. For Texas and the world, the national and the world aspects of the problem are not only extremely important, they are fundamental. Our cotton, our wool, our livestock, our grain, our oil, our timber, and in fact all our major products are strongly inter-regional, national and international in both their production and consumption aspects. Planning without taking these into account is futile.

"True economic planning must not and does not destroy individual incentive and initiative. It means development of the facts as to the best time, place and way of doing things. It should mean less and not more government interference. It rests primarily on the fundamental principle of making possible action based on intelligently interpreted facts. Farmers as well as men in trade and industry will do this when research agencies get the facts and interpret these relationships. Farmers in Wisconsin, e. g., diversified when the development of near-by markets made it possible, and farmers in North Carolina have done and are doing the same thing.

TEXAS TOPICS By RAYMOND BROOKS AUSTIN, Jan. 14.—Unpaid state warrants cannot be used as security in school depositories, the department of education has ruled. A plan had been proposed in the hope that money against the deficiency warrants might be made available through this sort of an arrangement.

years for some to close after six or seven month terms. Some Texas motorist has the chance to stand very high in the good opinion of Miss Norma Sterling, daughter of Gov. and Mrs. Ross Sterling. Miss Sterling's escorts, County Atty. Clea G. Miller, and Ed Watt, both of Corsicana, were hurrying to Austin, bringing her to the mansion so she might join her parents in the New Year's reception. In their haste, when they had to change a tire on the car, they left their coats lying beside the road near Manor. Both the overcoats happened to be Christmas presents. Now Miss Sterling is hoping that the finder will tell her New Year's escorts that they may have their Christmas coats.

Murrell Backner of Dallas was among the early-year visitors to the Texas statehouse. Troops will be in the oil field on the eastern front quite a while longer it appeared, in the absence of any steps for conservation administration to replace them in holding the safety valve on the giant oil field.

Jobless Build "Model" Camp OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 14—Oklahoma City has moved its poverty stricken, homeless "squatters" from their makeshift shacks into a model unemployment camp in a "made work" program. The unemployed are paid for erecting the new camp, capable of caring for the 300 homeless families, and they receive payment for "cleaning up" their former home-site. The city provides the funds for the model camp and for removing the insanitary surroundings of their former "homes." This program of created work has provided employment for more than 200 men, beside removing what Dr. W. H. Miles, city physician, described as the "greatest menace to health in Oklahoma City." The unemployed and their families formerly lived in unclean shacks built on top of amid ash heaps and junk piles. Now they are building their modest little cabins in a well regulated camp where health rules will be enforced strictly.

TRANSFERRED WILLIAMSBURG, Va., Jan. 14.—The City Council and James county Board of Supervisors have transferred ownership of the historic old court house of 1770 to the Williamsburg Holding Corporation, the Rockefeller restoration organization. The old structure was given in exchange for the new $150,000 court house. The restoration will transform the old court house into a public library.

Lost 20 Lbs. of Fat In Just 4 Weeks Mrs. Mae West of St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I'm only 28 years old and weighed 170 lbs. until taking one box of your Kruschen Salts just 4 weeks ago. I now weigh 150 lbs. I also have more energy and furthermore I've never had a hungry moment."

Deer and turkey and duck and goose hunting, and fishing in Texas have become a considerable industry, under a broad state program of conservation and replacement of game. Probably more than a million dollars was paid to landowners for hunting rights in the season just closed. The state so far has applied all its revenues—running to about a quarter-million dollars a year—to provide more game so as to get more revenue to provide more game. Whether a future legislature may divert one of these revenues to meet other costs of the government remains to be seen. At any rate it is of interest to Texas that adjoining states are declaring a special emergency open season on surplus deer to permit hungry citizens to have food—and without having to buy licenses to kill the animal.

ASSESSMENT OF TAXES TO BEGIN SOON

Assessments of taxes for 1932 will shortly be started by Eastland County Tax Assessor George Bryant. He announces in a statement issued to the press today in which he asks the cooperation of the citizens.

His statement: "To the tax payers: "I am about to start making assessments for taxes for the year 1932 and in this connection, I want to ask for the co-operation of the entire citizenship of the county."

Eastland county's valuations are decreasing very rapidly and for this reason and on account of the general financial condition of the county it becomes necessary that we practice strict economy, in the discharging of all official duties connected with the assessing of taxes. This expense connected thereto, must be borne by the tax payer.

"Please bear in mind, that when the tax assessor calls upon you for your tax rendition, that he has complied with the provisions of the law and to ask him to call again or delay in submitting your rendition is simply doubling the expense, which the already over burdened tax paying citizenship of our county must bear. And in order to eliminate all unnecessary expense, I earnestly entreat of all, that you please submit your rendition at the time when called upon by the assessor to do so.

As tax assessor of the county, I feel that our valuations are too high and not in keeping with the law, which provides that taxes be equal and uniform and that by reason of this high valuation, we are being penalized. There may be a few instances in the county where this is not the case; but being of the opinion that it is the case, generally, I have instructed the deputy tax assessor to make reductions in values, where warranted, to the amount of 10 per cent.

However, I can give no assurance that any reduction will be allowed by the commissioner's court, as the matter of all final values rest in the powers of the board of equalization, over which I have no control.

Trusting all will endeavor to aid in the elimination of any unnecessary expense and thanking you for your past co-operation and courtesies extended, I am respectfully,

Your servant,
"GEORGE BRYANT,
"Tax Assessor."

SOUTHWEST DAIRYING ON THE UPGRADE

DENISON, Jan. 14.—Southwestern dairying continued on its upward climb and narrowly missed becoming a million dollar industry in 1931 despite general business conditions, according to annual figures of the Kraft-Phenix Cheese Corporation, released for this section by A. J. Riddle, general manager of the southwestern headquarters plant here today.

The seven Kraft-Phenix plants in Texas, Missouri, Kansas and Arkansas paid farmers in these states more than $200,000, an increase of approximately 15 per cent over their 1930 revenue, the report shows.

Greatest progress in the industry was made in the Denison section where the Kraft plant utilized 13 million pounds of milk for which farmers were paid a total of more than $200,000 according to the figures. This is an increase of 38 per cent over 1930 which in turn had showed a wide increase over 1929.

"The 1931 report certainly bears out our belief in the future of the dairying industry in the South," Mr. Riddle said. "The present is a bad time for business prophets, but we can see no reason why the dairy industry should not continue to hold its place in 1932."
