DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

THE CRY OF THE HELPLESS:—O God, give us help against the adversary for vain is the help of man.
—Psalm 60: 10, 11.

NEWTON D. BAKER THROWS A SURPRISE.

Newton D. Baker is a leading citizen of Ohio and a proud citizen of Cleveland. He addressed an important conference of the Cleveland democratic leaders namely, members of the county central committee which had re-elected the former secretary of war as chairman. Newton D. Baker didn't burn any bridges behind him. He did furnish a surprise to the political leaders of America when he said, speaking of the campaign of 1928: "Al Smith was 50 times as big as the platform they stood him on." Significant to say the least.

Now the nation over the democratic leaders are chattering as well as speculating. Newton D. Baker has declared repeatedly that he is not a candidate for the presidential nomination; that he is not even in a receptive mood. Well, perhaps he is preparing the way for a draft should a deadlock come and a compromise offering made necessary by the powers that be who work the wires behind the scenes. Some praise from the former war secretary. "Al Smith was 50 times as big as the platform they stood him on." Was it display of good or bad politics? Let the future tell the story.

A MAN WITHOUT A COUNTRY.

In the long ago a $60,000 fine was imposed against Henry M. Blackmer, a Colorado oil millionaire, for refusing to appear as a witness in the Fall-Doherty Teapot Dome oil trial. Blackmer fled to France. James A. O'Neil also fled to France. He was held in contempt. These fugitives who deserted the United States for foreign lands laughed at the law. They would not testify. They preferred to become exiles from their native country. They had all the money that men needed. They made the rounds of the capitals of Europe. They saw all the famous places of European history. They lived as only millionaires were able to live. O'Neil was the first to go. He is said to have died a broken hearted man.

Now Henry Blackmer is to return to America. He has thrown up his hands. His lawyers are ready to pay the $60,000 fine and the payment of the penalty will release to the oil millionaire's estate $1,000,000 in liberty bonds seized when he defaulted payment and fled to foreign climes. He will go all the way. His counsel will arrange a settlement with the government in this and other cases involving failure to file adequate income tax returns and totaling several million dollars.

James O'Neil was one of the most popular men of the petroleum world. He made the mistake of running away. His pride was broken when conscience struck him and he realized that he was a man without a country or a flag. Henry Blackmer held out to the last. Then he bowed to the inevitable. He danced and he will pay for the music. Then he will return to America and will be the owner of a country and a flag and a place where his conscience will cease to trouble him. It is a human interest story and it should remind the boys of today that "money isn't everything."

A JACK RABBIT NOT AN ANIMAL.

One of the knottiest problems that confronts the people of West Texas, a land where the jackrabbit runs not only wild but plentiful, has been solved by Judge Henry L. Webb of Odessa. Judge Webb was a lawmaker from Odessa for several terms. He is fat and hearty and when he is not serious minded, he is humorist well known in West Texas and a corking good story teller. Well, the Odessa American Legion decided to put on a show. They asked for a temporary injunction restraining the authorities from interfering with the rabbit roping contest planned in connection with a Memorial day program.

Judge Webb never batted an eye. He was as solemn as Moses. He was as wise as Blackstone. He was erudite as Coke. He granted a temporary injunction. This was his ruling. "In the eyes of the law, jackrabbits are not animals but rodents. The event will not be degrading, demoralizing, or even inhuman. The Legion may continue with its planned event." Thus a jackrabbit is a rat and there are thousands of Americans who insist that fried or broiled rabbit is so juicy and tender that it satisfies the taste as well as the palate of the epicurists of the land.

Now another decision should be handed down by an American Moses of the law giving type. Is the "son of a wild jackass" as pictured by Sen. George H. Moses of New Hampshire, a human, an animal, or a rodent? Tell it, and tell it now. There is a mighty nation-wide campaign coming and a judicial decree may clarify the political atmosphere.

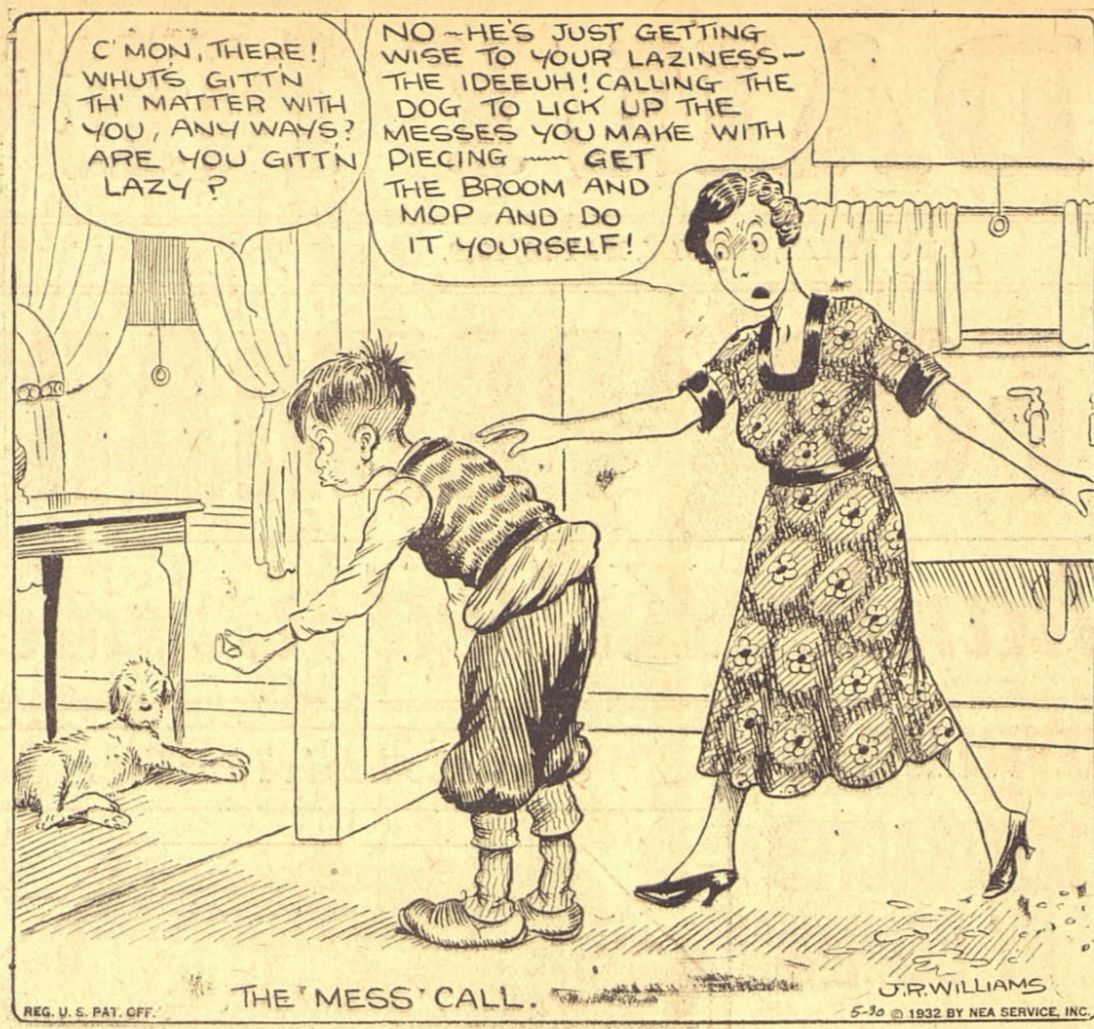

DIVIDENDS SPEAK LOUDER THAN WORDS.

A dividend of $2 on the common stock of the American Cigar company payable June 15 to stock on record of June 4 has been announced. This is the first dividend declared on the company's common stock since November, 1929.

Coming nearer home the Humble Oil and Refining company directors declared a regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share on the common stock of the company, payable July to stockholders of record at 3 p. m. June 1. There is no preferred stock. In that city known as the financial metropolis of the American world, meaning New York, the Credit Expansion company, headed by Owen D. Young, began a series of meetings May 23 to work out plans to aid in putting billions of dollars in bank credit to work. Since the federal reserve system began its program of pumping out credit through purchases of U. S. government securities in February, it has brought up some $725,000,000 worth of governments.

This has resulted in piling up of excess or unused reserves of member banks in the amount of approximately $300,000,000 which might form the reserve basis for the extension of a theoretical maximum of $3,000,000,000 in bank credit. A noted New York banker issued a warning that too much must not be expected from the committee at the start. A member of the group of 12 headed by Owen D. Young analyzed the situation thus:

"It is highly improbable that any financial Moses will be found almost overnight who will have a definite workable plan which will be immediately adopted and applied and which will lead industrial and financial New York out of the fog of the depression."

It is to be hoped that after the magician has been found that a plan will be adopted which will lead industrial and financial America out of the fog of the depression. Regardless of all the patter and the chatter the peep of dawn and not the crack of doom is on the way. It may be a slow traveler but it is coming.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Whooops, my dear! The old stand-pipe is down and the street, in the center of which it stood, is finished. I found information to that effect upon my desk Saturday morning. Comm'r Joe Clemens is authority for it.

The contracting company tore the stand-pipe down but Joe had to clean up after the contractors. I believe that he would rather have done the tearing down and let the contractors have done the cleaning up. Anyway, it is finished, Joe announces, pointing out that a promise made by the city to residents who bought property on the hill 14 years ago has been fulfilled. All things come to him who waits. Now W. J. Foxworth, J. T. Anderson, J. B. Cate (notice the "J" in each ones initials?) and others may sleep in peace, unharmed by a terrific fear of waking up in the middle of the night while being swept away on the crest of a big flood pouring over the lip of the reservoir.

The above information is not for Dr. E. L. Graham. I earnestly hope he does not see it.

Jack Anderson is certain that business is improving. Friday morning he was as chirpy as a sparrow. Mrs. Anderson had given him 20 cents. It appears Jack has been limited to a dime a day and the sudden increase in pocket change is solid evidence that United States Steel will rise on the exchange and sales of Chevrolets will increase. Twenty cents is a lot of money. It will buy a bottle of home brew with a nickel over to buy aspirins for an antidote. It will buy almost a quart of ice cream. It will buy over a gallon of gasoline, and put in the collection plate at church this morning it will throw one under suspicion of having evaded the income tax. It will almost buy a Cisco bond.

No wonder Jack was feeling so well. No wonder he jingled his pockets when talking to a prospective customer. The psychological effect of jingling coins is the best business getter on earth.

J. A. Bearman furnishes the first sign of reviving activity in the oil industry in this section. "Jake" has taken the bull by the horns and made a contract to drill seven wells in Shackelford and Throckmorton counties. Jake declares that an oil operator doesn't need to move away from Cisco to get ahead in the oil business. He says he can stay here, enjoy the conveniences that Cisco has and operate as profitably as anywhere. No matter where he moves he is not going to find oil "under his nose" all the time. He must cover lots of territory and he can cover lots of territory out of Cisco just as effectively as out of anywhere else. If an oil man were a sort of clairvoyant, able to tell infallibly where the elusive flowing gold is located the case would be different. But there is not a one of them—speaking of the independents—who is able to predict accurately what the price per barrel will be a week hence, and that should be

In the Political Arena

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD

Sen. William E. Borah of Idaho is perhaps the most spectacular statesman in public life. He is one of the most thoroughly independent statesmen in public life except on general election day. Then it is his lifelong custom to vote the republican ticket without a scratch. He is a masterful man and the people of Idaho never desert him. He has no machine. He has no organization to speak of at home or abroad. He is the Lone Eagle of politics just as Col. Charles A. Lindbergh is the Lone Eagle of the air.

Now he has pulled another spectacular stunt which has given a jolt to the republicans and a thrill to the democrats. He will not attend the Chicago convention. He will not participate by wire or otherwise in its proceedings, and he hints that he will take no part in the campaign to come. Indeed, he is not popular with the practical politicians of the republican party away from home.

A prohibitionist, he voted against the submission of the 18th amendment. A woman suffragist, he voted against the submission of the 19th amendment. If Joseph Weldor Bailey was the last democrat, then William E. Borah is the last republican in unswerving loyalty to the dogma of states rights. He believes that the states should go on record as to woman suffrage and that the police power of the state should not have been surrendered to the federal government in the adoption of the 18th amendment to the constitution. Yet in all his campaigns for reelection, he has been given the votes of the women and the leading pros of Idaho. He is an uncompromising pro. He believed in the justice of the gospel of "ballot for women." He is for enforcement of the pro and all other laws.

Sen. Borah was the star orator for the republicans in the campaign of 1928. He went all the way. He made speeches in Texas and elsewhere. Perhaps he turned the tide which led to the overwhelming victory for the republican standard bearer. He appealed to the American people to uphold "the cause of prohibition and the party of continuity." He won, and since in all the battles which have taken place in the senate he has been at sword's points with President Hoover and his proposals. Now he has let it be known that he will not go to Chicago and he has hinted that he will take no part in the campaign after the presidential nominations have been made.

A most unique and outstanding individual is "the Lone Eagle." But the prediction is made that he will change his mind, that he will give loyal support to Hoover and his running mate and that late in the campaign he will be found where the guns roar the loudest and the warriors of politics are found the thickest.

Texas democrats have spoken. They are in behind John Nance Garner to a finish. They will invade the Windy City late in the month of June. They pledged themselves to fight until the last ditch and win or lose to go down with colors flying. Well, the agony will be over in less than five weeks the prize winners will be named, and the democratic donkey will be started on the road to the White House or the slaughter house.

The house was occupied by Mrs. R. S. Walker who is visiting with her children in Oklahoma. It is owned by Mrs. John Hightower. The electric light meter had been removed and there was no possibility of the fire having started from faulty wiring. Fire Marshal Gustafson said. The cause was undetermined.

Cooperative Use Pays Well

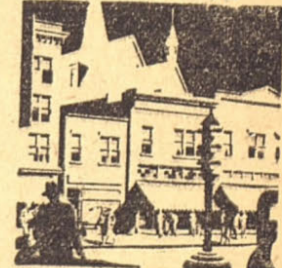

Here is a lesson in the value of co-operation.

Time was when every community had its own small, isolated electric power plant—if it had any electric service at all.

That was before it was technically possible to link up groups of towns and provide them with power through widespread systems of electric transmission lines.

Today many communities share each power plant. Thus they utilize the facilities more efficiently and receive a higher grade of service at a much smaller cost. The small town's new industrial importance is a direct outgrowth of this improvement in power supply.

The West Texas Utilities Company is rendering this dependable, inexpensive and elastic type of power supply to 125 progressive West Texas cities and towns.

Do you know that your increased use of Electric Service is billed on a surprisingly low rate schedule... and adds only a small amount to your total bill?

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

JOSEPH, THE DREAMER

MUCH OF THE AMBITION OF JACOB WAS INHERITED BY JOSEPH — A YOUNGER SON AMONG JEALOUS AND FORCEFUL BROTHERS.

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for May 29.

By W. E. GILROY, D. D., Editor of The Congregationalist

Much of the ambition of Jacob was inherited by Joseph—a younger son among jealous and forceful brothers. The ambition that moved Joseph did not find such crooked devices as his father's ambition had found, but it created in Joseph a lack of proper sensitiveness about the feelings of others, and a lack of reticence concerning his attitude toward the world and what he anticipated that the world would do for him.

The man who lives too exclusively in a world that centers about himself is not apt to be liked either by those of his own household or by those of his immediate environment. We do not like the man who talks too much about himself, whose conversation suggests that he is a child of preference, and revolves around all that the world is going to do for him and that he is going to do for the world.

Even in religion there is a danger that our familiarity with the Almighty and our confidence in his favor may be more a matter of vanity and ambition than of humility and true faith.

Joseph, as a matter of fact, was a very good and very competent man. He was a child of fortune in more ways than one. But in the story of the youth as he grows up among his brethren, talking too freely about himself and making too much of his dreams, there is something that is not altogether attractive.

There were lessons that Joseph had to learn in adversity, and his character came to its true greatness through a long experience of suffering and trial—experiences through which, also, his brethren were to learn much and to find a nobler character.

If, however, the dreamer may be unwise and voluble in too freely exploiting his dreams, there is no warrant for hating the dreamer. The attitudes of Joseph's brethren were wrong. They allowed what might have been a just cause for amusement, and for passing resentment, to develop in them a studied and intense hatred, awaiting only its opportunity for expression and action.

After all, our sympathies must be with the dreamer, for how could the world go on without him and without his dreams? The tendency of the world is not to make too much but rather too little of its dreamers.

The psychologists today tell us that our dream life has largely to do with our suppressed desires, and they make the suppressed desires of this dream life move almost wholly in the world of dark and ignoble things.

Why should not the suppressed hopes, and aspirations, and longings of men for higher and better things affect their dream life quite as much as the suppressed desires of evil? At any rate we can certainly think of the day dreams, if not of the night dreams of men, as linked with the conception of better lives and a better world.

In the ambition of Joseph there was at least nothing ignoble. At a later time Paul referred to his own great Christian career as beginning in obedience to a heavenly vision. In Joseph there was that same spirit of obedience—the yielding of his life to higher and to better things.

It is not sufficient alone to dream even of our own aggrandizement and responsibility. It is only as the dream touches our wills and makes us responsive to its ideal, and its appeal, that the dream of today becomes the reality of a better tomorrow.

CHAPTER I
The green roadster cutting its way, sleek and ribbon-like, down the boulevard came to an abrupt, jolting stop at the intersection with Twenty-fourth street.

Cherry Dixon's chin rose to meet the sweep of the cold wind. Fluttering ends of a coral scarf escaped from her throat to do a mad dance over one shoulder. It was one of those days in early April when brilliant sunshine showered down on the world without warming it. The pale gold radiance seemed almost to melt the air more biting. But it was spring sunshine, spring air and the combination was irresistible.

Cherry crooked her wrist for a quick glance at a watch dial. Only 1:10 now. She was not due for 20 minutes. There was plenty of time—oh, plenty to reach the Wellington for her '90 engagement.

She had known all along there was time enough. Little danger that today of all days she would be late!

Another halt for traffic lights and then on again. Cherry's impatience was gone. What a day it was to be 19, to know the beige suit was as becoming as it was new, to be on her way to meet an exciting young man and to know—at least to know almost—that he cared as much about the meeting as she did!

It had been the greatest luck in the world, surely, that for the second time in a week she was to see Dan Phillips. Oh, it had been simple to manage, telling Mother about the Guild committee meeting and arranging to drive into town alone. For that matter, what other girl of 19 would have to explain where she was going and with whom if the notion to take a drive at mid-day happened to strike her?

The roadster reached the viaduct and was swept into the slow stream of east-bound travel. At Twelfth street—Wellington's busiest thoroughfare, boasting three buildings 20 stories high—the flash of green was almost lost in the crush of taxicabs, trucks, limousines and small, wheezing vehicles.

There was no time now to try to justify her deception, no time for day dreams. The shrill, authoritative blast of an officer's whistle sent the swarming mass ahead. The girl in the green car managed expertly to keep abreast of the current. Three blocks more and the roadster swerved to the curb before the Hotel Wellington.

There was no time now to try to justify her deception, no time for day dreams. The shrill, authoritative blast of an officer's whistle sent the swarming mass ahead. The girl in the green car managed expertly to keep abreast of the current. Three blocks more and the roadster swerved to the curb before the Hotel Wellington.

Cherry stepped out, surrendered the car to a doorman and entered the gray stone building. She crossed the lobby and mounted the broad staircase leading to the mezzanine.

CHERRY DIXON

Dixon's arrival that a tall young man strode into the Wellington lobby. He wore a gray suit and carried a topcoat. His gray felt was tipped at an angle just slightly rakish. Broad shoulders, rather angular. Not a handsome young man but an attractive one.

"Cherry!"
Brown eyes laughed up at gray ones. The girl was prettier when she smiled. The green velvet of the chair was a perfect background for her coloring. The small, rather oval face was creamy ivory except where tinges of rose burned through on each cheek. Curling lashes made the dark eyes darker. Her lips were crimson, possibly explained by the silver vanity she held. Nature had designed those lips a trifle wide but the effect was charming.

The tilted brim of her close fitting brown hat revealed a crescent of dark hair over one temple. Except for the brown hat and coral scarf Cherry was entirely in beige—beige suit and sweater, beige pumps and cobweb hose, gloves and even a purse of the same shade. The tone suited her perfectly.

DAN PHILLIPS pulled the nearest chair nearer and swung into it.

"A thousand pardons if I'm late!" he began. "I had three clocks and a watch and I set 'em all—"

"But you're not late. You're five minutes ahead of time. See? Cherry held up a slender wrist banded with patinum. The tiny oblong dial on the platinum band recorded 25 minutes past one. "I—I came in early for some errands and finished them sooner than I expected," she added. Prevarication No. 11 for Miss Cherry Dixon that day, but surely she must keep him from guessing at her eagerness.

"Then it's all right. Of course the three clocks each keep different time and I couldn't be sure—excuse me, Miss Dixon, but I've got to stop right here and tell you that of all God's fairest creatures you are the prettiest, the most utterly devastating!"

"Please, Mr. Phillips!" The cheeks were crimson but the girl's eyes were laughing.

"Mr. Phillips? I thought it was going to be 'Dan' from now on?"

"Well, then, Dan, stop it. You're making fun of me!"

"If I ever heard blasphemy—! Coyotes and cuttlefish! Why, my dear young woman, I'd as soon cut off my right arm. What I really meant to say was that the prettiest girl in the world is looking prettier than she has any right to look. What's going to come of this? You can't keep it up, you know. These old eyes won't stand it. You can't keep getting more beautiful every time I see you!"

Cherry rose to meet the teasing. She said demurely, "Sorry, sir. You can always look away, you know."

"But that's just what I can't do—and don't want to! Say, are you as hungry as I am?"

The abrupt change of subject made the girl laugh. "Perishing," she said. "Positively perishing!"

"Then let's find food!" Phillips snapped two fingers together with a resounding crack and was on his feet. Cherry arose and for an instant they stood there, the girl's head only a little above the youth's shoulder. Her eyes held a dancing light of happiness. The young man's face sobered. He touched her arm and together they moved toward the stairs.

FIVE minutes later they faced each other across a narrow table in the hotel's ivory and blue dining room. Phillips had finished giving the order.

"And how did you improve the shining morning hours?" he asked.

"Oh, doing lots of things. Mother's having a small tea next week and I helped with the invitations. Then some dresses came and when I tried them on they were all wrong and I had to telephone about sending them back and arrange for a fitting. After that Sarah gave me a shampoo and a manicure and—let's see—oh, yes, I called Aunt Clara to see if she wanted some concert tickets and she talked about half an hour. She always does. That's all, I guess."

"The life of the idle rich!" Dan Phillips sighed with mock sympathy. "Lord—you must be frazzled!"

"How about yourself? What kind of a busy bee have you been?"

"Shall I tell you?" Phillips leaned forward, grinning. "Rolled out of bed at exactly 12 o'clock—according to my four timepieces. I looked at them all, added what the minute hands said, subtracted the hours, multiplied, took the square root and then called the operator downstairs. She told me it was 12 o'clock. The boy's clever—what?"

"That's the laziest kind of morning Lever heard of."

"True enough," Phillips agreed. "But listen, child. Old Uncle Daniel was out until 2:30 this a. m. looking for that kidnaped James kid."

"The one who was stolen? Oh—did you find him?"

Garner Defends Relief Program

WASHINGTON, May 28—Speaker Garner today defended his relief program as a real benefit to the "masses" and attacked President Hoover for failure to cooperate.

In a formal statement the speaker replied to the president's charges that the Garner $2,146,000,000 relief plan was "pork barrel legislation."

He declared that the democrats had not really expected the president to cooperate "in any matter benefiting the masses and those who might be termed the middle class of American people."

AUTO FACTORY CARS ENTERED AT SPEEDWAY

By ARCH EDDY
United Press Staff Correspondent
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 28.—For the first time since the World war, stock and semi-stock autos will be driven under factory colors in the 500-mile race here Memorial Day.

Not since a few years after the speedway was opened, a score of years ago, have car manufacturers risked their reputations for speed and sturdiness in the grueling 500 mile event "blind" by individual drivers in the past: three and four years, and with considerable success.

Five of the factory cars are Studebakers, entered by the Studebaker Motor corporation Tony Gulotta, a young veteran on speed tracks who has a brilliant record as a driver captain the team. Riding under him will be Peter Kreis, Bob McDonough, Luther Johnson and Cliff Berger.

Two Hudsons
Two Hudsons specials are entered. They will be driven by Chester Miller and Al Miller, both of Detroit, but unrelated.

The other factory entry is a Hupp Comest, to be driven by Russell Snowberger.

Gulotta, in several starts at the giant Indianapolis oval, twice has been within striking distance of the championship. Last year he went into first place after Billy Arnold went over the wall in flames. Gulotta, however, held the coveted position only a few laps. He also smashed over the concrete retaining wall on a turn.

Luther Johnson was driving well last year until his auto figured in the crash which involved Arnold.

Apprentice for Old Racers
Peter Kreis started the car which Ralph Hepburn finished in third place last year. As an apprentice he rode with the famous Tommy Milton, Harry Hartz and Earl Cooper. He is one of the few Americans to win foreign racing honors. In 1925, teamed with Milton, Kreis crashed while leading the Italian Grand Prix. Two years later, with Cooper and George Souders, who won the Indianapolis race in 1927, as companions, Kreis again entered the Italian event. He finished third.

Cliff Berger, former Hollywood stunt rider has finished in each of four starts but never among the leaders.

Bob McDonough established a name for himself on west coast tracks.

Snowberger, who startled racing veterans when he won the pole position in his semi-stock car last year, is owner of the Hupp Comest he has entered this year.

Al Miller is a former newspaper plant engraver from Detroit.

Cliff Miller, also from Detroit, finished in 19th place last year. He is a veteran driver.

HOOPER WAS STATE COUNSEL IN TRUCK CASE

AUSTIN, May 28. — The annual truck movement of cotton to Gulf ports from this in all parts of Texas will be regulated this year by "House Bill 336", the state law regulating size of motor vehicles and limiting truck loads to 7,000 pounds.

The United States supreme court upheld the law in ruling on a test case, styled Sproles et al vs. Binford. Elbert Hooper, assistant attorney general, defended the law in Texas courts against 451 individual persons, firms, and corporations.

He also represented the state in the test suit, which began with a rare victory before a three-judge federal district court at Houston. The court, however, granted plaintiffs a temporary stay order pending appeal to the United States supreme court.

Immediately scores of other truck companies sought relief from district courts in Texas in the form of temporary injunctions against enforcement.

Fifty-five days after the Houston court's decision plaintiffs in the test case had not yet filed their appeal at Washington. Before a three-judge federal court at San Antonio, the state asked that the stay-order be vacated.

Might Adjourn

Unless some time limit were set for the stay order, the supreme court might adjourn before acting on the appeal and leave the state helpless to enforce the law in 1932, Hooper pleaded.

The court then issued an order which would have automatically dissolved the injunction against enforcement June 6, the last day of the supreme court term.

The supreme court's decision upholding the law was handed down last Monday, May 23.

Provisions of House Bill 336 limiting loads to 7,000 pounds and weight to 600 pounds per inch total width of tires, were featured in the test suit.

The law also forbids operation on public highways of vehicles exceeding the following dimensions: total outside width, 8 feet, excepting farm tractors which may be 9 feet wide; height, not exceeding 12 feet 6 inches, including load; length of single vehicles, 35 feet, of any combination, 45 feet; load not to project more than 3 feet beyond front nor more than 4 feet beyond rear of vehicle.

A companion law, known as House Bill 335, conferred upon the state railroad commission broad powers of regulating both common carrier and contract carrier trucks.
