1,200 Rioting Joliet Prisoners Subdued by Guards

ONE CONVICT FATALLY HURT BY VOLLEYS

JOLIET, Ill., March 14.—Twelve hundred convicts in the Illinois state penitentiary rioted today in protest against a fellow-inmate's death in solitary confinement.

In the rioting which continued for more than an hour and wrecked part of the old prison one convict was killed by guards, three others wounded and a guard was severely beaten.

Albert Yarbeck, 21-year-old robber, died in the prison hospital of gunshot wounds received when guards opened fire from the towers commanding the prison yard.

Capt. D. A. Davenport suffered a fractured arm but was saved from graver injury by the protective rifle fire from the towers.

Surrender in Groups
The convicts only loosely organized and without arms, surrendered in groups of 50 as guards recovered from the surprising swiftness of the outbreak and demonstrated their mastery with volleys of bullets.

Warden Henry Hill singled out the ringleaders and marched them into solitary confinement.

News of the riot caused a state legislative committee of five members to announce that the prison investigation authorized earlier in the week should start at the prison Thursday.

Grumbling over food and discipline has been heard at the prison for weeks past but beyond the discovery and suppression of half a dozen escape plots nothing serious occurred until a month ago when three convicts were killed in a spectacular attempt to scale the walls to freedom.

A week ago Joseph Conkley, Chicago convict, was found dead in a solitary cell.

TERRELL WILL NOT REPLY TO GOV. STERLING

AUSTIN, March 14.—Chairman C. V. Terrell of the state railroad commission, said today that he will not reply to the statement of Governor Ross Sterling last night blaming the commission for the present depressed condition of the oil industry.

Governor Sterling criticized the commission which has an oil and gas division, in announcing that he has decided to submit to the legislature the advisability of creating an appointive separate oil and gas commission. He blamed the development of the east Texas field for the oil price slump and declared it should have been put under proration.

He announced also that he had called upon both the commission and Attorney-General James V. Allred to stop gas waste in the Allred county field.

PRESIDENT TAKES HAND

WASHINGTON, March 14.—President Hoover has taken a hand in the bitter controversy over the restriction of oil imports for the protection of independent producers of this country.

In a statement issued last night after Secretary of the Interior William C. Clegg had announced successful conclusion of negotiations to prorate the oil, the president expressed the conviction that the oil industry can revive itself by cooperating in the government's proration plans.

WILL ONE OF THESE BE NEXT "FIRST LADY"?

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt

Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow

It's pretty early to be forecasting now, but one of these ladies may be the next mistress of the White House, since their husbands are already prominently mentioned as likely candidates for the Democratic and Republican presidential nomination in 1932. Mrs. Roosevelt is the wife of New York's democratic governor, while Mrs. Morrow is the wife of Senator Morrow of New Jersey, a leading republican.

Under the rules of the calendar the parents of the first baby born on the date are entitled to the present but "Blanche's" has disregarded this rule and has prepared presents for both families which may be had by calling at the store. This is the first time since the calendar was printed that two babies have been born on the same day here.

The parents are: Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Schaefer, to whom a son was born, and Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Meek, to whom also a son was born. The Meek infant was the earlier birth.

M'BRIDE GIVEN 21 YEAR TERM BY BAIRD JURY

A jury in 42nd district court at Baird Friday night found C. B. McBride, oil operator, guilty of the murder of John Glenn, at Breckenridge, Thanksgiving day, 1927, and assessed punishment at 21 years in the state penitentiary.

McBride had been tried before once at Breckenridge when he received a sentence of 15 years and again at Albany where he was convicted and given 25 years. Both verdicts were reversed by the appellate court.

Defense attorneys were preparing a motion for a new trial Saturday morning.

Santa Fe Briefs T. & P. N. Opposition

WASHINGTON, March 14.—The Panhandle and Santa Fe railroad today filed a brief with the Interstate Commerce commission protesting against the application of the Texas and Pacific Northern road for permission to construct 325 miles of line in west Texas.

The brief states that the proposed line would "parallel and often intersect and would divert traffic from the Panhandle and Santa Fe line."

TWIN BROTHERS, CRIPPLED, ATTEMPT SUICIDE PACT

CHICAGO, Ill., March 14.—How twin brothers, both crippled for life by disease, sat in their wheel chairs planning for months to commit suicide so they no longer would be cared for by their mother, was revealed today as the boys, 20 years old, lay near death in county hospital.

The twins, Stephen and Thomas Hall, had been invalids for 12 years, the result of a slowly spreading paralysis.

During recent months the boys' illness suddenly grew worse. Several months ago another brother, William, found a bottle of metallic mercury. He took it home and placed it on a shelf in a medicine cabinet.

Birthday Falls on Friday, 13th

Friday 13 has no qualms for W. H. Kittrell, of Cisco. Mr. Kittrell was born on March 13 and his 80th birthday fell on Friday of last week.

Mr. Kittrell who is much younger than his years, is as vigorous as most men of 60 years and takes a keen interest in political, social and economic affairs, particularly in events and conditions associated with Texas progress and history. He is a native Texan and of the 40 years of his lifetime has spent less than a week outside the boundaries of the state.

He received many presents from relatives and friends upon the occasion of his 80th birthday. He said that he had intended planting potatoes in his garden on the date but took the day to celebrate instead.

1,100 ATTEND CONVENTION OF TEACHERS

More than 1,100 teachers of the oil belt district of Texas gathered at Eastland yesterday for the first annual meeting of the Oil Belt Educational association. Of this number more than 600 registered as members of the association. At a banquet Friday evening preceding the convention 139 teachers registered.

The convention proper opened in the Eastland high school auditorium Saturday morning at 9 o'clock. State Supt. S. M. Marrs was the principal speaker at the morning session. Music was furnished by a club of 30 girls from the Colony school in Eastland county.

Supt. Marrs gave first a broad view of education, explaining some of the national standpoint. He outlined what the National Advisory Council in Washington is at present advocating.

He gave the definition of "independent district". Next, he outlined the work of the county superintendent office appointive instead of elective. He also brought out its advantages by having the office on a professional basis instead of on a political basis.

After this year, Mr. Marrs stated, the majority of a school board will never be elected at any one time. This, he said, will contribute to stability of the organization.

Perhaps the main point of Mr. Marrs talk was reached when he stated that soon school boards of towns of less than 5,000 scholastics may make contracts with superintendents and principals for three years at a time. In towns of more than 5,000 scholastics, the limit will be five years.

Smaller Per Capita
In speaking of the per capita, he said that unless the legislature finds new sources of income, or provides for taxes other than those now levied, the schools will face a per capita of $14.25 next year. He advocated a tobacco tax, an increased sulphur tax, and a polish tax.

Certification of teachers was touched upon, with the recommendation that the State Board of Examiners have the authority to certify teachers in much the same manner in which the State Medical Board or Legal Board acts.

A bill is now in Austin to repeal all certificate laws, protect all outstanding certificates and after Sept. 1 to have the state board of control the issuance of all certificates. Representatives Gilbert and Young from the Eastland district have introduced a bill to provide for the issue.

Final Hearing on Divorcement Bill

Bailey W. Hardy, chairman of the house committee which is considering the bill. The committee will meet Thursday night for the purpose of voting on the bill, it was also announced.

The bill provides that no corporation which produces, transports or refines petroleum may retail the refined products.

INSTRUCTIONS AVAILABLE AT POST OFFICE

Solicitation of proposals for sale or donation to the United States of a site for the erection of a federal building in Cisco was announced today by the treasury department of the United States.

Advertisement for bids appears in today's issue of the Cisco Daily News.

Proposals must be sealed and will be opened in the office of the supervising architect, treasury department, at Washington, D. C., April 10. A corner lot containing approximately 29,000 square feet with a dimension of approximately 160 lineal feet on the more important of the two frontages, is preferred.

Complete information relative to proposals and forms for submitting these are available at the office of the Cisco postmaster, Postmaster F. A. Blankenbecker will supply each prospective bidder upon application with a circular giving particulars as to requirements and instructions for preparation of bids and data to accompany bids.

Definite Step
This marks the first definite step by the government to carry out the promised federal building project here since funds in the sum of $130,000 for the same were made available by congress a short while ago. After the selection of a site preparation and approval of plans are expected to be carried out with expedition and work actually started upon the building within a comparatively short time.

No title papers need be submitted with the proposals. In case title to the property which it is proposed to convey is in such condition that its conveyance cannot be made by deed a brief statement of facts should accompany the bid, however.

Condemnation
In the event that the department is not able to secure from the owner of a desired site a proposal to sell the property for a reasonable price the government can resort to condemnation proceedings to ascertain the valuation of the property, it was announced. If the price so determined is satisfactory the award is confirmed and payment made. If deemed excessive, however, the proceedings are dismissed and some other location taken under consideration.

When an owner of a part of the site desired refuses to offer his property at a reasonable price, the government would entertain a proposal from the owner of the remainder of the site, stating a price for the whole site and undertaking that, should it be found necessary to condemn the former property, he will accept for his land whatever balance of such stated price is left after the government pays into court the award for the condemned portion, the statement of the government's policy in acquiring such sites continues.

The regulations provide that buildings, if any, on an accepted site are reserved by the owner of the land to be removed upon 60 days notice after purchase price for the site has been paid.

A plot of the site upon which proposals are submitted, prepared according to instructions contained in the government circular, must accompany each proposal.

Hoover Plans Visit to Carribbean

WASHINGTON, March 14.—President Hoover announced at the white house tonight that he will go to Porto Rico and probably the Virgin Islands next week on the recommissioned battleship Arizona.

Mr. Hoover said he was making the trip to secure a short rest and settle "certain administrative problems regarding American possessions in the Caribbean."

The white house announcement was issued at 8 p. m. under arrangements perfected earlier in the day to guard against premature publication of the news.

At that hour the white house telegrapher issued to newspapers the prepared statement of the president's intentions.

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

WHO SHALL ENTER—Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.—Matthew 7:21.
PRAYER—We please Thee most, Father, when we live uprightly and helpfully toward our fellow men.

HOODWINKING.

Proponents of the "nuisance tax" bills on tobacco products in the Texas legislature have begun a new maneuver calculated to silence opposition by the simple procedure of combing the wool over the aforesaid opposition's eyes. They propose to abandon a state tax on cigars or similar products and tax cigarettes alone.

At a hasty glance the compromise proposal may appear generous. It certainly is but in a quite different direction from the public interest. The most casual survey of smoking statistics reveals that there are 10 cigaret smokers to one cigar smoker. The compromise plan is nothing more or less than a clever maneuver to impose an illogical tax on the public, the evil effects of which are not limited to the smoker. The discriminatory status of the taxation is aggravated by the proposal.

ARE AMERICANS LAW MAD?

Are Americans law mad? If not why the record of bills introduced in the American congress? A lame duck congress died and its passing meant the death of some 16,000 bills which had not been acted upon. Getting nearer home it is said "1600 bills have been tossed into the legislative hopper under the big dome of the Texas capitol. Lawmaking in America is not a struggling industry. A year before his passing the late William Howard Taft estimated that in a period of 10 years the American congress and the 48 American commonwealths enacted a total of 65,000 laws. Many of the lawmakers and law enactors classified themselves as democrats. They are reminded that the late Thomas Jefferson insisted that "the least governed are the best governed." He knew whereof he preached.

PICTURE BUSINESS ON THE BLINK IN TEXAS.

Picture business is said to be on the blink in Texas. Indeed Don Douglas of Dallas appeared before the house revenue and taxation committee of the legislature and informed the lawmakers that business of the motion picture distributors of the commonwealth has fallen off a million dollars since November, 1930. He submitted figures showing that in the last four months 278 motion picture shows had closed their doors throughout Texas while many others, who formerly operated on full time, now are running three or four nights a week. This condition has been brought about largely in the smaller towns due to theatres being forced to listal expensive sound equipment.

Representative Will H. Scott of Nolan county would levy a gross receipts tax of three per cent on film distributors. Now the distributors are "up in the air."

DEATH CHAIR FOR KANSAS CRIMINALS.

For 60 years the people of Kansas have made the claim that no life has been taken through legal execution in that state. After 60 years capital punishment has been restored by Kansas lawmakers, as the senate approved a house measure establishing death in the electric chair and imprisonment as alternative penalty for first degree murder and robbery with firearms. Personally opposed to capital punishment, Governor Harry H. Woodring said in an interview after house passage of the measure nearly two months ago he would sign the bill if it carried in the senate by as large a majority as it received in the house. It carried in the house by a two to one vote and it carried in the senate by a vote of 28 for to 11 against. Now the democratic governor of Kansas must "face the music" made by the opponents of capital punishment and sign the bill which provides for the establishment of the electric chair.

PEANUT FARMERS IN LOUISIANA.

A correspondent of a New Orleans newspaper writing from Alexander says that while their drouth distressed neighbors are receiving aid from the Red Cross, Bohemian farmers in that section are prosperous on the peanut. He adds that some years, however, it is not the peanut, but another crop that puts savings into the bank. For these Bohemians do not believe in the one-crop of cotton which dominates so many agricultural regions of the south. Instead they diversify.

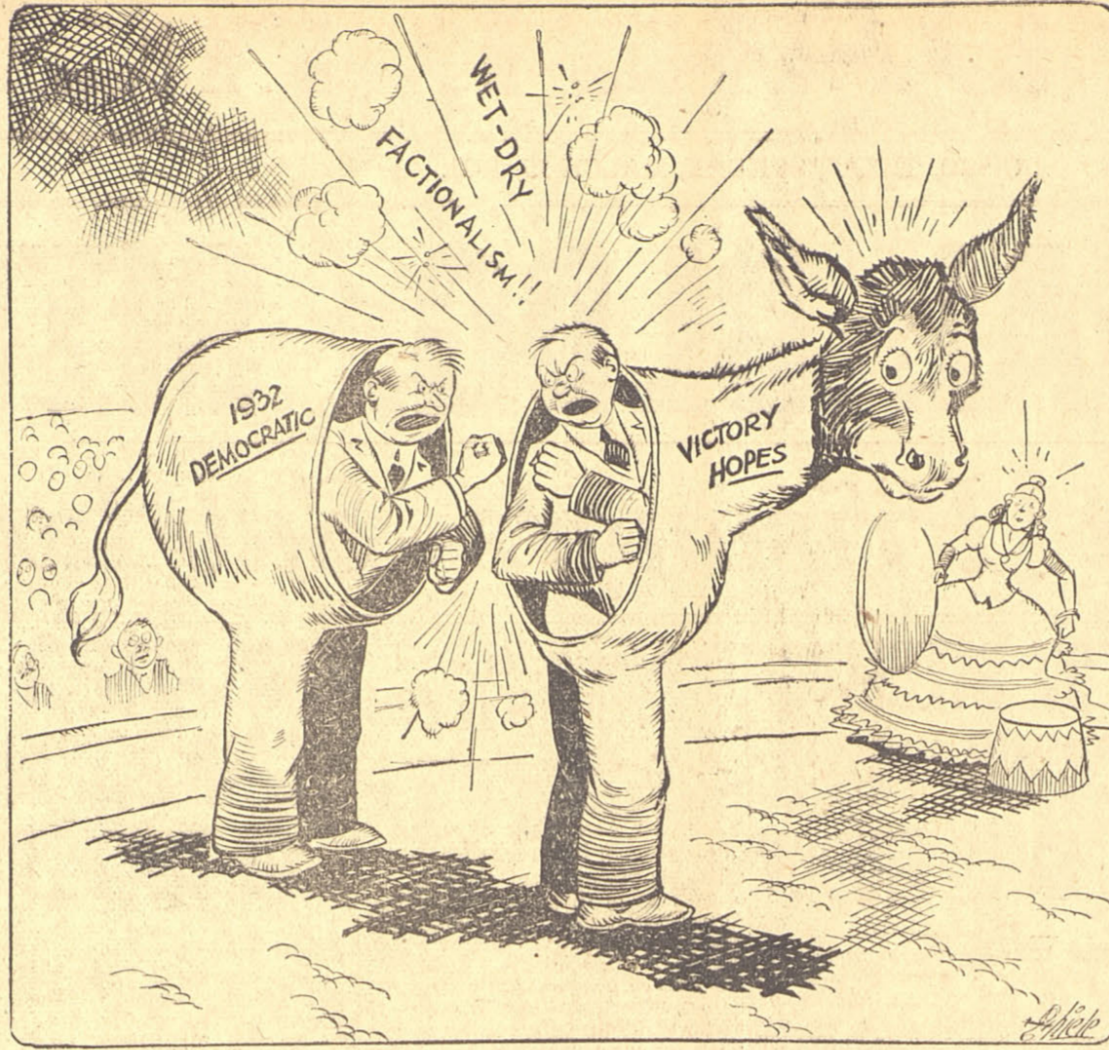

"Some farmers don't work," said a spokesman of the Bohemians when interviewed while loading peanuts into freight cars. "They raise cotton—that's all. We raise peanuts, Irish potatoes, sweet potatoes, gardens, hogs, poultry, cows and cotton. We feed ourselves first. Then we sell what we do not need."

There are many Bohemians or their descendants in Texas. They feed themselves first. Then they sell what they do not need. There are many Germans or men and women of the Teutonic family in Texas. They diversify. They raise peanuts, potatoes, gardens, hogs, poultry, cows—and cotton. They feed themselves first. Then they sell what they do not need. Alexander W. Legge says there is a carry-over of nine million bales. Now what will happen to the farmer who raises cotton—and cotton alone?

HIGHWAYS AND HIGHWAY MONEY.

According to the statisticians about $1,750,000,000 was spent on highway building and maintenance in 1930. Harry Tucker, professor of highway engineering in a North Carolina state college, in a very illuminative article says that instead of retarding highway development the general industrial depression has served as an added impetus to the federal government and the state to increase opportunities for highway work. When it become evident that many of the states would be unable to make use of their federal aid allotment under the usual provision the government set up a sum of $80,000,000 as a loan to the states to match federal aid. In effect this means that during 1931 he says $235,000,000 of federal money will be spent on highway construction. Speaking of another feature the special motor taxes in 1930 amounted to over one billion dollars and the greater part of this was used in highway construction and maintenance. He predicts that with expected increases in gasoline tax rates in many states these sources will yield even more funds for highway purposes in 1931. Indeed he ventures the opinion that the amount of money spent on the highways of the United States during 1931 will exceed two billion dollars.

Come, Come, Gentlemen! Pull Yourselves Together!

CLEVELAND GARMENT WORKERS HAPPY.

Cleveland is an Ohio city where the garment making industry is very important. More than 3000 employes have been put on full time schedule and some will be compelled to work overtime to handle the volume of incoming business. Increased buying of clothing forced the manufacturers to place their industry on a capacity producing schedule. "We may be happy yet."

OTHER OPINIONS

FORCING TAX PAYMENT

It is plain even to the casual observer that the accumulating unpaid taxes in Texas—state, county, district and local—increased the annual tax burden. The necessity of raising money forces taxing authority to enlarge assessed value or to raise tax rates, in full knowledge that the delinquencies will go on, while the taxpayer citizen meets as usual the higher bill which is in no just sense his. Failure to collect taxes under existing statutes is due partly to neglect, and partly to faulty statutes. In any event, it is clear that the law itself must cure the defects that now exist.

In a report to The News, Alonzo Wasson outlines the terms of the pending Johnson bill, modeled on tax laws which have proved effective in forty-two of the other states of the union. Procedure is simplified by elimination of court suit. The sale is mandatory on the Tax Collector. A two-year period of redemption is allowed the delinquent taxpayer on payment of the amount of rate plus 25 per cent in the first year or 50 per cent in the second year. The bill seeks to give full validity to the tax title, which becomes absolute at the expiration of two years in case redemption has not been effected.

IN THE POLITICAL ARENA

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD

Georgia has what is known as a state press institute. It was founded by Emily Woodward, editor of an important weekly newspaper. At the third annual session of the institute Editor Woodward spoke of "conditions existing in Georgia and in the union." She burned 'em alive. "Unless my vision is blurred by a distorted mind and split," said the fearless woman editor, "we, in Georgia and America, are on the threshold of what may easily prove to be another tragic era."

After referring to "a pernicious tariff conceived and executed to fetten plutocratic pigs," Editor Woodward, who is a prohibitionist, asserted that "the prohibition law has made America into a nation of bootleggers and lawbreakers; a nation where power is being delegated to the leaders of the underworld thieves, thugs and murderers and an abhorrent outgrowth of the prohibition law are politicians who, stimulated by highballs and gin fizzes, cast boot-dry ballots and make eloquent prohibition speeches. We have hypocrisy, the mother of a multitude of evils, in high places and law and what of our courts? What of justice? Blind? Yes, and about deaf and dumb as well. Honest lawyers and unimpeachable judges are growing more and more lonely in the circle of their profession. The yellow God which has been declared the "root of all evil" is prostituting governments, courts and pulpits—even the minister is rifle carriers who were willing to give their lives for the rights of man and the expulsion of Santa Anna and his so-called hordes. In war time it was said to be a long way to "Tippahery." In peace time it is a long way to the division of Texas into two or four commonwealths. In this empire commonwealth there are many talkies who love the music of their own vocal instruments. Texas will remain an empire as the fathers intended. It will stretch from the Gulf to the Rockies and from the Red River to the Rio Grande as the fathers planned. So why worry?

Frcs. Ernest Martin Hopkins of Dartmouth college is a common sense individual. He believes in justice and fair play—or rather one law for all. In other words, on a Chicago visit, the president of Dartmouth said fraternity houses and country clubs should be treated exactly alike by prohibition agents. Fleec' his remarks in the official scrapbook.

"There seems to be a great discussion about the raiding of college fraternity houses. I don't want to be put in the position of condemning these raids or upholding them; but they should not raid college fraternities unless they are going to raid country clubs and other clubs on the outside. The two stand in exactly the same position and I notice whenever I enter a club that a man who really wants a drink can invariably get it."

Is it fair for the president of Dartmouth "to tell tales out of school"? This is a free country—so it is said. Free speech is guaranteed. Freedom of the press is guaranteed. Freedom of assemblage is guaranteed. If so, jumping from fraternities and country clubs to the Hornsby suppression bill, why should it be enacted by Texas lawmakers? Sen. Hornsby is all right. But facing the federal and the state consultation there are many intelligent men and women who feel that its enactment would be all wrong.

Proposals are hereby solicited to be opened in the Office of the Supervising Architect, Treasury Department, Washington, D. FORT WORTH OFFICE GIVES QUICK SERVICE

Twenty applications for loans in Eastland county which were mailed to the Farmers' Feed and Seed loan office at Fort Worth Tuesday have been returned with the checks varying from $40.00 to $200.00 and by Friday morning they were placed in the mails to be delivered to the applicants.

J. C. Patterson, county agent, said Saturday morning that some of the loan applications which were forwarded to St. Louis 45 days ago have not been returned as yet and that the co-operation received from the Fort Worth office was very gratifying.

Those who have mailed their applications to the Fort Worth office have the highest praise for the way in which the loans were handled and the money forwarded to Eastland county.

2 VICTIMS OF DALLAS LASH ARE LOCATED

KANSAS CITY, March 14.—Two communists who were flogged in Texas last week, claimed here tonight that officials and policemen of Dallas were members of the mob that beat them.

The victims of the flogging Lewis Hurst, 21, and Charles Coder, 24, reached Kansas City last night and were placed under care of a physician.

Names of those they recognized in the mob will be placed before a grand jury in Dallas in a short time, they said.

Clara Speer, communist organizer for the Kansas district, refused to disclose the hiding place here of Hurst and Coder, saying they were exhausted by the trip from Dallas and still suffered from the mob beating.

Hurst and Coder recognized the Dallas chief of police as one of the 14 men, Miss Speer asserted. The two men were removed from the Dallas jail taken to a field eight miles east of city and beaten until they fell unconscious from the blows she said.

"They lay in the field all night and the following day were taken to the home of negroes living near by where they were fed and sheltered until they were in condition to take a train for Kansas City, according to Miss Speer.

She said they left the train at a point about 100 miles south of Kansas City by a group of local communists who had been advised they were on their way. When the two reached Kansas City late last night they still bore the marks of their beating, Miss Speer said.

Ideal Club Entertains With Party at Humbletown Thurs.

Members and guests of the Ideal club enjoyed a party Thursday evening at the Recreation hall in Humbletown.

A pretty color note of green and white suggesting St. Patrick's day was carried out and cut flowers were used in decorations.

An added feature were the readings given by little Miss Catherine Clampton.

R. Adams won high score for men, a beautiful box of handkerchiefs. High score for the women, a salt and pepper set, was won by Mrs. S. B. Parks. L. Y. Siddall received low for men, and Mrs. E. C. McClelland low for women.

Refreshments of angel food cake, green and white ice cream, and green and white mints were served. The club wishes to express its appreciation to the Humble company for the use of the hall.

Those enjoying the occasion were: Mesdames Adams and Messrs. L. R. Adams, Smart, H. C. Henderson, E. C. McClelland, L. H. Reece, L. Y. Siddall, A. McDonald, S. B. Parks, B. Daniels, H. W. Brennan, C. M. Nichols, H. M. Cunningham, Mrs. W. Donohoe, F. E. Shockley, Roy Stoker of Breckenridge, Fred Maxey of Eastland, A. M. Mitchell of Eastland, and Mrs. Jimmie Oliver of Houston, and Ed Green.

WEST WARD P. T. A. HAS MEETING. The meeting of the West Ward P. T. A. was opened Monday morning with the singing of the song, "America". This was followed by the P. T. A. prayer repeated in unison.

The first number on the program was a talk by Rev. E. S. James on the four fold nature of the child. Supt. R. N. Cluck talked on "The School, The Child, and the Parents." Other numbers on the program were song by the low first grade; reading, "Spring and March," pupils of the high first grade; piano solo, Brenda Louise Warwick; piano solos by Laverne Key and Billy Charlene Cole; song by the high first, and song by the low second.

In the reading of the minutes it was found that $35.70 had been donated to the milk fund. The American Legion voluntarily donated five dollars. A vote of thanks was given to the West Texas Utilities company for furnishing the ice and refrigerators for the East and South Wards and a frigidaire for the West Ward.

The P. T. A. also expressed its vote of thanks to Mrs. Chas. Yates and her committee who handled the father and son luncheon, and Mrs. J. E. Spencer and her committee for the nice year book.

It was voted to have a candy sale at the schoolhouse every two weeks to pay for the telephone.

PEEPING AT NEW BOOKS

Through The University of Texas Literary Knot-Hole

By LORENA DRUMMOND

For Those Who Dream—And Travel. A feminine Halliburton makes her way to the frontiers of civilization, records what she sees, and the results is Mademoiselle Against The World, translated from the French of an anonymous woman journalist by Madeleine Boyd.

Spurred by a restless desire for adventure and travel, Titayna, as the writer labels herself, enlists in the service of a French newspaper and sets out to cover assignments by airplane. A wreck in the Thracian Desert, a trip to Constantinople hurried flights over Rumania and Yugoslavia and Bulgaria, an interview with a bandit prince in Georgia, a hot, fantastic trip into the Sahara Desert, and then Titayna widens her horizons and sails for the South Sea Islands and the Orient.

In spite of the jauntiness of the title, Mademoiselle Against The World is essentially a book that records what Titayna sees rather than what she does; and what in its first chapter threatens to be a strained and mediocre recounting of adventures develops into a travel book of force, vigor, and charm, which strikes with the pen of a journalist at the points of interest in foreign lands, carves living pictures with the breath of reality, and leaves the reader with a somewhat breathless desire to tread in the footsteps of Titayna.

The book has its faults. A number of minor errors in grammar creep into its pages. Book 1, which deals with Titayna's experiences in Europe and Africa, is too hastily told; it is crowded with half completed pictures that leave the reader with indistinct conceptions of those places described.

Titayna sometimes is unfair in stating her opinions of a country as facts and implying that every visitor would agree with her. Some tourist, for example, would see beauty in Japan where Titayna sees only filth; some would see human filth and degradation in China whereas Titayna sees the beauty of placid souls.

But over and above its faults, Mademoiselle Against The World is a book that deserves the attention of all who look through their dreams into the wilds of a cannibal island, who catch the tang of salt air in their imagined lives, who dream and dream and travel.

The book grows in power as it progresses. The somewhat stilted words of the first few chapters give place to a rhythmic prose as Titayna describes her beloved South Sea Islands. Here she writes as from the heart, and into her words is poured a feeling for natural beauty that makes the readers feel with her the quietness, the peace, the great splendid calm of these ocean paradises. Quicker figures of the Orient tropic across the pages, drawn with a sympathetic hand, caught in a moment of life. And when the concluding chapter is finished and the book closed, these pictures linger pleasantly in the mind of the reader.

by—DeWitt Reddick, Adjunct Professor of Journalism, University of Texas.

A Fine First Novel. This our exile is a very fine first novel by David Burnham, a young Princeton graduate. It is the story of a wealthy, sophisticated Chicago family, every member a distinct personality completely delineated.

The middle son, who tells the story, is a junior in Princeton's reputation as a country club, when his father falls into a slow illness, calling home all three sons, Fred, James and Jackie. The mother, in spite of her youthful haircut and smart clothes, has lived for nothing but her husband, and now becomes a martyr to his illness, refusing to leave his side for more than a few hours' sleep at night. His death, coming after nearly a year of strain brings a painful antagonism among members of the family, Fred trying to appear brutally untouched, intellectually scornful of grief, in order to shake his mother from her selfish glorification of her own despair; Jackie turning more and more to the church and iritated because his mother no longer goes; and James suffering from the effects of a shock as much physical as spiritual, remembering his father's tortured gasping for breath, and afterwards the discoloration of a scar on his lip, and his dusky eyebrows as "Obscurely black" against the dead marble of his face.

In the effect of the shock on this keenly sensitive middle son and his subsequent antagonism, we come near the central theme of the story—his efforts to discover the meaning of life and work. The problem is never so pedantically stated, but all through the story the boy wavers among three attitudes. His question is whether he shall settle down and "make gadgets," or devote himself to music as a means of complete self-expression, or continue his architecture, a work that is creative. The problem is deeply mediated, though it is left with no conclusive answer. Each of the three attitudes is represented by a person who influences the boy: the settled life by Ruth, whom he loves for a time with a delightfully youthful sentimentality; the artist's life by her father; creative by his own father, who had urged it as the only thing permanently satisfying.

As strongly as Peter, his sister-in-law, with her rather vulgar sophistication, pervades the book, she and Ruth, and James' love for them, form minor motifs, important principally for their influence on the answer to his chief question.

Part of the book is unpleasant as one reads and some of the details seem merely decorative; but, as a whole, the story is well managed, and there are many things that one can look back on with real delight.—by Dorothy Russell, Tutor in English, University of Texas.

This Our Exile, by David Burnham, Charles Scribner's Sons, New York, $2.50.

"The Bird That Acts Like a Man" Anyone in the least interested in natural history will find The Island of Penguins a perfectly delightful book. Amusingly written, it is a most entertaining as well as informative account of public and private life in a large colony of penguins, those ridiculous birds so comically human in appearance and in actions as well, as the author proves in prose and picture. Seventy remarkable photographs, showing almost every stage of penguin life, combine with the very readable text to form a volume that will interest the whole family.

Apparently written for adults, the book will be enjoyed by grandfathers and the grammar school children alike, and even the little fellows in kindergarten should love to look at the pictures and have them explained by a sympathetic elder. The reader who can resist the pompous reception committee pictured on the "booket" will undoubtedly succumb to the appeal of the young couple (respectably married) who are shamelessly kissing on page 70, or the fat babies, looking more like teddy bears than penguins, on page 94.

In collecting the material and photographs, the author, Cherry Kearton, and his wife spent five months on the island, a barren expanse of rock and sand rising above the turbulent waters south of the Cape of Good Hope. These four square miles house, during certain seasons, not less than five million birds. In addition to the Black-footed Penguins, for it is their principal nesting ground, it attracts great numbers of cormorants, sea-gulls, terns, duckyers, ibis, and sand-plovers.

In his own words, Mr. Kearton studied penguins "in all conditions, in sickness and in health, in fair weather and foul. I met the proud and the meek, the bully, the mischief-maker, the comfortable old gentleman, the despised weakling, and the social outcast. I saw weddings, fights, the tragic collapse of a house, fun at the seaside—every happening almost that would provide a headline in our newspapers if it occurred in London or New York, and also the many more personal incidents which come into the lives of all of us, but of which the journalist has no professional knowledge.... I doubt whether in more than forty years of nature study throughout the world, I have ever found a creature so interesting and withal so amusing."

The Penguin is an unusual bird in that neither the land nor the air but the sea is his natural element. His legs are so short that he walks only at a slow ungainly waddle and his wings have become flippers so that he cannot fly. Once in the water however, he swims with extraordinary speed and endurance and apparently thinks nothing of doing a hundred miles in a day. Indeed, he visits an island only for purposes of breeding or moulting, and lives for months far out at sea; swimming and fishing by day and at night floating and sleeping on the surface like a duck.

Every one of the book's 247 pages bears a picture or incident of such interest or amusement that it is difficult to single out any for example. Mr. Kearton is to be congratulated and thanked for a very remarkable contribution to bird lore. The Island of Penguins is unqualifiedly recommended as a source of lasting enjoyment to those who like this sort of thing, and probably an unexpected pleasure to those who have thought they did not.

—by Grace Grafius, Supervising Architect's Office, University of Texas.

The Island of Penguins by Cherry Kearton, Robert M. McBride & company, New York, $3.

TWO LETTERS THAT SPELL YOUR PROTECTION

These are the letters that your physician is entitled to use after about eighteen years of study, research, laboratory, clinical and hospital experience. In event of sickness, trust yourself only to such a man and you will receive the advantages that a competent, conscientious experienced physician can give. Nothing substitutes for the intensive, searching training of the man honestly entitled to sign his name M. D.

To do less than to make sure the man you call to serve you is fully qualified is to invite disaster. The medical profession sets for its followers the highest ideals for service. It has no attraction for those whose motive is actuated by only the thoughts of personal gain.

Members of the medical profession are not known as good collectors. Their concern is the welfare of the patient entrusted to their care. They answer your call—day or night—and give to their knowledge and experience. Their fee is exceptionally small for the class of service rendered, yet how often do these most urgent in their call, forget their physician after the patient is better.

Don't delay paying your doctor. He has his problems and his worries. Constant attention to the needs of the sick does not leave much time for bookkeeping and making out statements. So don't wait for a statement, but pay him promptly and be sure he will appreciate it.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Jesus Among Friends and Foes.

Text: Luke 10:38-42; 11:42-46, 52-54. New it came to pass, as they went, that they entered into a certain village; and a certain woman named Martha received him into her house.

And she had a sister called Mary, which also sat at Jesus' feet, and heard his word. But Martha was cumbered about much serving, and she came up to him, and said, Lord, dost thou not care that my sister hath left me to serve alone? bid her therefore that she help me.

And Jesus answered, and said unto her, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things.

of all religions. The man whose discernment of truth has been keen and whose life has explored new adventures in goodness and service, simply because these things have marked his life as different from the lives of his fellows, has become an object of suspicion or of persecution.

Remarkable Friendship. But a man is known by his friends, as well as his enemies. Perhaps the remarkable thing is that Jesus had such friends, that in spite of all that seemed in him so different from the teaching and the life of his religious environment, there were men and women who perceived his goodness and attached themselves to him with earnest devotion.

Here in our lesson we see Jesus in the home of friends in a house where he apparently liked to go and where he was a welcome guest.

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of The Congregationalist. To speak of a man like Jesus of Nazareth as having foes seems strange considering the beauty of his character and the goodness manifest in all his activities.

But Jesus himself called attention to the fact that the good man is not free from the malignancy of the evil, and the lover of truth must expect the opposition of the ignorant and the prejudiced. He said to his disciples, "Wee unto you when all men speak well of you."

It is appalling to realize the way in which good and saintly men have suffered throughout history from unfriendliness and persecution. It has been true in the realm great teacher might speak in the same way today about church members, pointing out that profession of religion is not always possession of it; and that the actualities of spiritual life and character are often different from the external and conventional form of religion.

Must Practice Religion. As a matter of fact, it is possible that some of those who were anticipating the coming of Jesus were among the Pharisees. They represented in their own day the strictly religious party in Israel, and when Jesus reproaches them, he is pointing out that those who might be expected to be manifesting the most vital application of religion in practice were neglectful of the major duties of life, making a pretense of prayer without putting their prayers into their lives and making sacrifices unto God without having established justice and right in the relationships of daily life.

We miss entirely the point of this portion of the lesson if we take all the teaching of Jesus for the ancient Pharisees and do not apply it to our own time. It is as true in our day as it was then that the man who makes a profession of goodness and allegiance to Jesus Christ, but who neglects the plain duties of every day life, the duty of promoting kindness, justice and mercy—is among those who worship with his words but who denies both God and Christ in the reality of his living.

Yale! How Could You! FOR some years, the creme de la creme of midiron events has been the Yale-Harvard game. That is, of course, according to Harvard's way of putting it.

Now Eli Yale does a startling thing. The noble old school announces that Harvard shall close Yale's season only every other year, and that the alternate final foe of the Blue will be that old meanie, Princeton.

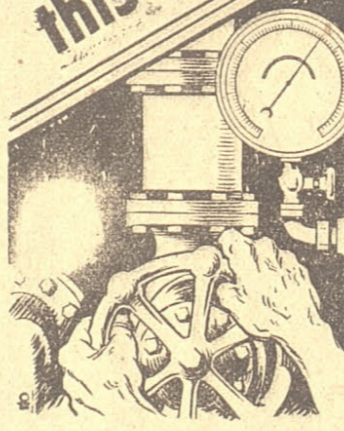

Awful Things Ahead THE Harvard date with Yale will remain as usual—the Saturday before Thanksgiving—but Princeton will be played by Yale before Harvard one year and after Harvard the next. Thus, in 1932 Yale will meet Harvard the week after Princeton. The dreadful thing will happen in 1933 when Harvard will have to play Yale before Princeton does.

Now it would be just like Prof. Harold Shagley, the Harvard astronomer, to discover a mob of football rooters dwelling on the sun, and all of them wearing Princeton colors and mocking the dear old Harvard accent.

Yale's move may go farther than any conference between athletic heads toward the eventual restoration of football relations between Nassau and the Crimson. Then again, it may not. Harvard and Princeton are "fanny" that way. Harvard has always been painted as looking upon the Tiger, even in days when the old Big Three was functioning on a grand scale, as an opponent not quite worthy of the splendid Harvard association, and Princeton has resented what it regards as a bit of snootiness on Harvard's part.

Looking Backward AS far as football prowess is concerned, the Big Three is not the Big Three it used to be. Un-

MAD MARRIAGE

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Gypsy McBride, 19-year-old typist, goes to meet the boat on which Alan Crosby is returning from a year and a half in Paris.

Two nights later Crosby breaks an engagement with Gypsy, explaining he is spending the evening with business associates. The girl goes to the theater alone and encounters Crosby with a Mrs. Catherine Langley. There is a scene. Mrs. Langley drives away in her car and Crosby and Gypsy go home in a cab, quarreling all the way. Next day at the office Gypsy is offered a promotion and takes a dictation test. She hurries home determined to apologize to Crosby. They meet and in the interview following Crosby makes it plain his former affection for Gypsy is ended.

Next day at the office Gypsy is reprimanded for some careless work and she resigns her job.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VIII

When Gypsy opened the front door she heard footsteps on the second floor landing. Then a familiar voice called down: "Miss McBride—is that you, dearie?"

"Yes, Mrs. O'Hare," the girl answered.

"Well, somebody's been trying to get you on the telephone all afternoon. I told 'em you wouldn't be in until five, but they kept calling. Last time was about half an hour ago, I guess."

It couldn't be—no, of course not! Gypsy told herself it was ridiculous to let her hopes rise. Still there was a quickening in her voice.

"Do you know who it was?"

"No, they didn't give any name. Number on the pad beside the telephone, though. They said you were to call back."

Gypsy's feet flew down the hall. At the far end was the pay telephone for the roomers' use and beside it a pad on which messages were posted.

There it was—"McBride—call Center 5942 before 6 p. m."

With a weary gesture the girl turned and started back toward the stairs.

"Did you find it?" the landlady's voice persisted from above.

"Yes, I know who it is—nothing very important, I guess."

"The woman who called the last time said you should be sure and ring the minute you came in!" Mrs. O'Hare said insistently.

"Well, I guess—"

Further discussion was interrupted by the jangle of the telephone bell.

"I'll answer it," offered Gypsy, turning back.

"Oh, that'll save me coming down. Thanks, dearie."

The girl placed the receiver to her ear. Immediately she recognized the voice at the other end of the line.

"Hello," the voice said, "May I speak to Miss McBride?"

"This is she," answered Gypsy.

"That you, Anne?"

"Oh—at last! I found you. I've been trying all day long to get in touch with you! First I called your office and they said you'd gone. After that I tried this number. There's something you've simply got to do for me—"

Just as she had thought. Whenever Anne Trowbridge called it was to ask a favor. Anne was the only relative of Gypsy's who lived within 1000 miles of New York but their paths crossed so infrequently they seldom thought of each other as cousins. Anne had come to the city as the bride of Phil Trowbridge. She had "married well," according to the old phrase. Anne's father and Gypsy's mother had been brother and sister but the two girls had never seen each other until the day two years before when Gypsy had called on young Mrs. Trowbridge in her hotel suite.

From that first day Gypsy had known they could never be friends. Anne, though she was three years older, had never worked at anything except making herself look attractive. Her mother (Gypsy's Aunt Mary) had been a Carroll—with all the distinctions that name implied in the Maryland community in which Anne had spent most of her life.

Here in New York Anne and her husband lived in an apartment on the upper east side. Gypsy took Sunday dinner there twice a year—and was slow about calling afterward. She thought Anne patronized her, though in reality the fault was on both sides.

It had been six months since she had heard Anne's voice.

"What do you want me to do, Anne?" Gypsy asked.

"I want you to come to dinner. Oh, you must! You see, I'm having some people in for dinner and bridge. There were to be 14 and this afternoon Mildred Lane was in a traffic accident and fractured her arm. I simply cannot have 13 people—I'm terribly superstitious!—and everyone I've called has been out of town or sick or giving parties. You're my only hope, Gypsy! Don't bother to change. You can dress here. I'll lend you something—"

So that was what to Anne's mind was a tragedy! Gypsy had been trying to get a word in. Now she spoke abruptly:

"Sorry," she said. "I'd like to help you out but I won't be able to." What was the usual excuse? Oh, yes, of course—"I—I have an engagement for the evening." Gypsy stumbled a bit over the words.

"Oh but Gypsy—can't you break it?"

"Afraid not."

"But won't you try?"

There was nothing to do but work her way out. Gypsy tried a white lie.

"I'll try to," she promised. "I'll call you back about 11. I mean I'll call you if I can come."

"Oh, I hope you can make it! Call before 6 o'clock—won't you?"

I'll be expecting to hear from you!"

"All right. I'll let you know if I can come. Goodbye."

Gypsy replaced the receiver and mounted the stairs. She walked slowly, discovering that she was tired.

What if Anne's dinner party were spoiled? What did that matter? Had Anne ever known what it was to feel this weight like lead in her heart, to face bitter loneliness—not just for today, but stretching on and on in the future? Had Anne ever known a pain like the one that had been throbbing at Gypsy's forehead all afternoon?

Well then, who was Anne to need sympathy!

Gypsy reached her own room and entered. She threw her hat and coat on the bed and sank down beside them. It had been a long day. Purposely she had stayed away from the rooming house until after five o'clock, the usual time she arrived there. She did not want the other roomers of Mrs. O'Hare to know that she had given up her job. They would be curious and Gypsy was in no mood for questions.

She thought about tomorrow. Better start hunting a job, she supposed. What sort of a job?

It occurred then to Gypsy that employers would ask where she had worked before. They might want references. Should she go back to MacNamara's and ask Miss Huttler for a letter? Hardly that!

There was McNider, the city editor who had helped her get the first job. She might call on him. Gypsy's mind wandered, taking half a dozen different trails, but far from the main subject. Where was Alan? What was he doing to-night?

Suddenly the girl sprang up. She would not spend another evening here alone. She would not waste time thinking about Alan Crosby when he was having a gay evening with friends—friends whose company he preferred to hers.

She stood in the center of the room staring at the wall in indecision. Then she caught up her purse and ran down the stairs.

Gypsy was breathless when she reached the telephone on the first floor.

"Operator," she called impatiently, "give me Center 5942. Hurry!"

A man's voice came over the wire.

"Is this Phil?" Gypsy asked.

"This is Gypsy. Will you tell Anne I'm going to be able to come for dinner. Tell her I'm starting right away. Yes, I'll try to get there in half an hour. That's all. Goodbye."

It was reckless to spend money on taxi fare but Gypsy was in a reckless mood. She pulled on hat and coat without even a glance in the mirror, and hurried out of the house. On the curb she signaled a cab and 35 minutes later was alight at the canonical entrance of the up-town apartment.

As the elevator car rose to the 16th floor Gypsy had a moment of foreboding. She stifled it. Anything was better than another evening alone.

"Gypsy—I'm so glad you came!"

Anne was waiting for her in the doorway. Phil Trowbridge was there too and said a casual "good evening." Gypsy had always liked Phil.

"I knew you wouldn't have time to dress so I got this out for you. Do you like it?"

Anne Trowbridge held up a creamy flowered chiffon with a vivid design in crimson, orange and dull green. Anne herself was gowned in flame. A stranger might have thought the girls were sisters. Anne was nearly an inch taller but her frocks fit Gypsy perfectly. The older girl's features were more regular. Anne's hair was dark but it was smooth and glossy instead of waving. Her complexion was fair and her eyes were blue.

"How like Anne to say Gypsy 'didn't have time to dress.' Of course she knew the other girl had no such evening gown."

"It's lovely," Gypsy said.

"Glad you think so. Now hurry up and get into it. You'll find everything you need on the dressing table. Oh, do try my new rouge! I'm simply crazy about it. You'll excuse me, won't you? I've got to see Phil. Dinner's at seven so you'll have time if you hurry. If you want anything just call—"

The hostess disappeared. Gypsy pulled off her jersey office dress and hung it away in a closet. A bath room, stunning in blue and silver, adjoined the bedroom. Gypsy took a quick plunge, wrapped herself in a rose negligee and went over to the dressing table.

What an array of lovely bottles and boxes—all for the purpose of making Anne beautiful! Gypsy picked up a jar of crystal and lifted the turquoise lid. There was creamy stuff inside with an odor sickeningly sweet. She rubbed some of the cream on her arm and found it pleasant. As she put the jar down Gypsy caught a view of herself in the mirror.

There were lamps at either side of the dressing table, flooding the glass with pitiless light. Gypsy studied her reflection; then she sat

EXCEPTIONAL CAST PRESENTS KEATON FARCE

For the comedian is surrounded by beautiful young women in almost every sequence of the hilarious stage farce which has been adapted to the screen by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Among those who make Keaton's life a little brighter in the amusing story of a gay Lothario whose romances end when an irate husband's pistol comes into view — are Dorothy Christy, the attractive blonde who last played with Maurice Chevalier in "Playboy of Paris" and Joan Peers, the diminutive heroine of "To! a! David."

Sally Eilers, who played opposite Keaton in "Dough Boys", and was more recently seen as the haughty daughter of "Reducing," and Natalie Moorhead, who comes from the part of the gangster's "moll" in "Dance Fools, Dance," also have prominent roles.

That Keaton is surrounded by an all-star group of players in the manner of his first talkie, "Free and Easy," is indicated by the remaining members of the supporting cast. The celebrated Charlotte Greenwood of the long legs and imitable tricks is present in the riotous role of a newspaper woman who is willing to "compromise" Keaton for a consideration.

Reginald Denny, who last scored in "Madam Satan" and "A Lady's McNeal's, has an outstanding role as the prankster who eggs Keaton on to his ill-fated amorous adventures.

Cliff Edwards has a side-splitting part as a bathhop. "Ukulele Ike" deserts his semi-straight characterization of "Paid" and "The Scoundrel" in this picture to return to his more typical style of "Three French Girls."

Then there is Edward Brophy, without whom no Keaton cast would be complete. Brophy is seen as the hotel detective who ferrets the star out of his hotel rendezvous.

Ambitious Effort

This picture, which will be shown today and Monday at the Palace theatre, is reported to be Keaton's most pretentious talkie to date, encompassing every sort of trick episode from amazing automobile smashups to ingenious gymnastic feats.

A romantic thread underlies the laugh episodes somewhat in the vein of the Marie Dressler-Polly Moran successes. What with all these beautiful women in the cast there couldn't help but be plenty of romances!

down before the dressing table and set to work.

Twenty minutes later there was a tap at the door.

"Gypsy!" Anne Trowbridge called, "are you ready?"

The door opened and Anne stepped into the room. "My dear!" she exclaimed, "you're looking wonderful!"

"Am I all right? Did I get the dress fastened the right way? Here—is this supposed to be like this?"

Gypsy turned slowly for inspection. Anne was enthusiastic. "I never saw you looking so pretty!" she declared. "I'm proud of you. Come on out with me. Some of the people are here and I want you to meet them."

Obediently Gypsy followed. She was wearing a lovely gown and it had been amusing trying out Anne's cosmetics, but already she wished the evening were over. She wished she had not come.

Gypsy had no way of knowing that this was to be the most momentous evening of her life.

Census Plan Unfair

Marrs said it is not fair to distribute state money on a census taken in March. The standard of Texas education will not be raised until school boards are convinced that under privileged children are citizens of Texas, and that the compulsory attendance law should be enforced, he said. Dr. Fred C. Ayer, of Texas university was also a speaker at this session.

Saturday afternoon a pleasing type of program was enjoyed. Rising Star high school presented a clever one-act play which compared speech of yesterday with slang of today. Breckenridge high school orchestra played three numbers; the Girls' Glee club of Ranger high school sang, followed by the Boys' quartette, of Abilene.

In the sectional program in the department of superintendents and principals, John F. Bailey, principal of Breckenridge high school, was chairman. State Supt. Marrs was present and took an active part in suggestions.

In the closing business session, with President Willingham in the chair, the report of the legislative committee was read and adopted. The program committee for next year was announced by John F. Bailey, as follows: L. E. Dudley of Abilene, B. H. McLain of Sweetwater, and W. C. Blankenship of Big Spring. The secretary-treasurer's report was incomplete and will be mailed later.

A Constant Temperature Guarantees Correct Refrigeration

The outstanding advantage of Electric Refrigeration is the fact that regardless of where you may be, your foods are kept always at the constant low temperature advocated by leading health and food authorities. The importance of this vital feature cannot be overemphasized.

When temperatures go above fifty degrees food-spoilage and bacteria-growth are encouraged. Long before it is apparent to the senses, foods thus exposed become dangerous to health.

Through the use of Electric Refrigeration you can be sure at all times that your foods are being properly and scientifically preserved. The dependability of Electric Refrigeration, plus its many advantages of convenience, economy and distinction, make it the choice of millions.
