The trial on the same charges of George Hill, father of the man convicted today, was transferred to Abilene for hearing in September.

The propeller-driven car, streamlined like a bullet had covered the 173 miles between Hamburg and Berlin at an average speed of 106.31 miles an hour. WACO, July 4.—J. A. Claybrook, jailer, battled off half a dozen prisoners at the county jail here early today after being slugged with a blackjack improvised from a sock loaded with a ball of tin foil. The attempted jail break was balked when the prisoners were unable to get a key to fit the outside jail door. Deputy Sheriff Stanford, sleeping near the jail, was awakened by noise of the scuffle and discovered the fight going on within the jail. Claude Spicer, under sentence for murder, aided the jailer in an effort to subdue the rioting prisoners. Appearance of Stanford armed with a pistol ended the outbreak.

Girl Killed in Auto Accident

Poff at the controls, had put the plane through several loops but failed to right the ship and it plunged into the ground from a high altitude.

Cisco Merchants Enjoy Good Day

Cisco merchants, most of whom kept their places of business open Saturday, enjoyed brisk and profitable business for the most part. Grocers reported excellent trade while drug stores, automobile service stations and other concerns had an excellent day. During the morning hours there was a rush of shoppers to the grocery stores, particularly those which had advertised special prices for the day. Drug stores found their busiest periods in the late afternoon and during the evening.

Schmeling's Mother Happy Over Victory

BERLIN, July 4.—Max Schmeling's mother was almost overcome when told today over her son's victory in the ring at Cleveland over Young Stridling last night. "I'm glad my boy in a hard fight proved he is a first-rater," she said in a trembling voice. Mrs. Schmeling spent the night with a few friends listening in on the fight over the radio. After each round she prayed for her son's victory.

NUMEROUS OUT-OF-TOWN PEOPLE HERE

Ideal Fourth of July weather drew thousands of pleasure-seeking vacationists to Lake Cisco yesterday for the celebration of Independence day. The big swimming pool was crowded practically all day while Lake Cisco park in the early morning and the afternoon was over-run with picnic parties who brought lunches to spread on the tables under the trees, many of them cooking their meals at the barbecue pits built for their convenience. Conservative estimates placed the attendance during the day at between 3,000 and 4,000.

Boating and fishing were favorite forms of recreation ranking next to the big cool swimming pool in popularity. Large crowds of vacationists in the dances in the pavilion, the first of which was a German dance beginning at midnight Friday. Everything to provide comfort for the crowds of visitors who came and went during the day was at hand, even a tank of ice water provided by the chamber of commerce and the West Texas Utilities company.

During the latter part of the afternoon the picnic groups overflowed the Lake Cisco park, where accommodations were completed earlier in the week and spread into the Lions and Rotary club park beyond. The comfortable shade under the groves of trees in these parks was an irresistible attraction particularly since every facility, from running water to places for convenient preparation of meals, accompanied it.

The steady stream of visitors throughout the day increased until it became a throng after nightfall, clearly testifying to the attraction of Lake Cisco as a resort. So far as was known last night the day passed without untoward incident. Traffic, while heavy during the evening hour, moved without accident and conduct of the crowds was orderly. A feature of the evening program was a concert by the Lobo band at 8 o'clock. It was noticeable that by far the larger number of those who visited the lake during the day were from out of town, although Cisco's own people were well represented. This was particularly true of those who brought their lunches for picnics. Chamber of commerce officials were more than pleased with the response to the program of the organization in developing the resources for the entertainment of vacationists.

No elaborate program had been prepared for the afternoon, visitors being permitted to amuse themselves as they desired with the large variety of accommodations that have been provided, accommodations that are available every day of the week. Swimming and diving contests in the afternoon offered the only out of the ordinary feature for the day. But no special program was necessary judge from the mood of the visitors who apparently found the lake resort in every detail to their liking.

NO HOLIDAY FOR OIL WELL FIRE FIGHTERS

KILGORE, July 4.—The Fourth of July meant nothing to 30 workmen who toiled today to extinguish Texas' biggest pyrotechnical display—Bell and Graddy's burning oil well near here. Four Oklahoma miners were supervising the drilling of a tunnel beneath hot earth to a point 25 feet below the surface. When the well casing is reached they will attempt to shut off the flow of oil from below. "Blackie" DeLong, clad in an asbestos suit, huddled himself about the task of hooking cables to red-hot boilers and other equipment in the center of the blaze preparatory to snaking them out.

POPE HURLS ENCYCLICAL AT FASCISTS

PARIS, France, July 4.—The bitter historic struggle between church and state in fascist Italy took a dramatic turn today with the publication of a forceful encyclical issued by Pope Pius XI, laying before the world his grievances against the regime headed by Premier Benito Mussolini. The pope, firmly defending the authority of the Roman Catholic church—embattled in the land of its birth—charged the fascist authorities with tolerating if not actually directing recent attacks on the Catholic young men's clubs of Italy. In his encyclical—brought to Paris from Vatican city by trustee courier to avoid possible restrictions by the Italian government—the pope charged that the suppression of the clubs with attendant irreverence and violence were part of the fascist government party's plan to add to its own power through gaining control of the youth of the land.

"FORT WORTH" HOP DELAYED UNTIL TODAY

SEATTLE, Wash., July 4.—The little white monoplane "Fort Worth" was given a thorough checking today as Reg Robbins and H. S. Jones made final preparation to start early Sunday on their non-stop flight to Tokyo. Their take-off was contingent on weather and the safe arrival in Fairbanks, Alaska, late today, of their tri-motored refueling plane piloted by Nick Greener and Jim Mattern, which was believed to have left Edmonton, Canada, at dawn today for Fairbanks. The fliers were somewhat upset over the delay as they had hoped to start today but they put in their time studying maps, checking the plane and consulting aviators who had had experience flying over Alaska. Robbins will probably do all the piloting with Jones navigating.

Bulletin Shows General Significance of Manufacturing Industry in Texas

AUSTIN, July 4. In an effort to show the general significance of manufacturing in Texas, the Bureau of Business Research at The University of Texas has issued a bulletin, "The Economic Importance of Manufacturing and of its Leading Lines in Texas," by Charles J. Rudolph Grossmann, industrial engineer of the Bureau. The bulletin which is in mimeographed form, will also serve as the background for a more detailed field survey of manufacturing conditions in Texas which the Bureau is conducting by regions. The field survey in turn will afford the basis for an intensive study of the States most important industrial problems.

The first part of the bulletin compares the importance of manufacturing with that of agriculture and mining, the second contrasts the several lines of manufacturing, the third part describes the character of manufacturing in Texas and shows the distribution of manufacturing establishments by counties.

"In 1899 agriculture provided practically the only basis for economic life in Texas," Mr. Grossmann pointed out. "Manufacturing was incidental, and with the exception of the lumber industry, merely served local needs; most of the mineral resources were yet to be discovered. During the period 1899-1925, however, agriculture steadily lost in relative importance although the actual value of its products continued to grow until 1919. It is apparent that from 1899 to 1909 the relative decrease in agriculture was due to the rise in manufacturing, whereas in the following decade the growth of the mining industry was the chief cause. The severe drop in the percentage contributed by agriculture between 1919 and 1925 is partly due to the realignment of agricultural and non-agricultural values after the war. Nevertheless, even when allowance is made for this discrepancy it appears that from 1919 to 1925, Texas agricultural values grew by 21 per cent, whereas the adjusted value of manufactured products increased by 60 percent; furthermore, during the same period the growth of mining outstripped that of the other branches of production. As a result the economic structure of Texas was more diversified in 1925 than it had been before."

"All branches of production have grown more rapidly in Texas than they have in the United States. Agriculture in Texas as compared with agriculture in the country grew most rapidly between 1909 and 1919, but manufacturing and mining made the most progress between 1919 and 1925. "Texas is naturally an agricultural state," he continued. "The predominance of agriculture, however, is gradually being reduced by the growing importance of mining and manufacturing. In 1925 agriculture contributed 55 per cent of the value of all goods produced, while mining came in for 21 per cent and manufacturing for 24 per cent. The 55 per cent contributed by agriculture consisted of the 39 per cent represented by cotton, the 7 per cent by livestock and livestock products, and 9 per cent for all other agricultural commodities. Three-quarters of the values produced in mining came from crude oil in 1925, but other minerals were gaining. The most important branch of manufacturing was petroleum refining which in 1925 made up 29 per cent of the total value added by manufacture in the state. "From a point of view of importance three classes of industries can be distinguished in Texas. The first of these, composed of three principal groups including petroleum refining, food products, and lumber and timber products, in 1927 accounted for over one-half of the value added by manufacture. Second, seven secondary industry groups—printing and publishing, machinery, railroad repair, chemicals (other than petroleum refining), stone, clay and glass products and textile products together represented in 1927 40 per cent of the value added by the lead leading lines. Third, the minor groups represented 3 per cent of the value added to the state's production. However, in certain years since the war petroleum refining alone has contributed over 30 per cent. In absolute figures all groups show substantial increase since 1919. "Classed by the source of raw materials, one group of industries, representing 42 per cent of the total value added in the leading lines in 1927, relied upon other factories for their raw materials, and most of these "preparatory manufacturing" were located outside of the state. Few other raw materials are brought in, for Texas mining, agriculture and forestry are well able to supply the manufactures depending upon them. "A group representing 38.4 per cent of the value added by the leading manufactures is located in Texas because of existing raw materials, whereas another with 38.7 per cent of the total value added by manufacture serves primarily the ultimate consumers; a third group with 20 per cent of the total comprises "auxiliary industries" and depends upon other lines of manufactures for its market. "Sixty four per cent of the total value added by manufacture in the state originates in six urban counties. Among the more important industries, food and printing industries are generally distributed according to population density, whereas machine shops and other auxiliary industries concentrate in the cities. On the other hand, petroleum refining, lumber mills, cottonseed oil and cotton mills as well as stone, clay and glass plants locate near the source of their raw material supply."

Mellon, United States secretary of treasury resumed his conferences today with the French government in an effort finally to reach a definite accord on the Hoover war debt holiday scheme. Mellon, accompanied by Ambassador Walter Edge went to the ministry of finance for conferences with the minister to discuss certain unsettled points. A general impression prevailed however, that an accord in principle had been reached and that today's conference was merely to smooth out details prior to the announcement of a complete accord.

CISCO MAN GETS U. S. WARRANT FOR ASHES

W. E. Keeter, is one Cisco man who has recently exchanged a box of ashes for a nice fat warrant on the United States treasury. By following the advice of a local woman he says he is just $62.36 better off than he expected to be.

When the Alexander hotel burned June 18 Mr. Keeter lost 064.57 in addition to the $2,000 loss he sustained above his insurance on the contents of that hostelry, of which he was the proprietor. At least he stated that he thought he had about $60 in currency and some fractional silver coins in the house when the building was burned. After the debris had cooled following the conflagration he decided to excavate the ruins in the hope of salvaging the silver coins, at least. There was just $2.15 in dimes, quarters and half dollars that he knew was with the currency in the house. Knowing the currency was burned beyond recognition he had no hopes of retrieving any of this that could be identified for redemption at the federal treasury. While excavating for the fractional silver a local woman came upon the scene and learning that he had some money burned in the building, asked if there was any currency left. He told her that he had about $60, but supposed it was burned beyond redemption. She advised him to carefully remove the ashes and send them to Washington and he might be able to retrieve a part of his loss.

MAN OVERBOARD

While I was cruisin' with my old shipmate, Tops'l Barney, I had a pretty wet adventure. Seein' a big fish leap out of th' water gave me an idea. I got out my fishin'-tackle, baited a hook and tossed it overboard. Then I did get a surprise. There was a tug on th' line. I hung on for dear life, bound to land that big fish on board. I hadn't noticed that th' line had become tangled about one of my legs. There was a jerk that nearly pulled my hands off, th' line slipped through my fingers, tightened about my leg, and over th' rail I went. Singoot, my little monkey friend, saw me scoot over th' side and raised such a rumpus that all hands rushed to th' rail to see what was up.

In th' meantime I was havin' th' fastest swim I'd ever had, I tell you. That dingbusted fish would leap out of th' water, with me trailin' after it like a wet rag, then plump, down he'd go into th' water again. Then Barney sent two of th' crew to my rescue.

Then was when th' real excitement commenced. Up shot that big fish, right under the boat. Up went th' boat into th' air, and out tumbled th' men on top of th' fish's back. Zip through th' water we went hangin' on for dear life. Before we knew what was happenin' th' fish landed with a thump on th' deck of th' schooner and spilled th' three of us.

When I fish again I'll see to it that th' line isn't tangled about my legs.

ONLY ONE WAY TO MISS HELL, SAYS PREACHER

"There is no chance to miss hell if preparation for Heaven is put off until after death," Rev. H. D. Tucker declared last night in the tabernacle revival in East Cisco.

The subject of the sermon was, "Hell—It's Tortures; Heaven—It's Rewards."

The Rev. Mr. Tucker announced that he would preach Sunday night from the subject, "The Sin in Cisco That is Never Mentioned."

Mr. Tucker will preach in his own pulpit at First Methodist church this morning and preach at the tabernacle revival tonight. He will also preach each morning at 10 and each evening at 8:15 throughout next week.

Continuing his message last night Mr. Tucker said in part: "Hell is a place of memory and remorse. There is no torment like the torment of memory. Many a person would be happy if they could only forget," he said.

"Hell is a place of bodily suffering," the speaker declared. "Its tragic to think of a soul missing its destination and having to wander throughout eternity lost and without God," he said.

"Hell is a place of shame and of evil companionships," Mr. Tucker declared during the course of his message. "It is a world without hope and one of everlasting punishment," he declared.

"There is only one way to escape hell and that is by trusting in the name of Jesus Christ," the speaker said.

In speaking of Heaven, the Rev. Mr. Tucker declared that Heaven is a place of eternal rewards. "God has made us with the power of choice and we can choose to go to Heaven or we can choose to go to hell," he said during the message.

Rev. H. D. Tucker pastor of the First Methodist church and Rev. C. A. Morton, pastor of the Twelfth Street Methodist church will exchange pulpits Sunday night.

The communion service will be given Sunday morning at First Methodist church after a sermon from Rev. H. D. Tucker delivers a sermon from the subject, "The Salt of the Earth."

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—There are at least 130,000,000 cases of disabling illness in the United States every year and the cost of medical service is about $3,106,000,000.

Families afflicted by illness pay $123,000,000 annually for necessary extra household help alone.

A third of the money—$1,000,000,000—goes to physicians, according to estimates by the research staff of the Committee on the Costs of Medical Care. This committee, under the chairmanship of Secretary of the Interior Ray Lyman Wilbur, is a large group of physicians, public health officials and other experts, economists, representatives of institutions and social agencies.

Medicine and supplies at $700,000,000 represent the next largest item and the others are hospitals $550,000,000, dentists, $400,000,000, nurses (other than hospital) $312,000,000, public health $26,000,000, optometrists and opticians $50,000,000, chiropractors and naturopaths $30,000,000, osteopaths $20,000,000, midwives $15,000,000, chiroprodists $15,000,000, and non-hospital dispensaries $5,000,000.

The estimates are based on continuing committee studies directed at the problem of adequate, scientific medical service to all people at a cost which they can reasonably meet.

Surveys thus far show wide divergences in medical expenditures in proportion to income. Families with income under $1200 spend about $66 a year on medical service, those with under $2000 spend $71.48, whereas families with more than $5000 a year average $311 and those over $10,000 about $520.

It appears that the average person is disabled by illness at least once a year—men about once, women once to twice and school year. The very young and the very old have considerably more than their share of the illness and there is more of it in winter than in summer, as you doubtless suspected, because of colds and other respiratory diseases.

The available data, the committee has found, indicates that the average adult man loses seven to eight days a year from illness, and the average woman eight to 12 days. One large private survey covering 570,000 persons showed that an average of two per cent was ill on any single day, which would mean a general average loss of seven days a year.

And it appears that America's 36,000,000 wage earners lose at least 250,000,000 work days and 24,000,000 school children 170,000,000 days each school year. That represents only about half the population.

Dr. Homer Folks, secretary of the New York State Charities Aid Association and a public health authority, estimated a few years ago that the total cost of illness in this country, including loss of wages at $1,250,000,000 and loss of future earnings through death at $12,000,000,000, was nearly $13,000,000,000.

Colds, bronchial troubles, influenza and grippe are most often responsible for lost time. Digestive diseases and disorders "loom large," the committee's material shows. Throat diseases are of considerable frequency and severity.

Most people get the common communicable diseases of childhood before they become adults. One study covering 40,000 appears to show that 89 per cent have had measles at the age of 20, 77 per cent whooping cough, 72 per cent mumps, 52 per cent chicken pox, 11 per cent scarlet fever and 10 per cent diphtheria.

SOX CAPTURE OPENER WITH NIGHT HAWKS

The Cisco Red Sox made six hits account for three runs Saturday afternoon and defeated the Fort Worth Night Hawks 3-2 in one of the best played games that has been witnessed on Chesley park. The boys from Cowtown collected seven hits off Henson and Purvis but were unable to hit in the pinch.

Buddy Meyer, former Texas leaguer, went the route for Fort Worth and pitched nice ball as did Henson, another Texas leaguer who started for the Red Sox. Henson had to be relieved in the eighth due to an old injury to his side that kept hothering him. Lefty Purvis did a good job as relief pitcher striking out four men in the last two innings.

The Red Sox jumped on Meyer in the first inning making two walks and two singles count for two runs. Fort Worth tied the score in the fifth when H. Pippen let Johnson's roller get by him. Brantley doubled and Wallace singled two runs. Pippen made up for his error in the eighth when he doubled against the left field wall and came home on Alford's double to left center.

These same teams play again this afternoon and it is due to be a

DEADLY NEW NAVAL ARM DEVELOPED

By RALPH HEINZEN
United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS, July 4.—Europe has developed, in utmost secrecy, a deadly new naval arm, high-powered destruction steaming at 42 knots, in the form of light-weight cruisers built for the dual role of battle fleet scouts and trade route patrol ships and raiders. France, Italy and Britain are concentrating all their expert attention upon this new arm.

Each of these tiny sea-raiders costs about $5,000,000 and, being cheap and of comparatively little tonnage they can be produced in vast numbers to cover the seas around the important seaports. In proportion they are cheaper than any other cruisers, costing about half as much as the sturdy 10,000-ton cruisers.

Each naval staff is working out its own design, keeping its efforts as secret as possible. France, in the new naval building program, is voting credits for two cruisers of roughly 4,800 tons each.

Three Light British Cruisers.
Under the navy estimates for this year, Britain is building three light cruisers. Two are of the Leander class, of 7,000 tons armed with eight 6-inch guns, but the third vessel is the hush-hush "cruiser" of 5,000 tons, predecessor of a great fleet of tiny wasp-cruisers, each carrying six 6-inch guns.

These new British wasps will cost $5,000,000 each. They are expected to be very fast, turbine driven, and despite the secrecy maintained, it is understood that they will not have internal combustion motors of a new high-speed type, as reported.

Admiral Siriani, in a recent speech in the Italian chamber, gave Europe all the information they have of the new Italian light cruisers. One of these warships, already put into service, was designed to speed at 37 knots. In tests it actually maintained more than 41 knots for six hours and at times reached 42 knots.

Intensive Study
Admiral Siriani gave away part of the secret. "The result has been achieved by the most minute study of all details, by the employment of high resistance steel and by other technical factors and finally by not making the living quarters of the crews and officers unduly luxurious. Everything thus saved has been devoted to armaments and horsepower," he said.

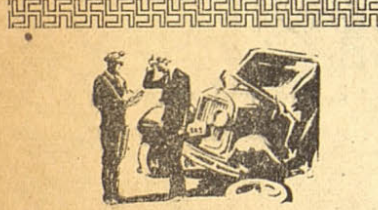

Within a year, ten of these wasps of various nationalities will be cruising in secret off the coasts. They will be test ships and from their actions under full speed and in firing, the European powers will eventually work out the model which best suits their naval needs. Britain appears to favor 5,000 tons or more, but Italy and France, without much tonnage to spare, are favoring ships of 4,500 to 4,800 tons.

Three German Wasps.
Germany has built three wasps, larger than any of the others, running to 6,000 tons but complying with the Versailles Treaty restrictions. They can travel 18,000 miles without refueling—from a German port to the farthest flung French or British colony. No other warship afloat has such possibilities.

These German boats, the Koenigsberg, Karlsruhe and Koeln are fitted with Diesel engines, 6 per cent lighter than the ordinary oil engines. They develop one horsepower for every 12 pounds of weight. The turrets are so arranged that the tiny cruiser can fire seventy-two 105-pound shells a minute—three and a half tons of steel, gas and explosives falling in a torrent. These quick-firing guns can send off eight rounds a minute.

TO VISIT RUSSIA
PHILADELPHIA, July 3.—Cecil B. De Mille, film director, announced while here that he planned to go to Russia and study the country. He made this statement when in Chester to receive an honorary degree from the Pennsylvania Military College.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON THE GIFT OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

When they therefore were come together, they asked of him, saying, Behold, we have not at this time restored again the kingdom to Israel? And he said unto them, It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power.

But ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.

And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place.

And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting.

And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them.

And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance.

And there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews devout men, out of every nation under heaven.

Now when this was noised abroad, the multitude came together, and were confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language.

And they were all amazed and marvelled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak Galileans? And how hear we every man in our own tongue, where in we were born?

And they were all amazed and marvelled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak Galileans? And how hear we every man in our own tongue, where in we were born?

And they were all amazed and marvelled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak Galileans? And how hear we every man in our own tongue, where in we were born?

their hearts. There was no spirit of self-seeking. There was no vain ambition. There was no narrow and contentious spirit. They were there with one supreme idea in mind—the idea of realizing the will of God and of finding grace and strength to accomplish it. No conditions could have been more favorable toward a real manifestation of religion or toward a revelation of the highest way of life and service.

The whole conditions were at once favorable for the reception of spiritual power as if some great receiving station had been constructed to absorb power from the physical universe.

The outward manifestations of this spiritual power are of interest to us, but they do not very easily understood, nor do they seem the important part of the record. It is quite possible that they had relatively little to do with the really vital spiritual experiences, as they have had very little to do with the real manifestation of religion in other great revivals or outbursts of religious experience, where they have often been a handicap and a hindrance rather than a help.

Spiritual Quickening.
The real significance of the occasion was the spiritual quickening that came to these early Christians on the day of Pentecost, the consciousness that some real endowment of power had come into their lives under the strength of which they pledged their lives to the service that has been instrumental in establishing the Christian church with its centuries of history and progress.

The important thing in connection with the speaking of tongues was the attainment of a common understanding. That is not always stressed in discussing the miracu-as a chronicle of adventure it is amazing. One's atavistic traits leap to life as the weird tom-toms usher in the death dance of the savage Isorgi; one thrills at their weird native chants to the accompaniment of thousands of bare feet pounding in unison on the brick-hard ground.

One thrills at the dramatic battles between wild beasts, out there in the jungle where everything eats something else to live. And through it runs the tender human love story of the boy and the girl, the young adventurer and the golden haired priestess of a savage tribe.

PRESBYTERIANS HAVE SPLENDID CAMP GROUNDS

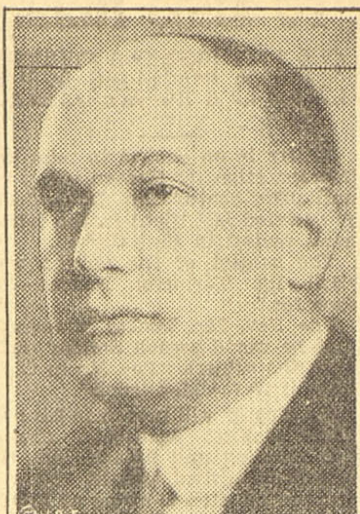

Throughout the Presbyterian church at attractively located points are held summer conferences, whose purpose it is to train leaders in local churches for administering the various types of work in the churches. Knoxville on the beautiful Guadalupe river is the Texas conference center. Recently a group of Cisco young people, George Irvine, Helen Crawford, Ida May Garrett, John Peter Huey, and Harriet Angus were taken down there by Homer Slicker and the minister the Rev. B. C. Boney, and at the close of the encampment Messrs. Slicker and Crawford and families went to bring them back home. There were classes in Bible, Missions, Presbyterianism, Personality, Sociology, and Wholesome Pastimes, taught by outstanding youth leaders from all over the south. When there is time for it Kerrville offers fishing, swimming, hiking, tennis, golfing, or just lazing around in the shade of its wonderful trees to all who go there. Out at Westminster Encampment grounds are tents, cabins, or rooms for rent at reasonable rates practically all summer. The big general conference for adult leaders began July 26 and continues till the latter part of August. This includes conference on Synod's work, Texas Synodical meeting, training school for Woman's Auxiliary, and has as speakers from out of the state Dr. Homer McMillan, Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. E. B. Paisley, Richmond, Va.; Dr. J. O. Reavis, Nashville, Tenn.; Dr. J. Gresham Maclean, Philadelphia; Dr. Walter L. Lingle, Davidson college, N. C. and Texas speakers Lawrence Wharton, W. H. Foster, S. L. Jockel, M. Mar Yosip, Bruce C. Boney, W. T. Riviere, W. M. Anderson, T. W. Currie, George Sumner, Mrs. W. D. Hart, The Rev. B. C. Boney has been invited also to direct the music for the latter part of the general conference in August. During these various conferences hundreds of leaders are present for training and inspiration. The dining hall is open from May until October 1 and with the entire camp is under the capable management of a consecrated Christian layman, Mr. Garland Lang.

In the Political Arena

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD
"Cowboy Congressman" Claude B. Hudspeth has scored a comeback. He has baffled the doctors and conquered the maladies which threatened to send him to the grave. A year ago he was warned that his health was near. He was told that health recovery was impossible. He was threatened with blindness and his physical ailments were said to be of a deadly nature. He decided to withdraw from political life. He announced that he would not be a candidate for re-election to congress. He hurried himself to Johns Hopkins at Baltimore. Mayor Ewing Thomson of El Paso won the democratic nomination in the El Paso district and was elected the successor of Hudspeth in November of last year.

Now Hudspeth is back in the political picture. His close friend, Adrian Poole, member of the state board of control, has announced that the cowboy statesman has made a complete recovery; that his eyes are good as in days of yore; that he is physically fit and ready to take up the battle of life once more.

Hudspeth was a range rider in his youth. He evolved from the hurricane deck of a pony to the manager-ship of a ranch. He didn't stop there. In turn he became a lawyer and a banker. Then he invaded politics. He was a state lawmaker for years. He had a county named for him. Then he aspired to a seat in congress, this year ago, and never met with defeat until the warning came from his physicians that he must abandon business and place his affairs in order for his departure.

Hudspeth was as unbeatable in his district as John N. Garner in the Uvalde district until his death became shattered and loss of eyesight faced the man who had fought the battle of life bravely and had many achievements to his credit. His successor may find it interesting in 1932 should Hudspeth decide to invade the political arena and seek to capture the prize he was compelled to toss aside in 1930. If Gov. Sterling calls a special session redistricting will be a proposal that will job up again. Texas has 18 districts; Texas under the new census apportionment has 21 representatives. It is interesting around. Should it be necessary to elect three congressmen at large James E. Ferguson may be an entrant, Mrs. Ferguson, too, might run. They are very much alive.

Cong. Guinn Williams of the Wichita Falls district may be given a surprise next year. B. D. Donnell of the Wichita Falls Record-News and The Times in his column "Home Town Talk" makes this announcement: "Judge A. H. Carrigan is being urged to be a candidate in the 13th district to succeed the Hon. Guinn Williams. No man in Northwest Texas has more or warmer friends than Judge Carrigan. If he should decide to become a candidate this talker would be willing to make a prophecy as to the identity of our next congressman."

Judge Carrigan is one of the able lawyers of Texas, a democrat of the old school a brilliant campaigner, he knows the people, he has friends everywhere in Texas and should be fighting his hat in the ring next year. There is going to be a marvelous political scrap in the 13th congressional district.

A WORD OF APPRECIATION

Above all, we cherish the love which prompted the above demonstration.

Heart of Liane

by MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Liane Barrett, 18 and beautiful, lives in a cramped New York apartment with her mother, Cass Barrett, a rather faded actress. On a hot night Liane goes to dinner with Molly Cronin, a neighbor, and two of Molly's men friends. There is a shooting and the girl is held as a witness. She sends a note to her mother who arrives and persuades Shane McDermond, the young policeman, in charge, that Liane is innocent of wrongdoing. That night at the theater where Cass is playing Liane encounters a handsome stranger who speaks her name.

A few days later Cass and Liane go to Willow Stream, L. I., where Cass has an engagement in a small summer theater sponsored by wealthy Mrs. Cleespaugh, a widow with one son, Clive. Liane works in the box office, sharing duties with Muriel Ladd, pretty society girl. At Muriel's home Liane again meets the handsome stranger who spoke to her in the theater. He is Van Robard, but when she speaks of him to Cass her mother makes Liane promise never to have anything more to do with him. Mrs. Cleespaugh asks Cass to let Liane stay with her during the winter. Muriel leaves the theater one evening with Chuck Desmond, newspaper man, and Muriel's mother, believing the two have eloped, asks Robard to find them. Van Robard is the girl's friend.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER IX

Chuck Desmond could be an entertaining dinner companion. Having summoned a taxi he handed Liane in with a flourish and demanded to be driven to Wishwaters, the sea-food palace down on the shore. He promised Cass he would have her daughter home in good time for her evening appearance at the theater.

It was all very surprising and Liane enjoyed it. The young man talked easily and wittily. His was the vernacular of the newspaper city room, crossed with the world of sports and of Broadway. He was as cynical as a stage manager, in some ways as artless as a child of six.

"Muriel will—well, she'll crown me for this," Liane said, laughing, as they sat over their coffee.

Desmond lifted an interrogative eyebrow. "Says which?"

"Oh, all this!" Liane indicated the dancing floor, mirrored and smooth, on which a few early couples were even now executing slow, snail-like steps. The tented top sparkled with lights. Cars were beginning to buzz into the drive, their wheels crunching on the gravel outside.

Desmond regarded his cup indifferently. "Nice girl, Muriel, but thoughtless," he observed drily. "You were pretty sweet to come with me on a last minute bid."

"I was delighted," Liane told him. She meant it.

"Well, it was my luck. No fooling, I do hate to have on the nose-bag when I'm alone. There's genius for you!"

She couldn't tell whether he was laughing at her or not. Not thrilled, not all-over gooselike and cold chills running up and down her spine as when she was with Van Robard. Just pleasantly, quietly satisfied with things. Chuck Desmond, who had been given the glad eye from the Battery to 125th street, would have been amused at her estimate of him.

For his part, Desmond thought, "Good kid!" affably measuring Liane's pleasant slimmness, the significant width between her soft, dark eyes and her engaging trick of listening with a breathless air of concentration.

Of Muriel Ladd he scarcely thought at all, except with a mild irritation, as one may who has been "stood up" by a girl just out of finishing school. He dubbed Muriel "a hot number" and considered the characterization complete.

"He's not bad looking really," Liane summed up her opinion. Entirely she overlooked the charms of this devil-may-care young man in the rather noisy suit.

"I'll be seeing you," Chuck Desmond said, patting her hand as the taxi drew up at the theater.

Desmond told the driver to hot-foot it for the station. He would just have time to make the first act of "The Frolic." Well, his evening hadn't been wasted entirely.

Elsie wanted to know, "Who's the new boy friend?"

Liane said demurely, "My mother used to know his mother." "Oh, that bologny!" Elsie lost interest. She went on, "O'ye know, I'm kind of sorry we're checking out of here next month. I've got used to the smell of new-mown hay mixed with my carbon monoxide and I'll miss it. Still, there's nothing like September 1 in Times Square. There's a feeling in the air—oh, I don't know, as if something were just about to happen. Something big."

"I know," said Liane dreamily. "I know just what you mean but it seldom does happen."

"Never can tell," Elsie winked elaborately. "Believe it or not, there are plots hatching around here that don't meet the eye."

Liane, thinking of her adventure that afternoon, shivered a little. Elsie, not noticing, continued, "That Muriel girl, for instance. Is SHE a fast worker? Believe it or not, she has little Boy Blue eating out of her hand. Wait till the scandal columns get hold of that. Which Junior Leaguer is that way about what drama star?"

"She only met him this afternoon," Liane protested. "Yes, I know. But what that dame does with 25 hours is nobody's business," said the cynical Elsie. "Mrs. Blue's little boy may be hooked before he knows it. He's not used to those high-powered debutantes, I don't mind," she explained, "if she'll lay off my Clive. But Muriel's a natural born poacher, and if she thought she could burn me up by going for him, she would."

Liane had heard a great deal of this in the past so she lent a mildly inattentive ear. "I wouldn't worry," she said, absently. "Yes, Mrs. Gridley, of course I've got your tickets ready."

Elsie took the hint and drifted along in the direction of her dressing room.

"Muriel's supposed to be helping me tonight. What a fake she is as a working girl," Liane grumbled resentfully to herself as she smiled her set smile, punched tickets and made change. "Poor little rich girl, playing at being useful, that's what she is." Muriel's role of box office assistant had been mostly a picturesque fiction. She never allowed business to interfere with pleasure. Liane couldn't help being resentful. The work meant bread and butter to her. She could not afford to shrink.

The little coop grew stifling as the evening wore on. Liane sat stiff and watchful, smiling her professional smile at the late comers, the women all smartly cropped and heavily scented in their frail chiffons. When the doors flew open at the intermission she caught a glimpse of a dark, lowering face above a dazzling shirtfront. Van Robard! He did not even glance toward Liane. The girl with him was small, lusciously blond. Her black frock was daintily cut away at the neck to show a rounded pair of golden shoulders. She talked animatedly, a cigaret dangling from the corner of her geranium-stained mouth. She looked bored and exotic.

Liane's heart was beating so rapidly it almost stifled her. Of course he must know she was there but he wouldn't even look at her. What a fool she was to mind! Oh, she hated him, she hated him! Liane had a sudden wild longing for green fields and cool dark places where she could bury her face in long grass and weep long and satisfyingly, unheard.

Instead she had to sit there, passive, immobile, in her old gray dress, feeling like a shadow on the edge of the pretty, painted throng.

How she envied all these young girls at Willow Stream. They had everything—money, family, that vaulted and elusive thing called background. They could reach out and take what they wanted in their greedy little jeweled hands with the nicotine-stained fingers. No matter what they desired, a star sapphire, a trip to Europe, a handsome husband, there was almost always some adoring male to get it for them. What did they know of striving, of heartbreak? What did they know of saving up for a winter coat, wearing some friend's castoff shoes? No, they had their little ermine wraps, their half a hundred Paris frocks, their perfumes, their horses and their planes. No wonder when a fascinating man looked about for a girl to admire he chose one of them.

They were so padded, so admired. They had a nimbus of glamour about them. The Cinderellas of the world hadn't a chance beside such rivals.

She put her head down to hide the rush of tears that threatened to come.

A shadow fell across the book in front of her. "Don't move. Don't say a word," a warning voice. "Slide up that window and give me the cash!"

The startled girl looked up into somber eyes under a pulled-down cap. Trembling she obeyed. Her fascinated gaze watching the blue barrel of the gun he leveled at her. There was an electric anxiety in the little foyers. Two other men, both armed, stood in the doorway. "You people, give us all you've got," commanded one. The women, whimpering, had begun to strip themselves of their rings. One screamed and was ordered summarily by her white-faced escort to shut up.

Liane fumbled at the catch that swung open the barred door of the cage. Underneath the shelf was a short, ugly weapon to be used in case of emergency. She thought quickly.

"I can't budge this," Liane said, with a child's querulousness. "You have to come around."

"No funny business now," warned the man in the cap, backing off. As Liane opened the door of the coop, she brought her good right hand down suddenly. The invader fell with a thump.

All at once there was confusion in the lobby. A woman shrieked "She's got him!" A gun barked once. There was a rush and a scurrying. Four men were grappling with the robber who had fired his gun while the other made a precipitate rush for a parked car.

A giddiness swept over Liane. She stood staring at the slumped figure at her feet. "Take him away somebody," she moaned weakly. Everything swirled blackly around her. She felt herself falling.

When she opened her eyes Van

Heart of Liane---

Robard was bending over her. "Good girl," he was saying huskily. "You were the best man among us."

She felt those words were her accolade. The girl in the black dress was whimpering. Somebody cheered. Well, she'd showed them, anyhow, hadn't she? She might be a beggar maid but she wasn't a coward.

Van was carrying her into the little office now. He was all solicitude, the blond girl forgotten. There was a terrific hubbub all about. A woman was having hysterics. Men were rushing to and fro. Under cover of the noise Van murmured, "Tried to get you to look at me before tonight, but you were absorbed in business."

The look of faint reproach Liane gave him was tinged with mockery. "I saw you," she murmured. "Hadn't you better go back to her?"

He flushed angrily. The little doctor bustling in with his black bag interrupted their tableau. "Here, here, Mr. Wells thinks I'd better look you over. Any bruises?"

Van, defeated, shrugged himself away. Liane submitted to the physician's ministrations. "Right as rain," was his verdict. "They tell me you were a brave young lady."

She smiled at him faintly, scarcely listening. Liane thought, "right as rain except for a great bruise on my heart."

Once Over

The great American inclination is to look things over. Nothing is either good or bad to the open-minded, until it has received that quick, interested appraisal which we have deftly named the "once over."

We are continually looking over new political leaders and ideas, new acquaintances, new faces, new actors and writers. And by the same token we are constantly called upon to pass judgment on a great variety of merchandise --- from soap to sedans --- which is presented to us through the advertisements in the daily newspapers.

People who follow the advertisements know that through them they can find out more about articles, values, and the wise spending of their money than they could discover in any other way. New products, new improvements in merchandise, new uses for established articles, are constantly being brought before them.

Advertising makes it possible for you to get exactly what you want, to get full value for every penny, and to be sure of receiving the greatest possible satisfaction from everything you buy.

Read the advertisements regularly, and get the important news they bring you every day!
