Belize Struggles to Restore Order After Hurricane

UNOFFICIAL CHECK SHOWS 700 PERISHED

BELIZE, British Honduras, Sept. 12.—(By Pan-American Airways Wireless)—This devastated city caring for its injured and burying its dead struggled today to bring order out of the chaos left by Thursday's hurricane and tidal wave.

An official count had not yet been made of the dead but estimates ranged from 400 to as high as 700. The injured numbered 600 or more. Less than one-third of the buildings here were left.

Enforcing a form of martial law to preserve order and prevent looting, authorities began the orderly distribution of supplies to the destitute.

COMMUNICATIONS RE-ESTABLISHED

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 12.—A new but unofficial check today estimated 700 persons to be dead at Belize, British Honduras, from the effects of the hurricane there Thursday, according to a message received by the Pan-American Airways operator here from the Pan-American operator at Belize.

Martial law to prevent looting has been established in Belize, according to information received here by Ellis McLane, amateur wireless operator. McLane reported he had established communication with an American operator in Belize known to him only as Z2BA.

Public distribution of supplies has been established in the stricken city according to the Belize operator. Residents are being forced to depend on rain caught in a downpour last night for their water supply, as all water tanks were destroyed, he reported.

Four steamers are missing which were in the path of the hurricane. The weather bureau at Washington today reported that the hurricane which hit Porto Rico, Haiti and Santo Domingo apparently was centered today near Navasina Island, its force considerably diminished. The Belize disturbance apparently passed inland near Tuxton, Mexico, its force spent.

Reports today were that the Porto Rican hurricane confined its damage largely to San Juan, where at least two persons were known dead and many injured. Many houses were uninjured.

Belize was in ruins. Naval airplanes and the Red Cross continued to cooperate today in assisting in relief. Pan-American airways planes, all of which resumed their regular schedules today, also assisted.

The Belize storm was accompanied by a tidal wave that sent a flood of water eight feet deep through the Honduran capital.

Officials of Washington university, St. Louis, received a message from the Jesuit mission at Belize saying 11 members of St. John's college and 20 students were killed in the disaster there.

2 ROBBERIES NET BANDITS OVER $15,500

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—Bandits held up the two banks in the Chicago metropolitan area today, seized between $12,500 and $17,500, and fled, one group under pistol fire.

Five gunmen, shortly before noon, invaded the Ban di Napoli in the crowded Ghetto, vaulted the cashier's cage, scooped up all the money in sight and backed out to their sedan under the muzzles of sawed off shotguns.

In Flossmoor, Ill., a southern suburb, four men held up the state bank of Flossmoor and escaped with $2,596, kidnapping the cashier, who was released unharmed a few miles away. The chief of police appeared as the fleeing bandits were a block away and emptied his pistol at them.

MURRAY IS PUT FORWARD AS CANDIDATE

MEDICINE PARK, Okla., Sept. 12.—Governor Wm. H. Murray was presented as candidate for the democratic nomination for president by the sixth district convention of Oklahoma's League of Young Democrats tonight.

So unanimous was the sentiment for the militant Oklahoma governor who has attracted nation-wide attention with his economic aid proposals that the meeting was described as a typical "Murray love feast."

Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, told the gathering that success of the democratic party in the 1932 elections appears assured. He devoted his address partly to a denunciation of President Hoover and republican tariff policies.

"The country is weary of the miserable blunders and failures of the republicans, of their selfish and reckless policies," said Connally. "Success for democracy in 1932 seems assured. To achieve it, however, we must be united and aggressive. We look to 1932 for vindication and victory—victory not for ourselves but for the American people."

YOUNG GIRLS ARE REPORTED BUYING BEER

Warning that operators of illicit beer gardens who permit the presence of young girls and boys in their "blind pigs" and under-cover cafes, will be dealt with doubly severely upon apprehension was issued Friday by the city authorities. One negro woman was brought into corporation court by the police charged with vagrancy in connection with the possession and sale of beer and fined by Mayor Berry after she had pleaded guilty to the charge.

Chief of Police Miller informed the court that young girls had been seen at her place and warned her that serious trouble was brewing for those who permitted these youngsters to become beer customers.

HEALTH DEPT. WILL ENFORCE TOILET LAW

The ordinance requiring substitution of sanitary pit toilets for the unsanitary surface types is being compiled with largely, the city health department said today. Some citizens have intimated, however, that they do not intend to comply, the department stated, adding that it will be imperative that steps be taken to enforce this compliance.

The cost of providing a pit toilet is practically nothing, it was said, and after a reasonable length of time it will be necessary to check up on those who have not complied and to file complaints. This is a necessary step in the interest of the public health, the department pointed out, and no law will excuse those who have failed to meet its requirements. It is the intention of the health department to make Cisco more healthful every year, and to that end it purposes to enforce all ordinances that add to the betterment of the health situation it was said.

Citizens who have not complied with the toilet ordinance were urged therefore, to take the necessary steps immediately, the department pointing out that the fine for not doing so is not less than $25 which will build several toilets.

MOSQUITO EPIDEMIC THREATENED

The local shower of Friday there is possibility of a general outbreak of mosquitoes within a few days unless citizens are careful to see that no water is left standing in cans, buckets, alleys and other places where it may collect, the health department warned. All such receptacles should be drained and open cisterns and tanks carefully protected. Seepy cellars should be inspected, too, it was pointed out.

The health department again called attention to the necessity of immediately reporting the presence of mosquitoes in a neighborhood so that the department may trace their source and eliminate them. "If citizens wait two or three weeks from the time the first mosquito puts in an appearance they have no cause to blame the department for the presence of them," said the department.

Steward Will Be Guest Pianist

Mr. S. E. Steward, organist at the First Presbyterian church will be the guest pianist at the First Methodist church at both services today.

Rev. H. D. Tucker who has been on his vacation will preach at both services. Subjects will be, 10:50 a. m. "From Privilege to Service" and at 7:30 p. m. "The Doom of the Self-Centered Life."

The communion service will be given at the morning service.

N. Y. BOND GROUP MAY COME HERE

Possibility that conferences between representatives of bondholders and members of the city commission, looking toward agreement on plans for settling this city's bonded indebtedness difficulties, will be held in Cisco next week was seen here Saturday following receipt of a letter from the Dallas legal representatives of the New York bondholder committee.

Mayor J. T. Berry said that the letter received Saturday had announced that members of the New York committee would be in Dallas during the early part of this week and that these men would come to Cisco. Cisco authorities were told that the New Yorkers would inform them of what day they could be here.

According to the information, the New York committee, before hearing of the Cisco commission's action in rescinding its previous acceptance of an invitation to send some of its members to New York, had come to the conclusion that a number of conferences would be required before anything approaching an agreement could be worked out, and that under that condition it would be better for the New York group, or as many of that group as possible, to come to Dallas and from there conduct the necessary negotiations. Mayor Berry expressed opinion Saturday that the visit of the bondholders representatives here offers a tangible opportunity for initiating settlement of Cisco's debt question along equitable and satisfactory lines.

It was expected that the series of conferences would begin some time this week if they are held.

Norris to Speak in Jeffers' Revival

FORT WORTH, Sept. 12.—Rev. J. Frank Norris, pastor of the First Baptist church here and stormy figure in southwest church affairs, today said he expects to speak at the Jonesboro revival of Rev. Jeffers, Sept. 23, on his way to New York.

Rev. Norris said he believed Rev. Jeffers "the greatest young evangelist on the American platform."

Two Fined in Religious Outbreak

JONESBORO, Ark., Sept. 12.—While national guardsmen with fixed bayonets patrolled city hall square today, three men, charged with assault during violence that marked a religious controversy here, went on trial.

George Cox, Jr., college football player, his father and Dr. Henry Lyle were tried. The charge against the elder Cox, a chiropractor, was withdrawn and the others fined five dollars each. Early withdrawal of troops was predicted today.

REX MOORE HEADS CISCO LEGION POST

Charlie McClelland, near whose home the accident took place, was the first on the scene. L. E. DePew, employe of the Lone Star Gas company, arrived a short while later and after going to his plant about a mile and a half away and summoning an ambulance, returned to the scene to apply first aid as he had learned at plant safety meeting instructions. He worked in the poor light of assembled cars placing bandages on the cuts.

The accident occurred about 7:30 o'clock. A Wipern ambulance responded to the call of Mr. DePew and brought the injured to the hospital.

HITCH-HIKER STARTLES PROFESSION WITH PAJAMAS

A tattered patriarch of that nomadic legion which is always going somewhere and never arriving, stroked his hoary brush in the police station Friday evening and gazed with saddened eyes at his bedfellow.

"Alas, alack and darn," fervidly murmured the ancient tatterdemalion, "how times do change."

He regarded with outraged eyes the elegantly flowered silk pajamas which his companion in the hospitality of the "jug" took from a suit case.

"They'll be putting cushions on the brakeroads next," he commented acidly to himself. "This is what eating with a fork does to a man." With a snort of disgust he flung himself upon a bench, pillowed his head on his bundle and worshipped darkness voraciously.

But the soldier of the pictured bed-clothing continued his aesthetic evening's evening without so much as a responsive glance of contempt at the person of his articulate critic. Carefully he removed his immaculate suit, folded it neatly into his suitcase, stripped off his shirt and underwear, arranged them likewise neatly into the bag, donned the silken pajamas and laid him down to sleep, oblivious of an audience of gaping police.

Morning came, as mornings have a habit of doing, and the veteran of the cross-ties and road around, shook himself like a dog, combed his copious whiskers with a horny hand, tossed his greasy bundle across his shoulder and with a final shrug of contempt at the blissfully slumbering lad of the silken evening-wear, betook himself thitherward.

Likewise, when the odorous trail of the patriarch had been absorbed into the ozone, across the 1931 edition of the hitch-hiking clan, indulged in the luxury of a stretch and inquired for the presence of ladies in the audience. There were none. From the suitcase he arranged his daylight wear conveniently, produced a razor and requested hot water and soap. The police were sorry but they were unable to provide that accommodation for their guest, an economizing city commission having declined to install the necessary apparatus. The soap, however, was possible.

The shaving progressed satisfactorily despite the lack of the hot water. The pajamas were returned to the bag and with the same meticulous care the suit was returned to the frame of its owner. A dustrag restored the gloss to his shoes, and the "jelly-bean" hitch-hiker retrieved his wallet from the police desk and was ready for another hitch on his hike.

Curious officers could not refrain from questioning the distinguished pedestrian. From his ready answers they discovered he was from Pittsburgh, Pa., and that he was not attempting to elevate the dignity of the tramping profession. No, he was en route to Phoenix, Arizona, where he hoped to cultivate a better state of health.

Soldier Comrade of J. G. Reagan Visits Cisco to "Check up" on Tales of Texas

Comrades in arms who have continued comrades in civil life, despite the vicissitudes that have separated them thousands of miles were reunited here last week when Walter Dundon, accompanied by Mrs. Dundon, came to Cisco to "check up" on J. G. Reagan's wild west tales of red hot chili and tequila. He returned to Detroit, Mich., Saturday convinced that the fertile imagination which had served them well in numerous scrapes while they soldiered from Nome to Agua Caliente, hadn't suffered in the domestic pursuits of civil engineering.

"John had told me so much about chili that I had come to believe Red River was a trough of it, and got its name from the color," declared Mr. Dundon.

Twenty or 14 years ago Dundon and Reagan were privates in Uncle Sam's fighting forces, slapping mosquitoes in the San Francisco brush, tossing pebbles at lizards in the broiling heat of a southern California sun or tacking up telegraph wires in the snowy wide open spaces of an Alaskan wilderness.

At the conclusion of their service Reagan took up civil engineering and later landed at Cisco. Dundon entered civil life, re-enlisted and helped whip the Kaiser, gaining a top sergeant's rank and doing military duty in the Siberian steppes.

Got Educated Full of ambition at 21, following his first term of "squads right, squad left" in the army with plenty of opportunity to contemplate American citizenship from the outside, Dundon had renounced private life with a determination to get educated. He applied at a public school was admitted and tackled reading.

"Titt" and "rithmetic with the same vigor that he had harkened and beans while a soldier. The result was he got the cherished education and added to it by constant application. He delved into the real estate business and came out on top. Following his service in the World war, he returned from Russia and organized what was known as the Polar Bear Expedition. The government sponsored the expedition and placed a captain in charge and Dundon accompanied the argosy to Siberia as second in command. There he assisted in recovering and returning to America for burial the bodies of American soldiers who had died there. As president of the Polar Bear civil organization he had directed the raising of $200,000 in cash for the successful expedition.

WEEKLY 50 YEARS

Attorneys for Bonds said they planned to seek a new trial.

TELEGRAMS URGE FULL COTTON BAN

AUSTIN, Sept. 12.—The entire south of the negro's cabin out in the rugweeds to the rambling white mansion of the plantation owner tonight awaited restlessly the answer to long-talked farm relief.

Farmers of Arkansas, Louisiana, and South Carolina today besieged the Texas senate with telegraphed pleas for a complete cotton holiday. In three Arkansas counties cotton pickers left the fields alarmed by posted notices threatening laborers who picked for 35 cents a hundred pounds.

Both houses of the legislature today cleared their floors for bitter debate Monday. Into the legislative grab-bag three bills were thrown by a sub-committee of the house. A fourth will be added formally on Monday.

The Louisiana for a total cotton holiday in 1932 and a bill for reduced cotton acreage were recommended to the senate "without prejudice" by its sub-committee. Long's name was dropped from the holiday bill, however, by Senators who protested the criticism of the Texas governor broadcast by the Louisiana executive.

The acreage reduction bill reported to the senate restricts cotton planting in 1932 to one-third of the land in cultivation this year. In effect the bill cuts next year's crop about 50 per cent. The third bill reported to the senate forbids planting cotton on land sown in the same crop the previous year.

Senator Ben G. O'Neal of Wichita Falls, suggested the bills might be merged into one restricting cotton planting in 1932 to one-fourth the cultivated acreage of 1931. In the house Long plan advocates will offer the holiday proposal as a substitute for the sub-committee's bill.

Telegraph and telephone wires to the capital are expected to burn Monday with personal pleas for enactment of the Long plan. A. A. Allison, chairman of a state-wide advisory committee for farmers, urged them tonight to contact senators and representatives with urgent requests for the holiday plan.

Down in his private office, Gov. Ross Sterling sat with his "feet on the ground." He refused to be swept away by "radical measures" pointed to a pile of telegrams commanding his opposition to the Long plan.

THREE BILLS REPORTED TO SENATE

AUSTIN, Sept. 12.—Stripped of Governor Huey Long's name, the Neal-Thompson bill for a total cotton holiday next year went before the Texas senate today along with a bill to limit planting next year to a third of this year's tillable land.

Both bills were reported out by a senate sub-committee without prejudice, leaving to a divided senate the choice of the best method of rescuing Southern cotton farmers from their six-cent cotton plight. A third bill merely providing that there shall be no cotton planted after cotton planted received a similar report.

The acreage reduction bill was similar to one reported out by a house sub-committee.

ARKANSAS GOVERNOR FOR LONG BILL

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Sept. 12.—Governor Harvey Parnell, for the first time since Louisiana adopted the Long no-cotton bill, openly expressed his support of the plan today in a wire to Governor Ross Sterling urging its speedy enactment by the Texas legislature. The wire was in response to an inquiry from Sterling.

Governor Parnell said 90 per cent of the farmers of Arkansas want the Long bill.

Cisco Pastors to Meet Monday

The purpose of the meeting is to see whether the minister want a regular pastor's association.

PLAIN SPEAKING.

John B. Daniels, general counsel for the Temple Trust company, of Temple, impresses one as a type of man who is not going to stay down if he is knocked down. An aggressive, vigorous, determined sort of man with a streak of fight in him that keeps him battling when the odds are the heaviest. Mr. Daniels has become familiar to many Ciscoans in connection with his program for putting Randolph college on its feet. To him the Temple Trust company bequeathed the task of making an asset out of a liability and Mr. Daniels has shucked his coat and waded into the middle of the problem with such a ferocious assault upon its difficulties that Cisco has already profited spiritually by his electrifying vigor.

With his aggressiveness Mr. Daniels combines a penchant for plain speaking. He belongs to that rare species who can cut brutal facts kindly. There was nothing indirect or insinuating in the way he scored Cisco people for their low morale at the meeting at the high school auditorium Thursday night.

He told them as frankly as a physician would tell a patient he had gout or dyspepsia, that they had lost their spirit and their fighting ability and he made them like it. Figuratively he gave Cisco a good "raking over the coals" and there are plenty of those who heard him who today admit it was the best oratorical tonic that this city has had in moons.

But, imagine telling Cisco that Cisco has no spirit, that Cisco people are low in morale and need an injection of real, honest-to-God Irish fighting blood. Isn't it rather disgraceful that a man can come to Cisco from Temple, or any other city in east, west, north or south Texas, and point such an indictment at Cisco? One is instantly prompted to inquire: "Is this the city that built a big dam and lake, the biggest swimming pool in the world, miles of paved streets, produced champion high school football teams and developed a civic spirit that was a state-wide boast and a monumental pride?"

If so what has the past been worth to us? Of what advantage was it that we built well if today we are content to decay? Of what consequence the spirit of 1920 if that of 1931 is flabby and weak and our civic zeal sunk deflated into a shameful shadow of the past? Of what advantage is it that we met the problems of other years with a conquering, vivifying determination that elevated Cisco into a boastful prominence if the problems of today find us lax and afraid, too steeped in indecision and too downright debilitated spiritually to even attempt to overcome them?

Are we not the same people? Are we not physically strong? Do we not have the same desires, the same hopes the same needs?

Why is it that a man by the name of John B. Daniels should come from Temple, Texas, and point a finger of indictment at Cisco?

THEY COULD HAVE KILLED HIM BUT.

Warden E. E. Davis' nerve stopped a prison mutiny in Utah that might have claimed many lives and done damage running into the thousands.

The outbreak was well underway, the prisoners had gained the upperhand and had even kidnaped two guards whom they threatened to strangle. Then the warden acted. He walked into a prison courtyard, alive with rebellious convicts. They might have killed him easily enough but they didn't touch him.

Such lack of fear awed these frenzied convicts into submission and at his command to "get back to your cells, you men," they scurried for the cell house.

How much better was this warden's plan than standing on the prison walls aggravating the mutiny by pouring a stream of bullets at those convicts. Men the world over respect a brave man. And when it comes to bravery and to handling men this warden certainly knows his onions.

A MAN WITH COURAGE.

B. W. Thompson sends in a clipping from the Thursday morning paper of the story from Fort Worth of A. C. Smith fighting off an armed negro when the black sought to attack a woman. He writes: "A. C. Smith by his action on the occasion mentioned stamped himself as one of the noblest of heroes. Do you not think the women should express their admiration of him?"

Smith, if you don't remember the story, was fired on by the armed negro. His courage was exceeding.

WHEN IT'S TIME TO LAY POLITICS ASIDE.

Great Britain is rising to meet its financial crisis. Parliament is pruning down the nation's costs and economy is the word.

Prime Minister MacDonald hasn't minced his words about there being a crisis. He and those who were his foes short weeks ago are working side by side to stabilize the kingdom.

Save for some disgruntled laborites, members of the party MacDonald formed and nursed to power, politics has been laid aside and all have worked for the common cause—Great Britain.

In New York state there are indications that politics will be laid aside and that all will work to relieve the state's unemployed. Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt has a program for the needy. From republican headquarters this week came orders that the party must not obstruct the democratic govern-

And now's the time for political foes to lay aside their personal differences and pull together.

OTHER OPINIONS

TEXAS' OPPORTUNITY.

Texas controls gas and oil enough to provide for half the nation's industries, and has in reserve countless thousands of tons of combustible lignite; it has a virtual monopoly of the most important chemical known to the modern industrial world, producing more than eighty-five per cent of the world's and almost one hundred per cent of the country's sulphur; completion of the intracoastal canal will connect its industrial centers with all of the important cities and populous areas of the Great Lakes and Mississippi Valley regions, and its splendid deep-water ports already have given it access to all world markets. To these add a mild and salubrious climate favorable to efficient year-round industrial operations and an abundant supply of surface and artesian waters. It is a picture of incomparable industrial opportunity.

No commonwealth of ancient or modern history ever had so valid a claim upon industrial and commercial pre-eminence, yet there is a "muffing" of the opportunity. Enough Texas gas is being wasted, experts inform us, to operate all of the industries of the great Chicago and Pittsburgh industrial districts; and instead of encouraging industry to come to Texas where this abundance of cheap fuel is available, our tactics are calculated to suggest that they locate elsewhere and pipe this precious fuel to the out-of-Texas location.

There was recently established in Corpus Christi a great chemical manufacturing industry whose initial investment will range between ten and twenty million dollars. It will afford employment for approximately fifteen hundred men. This giant industry came to Texas for three good reasons: it demanded a location central as to sulphur, salt and fuel, and nowhere else could that requirement be so well satisfied as in Texas.

If we would have more industries in Texas, like the one that established in Corpus Christi, we've got to build a reputation for industrial-mindedness. We've got to conduct ourselves, particularly in our legislative halls, so that a reputation for fair-dealing is broadcast across the continent. We've got to sell ourselves on the idea of building, rather than destroying, payrolls. We've got to apply to our revenue needs the doctrine of volume—of great volume and small assessments, rather than small volume and high assessments.

A little sane and constructive thinking and acting, and Texas can capitalize upon an opportunity that is without parallel. Capital and industry merely wait until we evidence an established policy that is deeply rooted in the principles of fairness and equity.—Editorial Digest.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By EDSON R. WAITE
Shawnee, Oklahoma.

That in every city in the land, advertisements are helping to make business better.

Business concerns that wish to sell their wares can simplify their selling by using newspaper advertising.

Business concerns are doing business under self-imposed difficulties when they do not use newspaper advertising.

Citizens should realize that when they buy advertised goods they get the best at the price. What to buy will not trouble them after they read the advertisements, for the best is always advertised.

It is with a feeling of pride that five business concerns present for the public's consideration, through their advertisements, the best and latest in up-to-date merchandise or service.

The advertisements always tell you when and where to get what you want.

Real bargains are always advertised.

THE LION ♦♦ THAT JUMPED TOO FAR

Well s'r, driftin' down an African river on a tree is no picnic. First off, a big hippopotamus rose up out of the water, opened a mouth as big as a cave and roared like a China Sea typhoon. Perk took a shot at th' hippo and fell backwards into th' water. In th' excitement my gun slipped out of my hand and sank to the bottom of th' river.

As I was reachin' for Perk to pull him out he began to yell that somethin' was bitin' him. I heaved him up onto th' tree, an' I'll be dingbusted if there weren't three or four big-mouthed fish hangin' on to him. We'd just knocked th' last fish from one of Perk's legs when I saw a canoe full of savages makin' for us. Luckily for us we had drifted in close to shore. In one jump we were in th' jungle, runnin' like scared rabbits. After a little we stopped to get a breath or two. Just then, out of th' corner of my eye, I saw a big lion on a rock above us, ready to leap. By crackey we lit out of there like bullets out of a gun, with th' lion roarin' after us.

I spotted a big tree with a limb about ten feet from th' ground. Perk and I jumped for th' limb just as th' lion made his big leap for us and hit th' trunk of th' tree head-on. We got down from our perch and I'll be dodgasted if th' lion wasn't deader'n a door-nail. To this day I believe it was th' same lion that went adrift in our boat for near-ly by we found th' boat on th' beach.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON SOME MISSIONARY EXPERIENCES

Text: Acts 14:8-23
 The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Sept. 13. Some Missionary Experiences. — Acts 14:8-23.

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D., Editor of The Congregationalist

Missionary experiences have almost always been accompanied by remarkable physical phenomena. Hence it is that the record of missionary enterprise is a record full of stories of the miraculous.

The New Testament never makes the miracles themselves the important thing, but rather the power by which the miracles were wrought.

Perhaps it is worth while to point out that the most remarkable works of healing in connection with missions of modern times. By utilizing the laws of nature earnest missionaries trained for their work in the best schools of medicine and surgery have brought relief to countless thousands. The stories of what modern missionary hospitals and clinics have accomplished do not sound miraculous in an age when so many marvelous things are happening in obedience to law, but all the miracles of healing that are recorded represent something very slight in comparison with the Christian application of the laws of God in the treatment of disease in modern times and the bringing of relief to the suffering people.

The traditions that arise concerning great religious movements are very interestingly illustrated in the records of this lesson. The people who saw these wonderful happenings were neither Jews nor Christians; they were full of pagan notions, and they had to interpret these facts according to their own religious ideas. So it was that they believed that their own gods had come down in human form. They called Barnabas Jupiter, and Paul, Mercury. So strongly were they impressed with the facts, and so moved by their own assumption that Paul and Barnabas were gods in the likeness of men, that the priest of Jupiter, whose temple was outside the city, brought oxen and garlands to the gates, intending to do sacrifice there in the presence of the multitudes, in accordance with their religious ideas.

How simple and direct, however, were the words of Paul and Barnabas; their very actions giving their words emphasis. When they found the priest and the people acting in this way they thrust themselves among the multitude rending their garments in token of deep feeling and crying to the people, "Why do ye these things? We also are men of like passions with you."

In ancient times (as today, the multitudes liked to be fooled. Even the plain and direct words of Paul and Barnabas were hardly sufficient to restrain them from their sacrificial purpose. Simplicity in religion is the last thing that many people seek. The mob spirit that is full of devotion today may be full of the reaction of vengeance tomorrow. This worshipful feeling toward Paul and Barnabas changed very quickly when Jews from Antioch and Iconium arrived at Lystra and persuaded the multitude that they were mistaken about Paul and Barnabas. In spite of the manifestations of healing and blessing which had at first moved them to recognize Paul and Barnabas the multitude, now easily persuaded, stoned Paul and dragged him out of the city supposing that he was dead. The disciples stood round about him solicitous for his life and Paul arose, entering again into the city. The courage of this man was superb. He stayed in the city until the next day when he went with Barnabas to Derbe, and after he preached there he returned to Lystra and to Iconium and to Antioch—the very cities in which he had met with so much opposition and in one of which he had almost lost his life. The purpose of this return was to confirm the faith of the disciples and to encourage them in their new experience. He taught them also that through tribulations we must enter into the Kingdom of God. Fort Worth-El Paso airway being lighted.

GUILTY LIPS

by LAURA LOU BROOKMAN

Author of "MAD MARRIAGE"

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Pretty Norma Kent, 20-year-old secretary in a law office, marries Mark Travers, son of F. M. Travers, millionaire real estate dealer, after the father has sworn to cut Mark off without a penny if the marriage takes place. Norma has known Mark only a few weeks, did not know during the courtship that he was a millionaire's son.

The story opens in Marlboro, middle western metropolis. Christine Saunders, with whom Norma shares an apartment, and Bradley Hart, Chris' employer, are witnesses at the wedding. Before this Norma has refused to marry Bob Farrell, young lawyer of whom she is fond as a friend.

Mark sells his expensive roadster to get money for the honeymoon. He and Norma go to fashionable Blue Springs, where the young man takes delight in surrounding his bride with expensive luxuries. He introduces her to Hollis Stone, an old friend, and it is evident from the girl's discomposure that she has known Stone before. For some reason she also fears him. She tries to confide in Mark but loses courage. One night Mark joins a card game and does not return until 3 a. m. He admits he has lost all his money. The young couple face the problem of getting money together. Mark sells their hotel bill and buy railroad tickets. Mark wires his mother but when the answer comes it is a curt refusal from his father. Mark borrows $500 from Hollis Stone and the young couple leave next morning for Marlboro. There Mark insists on stopping at the expensive Hotel Marlboro. He spends the time with his wealthy friends than he does hunting a job. One evening he and Norma meet Natalie Price, a debutante who before Mark's marriage tried to inveigle him into a proposal.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXI

There was nothing for Norma Travers to do but watch the tableau. Mark was smiling broadly. He had swung around and caught Natalie's hand.

"Hello, Nat. Say—it's good to see you."

"Thanks, handsome. You wouldn't mind me, would you? When'd you get in town? Oh—and how you've been missed, darling! The place hasn't been the same. What are you doing tonight?"

"Why—nothing much." Mark turned toward Norma. "Want you to know Nat Price, Norma," he said. "One of my best friends. Nat, this is Mrs. Travers."

Quick, flashing looks of appraisal on the part of both girls. Almost in one voice they chorused, "How'd you do?" Norma's greeting was low pitched, a little unsteady. Natalie's was an indifferent drawl.

"You two will be great friends," Mark prophesied with a confidence of their own sex would have said the young women all but bristled antagonism. There was such veiled aloofness in the droop of Natalie Price's mascaraed eyelids. Such resentment in Norma's politely artificial smile.

"So nice to meet you, Mrs. Travers." Natalie's words were apparently harmless as the Angora's claws. Covered by silky fur, how those claws can slash and tear in action!

"I'm glad to know my husband's friends." The faintest trace of proprietary emphasis on that word "husband" as Norma said it.

"Well, this is great, running in to you this way, Nat." Mark went on. "We've been at Blue Springs, you know. Just back a few days ago. Saw Tempy this afternoon at the club."

A lank youth in top hat and overcoat approached. Beneath the hat hair that was extraordinarily red was visible. The young man came forward in swinging strides. "Hello, Travers!" he exclaimed. "Didn't know you were in town. Well, how's the merry bridegroom? Say, boy, you pulled a fast one—embarking on seas of matrimony and all that without any guessing what you were up to! Oh—and is this the bride?"

The stranger beamed at Norma. "You're right, Red. Guess I picked myself a winner, huh? Norma, this is Huntley Porter, otherwise known as Red—for reasons you will scarcely be able to guess. Red warbles the most obnoxious tenor and is the best amateur boxer in Marlboro."

"Dee-lighted, Mrs. Travers!" There was boyish sincerity in Red Porter's admiring eyes. Norma warned to this rather eccentric looking youth.

"Well—It was Natalie who cut in impatiently. "Well, what are we standing here for? Red and I are on our way to Monty's. Why don't you join us? Jane and Thorney will be there. Monty's picked up a Cuban who does the rumba divinely. She talks about going into vaudeville with him. Yes, really! Why don't you and— and Mrs. Travers come along?"

"Shall we, Norma?"

He wanted to go. Norma caught the eagerness in Mark's voice, the quick way he turned to her.

"You go if you want to," she told him. "I think I'd better go back to the hotel. My head's aching and I'm afraid I wouldn't be much good at a party."

"Why, sweet! I didn't know you weren't feeling well. Of course I won't leave you. Sorry," he addressed the others now. "We'll have to postpone participation in the festivities. Give Monty my love will you, Nat? Tell her another time we'll drop around."

The farewells were over quickly. Natalie murmured icy, polite phrases, caught Porter's arm and whirled away. As she turned Norma was positive she noted an interchange of glances between Natalie and Mark, heard Nat Price murmur something about "take your little headache home."

"I hope to have you miss seeing" your friend because of me." Norma was looking up into Mark's eyes. She spoke the words sincerely.

"Oh, that—! Say, I can see that gang any time. Why didn't you tell me your head ached, Baby? Look, there's a drug store on the corner. Maybe if you'd take something you'd feel better."

She slipped her arm into the drug store. The boy at the soda fountain mixed and presented the dose in a tall glass. Norma swallowed the unpleasant mixture bravely.

"You'll feel better now," Mark assured her. "We'll go back to the hotel and you can lie down a while."

They went out on the street. It was after 8:30 and traffic on Center street, Marlboro's chief thoroughfare, was at its height. Most of the throng were heading for the theaters and picture palaces.

Norma stood still, clinging to Mark's arm, and breathed deeply of the fresh October air. Another week and October would be gone. The night was a cloudless one with a cool breeze that was not chilling.

"Do you know what I'd like to do?" she asked. "I'd like to walk. It's such a perfect night and I think the air would be good for my head."

"Well, then, we'll walk."

For a block they drifted with the crowd. At the intersection they crossed and turned to the right. The street ahead of them was brightly lit but outside the rounds of the pleasure seekers.

The office buildings, strongholds of commerce, rose on either side. Not half a dozen pedestrians were in sight.

Norma and Mark walked slowly, saying little. He was holding her arm, keeping her close to him. They came to Broad street. Half a block away was the Liberty building, where Brooks, Welliver and Brooks had their law offices. How many weary hours Norma had spent there!

She was not thinking of the law office as she stopped suddenly. "It was right here, Mark," she exclaimed. "Right here in front of the flower store. Do you remember?"

"Sure I do. You mean the night I dragged that pup out of the street, don't you? The first time I ever saw you? Say—and were you high-hat! Wouldn't give me a tumble. Wouldn't tell me your name."

The street light across the corner was old and dim. Only the palest glow of yellow fell across the girl's face as she raised happy eyes.

"But you found out, darling! Oh, Mark, that all happened only six weeks ago. Doesn't it—doesn't it sort of make you tremble to think how much can happen in such a little time?"

"Funny all right. Say—if anyone told me six weeks ago that I'd be married tonight I'd never in the world have believed them. But that was before I met you, Baby!"

"Not—not sorry, are you, Mark?"

"Well, what do you think?"

They went on again. Three-quarters of an hour later they were back in the hotel room, Norma slipped off her hat and hung away her coat.

Mark had thrown himself into the big chair. He was scowling at the floor. As the girl turned he said, "Norma—I think maybe you were right when you said we shouldn't come to this place. I think maybe we ought to move."

"Oh, I'm glad! I've been so anxious to get into a place of our own, dear. An apartment where I can cook and keep house. It would be so much more fun!"

"Yeah—lots cheaper! I guess you think I'm the world's prize dub, Norma. Maybe I am. Only don't think I'm not trying to find a job. I've tried a dozen places. Trouble is people start kidding whenever they see me. They don't think I'm really serious about going to work. It isn't that I hate to ask friends for favors. I got over that long ago. If we move the money we have will last longer."

Norma flung her arms about his neck.

"We'll move," she declared. "I'll start tomorrow morning hunting for a place. And you're going to find work soon, too, dear."

Norma's quest for an apartment was more successful than Mark's search for work. Within two days she had located a "three-in-one" furnished flat—a diminutive arrangement of living room, dressing room, kitchenette and bath. It was in the neighborhood where she and Chris had lived. In a nice building with more air and sunlight. The rent was five dollars higher.

Mark stormed a bit at transferring to such an unfashionable neighborhood, but he discovered how rents mounted elsewhere. Besides there was no lease to sign. They could move so soon as he found the right job with a decent salary. Mark, during the second week of their return from Blue Springs, was in a subdued and treatable mood.

He let Norma manage details of their installation in the new quarters. He even graciously echoed her enthusiasm over purchases from the "five and ten"—kitchenware, a growing plant in gay orange pot, dishes and yellow and white dainty curtains to brighten the kitchenette.

Norma knew that Mark was worried and disturbed. No need to ask when he arrived home at night whether the day had brought "luck." She cheered him bravely. She was so sure all he needed was help in the work.

Mark Travers' method of hunting a job was far from the procedure of most young men seeking work. He never looked at "help-wanted" columns in newspapers. He ignored employment agencies. Mark did not consider himself above such things. He was merely self-conscious, entirely without an idea of the business-like way to attack his problem.

Each day he went to the club. He dropped into offices where he had acquaintances, sauntered about the old haunts, always in the expectation he would hear of "a good thing." Making these rounds required that a large amount of time should be spent in careless chatter. Mark was known as a good fellow. He tried to maintain the reputation.

He stood waiting for a car one evening during the hateful rush hour. A fat woman, arms loaded with bundles, wedged her way between Mark and the street car. As he stepped back to avoid the sharp-cornered package so near his right eye he heard a familiar whistle.

Mark turned. Nat Price's tan roadster was halted less than 10 yards away. Nat, clad in bright green, was waving. He made his way to the roadster.

The girl called out, "Hop in! I'll give you a lift."

Mark hesitated. "Afraid it would be out of your way, Nat. We're east now, Franklin avenue."

"Don't be silly! I can have you there in half the time the car takes. Anyhow, I haven't seen you in ages!"

She swung open the car door and Mark took his place beside her. At once the tan roadster shot forward. Ah! this was better than clinging to a swaying street car strap! Nat drove with perfect assurance. She kept up a running fire of talk about the League's new revue, about Sidney's divorce and Lotie's wedding. As they stopped before the unimposing office building impulsively.

"There's something I've been wanting to say to you, Mark," she began. "I want to tell you I think it's perfectly splendid of you to show your independence the way you have. No matter what anyone else says I'm for you!"

Travers flushed. "Thanks, Nat."

And thanks for the lift home. Norma and I'll be seeing you soon." He stepped from the roadster and saluted as it pulled off down the street.

An hour later from the chaise longue in her boudoir Natalie spoke into a mauve telephone. A servant in the home of Mark's parents answered. "Yes," Natalie said silkily. "It's Mrs. Travers I want to speak to. Tell her Natalie is calling. Something important!"

"LAST FIGHT" CLAIMED DICK'S BEST PICTURE

Richard Barthelmess has been more than lucky in his choice of a starring vehicle in "The Last Flight" which opens at the Palace theatre today.

The story is by John Monk Saunders, who if we are not mistaken, did both "The Dawn Patrol" and "The Finger Points" for the same star. "The Last Flight" is known to many as "Nikki and Her War Birds" which ran serially in Liberty Magazine and was later published as a novel under the title of "Single Lady".

Mr. Barthelmess plays Cary Lockwood, chief of pretty Nikki's war-birds. He is an ex-flier who crashes into the picture from a flaming plane, and proceeds to paint Paris red in an effort to provide thrills equal to those of the days before the Armistice.

Cary Lockwood meets up with other birds of the same feather, Breckie Bill Talbot, once of Montana who is a giant ex-stunner. They Lambert, also of the flying brotherhood, and Washout, once the best shot of the squadron, but now a nervous wreck—and the buddies hit the high spots. Drama enters with a capital D when Nikki, the girl who says she can walk faster in red shoes—appears—allows herself to be "adopted"—and sets forth with the group on their madcap wanderings.

Then there is the outsider, a meddlesome newspaper correspondent from America, who tries to steal Nikki—and—but that is telling the story. It is enough to say that "The Last Flight" is a romance of unique and semi-tragic beauty—lived in a glittering panorama of life—in Paris, Portugal—and in Never-Never-Land. It is a story you won't be able to forget.

Daily News and American and Roundup want ads are a good investment—Phone 80 or 81.

Lefors—2.2 miles road east of here being improved.
