State Springs Surprise With Kennamer's Letter STRAINING TO REMAIN CALM WITHIN CELL

About Our Friends

By STEP A. LONG

Mr. and Mrs. T. F. O'Brien getting their mail at the postoffice... a distinguished looking couple... Mr. and Mrs. Roy Huffmeyer going to work... she to her stenographic work at the First National Bank; he to his job of managing the Nance Motor Company Service Station... E. L. Smith and Jack Anderson holding a director's meeting... They call in another director... doubtless something will happen soon... We are in receipt of the Daily Texan... Mildred Cooke, Stanley Gunn, Kleber Miller and Dick West (from Cisco) listed as editorial writers... thanks, Dick, very much... Jesse McCannles, farmer, stockman and garage owner with his nephew, Vivian Donovan, is only farmer at heart, whatever, Jesse is doing through the day, he will give it the very best he has, but deep in his heart he is only living until the day's work is done so that he can dash away to his ranches or farms... and he has several... where he can really live as life should be lived, in the perfect enjoyment of the things he loves, cattle, and seeing things grow. Incidentally, Mr. McCannles says that only a small bit of small grain was killed by the recent freeze, and wheat, not at all, on his farms, west and northwest of Cisco. We will have plenty of grass in the pastures now, he says, because it takes both moisture and sunshine to make it; we have the moisture and he guarantees the sunshine will come later... plenty of it, CONTINUED ON PAGE FOUR

Weighing Put Stop To Food Complaint

DALLAS, Feb. 14.—J. R. (Red) Wright, United States deputy marshal, explained here how he put a stop to chronic complaints of prisoners that they are improperly fed. "When I was sheriff, I bought a pair of scales and weighed every prisoner that came in. Then when there were any complaints about the food, we weighed the prisoner again. "Usually he showed a gain of several pounds. He couldn't explain how he had gained if the food was as bad as he had said it was."

TO DISCOUNT EVIDENCE OF LOVE KILLING

PAWNEE, Okla., Feb. 14.—The impassioned words of Phil Kennamer were flung in his face today at his trial for murder, to repudiate his claim that he killed John Gorrell, Jr., over love for Virginia Wilcox. White-faced, the 19-year-old defendant held his head in his hands while the jury heard an emotional outpouring from his pen telling the Tulsa oil heiress his love for her was dead. The letters were written nearly four months before he admittedly shot Gorrell in Tulsa on Thanksgiving night. Before the noon recess the state rushed its case toward a close, with its last star witness, Detective Sergeant Henry Maddox, relating the evidence on which the death penalty for Kennamer will be demanded. County Attorney Holly Anderson said the state would complete its direct testimony by mid afternoon. Another letter—an extortion demand for $20,000 against H. F. Wilcox of Tulsa and allegedly written by Gorrell—was introduced in a surprise defense move as the two messages tugged at opposite sides of testimony on which Kennamer's life depends.

HEARING UPON CHANNEL CASE DUE MARCH 22

GALVESTON, Feb. 14.—A hearing on the petition of Port Houston for $2,000,000 to widen and deepen the shipping channel from the Gulf will be held before Lieut. Col. E. H. Marks, United District Engineer for Texas, here March 22. The program was planned to make Houston equal to the largest shipping points in the South. The port already has risen to the position of being the greatest cotton and petroleum handler in the world. Port authorities several weeks ago sent a request to Washington for the new improvements which include: Deepening the waterway to a usable depth of 34 feet throughout; widening from 200 feet to 300 feet in one section, 150 to 200 feet in two other sections and widening all sharp bends in the channel by 50 or 100 feet.

Huey To Be Heard In Farley Attack

Long demanded a senate investigation.

Outstanding Relief Office Here Is Aim

"Our aim is to make Cisco the outstanding relief office of the county." That was, briefly, the way W. C. Weakly, new head of the relief forces here, outlined the work before him and the other workers today. He took over the office yesterday, coming from Ranger. He expressed the hope that Cisconians would cooperate with the relief agency and assured them of cooperation on the part of his organization. "I have found the cooperation at Ranger splendid," he said. "We had a good relief office there. We hope to find the cooperation here good, and to have an even better relief force."

WELL MAKING FIVE MILLION FEET OF GAS

Gallagher and Lawson drilling contractors today announced that the well completed by them this week is making 5,000,000 cubic feet of dry gas daily. The well was drilled through the lake sand at 3,438 feet. The well, known as the Mrs. J. E. Kincaid Number Three, is an east offset to the Hickok well a mile and a half northeast of the city. The company is now drilling a west offset on the J. G. Boggs place and has reached a depth of 450 feet. There was no showing of oil in the gasser recently completed, according to N. D. Lawson of the drilling contractors.

Bartender Shoots Beer Tavern Owner

FORT WORTH, Feb. 14.—William Gates, 47, admitted slayer of A. P. McCortin, 35, owner of a local beer tavern, was free today on $1,000 bond after he had been charged in murder in justice of the peace court. Gates, a bartender in the tavern, surrendered to officers and said he shot in self defense when he killed McCortin. Arthur Johnson, manager of the El Paso municipal airport, and F. H. Kennedy, his assistant, were rescued after the motor of their plane stalled while they were seeking the fallen airplane of Frank Bowman, Sr., and his son, Frank Bowman, Jr. The plane was only slightly damaged.

New Brain Teaser To Sweep Country

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 14.—First it was bridge, then backgammon, cross-word puzzles and others to add to the nation's headaches. Now it's "monopoly." "If you like to speculate with 'millions' try it. You invest in real estate, railroads or public utility, but when it is all over your bankroll is just the same. This new game, for which nearly 10,000 copies have been sold here in the past year, was invented by Charles B. Darrow, an unemployed heating expert. When Darrow lost his position, he had so much time on his hands he decided to invent something that would attract public attention. The result of his deep thoughts was "monopoly." In it a player is allotted a certain amount of "funds" to invest in any of the three businesses, which he thinks will prove most profitable. High financiers and staid old ladies have taken to the game.

Plaintiff Not Ready To Begin Civil Case

EASTLAND, Feb. 14.—Civil suit of Lloyd Lucas vs. Safety Casualty company in 88th district court was literally continued Tuesday by granting permission to plaintiff of withdrawal of announcement of ready for trial.

Female Rats Too Wily For Trappers

SHARON, Pa., Feb. 14.—E. L. Strawburg Hagerstown, Md., "rat killer" by profession, says it is difficult to catch female rats because "they are too smart." "Male rats," said Strawburg, "will fall for any kind of trap. But a female rat is so wily and clever and can only be reached by poison." Strawburg, conducting a three-week campaign to destroy the rats of Sharon, said a particular type of poison should be used, the kind that allowed a rat to live at least 24 hours after eating.

NEW BRAZOS BILL PASSED BY 116 TO 19

AUSTIN, Feb. 14.—An amended Brazos river bill which, it was announced, will spend a $40,000,000 federal loan for dams and other river improvements by the house of representatives. The vote was 116 to 19. It previously had passed the senate by a vote of 28 to 1, so it can take effect immediately upon signature of the governor. A bitter fight delayed passage of the bill. Rep. A. M. Aikin, Jr., of Paris, charged the real purpose was to get 100 or more votes for the Brazos river project. It received a vote of 86 to 44 at the fourth called session of the 43rd legislature. Whether a vote of less than 100 is sufficient to authorize its diversion of taxes has been questioned. Advocates said the purpose of the new bill is to provide a permanent bond with which federal agencies can deal. They declined, however, to say the bill should not be construed as "ratifying, confirming, or re-enacting the old act" which permits diversion of 300,000 taxes in 10 counties for a 20 year period.

SUSPECT HELD IN RIDE DEATH NEAR DAYTON

LAKE CHARLES, La., Feb. 14.—A Hammond, Indiana man was arrested here today in connection with the murder of a man known as "Tony the Greek," whose body was thrown from an automobile near Dayton, Texas Tuesday morning. Sheriff Henry Reid made the arrest. He said the man left an automobile near a garage at Sulphur, west of here, on the day of the killing. The garage attendant said the suspect brought in the car, removed the license plates and told him he was going to Lake Charles to purchase new ones. The man telephoned the garage from New Orleans last night and asked if the establishment would be open throughout the night. He appeared at 3 a. m. to claim his car and Reid was waiting for him.

Joe Lea Moore's Condition Better

Condition of Joe Lea Moore, injured Sunday night in an automobile accident, today was said to be much improved and he will likely return to work at the Red Front drug store before long. Moore was injured when his car skidded on the slippery pavement a mile west of Palo Pinto as he was returning from Dallas. He was taken to a Breckenridge hospital immediately and later was brought home. He sustained a head cut and a broken rib.

James Ray Starr Dies On Wednesday

Little James Ray Starr, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Starr, died at the family residence here Wednesday night. The child was a month and 12 days old at the time death occurred. Funeral services were to be held at Scranton this afternoon at 3 o'clock, with interment in the Scranton cemetery. Neil Lane funeral home had charge of the body.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Feb. 14.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann clung with the tenacity of desperation today to hope that the higher court would nullify the sentence of death in the electric chair imposed on him for the murder of the Lindbergh baby.

"Bruno is a long way from the electric chair," said Edward J. Reilly, chief of defense counsel in commenting on appeal of the sentence—death in the week of March 18—passed on the pale and rigid German carpenter last night by Justice Thomas W. Trenchard after receiving the verdict of guilty without mercy for the jury of four women and eight men. For Hauptmann restlessly pacing his cell, this day was outwardly like almost every other he had spent in the Hunterdon county jail. But inwardly his guards said, he was fighting for self control.

His first outburst—tears and collapse on his cell cot—had faded into the icy calm of other days, but he walked like a shadow back and forth under the brilliance of electric lights that glared on him 24 hours a day. He puffed deeply on cigarettes, ate all of his breakfast, paced again, and occasionally lay down for a nap.

PERJURY INDICTMENTS TO BE SOUGHT CLINTON, N. J., Feb. 14.—Hunterdon county prosecutor Anthony Hauck, Jr., will seek perjury indictments against four, possibly five witnesses in the Hauptmann trial sometime before April 1, he told the United Press today.

ANNA'S FAITH IN HUSBAND UNSHAKEN

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Feb. 14.—The best thing Bruno Richard Hauptmann ever did in his life was to wed Anna Schoeffler. Her faith in her husband is as high as a mountain top. Last night when the jury returned the verdict of guilty her eyes were of innocent sorrow. How she wanted to help her husband when the word "Guilty" branded his lowering brow. How she leaned forward. How she strove to reach him across the shoulders of his guard. Never once did she look at the handcuffs on his wrists. She pretended she did not see them. She looked into his eyes.

BRUNO'S MOTHER APPEALS TO ROOSEVELT

KAMENZ, Germany, Feb. 14.—Frau Pauline Hauptmann, aged, white-haired mother of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, wrote a pathetic appeal to President Roosevelt, today, asking clemency for her murderer son. Frau Hauptmann was reluctant to discuss the contents of her letter before the president received it. However, it is brief and in simple language, setting forth a mother's plea for her son to be released so that he can come home and help support her and give her comfort in her old age. Frau Hauptmann, who is 66, was buying vegetables at a market stall when she first heard the news from a passerby, that her son had been sentenced to death.

Cisco Needs Boy Scout Leaders

Cisco needs more Boy Scout leaders. This is the cry of parents, teachers, ministers, and men who are already giving of their time to this great work, locally. There is no dearth of material, they all say. There are plenty of boys, who would be willing to take up the Boy Scout work, if they had a little encouragement and a leader to train them.

There is no greater field for the energies of men who still retain the desire to be a boy and play with boys in this great boy-training movement, than in the realm of Boy Scout directing. Boys must have activity and many would-be bandits are turned into real men by means of healthful, directed play and out-door activity.

It is a good time to begin this work now. The Lions and Rotarians surely have men who would give of their time to start an increase in Boy Scout membership this year when we are celebrating the 25th anniversary of the organization.

America's 30,904 troops of Boy Scouts, with 6,000,000 members, begin celebration of the silver jubilee of their organization. An address by President Roosevelt opens a commemorative season scheduling many functions leading up to a Washington jamboree in August, when 30,000 Scouts will stage the largest American encampment. From Melbourne, Australia, come enthusiastic reports of the great success of the World Jamboree held there by 10,000 Scouts from many nations.

Motion Pictures Centuries Old

Motion pictures are not the product of a jazz age, equipped with sudden mechanical genius, but actually are hoary with the accumulated experience of antiquity.

The corner "movie," in fact, has a family tree with roots back 25,000 years or so among barbaric tribes who then inhabited the Iberian peninsula. It could raise a saucy nose at those who scorn its so-called modern offerings.

Historians have traced the development of the cinema from the appearance of motion in certain crude rock carvings found on the walls of ancient caves in Spain, the shadow plays of old Java 5,000 years ago, the magic lanterns of nineteenth-century Europe, and then through the various "toys" which culminated in the enormous entertainment business of the film world today.

"Fifty centuries ago," Historians declare, "the Javanese staged elaborate motion picture performances by means of the outdoor shadow shows. They were presented with all the acrobatics there was no photography in those days."

In 1767 these shadow shows were introduced into Europe and became enormously popular. They were followed by slide shows, or travel lectures, which became general about 1835. These employed colored slides—hand drawn or painted for these was no photography in those days.

The quality called "persistence of vision," which allows the eye to be fooled by the illusion of motion in the screening of film, was known centuries before the present motion pictures appeared.

The development of cinematography thus had to wait more on the invention of mechanical and chemical processes than upon an understanding of the basic factors involved.

with which we are familiar, Kresser added.

Alpha Rays In the early days of atom study, the alpha rays of radium were the chief means available for this bombardment. But radium was too scarce and expensive to use extensively and after considerable experiment it was discovered high voltages of electricity would do the job even better.

The California Institute of Technology has developed an electrical gun with a pressure of 700,000 volts," Kresser said.

Chief results of this type of research, Kresser said, is the ability of man now to produce artificial radio-active materials which heretofore were found only in nature.

SEEK COURT DIGNITY REMO, Nev., Feb. 14.—Because practicing attorneys thought it would be more dignified, they petitioned the State Supreme Court justices to wear judicial robes when the high tribunal is in session. Nevada is believed to be one of the few states where the justices do not wear the judicial robes.

24,846,000 AUTOS REGISTERED BOSTON, Feb. 14.—There are 24,846,000 automobiles registered in the United States, according to a survey by the First National Bank of Boston. This represents 72 per cent of the total for the world.

Everything Will Soon Be Simplified

Did you ever stop to think & EDSON R. WAITE Shawnee, Okla.

AUSTIN, Feb. 14.—"It is but another form of corruption," Gov. Allan told the legislature, "when the state approves and feeds upon gambling within the confines of the race track, yet at the same time denounces it as unlawful elsewhere."

Edgar G. Harris, publisher of the West Point (Miss.) Daily "Times Leader, and president of the Tupelo (Miss.) Daily News, believes the growth and development of chain store merchandising during the past few years is due largely to the fact that they have made intelligent use of the advertising columns of the local newspapers in towns and cities where they operate.

When every demand is for reconstruction, for restoration, for rebuilding of society upon the old foundation stones of honesty and common decency.

Discussing the matter of store advertising in general, Mr. Harris says: "Newspaper advertising is much more important to the small city store. Attractive show windows and well display merchandise may be depended upon to secure a fair volume of business in the big city for the well located store."

Women had for a long time seen their political influence in eclipse in Texas, since the bright morning of 1918-19 when they came to vote, first by state statutory permission, then by ratification of the 19th amendment.

Attorneys of gas and electrical utilities, with Frank Kemp and Warren Collins their spokesmen, have told the legislature they expect to see the new utilities commission bill pass, and expect to see utility companies both regulated by the state and more heavily taxed by the state.

Mr. Kemp and Mr. Collins told the house revenue and taxation committee that if taxation is to be increased, they wanted it limited to state taxes, and not extended to city and county levies. Mr. Kemp said if a reasonable additional levy is limited to state purposes his companies "will not be heard to complain."

Both statements from the utility camp are significant.

WETHERED TO REACH BETTER GOLFING FORM

By H. L. PERCY United Press Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Feb. 14.—Golfing enthusiasts cannot for the life of them decide whether Roger Wethered, brother of the much more famous, Joyce Wethered, is a good player or not.

Roger has just won the President's Putter competition for the fourth time. One of the major amateur tests of the year it should make him just about the best non-paid golfer in the country.

Yet those who would like to call him so cannot forget his truly miserable display in the 1934 Walker Cup.

What, then, is the matter with Roger? It has been said that if he could use a wooden club as accurately as an iron, he would be the most formidable amateur in Britain.

For years, he has plunked his tee-shot out into the wilds, and then pulled off some remarkable recoveries to the green or therabouts.

But it was a new Wethered who played for the President's Putter for 3 successive days he drove far, and mostly straight, followed by deadly accurate iron shots and his usual good putting.

The secret of his god driving was a limber-shafted driver, a Christmas present, it is said, from his sister. This novelty among steel shafts is all the rage here just now. The average golfer feels that it has that "whippiness" which he lost when he changed over from wooden-shafts to the stiffer steel shafts several years ago.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—It wasn't until Democrats took over the Senate restaurant that the ominous letters "U.S.S.R." appeared on the coats of the waiters. (Republicans take note.)

If it seemed worth while, one might polish up a pun to the effect that whereas a pie counter used to be part of the restaurant, the restaurant now is part of the pie counter.

Senator Matthew Neely of West Virginia started cutting pie when he found himself chairman of the Rules Committee this session. One of his chief functions in that job is to run the Senate restaurant.

Senator Neely promptly made W. W. Arbuckle, a mathematics instructor, the restaurant manager, and Edward H. Nunnally, of the Bureau of Standards mechanical staff, the assistant manager.

Senator Neely has a hot 1936 renomination fight coming up. Thousands of West Virginians who live here, working in or out of the government, cast their votes back home. Candidates for Congress in that state have been known to make campaign speeches here.

By what would be an exceptionally rare coincidence if you didn't know any better, Arbuckle was and is president of the capital's West Virginia Democratic Club and Nunnally is president of the West Virginia State Society.

The food, however, is no worse. It couldn't be.

CONGRESSMAN ALLEN TREADWAY of Massachusetts is an old-fashioned Republican. At the House hearings on the economic security bill he sought to make it appear that the measure was an unsound concoction of "brain trusters."

Going cautiously down the list of the president's security advisory committees, he came to "Actuarial Consultants," a committee whose chairman was Prof. James V. Glover of the University of Michigan.

"Would you mind telling me," he asked Executive Secretary Edwin B. Witte, "how a college professor qualifies as an actuarial expert?"

"Professor Glover," replied Witte, "probably has trained two-thirds of the actuaries now working for the insurance companies and himself commands large fees when those companies call him into consultation."

Mr. Treadway didn't ask any more questions like that.

A FELLOW was almost reminded of the Hauptmann trial when the Senate munitions investigation, taking up a letter from a du Pont official to Irene du Pont, bumped into what the official insisted was a typographical error.

Ruly Carpenter had written to suggest that the du Ponts keep a lobbyist here instead of lobbying from Wilmington and said the du Pont sales office would be a good hiding place for such a lobbyist if one were necessary.

"I think that was purely a stenographic error," Carpenter insisted. "It meant 'hiving.'"

"What would be a hiving place?" demanded Chairman Nye. "A place where he could have an office, or hold out; just a slang expression," explained Carpenter. But the committee didn't seem quite convinced.

SILKEN SPINDLES by Laura Lu Prookman © 1935 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY GALE HEYER, twenty and 23, works in a silk mill. She and her 19-year-old brother, PHIL, support their mother and sister STEVE MEYERS, who also works in the mill, asks Gale to marry him. She promises to give him an answer in a few days.

Gale goes skating, breaks the ice and is rescued by BRIAN WESTMORE, whose father, now dead, built the mill. Brian has come home after two years in Paris to enter the mill. Gale disappears before he learns her name.

VICKY THATCHER, daughter of ROBERT THATCHER, general manager of the mill, schemes to marry her captivate Brian.

Gale, at work in the mill, is surrounded by the attentions of MISS GROVES, personnel director. Miss Groves makes it plain that if Gale will marry her, she promises to give her the job.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXV

THERE was a clock on the bookcase facing the personnel director's desk. It was a small clock with a case of dark, polished wood. The ticking of the clock was the only sound that broke the stillness. It went "tick-tick, tick-tick," and to Gale it seemed to shriek.

She knew Miss Groves was waiting for her answer. Miss Groves was watching her. Gale looked down at her hands, clasped together in her lap, and said, "I—couldn't, Miss Groves."

"I'm afraid I don't understand you."

"I don't know anything about the meetings you've been talking about," Gale said. "I've never been to any, and I don't know anyone who has. But if I did, I wouldn't want to come and tell about it. It sounds—sneaking to me."

The lines about the older woman's mouth tightened and two sharp spots of color came into her cheeks. "Don't be insolent!" she snapped. "We have ways to cure insolence, too. How dare you suggest that I asked you to do anything sneaking or underhanded?"

"I didn't mean that, Miss Groves. I'm sorry it sounded that way. I only meant—well, that I'd rather not."

"What you meant is that you're an impertinent young woman. You—the anger died from the woman's voice but in her eyes there was a chilly gleam. "You will report to your foreman at once," she said. "At once!"

"Yes, Miss Groves."

Gale arose and went out into the corridor. She walked down the long hallway with rapidly beating heart. "It's done now," she thought. "I'll lose my job now. Oh, why couldn't I have told her I'd do it? Why didn't I say something—anything to make her think I agreed? I could have gotten out of it somehow later. I'll lose my job now and what'll I do—?"

There were no harsh words from the foreman as Gale had expected. She did not see him again that afternoon. She went back to work, fingers flying with new energy. She'd work harder, faster, she resolved. She had to keep that job! They couldn't possibly fire her, she and Phil and her father, on the little Phil made. It was hard enough skimping to make things come out even on her wages and Phil's to-

Over and over, as Gale jerked bobbins off spindles and clamped them on again she repeated the prayer, "They can't fire me. They can't!"

IT was when she was walking home a little later, walking alone because Steve had stayed behind to talk to someone, that Gale remembered his words of the night before. Steve had said, "Brian Westmore was trying to pump you. He was trying to get information so that they could work us harder, grind us down and make more money for the company. You'd better watch your step."

Could Brian have been responsible for her interview with Miss Groves? Was it anything she'd said to him that had made them call her into the personnel director's office? Miss Groves had never spoken to her before. Why should she single her out now, just at this time?

Gale didn't want to believe Brian was responsible. She told herself it couldn't be true! And yet it was a coincidence—Steve's warning and what had happened this afternoon.

Gale hadn't said anything to Steve about it. She didn't want to tell anyone unless she had to. Unless she lost her job.

"If they're going to fire me," Gale thought, "I ought to know it pretty soon. Maybe tomorrow—"

VICKY THATCHER picked up the long-handled mirror, turned her head slightly, inspecting her reflection. "It's not bad," she said. "Not bad—" The words died away as she tilted the tiny hat more severely.

"It's perfect, Miss Thatcher!" Celeste, proprietor of the shop, clasped her hands together. "So new, so smart! And you're exactly the type to wear it. I knew the minute that hat came in that I wanted you to have it. So many people can't wear the extreme, the really smart hats, but you—oh, it's perfect on you!"

Vicky turned the other side of her face to the mirror, raised her chin. "Yes," she said, "I think I like it." She tugged at the triangle of black straw that seemed a combination of Watteau shepherdess and urchin's cap. "It's better than any of the others," she said. "How much did you say it is?"

"Thirty-five dollars, Miss Thatcher—no, $37.50. Such a beautiful straw—imported. And of course it's an exclusive model. You won't see another like it. It's absolutely exclusive with us—"

VICKY pushed the silver fox cape she had discarded to one side. There was a muf of the silver fox on the chair beside her. She stood up—a trim figure in a black suit with unmistakable elegance in the simplicity of its lines.

"Let me see that brown hat again," she commanded. "The one I thought I liked."

The brown hat was produced—a flat bit of fabric of ecclesiastic austerity until Vicky perched it on her head. On Vicky the hat suddenly became jaunty and flattering.

"I'll take it, too," she announced. "Yes, Miss Thatcher. Now is there anything else—?"

"No, Oh, yes, I need some hose. I want the same shade I had before. You can send a dozen pair—no, you might as well make it two dozen. They don't wear at all, but they are lovely and sheer. Oh, there's something else I want, too. That perfume you carry—'Be Mine.' The ounce size."

"Yes, Miss Thatcher. The ounce size is $30. It's lovely, isn't it?" Celeste's tone implied that $30 for such a treasure was really a trifle. Vicky drew the fox cape about her shoulders and picked up her handbag. "You'll send them all out," she said. "And remember I must have them tonight."

"Yes, Miss Thatcher. I know you're going to enjoy your hats—both of them. Come in again soon. We are always getting new things—"

Vicky disappeared through the door. She walked to the curb where a bright green roadster was parked. There was a young man in the car. Vicky said, "Hello, Greg. Is this a surprise party?"

He nodded. "Saw your car," he said, "and thought you must be somewhere around. I've decided to let you drive me home."

"Isn't that sweet of you!" Vicky smiled.

GREG HARMON got out, held the door open for her, and seated himself beside her. The car moved away from the curb, shifting smoothly through its gears.

"I called you last night and couldn't get you," Greg said abruptly. "I thought you told me you were going to be home?"

"But I was! The operator must have rung the wrong number."

"You're sure you weren't out with Brian Westmore?"

"Greg, how can you? 'Well—were you?'"

"No, of course not. How many times do I have to tell you I don't care anything about Brian Westmore? I have to be nice to him because of father's business relations. I've explained that before."

"You've said it," Greg admitted, "but it doesn't look like that to me. It looks—"

"Greg, are you going to be jealous of every man I speak to? If you are, I don't see what I can do about it. I've told you I don't care anything about Brian. How could I when I know you? Darling, you're the only man I care about. You ought to know that. Only I don't like to have you getting jealous the way you do. It's so foolish, Greg. You ought to know there's nobody but you—"

"You really mean that, Vicky?"

"Of course I do."

It was two hours later that Vicky, in her bedroom, lifted the ivory telephone and gave a number. A moment later she said, "Brian? Oh, I'm glad I caught you in. There's something I want to ask you."

She listened a moment, then went on. "Well—it's this, Brian. Greg's been making a nuisance of himself again. I had to tell him something, so I said I had a date for tomorrow night. Do you suppose you could take me somewhere?"

Cat Kleptomaniac Brings Owner Gifts

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Jenny, a cat with a kleptomaniac complex, has been showering her mistress with gifts ever since Mrs. Charles Edward Russell rescued her from the gutter.

Just to show her appreciation, Jenny first brought home an old rag, a paper bag and wrapping paper. Then came socks, stockings, a large sponge, a tin can, an apron, a dress and a pair of pants.

Flustered, Mrs. Russell decided to investigate. After a lengthy search she found that her neighbors' clotheslines were minus a few incidents peculiar to the weekly wash. She restored the garments to their owners.
