Young Eyes . . . Must Be Protected

Long winter evenings of studying, or following the exciting adventures of Frank Merriwell through page after page, are hard on a youngster's eyes. He is apt to do them an irreparable damage-one that will seriously affect his chances for business or professional success in later life.

Good light is essential-both for eye conservation and for the proper enjoyment of those pleasurable hours of reading. Correct lighting is so often only a question of a conveniently placed wall-plug, a larger light globe, or an additional fixture-small items compared with invaluable evesight.

Under the schedule of the new Home Comfort Rate, electric service is so economical-don't, by all means, sacrifice adequate home lighting.
