"BACK TO THE FARM FOR THE JOBLESS."

"Back to the farm" is the warning of the federal government agents. C. W. Woodman is the director of the United States employment service for Texas.

He has announced that several thousand Texas families will be given employment within the next 10 days picking cotton and that the number will increase as the activity increases in this phase of the work in the months of July and August. Director Woodman has been prominent in the labor circles of Texas for years. He has been affiliated with the state as well as the federal employment service for years.

He has warned those who are willing to accept jobs in the country that families should not start for the cotton picking sections until they have conferred with the federal bureau agents at Fort Worth for the very excellent reason that the bureau retains field men throughout the cotton regions and they know exactly where and how many pickers will be needed at a given time. All honest labor is legitimate labor. All who are able to work should be willing to work. Man is not made to be a parasite—if there is a job within his reach.

SECY. WALLACE COVERS THE MIDWEST.

Secy. Henry A. Wallace of the department of agriculture, returning from a 10-day trip in the Middle West, said to Washington correspondent that sentiment in the swine and corn producing sections was "ripe for another stage in the step to lift farm prices to pre-war levels."

In his interview he appealed to the cotton producers for immediate action in signing agreements to reduce acreage. He said "It is the hope of the administration that before the close of this week every cotton producer in the entire belt will have been given an opportunity to do his part in this effort to restore prosperity."

This Hawkeye statesman and economist has received many reports from his agents that there are cotton growers who are willing to gouge the government in their high estimates on the value of the cotton to be plowed under. He sounded another note—that a national conference of hog and corn producers may be held in the Mid-West by the middle of the month of July. As for the farmers of America, the livestock industry and the producers of wool mohair should do their full part in the contributions to this grand scheme or project for the recovery of America and the restoration of a fair purchasing power which hit its lowest levels in recent years.

An administration and its agents cannot do all the work. There must be fair play and square dealing on the part of those who are to be benefited by the extraordinary laws and sweeping innovations which have been resorted to for the rehabilitation of this nation and its people.

THURBER PASSES OUT.

A third of a century ago Thurber was the great mining center of Texas. It had a payroll of three or four thousands in the height of the mining season. It was the soft coal producing center of Texas. It had a city government and its laws or ordinances were made by the mining kings. It had hotels and business houses and public buildings and churches and school houses. It had a large Italian population. It was what is known as "the closed town" from every viewpoint or standpoint. It was the scene of many strikes. It ended as an open shop town.

Well, the drill is the thing. The driller brought in the Mid-Continent territory and oil flowed from thousands of wells. The demand for coal grew less and less as time rolled on. Engine oil burners were substituted for the coal burners on the rails and natural gas drove coal from the bins in the cellar and supplies the domestic needs of millions of people. Official Thurber has gone out of existence. Mines there are mostly deserted. Thurber is without any form of government except that ruled by a constable and justice of the peace. Official headquarters of the mines and the brickyards have been transferred to Fort Worth. Gone are the glories of Thurber, in its time one of the most prosperous of mining towns. Gone are the corporations or individuals who built the town and made it one of the greatest of soft coal mining camps to be found in the Southwest. Gone are the rich dividends of yesteryear. Petroleum put the skids to soft coal, and Thurber is a memory—until King Coal scores a comeback.

RUSSIA AS BUYER OF AMERICAN COTTON.

China applies for a R. F. C. loan in order to purchase 900,000 bales of American cotton and a huge quantity of American wheat. It was granted. Japan has buyers in the cotton belt for a large supply of the fleecy staple.

Now the R. F. C. has made arrangements for a series of loans to American exporters with which to finance the sale of between 60,000 and 80,000 bales of cotton for shipment to Russia. Col. Jesse H. Jones, head of the Reconstruction corporation, announced that the opening of negotiations for shipments of other commodities to the Slav nation constituted the first such move by the American government since the Lenin-Stalin nation came into its present power.

All R. F. C. loans to Russia are "unconditionally guaranteed by the state bank of U. S. S. R. and the loans will be for one year at an interest rate of five per cent." Why shouldn't the American government (or rather the American people) sell and send staples to the ports of entry of Soviet Russia? Great Britain, or rather its manufacturers and tasters, have been doing a paying business in recent years with the Slavs. French traders are in on the ground floor. Germany has been doing a huge trade with the Russians.

Indeed, all the foreign nations, little as well as large, are ready to accept Russian money in exchange for their products. Soviet Russia does not owe the American government (or people) a dime. Great powers of the world, speaking of European nations owe the American government and its people billions of dollars. America trades with the defaulted nations—or the repudiationists. Why not with Stalin and his Slavs?

Because Some Driver Was in a Hurry

Roosevelt Message to Conference Straight From Shoulder

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD

Pres. Roosevelt is back on his territory job. He is facing many mighty economic problems. He has the world economic conference on his hands. Delegates from the so-called good countries of Europe formed a bloc. Their delegates issued their ultimatum to the American president. They demanded a complete surrender on his part and on the part of the American public. They insisted that the United States return to the gold standard, that the American dollar should be stabilized and that the representatives of European governments should dictate terms all along the line. Well the Roosevelt message to the London conference and the representatives of foreign nations was straight from the shoulder. There was no evasion, no temporizing, no straddling and no avoiding the issue.

This was the blow that knocked the European delegates into what Woodrow Wilson would have termed "a cocked hat": "The sound internal economic situation of a nation is a greater factor in its well being than the price of its currency in changing terms of currency in other nations."

DOWN THE BROAD HIGHWAY

This was going half the road. Then the president traveled all the road: "Let me be frank in saying that the United States of America seeks the kind of dollar which a generation hence will have the same purchasing and debt-paying power as the dollar value we hope to attain in the near future. Our broad purpose is permanent stabilization of every nation's currency." Next he fired a long shot that rang around the world: "When the world works out concerted policies in a majority of nations to produce balanced budgets and living within their means then we can properly discuss a better distribution of the world's gold and silver supply to act as a reserve base of national currency. Restoration of world trade is an important partner both in the means and in the result. The conference was called to better and perhaps to cure fundamental economic ills. It must not be diverted from that effort."

PLAY BALL OR QUIT

Well, this was a broad invitation for the European delegates and their rulers to place American tobacco in their pipes and smoke it. Why the stabilization of the American dollar? France first debased its franc until it was almost valueless and France at the time, as well as today had the largest gold reserve of any nation. Great Britain was the next to slip off the gold standard with the Bank of England and the government controlling a fair share of the gold reserve of the world. Our government was not the aggressor. France led the way for the demoralization of the currencies of the world and then Great Britain took the plunge and created a billion dollar fund to protect the pound sterling and to increase its commerce the wide world over wherever there are bargain counters to be found on the fringes of the seven seas.

Texas Topics

By RAYMOND BROOKS

AUSTIN, July 7 — In a broad study of crime and punishment, the people of Texas will have to determine for themselves whether there is any law of the protection of human life.

They have been studying technicalities of the law for a long time, and sealing some of the loopholes that let criminals out. They have begun and will carry through — probably in a disorganized, ineffectual way — a long study whether or not two standards of conduct, two values of punishment, have ingrafted a bitter parody upon the fundamental theory of the law's justice.

Texas shall continue to see people locked in felons' cells for stealing a dollar's worth of food, or for possessing whiskey. The law, in its majesty, says those are crimes and that is the punishment.

Values in terms of government policy, in terms of the "realpolitik" fundamental nature of government are shifting so fast it is hard for a people to keep their feet on the ground of reality to keep their conceptions up with either the long distance or the direction these policies have led.

The socialism of Eugene V. Debs, upon the background of his times, would not wear the same deep hues as against a background now in which a state's rights democracy has gone further in many respects than Debs ever dreamed.

America, its state government tagging as fast as they can at the heels of the federal government, is striding into new experimental ground as untried as Hamilton and Jefferson explored, as new and uncharted as Lincoln or Wilson trod.

And calmly, buoyantly, rejoicing, as it turns from the barren reaches of distress and hunger to the even problematical benefits of an economic new deal. One set of textbooks on government became obsolete March 3. Another set must be written to tell the students of tomorrow what government was like in this stirring time.

tain inhibitions are wont to rise every exact with these stranger. Ones intuitions are generally all that can be depended upon under such circumstances.

I also have a decided aversion to being screeched out of a contribution. It smacks of surrendering judgment to the petitioner.

Anticipating the legalization of boxing and wrestling in Texas the Cisco Country club is preparing to avail itself of the entertainment opportunities to be afforded. The club will keep its forthcoming programs strictly for members, a policy that should keep them amateur in status.

President J. A. Bearman, has had constructed a 24-foot outdoor ring, or arena, where matches may be staged and where square-dancing may be indulged. The arena will be finished today. It is located on the point of land projecting from the bluff over-hanging Lake Cisco at the rear of the club house. Lights have been installed for night programs.

The arena will be ready for a program at which husbands of the club will shortly entertain their wives. Bearman, off to St. Louis and the international convention of Lions clubs Sunday, hustled to provide the arena before he leaves so that it would be ready for just such an event.

The wives of the club will be kept in the dark about the program that their husbands will prepare for them. The curiosity aroused should appeal to the lovely woman nature.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Disinclination to part with a dime cost me a street-comber's anathema yesterday. A hatchet-faced individual accosted me, probably because I look easy, with a plea for a loaf of bread and a "bit of bacon rind" and, having contributed a sum to one of his ilk yesterday (in return for value received by way of having the lawn at home mowed and the alley weeds cut), I declined as gracefully as I could on the plea that all the money I have belongs to somebody else.

Whereupon his leathern face flushed and his spectacles bobbed up and down upon his nose. The hooked walking cane in his elbow quivered indignation.

"I hope to God," he ground out, "that every man in Cisco who's told me he don't have any money, don't have any. I hope to God that everybody in this damn' town is broke and gets broke and that times gets harder for everyone of them."

A malediction vehement enough but amusingly futile. It invited pity, not the dignity of a resentment.

I suggested he try a local relief agency and gathered fresh scorn. "I ain't and I ain't going to. All that's for is to give some guy a job."

Five minutes later he was making a purchase in a local store. Not with my money, however. He may have been deserving. I do not know. Certainly not.

DUDE RANCH TO OBSERVE FIRST ANNIVERSARY

The S-Bar Dude Ranch a hobby of Dr. G. M. Stephenson that has grown into a business, will celebrate its first anniversary Sunday at the ranch, five miles northeast of Cisco and just off the Breckenridge highway.

Free ice drinks will be served on the trails during the day. Charges for horse-back riding will be reduced to half price. The ranch will hold open house through the entire day and into the evening.

The S-Bar Dude Ranch, during the year of its existence, has been built into one of the most popular resorts of its character in this section of Texas, drawing patronage from points as distant as Dallas and Waco.

Located in wooded hills, coursed with scenic canyons, it offers a variety of trails to make every ride from its stables a charming prospect. Some of the routes taken by these bridal paths are 15 miles in length.

All equipment of the ranch is up-to-date and well kept. All is owned by the ranch and nothing is shoddy. There are 17 horses, 11 of them gaited, and all well-gentled and excellent saddle mounts.

Dr. Stephenson has taken a great deal of pride in the development of the resort. He began it as a hobby growing out of his natural love of horses and gradually expanding the hobby into a business as it met a popular demand.

He hopes to attract a large number of visitors and friends to the celebration Sunday.

BARGAIN BRIDE

MEAN HERE TODAY

BARRETT COVILIN, back in New York after years abroad, falls in love with ELINOR STAFFORD. He is 35 and she is 20. Elinor returns his affection but her jealous, scheming mother, LIDA STAFFORD, breaks up the romance by convincing Barrett that Elinor was only flirting with him.

Rich MISS ELLA SEXTON, Elinor's aunt, dies and, to the despair of the relatives, leaves her entire fortune to Barrett. Lida Stafford has been flirting with VANCE CARPENTER. Vance learns she will not divorce her husband, BENJAMIN STAFFORD, he shoots Beatwell. It is uncertain whether the wounded man will live or die.

Barrett does not want Miss Elinor's money but can not give it back to the rightful inheritors because of their pride. Suddenly a plan comes to him. He tells Elinor that if she will marry him and live as a guest in his home for a year he will give her the entire sum to divide between her relatives.

Knowing the money may save her father's life, Elinor agrees. They decide to have the ceremony now.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXIII

ELINOR'S voice came over the wire a trifle unsteadily. "Yes, Barrett?" she said.

"Dearest, Art Palmer—I mean Doctor Palmer—" he corrected himself mockingly, "wants to know whether you want to be spoiled—I think he said—in his church?"

Her voice trembled even more. It was the way he had said "Dearest."

"I'd like it very much if you would."

"I'd like it very much anywhere," he assured her. He added, "Is everything going along as it should?" He could not deny the tenderness he felt for her. After all, the situation she was facing would be difficult for any girl.

"Oh, yes!" she assured him. "Quite certain."

"May I drop in this evening? There are a few things I want to talk about."

"Please do."

"Then—until this evening, dearest," he said a bit too loudly. He heard her half-whispered, "Good-by."

Celeste was running her bath. An almost overpoweringly sweet scent floated to Elinor from the room that was filling with steam. Celeste had evidently borrowed bodily from one of the many Venetian glass bottles standing on the peacock blue shelves of her mother's dressing room.

"Something old and something new, something borrowed and something blue," chanted Celeste, returning.

Elinor laughed. "But I haven't anything that isn't old, Celeste!" she admitted.

Celeste had considered that, she confessed, nodding. She had slipped out to buy a handkerchief and if Mademoiselle would deign to carry that it would be new.

Celeste then reached into a pocket of her pet, small apron. Elinor took the offering, a pretty bit of cob-web linen, broad-hemmed and embroidered with a bold "E. S."

"It was sweet of you, Celeste!" exclaimed Elinor. Her mother had had no thought of her. She had been thinking only of how much Barrett would do now to make up for his "treachery" about the will.

"Last night I added the letters," said Celeste. "Ah, and with love. I thought of you—thinking of your sweetheart!"

ELINOR flushed. True, she had thought of the one Celeste called "her sweetheart" most of the night but not as Celeste had dreamed.

"I shall keep the handkerchief always, Celeste," she said. "I am so grateful to you, and I'm going to show it to Mr. Colvin."

"Ah, Mademoiselle, you are so sweet! I dream that some day I may be in your service!"

"I would like nothing better, Celeste. I'll remember that," Elinor promised.

Even Lida felt an unwonted thawing when Elinor appeared at half past 11 from her father's room. She had been sitting silently by his bed, her hand on his weak hand, her eyes on his which smiled at her.

Leaving him, stooping above him she had heard him murmur, "My—blessings—dearest!"

Lida saw Elinor's wet eyes but what struck her more acutely was her daughter's painful shabbiness. "You should have something new—" she broke out sharply, "that old coat and dress—"

The first time she saw the girl's beauty without envy. Elinor had been very gentle since that terrible night. Lida, riding down town, wished she knew how to tell her that she wished things had been different.

"Your flowers are exquisite," said Lida as she looked at Elinor's corsage, an artful blending of spring blossoms which had been chosen, after great thought, by Barrett. "But those roses—" she ended, brows raised questioning.

"Father gave them to me from some that were sent to him," Elinor answered. Every inch of the ride she had seen the chauffeur stowing her bags in the back of the car. Perhaps because that action had made it so clear that she was not coming home again, that she was going to live in Barrett Colvin's house. As a "guest" of course. But it was a definite step, none the less; an extremely definite step. Yet what else could she have done? She could not deny those others—all of whom she loved—the advantages that would come to them through her marriage.

AS she had done perhaps a thousand times before she told herself that she was doing the right thing. She must not, she reflected, let this hurt Barrett in any way. He had been so fine about it. Few men would have felt about the will as he felt.

She saw the spire of the church ahead of them, outlined through a gap in towering buildings. "We're almost there," Lida said.

Elinor felt her cheeks sting. She slipped a glove from her left hand. The night before he had brought her a ring that had made Lida's eyes glitter with envy. It held a large, flawless diamond set simply, beautifully. Elinor had not once thought of an engagement ring. The need of it was obvious, however, she realized, and a part of the pretense. A moment, a few moments more, and that same finger would bear another ring. She drew a deep breath, hoping that it would steady her.

Then she saw Bessie and Jim and the boys, waiting for them. Bessie was beaming and at the same time weeping.

"Darling child!" said Bessie unsteadily as she moved toward Elinor.

"Well, well!" murmured Jim. He was pumping her hand up and down.

"I presume we may as well go in—" Lida suggested with a weary, ironic smile. Bessie's display of emotion was simply too frightful. It was, of course, the sort of display to be expected from a creature whose house was habitually scented with cabbage and other odors from what Bessie called "plain, nourishing foods." It was all thoroughly revolting to Lida.

She saw that Elinor was clinging to her aunt's warm, pudgy, ungloved hand. Lida hated clinging but something that had once been heart in her ached dully without her knowing why.

The verger opened the door and the group made their way into the church vestibule.

PERFORMANCE CHECKED!

IT definitely assures SMOOTHER PERFORMANCE. After you've tried Humble Motor Fuel, will you please use this card (it requires no postage) to give us your frank opinion of its performance in your car? I have tested Humble Motor Fuel for performance in my car and have the following comments to make: NAME ADDRESS STREET AND NUMBER CITY

Performance Check Cards similar to the one reproduced in this advertisement were distributed to Texas motorists by Humble Service Stations. Thousands of them have been returned to the Humble Company at Houston.

When Humble Motor Fuel was announced six weeks ago, we made no exaggerated advertising claims for our new product. We said to the motorists of Texas, "Test Humble Motor Fuel in your car; compare it with any regular priced gasoline you have ever used; then tell us what you think of it." Literally thousands of Texans have tested Humble Motor Fuel. They have sent us their comments on Performance Check Cards which they secured at Humble Service Stations. Many of them say: Humble Motor Fuel develops more power than other regular priced gasolines. Many of them say: Humble Motor Fuel has a quicker pick-up and smoother acceleration than other regular priced gasolines. Many of them say: Humble Motor Fuel has eliminated the knock from my motor. Many of them say: Humble Motor Fuel gives more miles per gallon than other regular priced gasolines. And all of them say: Humble Motor Fuel definitely delivers smoother performance. The Humble Company knew these things were true when Humble Motor Fuel was introduced to the public. But they were not used as "advertising claims;" nor are they advertising claims today. They are voluntary statements from your friends and neighbors, on file at the Humble Company's home office in Houston and photostatic copies of the cards from your city are on file with the local Humble agent who will be glad to show them to you on request. They prove the definite superiority of Humble Motor Fuel over other regular priced gasolines with the only worthwhile test—the test made in your own car under all sorts of driving conditions. This unanimous acceptance of Humble Motor Fuel by the motorists of Texas leads us to repeat a statement we made earlier in this series of advertisements: The Humble Oil & Refining Company will never allow its products to take second place.

"The warm weather is no excuse for not attending divine services and meeting our obligations to the church and to God."

Bi-Metalism---

First, because the world needs it and the restoration does not cost any individual nor any government any loss. Second, because it is placing silver for the world's benefit, exactly where silver was when a secret and nefarious act deprived it of part of its money function, by denying its right of free coinage at the mint and subsequently withdrawing in large degree its legal tender qualities. And third, because our great potential market for the long future must be with silver using countries, whose people can buy only in proportion to the exchange value of their silver or silver credit.

Advocates of the single gold standard seem to find a special sanctity in gold, with a divine right to have this commodity recognized at the mints at $20.67 an ounce, and at the same time see a destructive sin in a similar recognition of silver at its own natural ratio.

Would any flood of silver come into this country and take away all our gold in exchange? This question, so often propounded to us, is founded in fear and nonsense. Bi-metalism would not permit the taking away of one ounce of gold in exchange for silver, unless the Secretary of the Treasury permitted. For under a proper bi-metallic practice, a government has a right to determine which of the two metals shall be paid upon presentation of any credit at the treasury.

TO ENFORCE LAW

HELENA, Mont., July 7 — Strict enforcement of state agricultural grading and licensing laws will be made by special inspectors at various "ports of entry" into Montana, according to state horticulturist George L. Knight. Trucks bringing produce into the state will be halted on all leading highways, and every effort will be made to prevent "dumping" of inferior articles, Knight said.

SEATTLE, Wash., July 7 — A 40-day horseracing season was fixed for Seattle turf fans, by the now legal state horseracing commission when referendum attempts failed to kill the new pari-mutuel law, the commission immediately undertook disposal of hundreds of applications and the fixing of seasons throughout the state. The Seattle season will be from Aug. 2 to Sept. 16. Other dates during the same season were fixed for other principal cities throughout the state, where horseracing will be offered.
