Officers of Many States Seeking Custody of Burke

WIFE HELD BY POLICE FOR QUESTIONING

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., March 27.—An almost countrywide fight for custody of Fred Burke, Chicago gangster, whom officers termed "the most dangerous criminal alive," centered today in this north Missouri town near which he was captured under the firing of a shot.

Officers from several of the 18 states in which Burke is wanted on charges ranging from robbery to murdering seven men in a bunch, were hurrying here to battle for the privilege of trying him first.

KANSAS CITY, Missouri, March 27.—Fred Burke, accused of being the machine gunner in the St. Valentine's day massacre, was pictured today by his wife as a kind-hearted man who liked home life and was an enthusiastic church attendant.

The wife, Bonnie Porter Burke, barely 20 years old, was still detained by police here today who said they doubted her repeated declarations that she knew nothing of his gangland connection.

The girl said she met Burke a little more than a year ago when she went to the farm home of her parents near Green City, Missouri, for a vacation from her duties as student nurse in Research hospital here.

She knew him and married him under the name of Richard F. White at Centerville, Iowa, on June 17, 1930.

On their honeymoon they went to California. Her parents went with them to Colorado Springs and Yellowstone Park at Burke's invitation, she said.

"I am a great lover of flowers," he told his wife. He also said that he planned to attend church services.

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

KINGDOM IS WITHIN—Neither shall they say, Lo here! or, lo there! for, behold the kingdom of God is within you.—Luke 17:21. PRAYER—"Thy Kingdom come, O Lord, wide-circling as the sun."

FINISH OF THE MCGILL BILL—"AND OTHERS"

Representative Joseph McGill of El Paso, the successor of Adrian Pool, is a very sturdy and dogged fighter for his convictions. His ten-jury bill enacted by the house would have legalized a verdict by ten of the twelve jurors in a civil case trial. It was sent to the senate where it was sponsored by Senator W. R. Poage of McLennan county. It did not appeal to many senators. They argued that it was a step toward eventual abolishment of the jury system if it were enacted. By a vote of 10 to 15 a motion to print on minority report was defeated. And now the McGill proposal is dead for this session. It will come up again if Representative McGill, comes back again.

Representative P. L. Anderson of Bexar county introduced a bill to tax home life insurance companies. A house committee made an adverse report. Representative Anderson sought unsuccessfully to have his bill printed on a minority report. His motion was overwhelmed by a vote of 81 to 34, "thus killing the bill so far as this session of the legislature is concerned." His bill provided for a tax of two per cent on the gross premium of life insurance firms whose home offices are in Texas. Companies from other states doing business in Texas now pay the two per cent tax under provisions of the Robertson law.

"Keep Texas money in Texas" was the slogan of the scap hunters who lifted the locks of the ever good-natured and ever persistent representative from the shades and shadows of the Alamo. Another measure sent to the graveyard was the proposal of a state tax on cigarettes. A house committee reported unfavorably on the bill by a vote of 7 to 6. Then on a motion to print on minority report the house defeated the proposal 78 to 41. Representative J. C. Duvall of Fort Worth scored when he said, "It is the baldest kind of nuisance tax designed to compel the Texas smoker to pay three cents more tax on top of the six cent tax which he already is required to pay the federal government on a package of 20 cigarettes."

Why a nuisance tax. Why a double tax? It is for the lawmakers to make answer.

PROTECTING AMERICAN MATCH MAKERS.

An anti-dumping order against importation of safety matches from eight nations was signed Monday by Secretary Andrew W. Mellon. This was the reason given: "It followed a two-year investigation of charges that European safety match manufacturers were dumping their products into this country at low prices to the injury of domestic producers." It is queer that the argument used against the dumping of foreign matches is the argument advanced by the independent oil producers of the United States. They say they are being ruined by importations of foreign oil. American match makers say they have been saved from disaster by the anti-dumping order of the Hoover administration. If dumping is the remedy, why not pass it around? If it is not the remedy—why just pass the buck to the next congress.

A LITTLE GIRL IS TOLD OF HER VANITY BY A COURT.

Georgia Belle Bryson, who lives in Houston, was a Texas university co-ed. She and a man, Horace McCoy, were drinking, according to testimony she gave District Judge Hal Lattimore in Fort Worth Friday. After they drank a while they ran off to Oklahoma and got married. When she sobered up she realized she should not have married. Fortunately, they never lived together as man and wife. She came back to Fort Worth, got mamma and sought an annulment.

Judge Lattimore obliged her Friday as he should have done under the circumstances. But he told her this:

"You have no right to expect the Texas laws to free you from this union, since you disregarded them. You are drunk on your own vanity and that makes you easy for any one to approach you by playing up to your vanity, just as this man did."

Look around over your neighborhood, or, indeed, glance across the table at your own son or daughter. A stitch in time saves nine, and many are the stitches not now being taken.

CUBAN TOBACCO PLANTERS UNEASY.

Cuban tobacco planters are uneasy. Their surplus last year was 200,000 bales and they fear that the surplus this year will be likely to surpass that of 1930. They are going to place restrictions on production when the next planting season rolls around. This is a merry old world. There is an over-production of oil and cotton and wheat. There is an over-production of tobacco. There is an over-production of goods or else 6,000,000 Americans would not be unemployed. There is an over-production of copper. There is an over-production of coal. This is the age of science and the machine and science and the machine are making a new economic civilization. It is well to face the music and make the necessary adjustments.

NEVADANS ARE STAUNCH CHURCH GOERS.

Nevada has legalized all forms of gambling and is going to be the play state of the union. Three weeks divorcees are pledged to those who need the decisions and racing in all forms has the call. George W. Malone is the state engineer. In an interview, he declared that Nevada has more churches per capita than any other state in the union and, what is more, "Nevadans are staunch church goers." State Engineer Malone has a defense. These are his quoted words:

"The reason is perfectly simple. Nearly all the gambling is done by tourists and visitors. Reno, for instance, is like Paris. The visitors give it a naughty reputation. Renoites, themselves, cannot be said to frequent the gambling places. They look upon them only as tourist attractions." Then the governor and the lawmakers of Nevada legalized gambling in order that the home folk might trim the tourists and other visitors. It must be true that "business is business." Am I "my brother's keeper"? No! I am my brother's trimmer.

OTHER OPINIONS

THE JOY OF WORKING

When Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, on his 90th birthday, remarked that his work was not done yet, and would not be done as long as he lived, he aimed a shaft right at the center of one of the oldest of human dreams.

This dream—which all of us, in one way or another, nourish now and then—is the dream of somehow getting one's life work finished so that one can get out of harness and sit down somewhere to enjoy the evening of life in carefree idleness and repose.

Most of us, of course, are fated never to make that dream come true; but we keep on dreaming it, just the same, looking forward to some time in the future when we can stop working and take things easy. And it is just this that Mr. Justice Holmes will have none of.

"The work," says the aged justice, "never is done while the power to work remains. It cannot be, while you still live. For to live is to function. That is all there is in living."

Perhaps this is something that applies to those fortunate people who have found work for which they are especially fitted and which they especially enjoy. Mr. Justice Holmes, of course, falls into that classification exactly. Not all of us are that lucky.

Nevertheless, to a certain degree his remark has a universal application. And its truth rests largely on a little-understood but important fact; namely, that we enjoy life most, not when we are actually seeking happiness, but when we have completely forgotten about it and are working our heads off at the day's job.

Often enough this job is not particularly interesting. Often enough the man who is plugging away at it can think of many other jobs that he would enjoy a good deal more. But that is not the point. The point is that to plunge head-over-heels into work—to lose one's self in the doing of something, so that all of one's energies and abilities are called into play constantly—is to know a completeness of living that can be known in no other way.

For life is not exactly a toilsome pilgrimage towards a restful stopping place where one can lie under the trees and wait for the night. It is the sum total of all of the things one does, day in and day out. If these things hold one and demand the utmost one can give them, life comes, in the end, to a respectable sum. It is easy to see that this is just what has happened to Mr. Justice Holmes.—San Angelo Times.

In the Political Arena

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD

Andrew W. Mellon turned his 76th birthday Tuesday "but it was just another day to him." He celebrated by declining to grant an interview to newspapermen. A chemistry medal, voted the remarkable man by the American Institute of Chemists, evoked no comment from the lips of "the second Alexander Hamilton of American history." He refused to discuss his purchase of a 400-acre stud farm in Virginia for his son, Paul Mellon, now a student at Cambridge, England. This farm is located in the hunting and racing district of Virginia and is known as "Rokeby." It was part of the famous Blue Ridge farms, near Upperville in Fauquier county. Paul Mellon will bring some horses from England when he returns this summer and is expected to spend part of each year at the farm.

Andrew W. Mellon has been the power behind the throne of three presidents. He was the strong arm of the Harding administration; the strong arm of the Coolidge administration and those who are familiar with inside conditions say he completely dominates the Hoover administration in all its policies.

He is a modest man. He is a glutton for work. He has been a glutton for work since early manhood. It is said his interests represent an investment of more than a billion dollars. He is a master financier. He is a great captain of industry. In international finance he is one of the king heads. His industries carry a payroll that runs into the millions every year. An army of wage workers are carried by the Mellon industries. He is the power behind the republican standpatters' throne. His investments and his industries cover a vast territory. His jurisdiction of private interests reach from Upper Canada into the heart of Mexico. He has dominated the policies of Pennsylvania for many years. He is a high tariff for all the interests which he represents—unless a high tariff interferes with the investments of this wonder wizard of American industrial and financial life.

Harsh criticism rolls off Mellon just as water rolls from the back of a duck. No doubt his silence is an expression of his contempt for the critic. When he talks he speaks straight. He shot straight when he defied the legionnaires and senators and the congressmen retaliated by hitting him on the nose and passing the veterans' bill over the head of the president and the treasury department. He is not a politician but politicians come at his beck and call. Financiers answer to him.

What everyone needs today, every business man, preacher, teacher, doctor, lawyer, banker and scribe, is more exercise. By that I don't mean the kind one gets from sitting and belyaching, but the kind that has always produced results in the past. Exercise of whatever God put between our ears and the exercise which comes from good hard work.

We need faith. How can anyone doubt the future of this country and still call himself a good American? If the country is going to the dogs either morally, physically or financially, a lot of us are going to be in tough shape. If it does go to the dogs, it will be our fault.

the reason for the difference

The Average Price of Gas at the Well is Six Cents

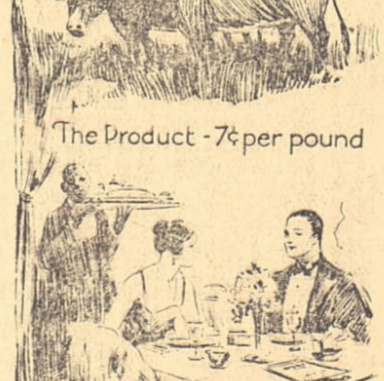

The Average Price of Domestic and Industrial Natural Gas SERVICE is Forty-five cents

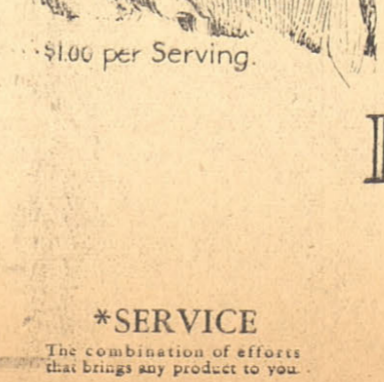

Water at the Source of Supply is FREE

It is the Service delivering water to your home that you pay for

The Product - 7¢ per pound

$1.00 per Serving

WHEN YOU LIGHT THE BURNER of your gas appliance and the flame springs to life instantly, you see results—comfort—convenience—not causes.

Seldom, if ever, do you see the Service agencies that make this ideal fuel supply possible. Pipe lines, gas compressor stations, gas wells and manpower, Service—the combination of efforts that brings natural gas to your burner and which plays a major part in the cost of your fuel supply.

The average price of gas at the well is six cents per 1,000 cubic feet while the average price of NATURAL GAS SERVICE delivered to the customer's burner for domestic and industrial purposes is 45 cents per 1,000 cubic feet. The former is fuel, the latter, a fuel Service that provides heat at the burner automatically, when and as you want it, without ashes, smoke, or soot, or the need for extra labor or storage. Back of the flame of your burner stands the Service of your gas company with its skilled employees and its facilities for delivering the gas. Service must be maintained! Service is what you are paying for!

The fact that your gas company must maintain the year round, at great expense, pipe line and compressor capacity equal to the coldest day of the year—even though this peak capacity is not required except on a few cold days in winter—is merely one of the items of this responsibility called Service. A vast army of employees and large capital resources are continually engaged in maintaining this dependable fuel supply. Drilling, the laying of pipe lines, the equipping of compressor stations, telephone lines, production, transmission and distribution activities represent a colossal investment in materials, equipment and personnel. A correlated system of Service that is synchronized with the broader development of the vast territory we serve.

Your Gas Company takes pride in the fact that it pioneered the production and transportation, in this section, of the only available fuel that can be utilized by the consumer without special handling or the use of costly mechanical accessories. Realizing our responsibility, we take the utmost precaution to assure you permanent fuel satisfaction by providing a dependable flow of gas—regardless of the weather.

FRENCH SOLONS SQUABBLE OVER PUBLIC JOBS

By RALPH HEINZEN
United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS, March 27. — With the seventh year of President Gaston Doumergue ending in June, the choice of his successor near at hand, the national general election less than a year away and still plenty of patronage to be distributed, the French Parliament is playing politics as never before.

Hoover, Mussolini and MacDonaid would have given up in despair long ago, if they had to run their governments with one hand and parry the French Parliament with the other. Statistics show that 37 times in the 60 years of the Third French republic, Parliament has overthrown cabinets.

When the short-lived Steeg government fell statisticians marked up the 22nd cabinet collapse since the war, the 15th with which President Doumergue has had to deal.

No Majority

The difficulty is due to the fact that the last general election did not produce a majority in either the Senate or the Chamber of Deputies.

M. Poincare, a master-strategist, succeeded in coralling a great majority by making it a sacred duty to avoid obstructing France's recovery.

He succeeded in welding a majority of nearly two-thirds of the Chamber in his "National Union" cabinet and picked his ministers off benches from right to left. Only the Socialists and Communists, who could not see his Ruhr and revenge policies were outside.

When M. Poincare fell, M. Tardieu sought to scrape up that same majority, but the great group of Radicals and Radical Socialists, loyal to M. Edouard Herriot, voted at Aners to withdraw support of any Tardieu cabinet.

Tardieu Majority

M. Laval went into power with the Tardieu majority, man for man. He could not swing the Radicals or Socialists, his way, so his days in power seem to be numbered to the extent that his legislation pleases M. Herriot and M. Blum.

The Communists make much noise, but really do not count in the French Chamber. Neither do the Royalists at the other side of the hall.

Laval, the youngest Premier in French history, is a protégé of Briand.

In forming his cabinet he brought in seven men who had never before held portfolios. His most courageous act was to name a Senegalese negro, Blaise Diagne, as Under-Secretary of State for Colonies at a time when the post is given great importance by the opening of the International Colonial Exposition.

CRACKS IN THE DOME

By THE POLITICAL ANALYST
AUSTIN, March 27. — The last few days have changed the fortunes of the railroad commission as drastically, almost, as if the commission had been abolished. Long it has been the dream of this elective-member commission of vast power.

Now it has become impossible. On the other hand, a separate utility commission, clothed with powers many of its members have coveted, seems sure of being set up.

That will foreclose further additions of authority to the rail body.

Now Gov. Sterling — and the oil industry and advisory oil agencies as well — has asked the legislature to take pipeline, oil and gas regulations away from the railroad commission and put it in the hands of still another agency. Neither the utilities commission nor the oil commission he asks is to cost the people of Texas a cent. Their costs will come from the industries regulated.

And to climax the decapitation process, legislative committees and the governor have given approval to a short-ballot constitutional amendment that would take the railroad commissioners out of political elections and political life and make them appointive by and accountable to the governor.

There has been mild agitation that the supervision of trucks and buses be put under the highway commission, which administers the highway patrol law and the restriction of vehicles. But this power is one essentially of rats and rats that are competitive with railroads, and the answer has been that all such rates should be administered by the same agency.

Buying... with YOUR EYES OPEN!

MANY of the products that greet you from shelf and counter today bear familiar names.

Names you know by their advertising. By their reputation. Or by personal experience. They seem like old friends.

Other products are strangers.

What do you know about them?

Often their appeal is a "bargain price." But are they always bargains?

Their labels are attractive. More inviting, sometimes, than those of the products they seek to imitate. But how can any shopper ever know what these labels conceal?

Remember this every time you buy—

Before there can be an imitation, there must be something worth imitating.

Have you ever seen an imitation as good as the original?

Clerks who try slyly to sell you something "just as good" are looking only to today. By tomorrow the same product may not be on the shelf. Perhaps even today the clerk does not know who made it.

Ask yourself... "Why does he offer me this substitute? Why does he urge me to buy this or that product instead of the one I want?"

There are many reasons. Most of them selfish. Certainly, none of them springs from the desire to serve you better.

These facts are published by this newspaper to tell you of your danger. To protect you against substitution. To warn you to buy with your eyes open.

No deserving product ever needs the claim, "just as good." When you hear those words, you may know there is something better. And that package which "holds a little more" often holds little more than disappointment.

There is only one sure way by which you can avoid substitution.

Ask for recognized brands. Ask for them by name. Accept no questionable imitations.

THE ANSWER TO SUBSTITUTION
IS ALWAYS . . .

MAD MARRIAGE

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Gypsy McBride, 19-year-old typist in a New York office, is miserable when she finds that Alan Crosby, just returned from a year and a half in Paris studying art, no longer cares for her. Gypsy becomes disgusted with her job when she is criticized for carelessness impulsively resigns.

She accepts an invitation from her wealthy cousin, Anne Trowbridge, to take the place of another guest at a formal dinner. The party is a bore. She leaves to get her wraps and go home, hears a noise in the next room and opens the door to see a man climbing in the window. He is James Wallace, guest of the Trowbridges, who has entered by the fire escape to avoid the dinner party guests. Wallace tells Gypsy he has just been jilted by his fiancée. She admits she has had the same experience. To spite the girl he cares for, Wallace asks Gypsy to marry him. She first refuses but later accepts. They are married next morning and take the train for Forest City. At Jim's home they are greeted by his aunt, Miss Ellen Wallace, who makes no secret of her hostility to the girl. The days drag tiresomely for Gypsy. The third evening after her arrival Aunt Ellen makes an announcement.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XIX

Ellen Wallace broke a roll and buttered it. "I talked with Mr. Lambert of the real estate company today," she said, addressing her nephew. "They're going to let me move into the house down the street next week."

Jim looked up. "Why—I didn't know you were thinking of it. Sure that's what you want to do?" he asked.

Miss Wallace nodded. "There's no place for me here any longer," she said. "I've never believed an older person should live with a young married couple. Mr. Lambert says they can have the place ready next week as well as not. I'd like to move and have it over with." Her voice was tinged with a martyrdom.

"Now you know, Aunt Ellen," Jim began, "you're welcome to stay here just as long as you want to. Gypsy and I are both glad to have you."

"Of course we are," the girl put in.
Miss Wallace shook her head. "I've told them I'll take the place," she said, "so it's settled. I'm going to have a look at it tomorrow morning and see if they've fixed those cupboards the way they promised. You might go around and find out what the transfer company will charge to move my things."

"I'll do it," Jim agreed, "if you really want me to."

"Is there anything I can do to help?" Gypsy asked.
The older woman said if there was she would call upon her. The discussions shifted to furniture. All through the house there were articles belonging to Miss Wallace. The cottage down the street had six rooms. She had more than enough to furnish the place, Aunt Ellen said. She asked Jim to notify the gas and electric company to install their service.

It was an embarrassing evening. Gypsy tried to keep from showing how the news pleased her. Jim, too, though he constantly assured his aunt that his home was hers as long as she wished, seemed relieved.

After dessert and coffee had been served they went into the living room. A fire, as usual, was burning in the fireplace. Jim twisted the dials of the radio and the voices of two comedians floated into the room.

"Oh, Jim! Do turn that thing off!" his aunt protested. "You know I can't stand that nonsense!" There was a whir of static and then strains of a slow, melodious waltz greeted their ears. It was the last few bars of the chorus. The station announcer's voice cut in as the song ended. The music was being relayed from a New York studio.

Jim turned toward his wife. "Make you lonesome?" he asked.

She smiled, shaking her head in denial. Jim looked at her closely. Unless his eyes deceived him there was a tear on that eyelash. Gypsy turned her head away and when he looked again the tear was gone.

He came over and sank beside her on theavenport.
"Pretty quiet around here, isn't it?" he said. "Get your things and we'll see if we can't find a movie worth looking at."

"I'd rather not if you don't mind," Gypsy answered.

Wallace eyed her questioningly, then leaned back, staring into the fire. The click of Aunt Ellen's knitting needles was the only sound to break the silence. Five minutes passed. Then they heard the shrill ring of the telephone.

"I'll answer," said Jim, rising. "It's probably Harrison." He disappeared, and came back a minute later to announce. "Someone to talk to you, Aunt Ellen."

With a flurry of her silk skirts Aunt Ellen hurried from the room. Jim dropped again beside the girl on theavenport.

"I'm afraid it's been dull around here for you," he said. "Listen after Aunt Ellen moves you can fix this place over to suit yourself. You know—make it look up-to-date. Like Anne Trowbridge's place. Would you like that?"

"I'd love to!" Gypsy told him.

"All this stuff here is old," Jim went on with a wave of his hand. "Clear it all out if you want to! Get rid of it. I've been wishing the place could be fixed up for a long time but I didn't want to hurt Aunt Ellen's feelings."

"But the old things are lovely," Gypsy interrupted. "We'll keep all of them. Only I'd like new curtains and rugs instead of this carpet. And I'd like to change that book case. Oh, and if we could only find an old-fashioned wing chair—instead of that rocker and a little foot stool to go beside it! You know, this could be made into a wonderful room!"

"Go ahead. I think it needs improvement. Say that's a good tune, isn't it?"

The radio orchestra had swung into a lively dance piece. Jim began whistling the melody and Gypsy, unconsciously, tapped one toe in time with the beat.

Suddenly Jim grinned and swung to his feet. "Let's dance," he said. "Like to?"

The girl smiled and arose. Jim's arm slipped about her and they moved away, swaying with the music. The entire floor was carpeted. It was a poor-surface on which to dance but Gypsy knew instantly that Jim was a skillful dancer.

He held her closely. It was the first time there had been anything like a caress between this strangely married pair. They were laughing and cutting a whirl with a flourish when Aunt Ellen appeared in the doorway.

They heard her explosive "Well!" and Jim turned his head. "Come on in, Aunt Ellen," he called. "Can I have the next dance with you?"

For an instant Ellen Wallace hesitated, her face a mass of storm clouds. She was about to speak when suddenly she whirled and was out of sight.

"Now you see what we've done!" Gypsy said in a low voice. "Listen here, girl, I've found out something about one of these nights soon. Some place where there's a good floor and snappy music. You and I are going places!"

"That would be fun," Gypsy agreed. Her eyes were shining but even then Jim could not tell whether it was happiness or the blur of misty fringes that made the room so radiant. She stepped to the mirror, patting her hair into orderliness.

The next six days were a period of furious activity in the Wallace household. Gypsy, who already considered Aunt Ellen a model of efficiency, was now marveled at her generalship. Innumerable boxes were packed. Though the move was only half a block down the street, every object had to be crated as if for a journey. Every closet and cupboard had to be ransacked. It was Aunt Ellen's creed that the house she was leaving must be spotless, as thoroughly scoured as the one to which she was moving. Cora Matson came each day during that week and worked from early morning until late at night.

There was a new interest for Gypsy in planning how the rooms were to be redecorated. Many of the most objectionable heirlooms were being packed and crated to move to Miss Wallace's cottage. The big living room with its old-fashioned fireplace had splendid proportions. It reminded Gypsy of a room she had seen once in a museum. She made a trip downtown to buy a primary decorator's shop and talked the matter over tentatively with the gray-haired, soft-spoken proprietress. It was agreed that Miss Christopher, the decorator, should come out and view the house and submit suggestions.

The afternoon before her departure Ellen Wallace climbed the stairs to Gypsy's room and knocked on the door. The girl opened it.

"Won't you come in?" she said, her surprise apparent. It was the first time Miss Wallace had visited her in her room.

The older woman entered the room, declining the chair Gypsy put forward.

"I've come to tell you," she said, "that as soon as I'm settled in my house I'm going to give a dinner party. It will be a house-warming and it will also be an opportunity for you to meet the other relatives. We're quite a clan, you know. I'd have had them all here before if it hadn't been for this business of moving."

"Well," Gypsy said, smiling and trying to look pleased, "that—that will be very nice."

Aunt Ellen did not smile. "The Wallaces," she said lightly, "have always kept our family traditions. The Wallaces were one of the first families to settle here. Came from New England before that. There are not many left now but we manage to get together occasional-

England Has "Peiping Man"

BRIGHTON, England, March 27.—This seaside town is looking for a Roy Chapman Andrews to tell the world about the rival to the famous "Peiping Man" which was found on the cliffs here recently.

A well-preserved skeleton, said to be at least four thousand years old, is Brighton's latest bid for tourist trade. Experts who examined this "Homo Brightonensis" were not able to tell whether it was a man or a woman.

Andrews found his "Peiping Man" in a cave in Mongolia. Eighteen discovered its family skeleton in a sewer.

Despite its plebeian grave, Brightonians are confident their ancestor was a person of considerable importance in the days of Babylon, Nineveh and Tyre. The experts said it was a person of mature age.

The skeleton furnished another strange link between the past and present. It was found lying on its side with its knees drawn up toward its chin. This is said to be the common sleeping posture of the older inhabitants to this day.

THE WORLD'S RICHEST MEN

Russia's Wealthiest Citizens Hide Identity for Fear of Soviet Punishment. Money Concealed as Shameful and Dangerous Possession. Its Ownership Brings No Happiness and Luxury.

By EUGENE LYONS
United Press Staff Correspondent
MOSCOW, March 27.—Money, which in the capitalist world is a symbol of power and achievement, in the Soviet Union usually signifies exactly the reverse. The most powerful and most respected social classes earn less and possess less than the groups which are practically outlawed.

Private fortunes have been abolished by the Soviet system, the possession of great wealth is almost incontrovertible proof of speculation, private trading, or other activities considered anti-social.

The strongest class of individuals consists of the Communists. Theoretically at least they are consecrated to a life of hard work and poverty like the Franciscan monks.

Nevertheless there must be thousands of persons who have managed to store up large amounts of money. Perhaps they are former merchants who somehow succeeded in concealing and saving a stock of gold.

In any event, they are not persons who deserve any envy. Their money is something to hide as a shameful and dangerous secret. As former merchants they are most likely disfranchised and therefore practically outlaws. They are in danger of being arrested, their money confiscated—or, more politely, "taxed" into the state pockets.

Cold Wave---

A general freeze throughout Texas tonight was predicted by the weather bureau.

Fruit, livestock and early truck crops are in the greatest danger, the bureau said.

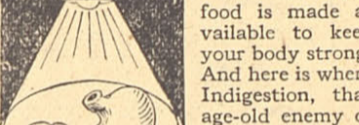

The city of Clarendon was virtually isolated by snowstorm that struck there last night. All roads were blocked communication lines were down and abandoned cars dotted many of the main highways.

Clarendon thermometers read 7 above this morning. Cattlemen in that section said their herds would suffer but forecast small damage due to early warnings of the impending wave.

party," Gypsy said. "I'll look forward to it."

"There's something else I wanted to tell you," Miss Wallace continued. "I suppose you understand I'm taking Harriet?"

"No—no, I didn't understand that."

"Sorry. Didn't think to mention it before. But of course I couldn't get along without Harriet. I've trained her myself. She knows exactly how I want everything done. Makes my tea right."

Gypsy nodded. "Of course," she said. "I'll telephone an agency. I suppose there is one here?"

Ellen Wallace eyed her closely, pursing her lips. The girl had no idea what was back of that enigmatic glance. "There's an agency," the woman said. Then she turned and went from the room, closing the door behind her.

There were two agencies, Gypsy learned when she consulted the telephone book. She called one of them and the woman who answered promised to send an applicant at 10 o'clock next morning.

It was earlier than usual when Jim came home that afternoon. Gypsy had been standing before a window in the living room and saw the green roadster turn into the porch she swung the door open for him.

"Good evening!" she said, smiling.

"Well—have we a new butler? What's the news of the day?"
