Sterling May Send More Troops to East Texas Field

ORDERS BEING ENFORCED ARE "MY" ORDERS

AUSTIN, Feb. 26. — More troops may be sent to East Texas oil field, Gov. Sterling said today. "The state railroad commission cannot cope with the situation," the governor said, "and unless conditions change it will be necessary to re-enforce Brig.-Gen. Jacob Wolters' forces."

"The soldiers in the field are enforcing my orders," said Gov. Sterling, emphasizing the "my". His production order and that issued by the state railroad commission, effective today, coincide in allowing 75 barrels per well per day, but the governor says it is his order that is being enforced.

He explained the situation thus: The military will have nothing to do with the production of the wells of the plaintiffs who secured an injunction against him, Adj.-Gen. Sterling and General Wolters, "except to protect their property if necessary."

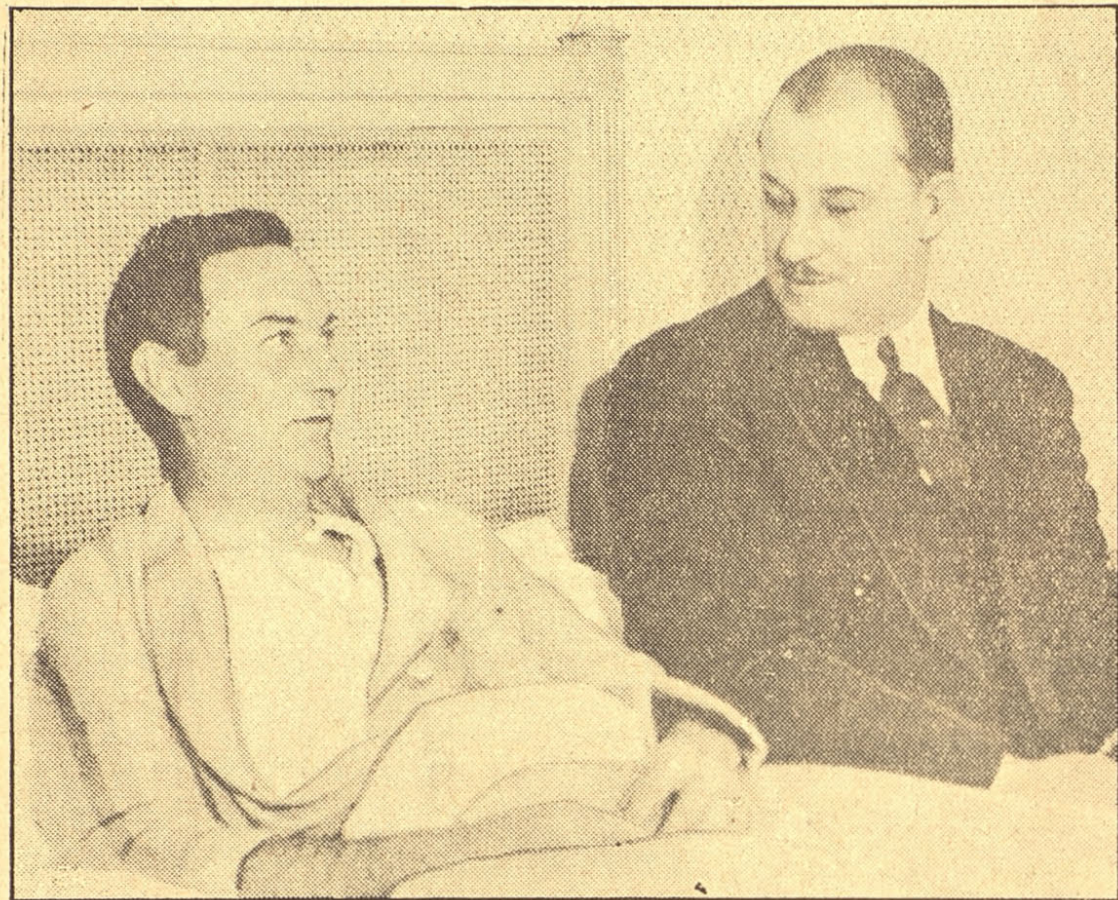

CLUES MISSING IN MURDER OF YOUNG WOMAN

HOUSTON, Feb. 26. — A total absence of clues today confronted police in their search for the murderer of Pauline Caporina, 25-year-old pianist whose body was found in a bloody ditch eight miles from the city.

Picture of Kidnap Victim After Escape in Cleveland

Harry Blagden, 45, eastern sportsman, who was kidnaped at Lake Placid, N. Y., and held for $1000 ransom, is shown here in bed describing his experiences to Detective Ted R. Wirstrom of Cleveland Heights.

Ohio, after Blagden had fought off and escaped his captors when they took him to Cleveland. Feigning sleep when two of his three abductors went into a restaurant to eat, Blagden slugged his guard, jumped from the truck in which he was held captive and fled to the home of a friend in the Cleveland suburb. He was kidnaped from the cottage of E. Roland Harriman with whom he was visiting at Lake Placid.

HITCH-HIKING COMPOSER VARIES EXPERIENCES OF CISCO POLICE WITH WOMEN FOOT-TOURISTS

The common run of hitch-hiking womanhood commands scant respect from police and authorities who have to deal with them as well as the public in general. They are loath to attribute to them virtues and an accent that approved the suggestion, entered the police station about midnight, footsore with the ten-mile tramp from Eastland.

played an alertness and a quick intelligence which heightened that respect and won instant interest to her story. Slept on Table Assured that she had entered the volume of music and song lyrics she carried testified. Some time ago, determined to find a publisher for her songs, she left her home in Los Angeles for Chicago where she interviewed publishers without immediate success.

Chicago Monday, arriving at Des Moines, Iowa, that evening and leaving the next morning. Exceptional good fortune in securing transportation, enabled her to reach Cisco last night. The final stages of the journey were made from Tulsa where two Eastland young men, en route home, gave her a lift to that city which she reached just at sundown last night. Determined to make as much progress as possible she asked the boys to set her out west of Eastland in the hope of catching rides to a town further west before the night was old.

MEMBERS OF HOUSE OF LORDS OWN ONE-TENTH OF ISLAND LAND

By HARRY FLORY United Press Staff Correspondent LONDON, Feb. 26. — Two hundred and seven out of the 737 members of the House of Lords own between them almost one-tenth of the land of England, Scotland and Wales, an area larger than the state of Massachusetts. These interesting figures on the distribution of wealth were compiled by the Labor Magazine.

of eight more. Two peers hold 33 directorships each. More than a thousand companies are represented in the House of Lords by directors. Two hundred and eighty-five peers hold between them 1,296 company directorships, of which 356 are chairmanships. There are only only 20 Labor peers in the House of Lords, 16 of whom were created by the first labor government, and four by the second labor government. By contrast there are 489 conservative peers, 79 liberals and scores who so seldom attend that their political views are not stated.

Said She Is Heir She gave her age as twenty and said that her father had died a few years ago leaving an estate of $250,000 in the hands of an administrator who had so far not given her a single penny. "I am not a tramp," she declared, asserting that her present experience was a novel undertaking solely for the purpose of succeeding in her chosen profession. She asked no money, but simply the privilege of sleeping at the station. Asked if a girl in her position was in danger of being victimized by unscrupulous men, she declared that if a girl kept her piece she was rarely insulted. "You may think I am that kind," she said, "but just try it."

TAYLOR SAYS JAPS ADVANCE HALF A MILE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26. — Japanese forces today advanced approximately one-half mile toward the city of Tazang, one of the objectives in their drive against the Chinese. Admiral M. M. Taylor, American naval commander at Shanghai, reported to the navy department. Taylor said the advance followed intensive artillery preparation and there were few Japanese casualties.

JAPS CLAIM CHINESE AIR FORCE DESTROYED

SHANGHAI, Feb. 26. — The Japanese sent a sensational armada of bombing planes against Chinese air forces at Hangchow today and claimed to have destroyed 14 enemy planes, while infantry and artillery battered away at the Chinese lines between Tazang and Kiangwan. The Japanese bombing fleet numbered 25, including heavy bombers and their fleet pursuit and battle planes.

It was a bombing fleet to rival many seen in action during the World War. Three Chinese planes were shot down during the air battle over Hangchow airport, Japanese claimed. Eleven other Chinese planes were destroyed by bombs, they claimed. The airport, southwest of Shanghai, is the Chinese air base. The Japanese claimed they had destroyed the entire Chinese concentration of fighting planes. The Japanese said their one disabled plane, forced down on a bay, was the only Japanese casualty. The planes occupants were rescued.

EVACUATION PLANS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26. — Plans for the evacuation of Shanghai in the event of "an extreme emergency" have been worked out by representatives of the western powers there, it was learned today at the state department.

Foreigners here were not familiar with the personnel of the Hangchow base and it was not known whether there were Americans or other foreigners connected with the Chinese airmen.

Have Harder Time

While victory was claimed for the Japanese aerial forces, their infantry and artillery were having a more difficult time beating back Chinese before Tazang. The Japanese advance was renewed at 11 p. m. Friday after a smashing artillery barrage. The Japanese appeared to be gaining a few yards at a time, but there were no decisive gains on either side early in the day.

The Japanese announced their casualties in Thursday's fighting at 120 dead and wounded. They claim to have counted 180 Chinese dead on the field.

No Japanese re-enforcements had arrived here today although additional troops were expected momentarily.

GROWL HEARD FROM MOSCOW

MOSCOW, Feb. 26. — The Soviet government has expressed sharp dissatisfaction with Japanese plans to transport troops to points on the Soviet-Manchurian frontier, and with alleged Japanese support of Czarist Russian activities, it was revealed today.

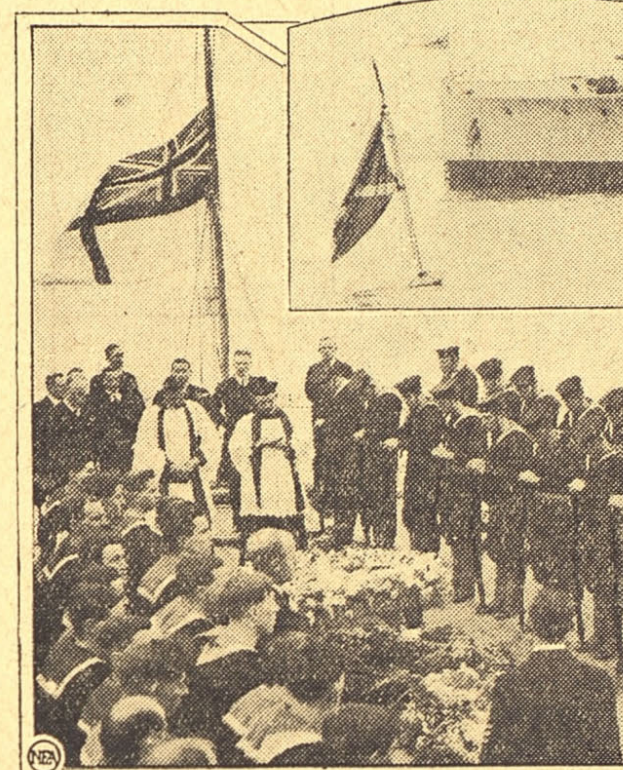

WAY CLEARED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26. — The house rules committee cleared the way today for early house action on the $120,000,000 highway construction unemployment relief bill which will be here on the second Sunday in March. Mr. Pearce will pre-approve the measure.

Britain Honors M-2's Dead

They died "a sailor's hero death," and the officers and men who perished aboard the ill-fated British submarine M-2 were accorded a solemn memorial service by their fellow-seamen. While the sunken submarine lay under 18 fathoms of water beneath the buoy shown upper right, off Portland Bill, England, religious and naval rites were held as pictured below aboard the H. M. S. Adamant. Later the Adamant drifted over the M-2's resting place and wreaths were dropped over-board.

ENTRIES WILL APPROXIMATE LAST YEAR'S

Favored with warm, springlike weather, the 1932 revival of the annual Eastland County Stock show opened its door to the public this morning at 10 o'clock with entries continuing to come in at a rate that promised a show of approximately the same size as that of last year, when 300 head of stock were entered.

A falling off in the number of beef cattle and a slight decrease in dairy cattle entries were compensated for by increases in sheep, goats and pigs. Heavy weather and resultant bad roads has proved a serious interference with the preparations for the show but in spite of these conditions the success that was promised at the opening was more than gratifying to the committee and to E. H. Varnell, director.

One transaction, took place at the building this morning hardly before the doors were opened. Dr. F. E. Clark sold a bull to G. P. Mitcham which Mr. Mitcham will place on the ranch he is stocking near Cisco.

Boys' Display. As usual the displays of the vocational agriculture students form an important feature of the show. Cisco boys of the vocational department of the high school have prepared a display of baby beef cattle. Boys from the Ranger high school vocational agriculture class have entered six fine Hampshire shoats among other project animals.

BROTHER OF DR. LEE CLARK DIES SUDDENLY

John J. Clark, a brother of Dr. Lee Clark, president of Randolph and who was formerly associated with the same institution here, dropped dead at Rhome, 25 miles north of Fort Worth, yesterday afternoon. Dr. Clark was notified by telephone this morning. He was the first of the seven children of Dr. Randolph Clark to die.

The body is being shipped here today for burial tomorrow beside the body of a seven-year-old son who was killed by a truck while the family resided in Cisco. Arrangements for the funeral, which will probably be held from the First Christian church, had not been completed this morning.

Mr. Clark, while not an instructor at Randolph college during the several years he lived here, had devoted most of the earlier years of his life to teaching but later had left that profession to occupy himself with stock breeding and creamery work. He was field man for the Alta Vista Creameries and was in Rhome in connection with his duties in this capacity. His home was at Stephenville.

Following his death the body was taken to Decatur where it was prepared for shipment to Cisco. Mrs. Clark went from Stephenville to Decatur last night and will accompany her husband's remains to this city. Her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Witt Sears of El Ceptan, N. M., have also left for Cisco.

"Is Resignation Justifiable?" Theme

"The resignation of Rev. H. D. Tucker from the ministry of the Methodist church as announced in the press this week shocked and grieved the entire community," said Rev. J. Stuart Pearce, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, in announcing his subject for next Sunday evening. Mr. Pearce will discuss Mr. Tucker's resignation from the ministry as indicating a condition not confined to the Methodist church or the Methodist ministry. "Is a Minister Ever Justified in Leaving the Ministry?" is the question which Mr. Pearce will ask and answer Sunday evening.

Hopkin was fined $10 for cruelty to animals when he pleaded guilty to throwing the cage, bird and all, at his wife. Hopkin missed, the cage struck a wall, and the bird was killed.

Extra copies of the Cisco Daily News will be distributed to the visitors attending the County Livestock show which opened here at 10 o'clock this morning. Copies of this afternoon's issue will be given out with the compliments of the Daily News.

CISCO LOBO GOLFERS MEET RANGER TODAY

The Cisco high school golf team, just organized, will cross clubs with the Ranger high school team this afternoon at Ranger in an engagement that was arranged on the spur of the moment yesterday. The club had planned its initial foray into competition to be a match between themselves and a team combined of the talent of Rising Star, Cross Plains and Pioneer here tomorrow afternoon. That match will be played as planned, however.

The match at Ranger this afternoon will consist of only about five twosomes, while that here tomorrow afternoon will pit ten of the Cisco players against as many invading artists of the fairway and the green.

OPEN EACH EVENING

The building just opposite the Bankhead Feed Mill on South D avenue will remain open until 10 o'clock each evening of the two days that the show will be in progress. Judging was to be started this afternoon between 2 and 2:30 by C. M. Evans, agricultural agent for the Texas and Pacific, who wired this morning that he would arrive at 1:45.

STATE INCOME TAX FOR ILLINOIS.

A state tax on incomes became a law in Illinois with the signing of a bill passed at a special session of the central assembly by Governor Lewis L. Emerson. The measure advocated by the governor's tax conference committee in response to the demand of agricultural interests for real estate tax relief provides for a levy graduated upward from 50 cents on $1,000 incomes. The same legislature adjourned until April without enacting laws giving relief to the city of Chicago, leaving the democrats in control of Chicago to hold the bag and work out their own destiny.

Governor Bill Murray proposed a state income tax for Oklahoma in the not remote past. A majority, smashed the Murray proposal, but this defeat did not prevent the Murray machine from declaring their governor the choice of Oklahoma for the democratic presidential nomination. He will be given his next tryout in North Dakota. He delayed action in Georgia until it was too late.

There is pending an amendment to the constitution of Texas known as the home exemption amendment. Those who are familiar with conditions say that it is certain to carry. If so, new sources of revenue must be tapped. There is a big job awaiting the governor and the lawmakers of Texas. Tax relief must come to urban property owners as well as farmers. Most of the people are clamoring for low taxes, low salaries, sweeping reduction in appropriations, and real economy in their expenditure of public money. Are they without a real leader?

STRIKE NOW FOR RELIEF.

Owen W. Sherrill of Georgetown is a member of the Texas advisory committee to the Reconstruction Finance corporation. He said Texas farmers would seek immediately $5,000,000 to $6,000,000 in loans under the agricultural provision of the corporation. He had returned from Washington where he conferred with federal officials relative to handling farm credits in Texas, Arizona and New Mexico. All three states will be cared for through the Dallas regional agency. Money talks. There are thousands of farmers, it is said, who need loans and the Dawes Reconstruction corporation may go as high as $200,000,000 in the agricultural loans.

All the publicity the newspapers of the American world could give has been given. It is for the Dawes commission to afford relief for congested securities, relief to depositors whose savings are in closed banks, relief to industries and institutions which need help to tide over as well as very substantial relief to those who are engaged in the agricultural life of this commonwealth. Business is business. Why not strike now before the coming of good old summer time?

WASHINGTON A SYMBOL OF FAITH.

Chief Judge Benjamin Nathan Cardozo, nominated to the supreme court by President Hoover, said at a Washington bi-centennial celebration at Albany that the "deathless heritage of America was not the structure of government but the faith and purpose that inspired it, a faith and purpose symbolized and made incarnate in the person of Washington." Judge Cardozo, unless all the signs are misleading, will fill the vacancy made by the resignation of Oliver Wendell Holmes, one of the idols of American life and history. This excerpt from his address should be found in the scrapbooks of real Americans:

"The heirs of a great tradition have gathered here today to proclaim their reverent pride in the splendor of a deathless heritage. Deathless the heritage is, for the values it embodies are values of the spirit. The supreme contribution that Washington made may be summed up in a single sentence—he contributed has character. What is deathless in our heritage is the faith and purpose that inspired it, a faith and purpose symbolized and made incarnate in the person of a man. Here is an imperishable gift, this great figure standing far away at the daybreak of our history. He so lived and wrought as to breathe into his country the soul that was his own. May we keep it undefiled through all the years to come."

Thousands of eulogies were paid the father of his country on the two hundredth anniversary of his birth. It remained for this distinguished jurist of New York to coin into words a tribute that touches the soul and the heart and the brain of man.

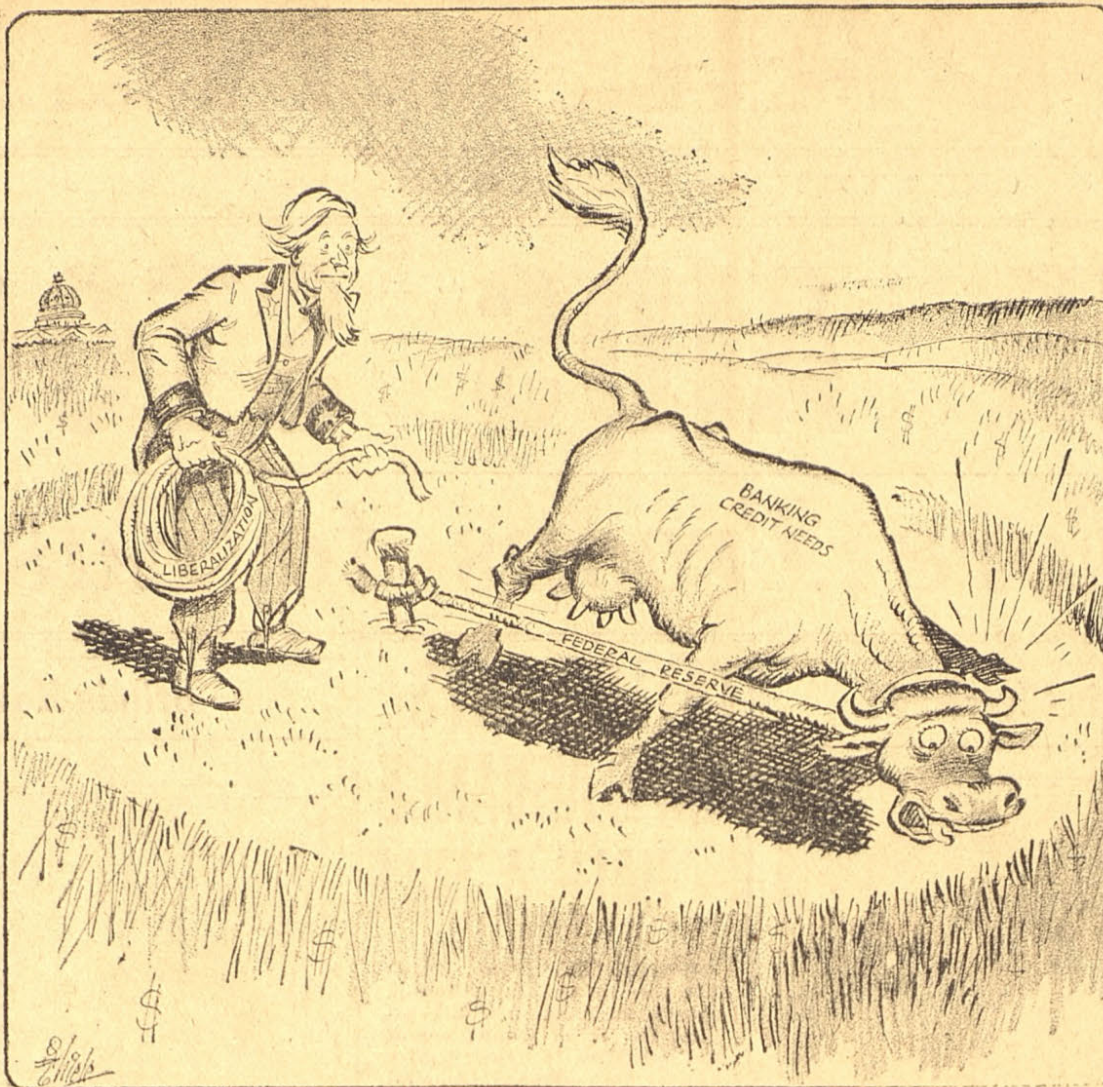

OTHER OPINIONS

COULD YOUTH DO ANY BETTER?

There is much being said and written in these times of stress about turning things over to the young men, that the old ones have made a mess of government. This demand comes mostly from the colleges and universities where all manner of radicalism is being taught. And as an evidence of how well these young cads would run the country we are reminded that it seems almost impossible for these sophomoric to print a college paper that will pass the inspection of decency. Some of the most obscene publications in the United States have been issued by the student bodies of our higher (?) institutions of learning and the universities of the first class. And these indefensible publications have not been confined to state schools but even church school faculties have to suppress them. Youth is all right in its place but it needs seasoning down before it takes the reins. It must be sobered by meeting the realities of life are it become able to direct the course of society or government. The Denison Herald, always sane has this to say about the claim that youth should take charge: All of which is more or less true, but it doesn't mean so very much. It certainly does not mean that the control of the world is soon to pass into the hands of men whose average age is 25. The world is in a sorry mess at present, but it would probably be in a worse one if it were turned over to callow youths to manage. Most of these young men who are complaining of the mismanagement of their elders are young college sophisticates who have swallowed a lot of radical information and haven't digested it. Some "air-brained" professor has spotted his theories, they have swallowed them hook and line, and now they want to go forth to rebuild the world after the new plan. Nature, or whoever has charge of things, has seen to it that the world is governed by those with enough sanity and experience to choose what seems to be the proper path. Many mistakes are made, even by grayheads, but more would be made if all the affairs of the world were in the hands of "sophomoric youths, bent on uprooting society and remaking it after a pattern of their own designing." — Marshall News.

Turkish Law Is Aimed at Greeks

ISTANBUL, Feb. 26. — Strained relations between Greece and Turkey are predicted by foreign observers in consequence of a new bill, approved by the National Economy Commission, which imposes severe restrictions on the business and professional activities of foreigners. Although the bill is applicable against all foreigners, its provisions bear especially heavily on the Greeks in Turkey because the banned industries and professions specified in the bill are mostly carried on by Greeks.

Under the bill, which has yet to pass the National Assembly, no foreigner will be allowed to have a shop, or to carry on a profession except in the chief towns.

Foreigners whom the bill affects will be allowed to continue their business, or profession, for three months, at the end of which time they will have to decide which one of the few remaining professions open to them they would prefer. The bill also hits Russian refugees, of whom there are a considerable number in Turkey earning their living as artists, chauffeurs, toy manufacturers, and "bar-keepers."

It is understood that diplomatic pressure is being brought to bear

by the Greek government, and it is possible the bill will undergo modification by the National Assembly.

HEAD HUNTERS' NATIVE HAUNTS HIDE SECRETS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Matthew W. Stirling, chief of the Smithsonian Bureau of American Ethnology, is heading an expedition into Ecuador, where he is studying the customs and habits of the head-hunting Jivaro Indians.

Stirling reports that he has entered the land of the savages and expects to be out of mail communication for two months.

"The Jivaros are a mighty interesting, quiet friendly and real primitive tribe," Stirling writes. "but they are as enthusiastic head-hunters as ever." He fears not for his own head, as he already has established cordial relations.

Small Tribes
About 15,000 to 20,000 Jivaros roam the virgin forests in regions politically divided between Ecuador and Peru. They are divided into small tribes and are constantly at war, the Smithsonian states. A war is almost a complete failure unless the warriors return with a nice collection of heads, it seems. A warrior, who has got himself a head, must celebrate a feast. This is the great mystery feast and is supposed to open the road to honor, fame, material wealth, new victories over enemies, and a long life.

Hot Sand Used
By treating the captured heads with hot sand, the Jivaros reduce their gruesome trophies to the size of oranges. The features, however, remain.

North Carolina "white mule" Mexican tequila, vodka and Harlem gin are soft drinks compared to the Malkoa of the Jivaros, Stirling says this concentrated dynamite makes the souls of the Indian's ancestors appear as tigers, eagles, snakes, etc. Only after a Jivaro has seen these visions can he become a successful warrior.

The mysterious poison with which the Jivaros tip their arrows and deal sudden death to animals also interests Stirling and is one of the objects of his expedition.

ST. The collection was purchased in the Far East and is a gift of Walter Schmalder, St. Louis traveler and scientist.

INK BOTTLE IN FISH

SAGINAW, Mich., Feb. 26. — A fish which took into itself a man's name has been caught in the Tittabawassee River. Fishermen found an ink bottle in the stomach of an eight-pound shovel nose fish. The name "Arthur Schweinkaupt" was scribbled on a slip of paper in the bottle. Notified of the discovery Schweinkaupt recalled his 10-year-old boy tossed the bottle in the river last summer.

JOHN N. GARNER IS MORE THAN A "FAVORITE SON" CANDIDATE

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD
John N. Garner, native son of Texas, is more than a favorite son candidate for the democratic presidential nomination. Not since the days of William Jennings Bryan has a democrat from the territory west of the Ohio river or south of it been named as a standard bearer of the party. His nativity, his record, as a national lawmaker, and his personality are not all that he visualizes the people of a vast territory in the South.

In the vast farming sections of the West and the Southwest and the South there are millions of voters who are the producers of the food staples as well as the other chief products of the republic. They followed the flag of Bryan for many years. They lost. Economic farm conditions as they are today call for the homespun type of a popular idol in these granaries of America where the livestock and cotton growing industries are ever uppermost and low-price levels have sorely distressed the tillers of the soil throughout recent years.

Mr. Garner's record as a public servant, is known to his people. He has had the advantage of late of a tremendous and highly publicized campaign which has been waged from ocean to ocean. Hence, he is more than a favorite son of Texas. He represents a vast sentiment in the farming sections of the country. This sentiment is found in the ranks of those who are known as the homespun democracy and they are seeking a man who is known of the homespun type, as their leader; a man of pioneer ideals, of rugged character, as well as one who has fought his way from the first to the last rung of the ladder in a popular idol.

John N. Garner, unlike Smith, is not the titular leader of the democratic party. He is the speaker of the democratic house, the only outstanding branch of government controlled by the democracy. All other departments from that of chief magistrate are controlled by the republicans. This has given Garner a decided advantage in the popular mind. He speaks as one high in authority. He is carrying a vast load of responsibility. He is thus visualized as the man of the people—a man of the people West and South of the Ohio river.

Texas democrats will instruct 46 delegates to vote for him as presidential nominee just as long as his name shall be before the convention. This is a foregone conclusion. It could not be otherwise.

There are three principal contenders for this nomination, as political conditions exist today—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Newton D. Baker and John N. Garner of Texas.

Roosevelt is in the public eye very largely for his 20 years of splendid achievements in the public service, first with Woodrow Wilson's administration and in later years a great governor of New York.

Newton D. Baker comes from the geographical center of the Allegheny country known as the step-mother of presidents, with a record of high public service as a member of the cabinet of Woodrow Wilson and in earlier life a radical career as a disciple and protégé of the famous Tom L. Johnson who was prominent in the public life of America when Baker was a very young man.

Garner has had 30 years of notable service as a congressional lawmaker and the problems so close rounded him, more than the problems which are awaiting solution in the urban centers and industrial and financial strongholds of the republic.

For the first time in history Texas will present an outstanding leader of the party as its choice for standard bearer and presidential nominee. It goes without saying that all the elements of factions in this home state who classify themselves as democrats will rally to the cause of the speaker and that there will be no opposition to an instructed delegation to the Chicago convention. Regardless of all this, as political conditions are viewed as of today, a protracted struggle or contest for supremacy will take place on the banks of Lake Michigan before a choice has been made and the wisest of political prophets cannot foretell at this writing who will be acclaimed the standard bearer of the party of Jefferson in the gigantic battle to come with the standard bearer and forces behind him of the hereditary foes of the American democracy.

TEXAS TOPICS

By RAYMOND BROOKS

AUSTIN, Feb. 26. — The most comprehensive health drive ever made on such a large area is well under way in the four counties of the East Texas oil zone. Sen Henry Beck, Bowie county, major in the national guard and chief military officer of the "army of occupation" in East Texas reported here.

Over 400,000 casualties already have resulted in the war on rates, he reported. And millions and millions of mosquitos have perished.

Sanitation of premises, a clean-up of drinking water that has included bacterial analysis of water from every school well in the four counties, immunization of thousands of children from typhoid and diphtheria; an underground water survey, drainage mosquito extermination screening of houses, poisoning of rodents, health clinics for schools, tuberculin tests for all dairy cattle and the destruction of diseased animals have been among some of the health measures that have moved forward during military control.

These have embraced the cooperation of the federal government, the military authorities, the legislature in special appropriations, Gov. Sterling, the board of water engineers, the state highway department forces, federal rodent-control units, the state health department, state laboratories and the state department of education, along with city, county and rural agencies in the communities.

Several full-time county health units have been set up.

The war on germs and disease has had many handicaps. Dr. Beck reported . . . When he would walk through the wet grass great clouds of mosquitos would swarm out. He reported. Plumbing is unknown in many sections of the timber country, water supplies in shallow wells were required.

Don Biggers the caustic former newspaper editor of Fredericksburg has crowded into the following ranks of candidates for congressman-at-large.

Statistics show that something like $1250 a year is the normal income of the average American family . . . The state government of Texas collects enough money to represent $97 each from heads of families . . . Cities and counties collected on an average three times as much more and the federal government from this to double the amount. That represents a tax toll of close to $500 — maybe exceeding it, or theoretically 40 cents out of every dollar of the average family income for taxes . . . there's either something wrong with the figures or else a might load of grief in sight around taxpaying time.

Penny Arcade Dodges Slump

BOSTON, Feb. 26. — Neither the depression, nor the competition of a nearby movie palace advertising "All Seats 10 Cents," has been able to put John Shea's Penny Arcade out of business.

Occupying a gaudy corner location in blatant Scollay Square, this entertainment emporium — last of half a dozen that once thrived in that locality — has succeeded in keeping on its financial feet by adding a passport photo department, installing a girthing device, and other gadgets which collect nickels rather than pennies.

By inserting a cent in the slot you can still peer into the depths of one of those antiquated contraptions and see such "risque" playlets as "A Game Chicken," "Is That Nice?" or "Why Be Good?" but it costs you a nickel to peek into the machine that unfolds "What Men Want," "Diane of the Follies," or "The Bride's Celebration." The strength test known as "Pull the tiger's tail" likewise is priced at one cent, whereas it costs five cents to ride the staturary bicycle, a reducing device.

Business isn't what it used to be, Proprietor Shea will tell you rather mournfully. But more than likely he'll add the opinion that there'll always be enough trade to support a well-conducted Penny Arcade.

BRITISH WAIT RESUMPTION OF BUILDING

By HERBERT MOORE
United Press Staff Correspondent
LONDON, Feb. 26.—The sound of the hammer, stilled by the September budget crisis, will echo again throughout Great Britain when the authorities resume their building program in March.

Hard hit by the government's discontinuance of the policy of granting loans to help finance municipal construction schemes, the building industry is waiting for the "GO" signal which will provide work for nearly 350,000 operatives.

Government Anxious
The national government is understood to be anxious for the immediate resumption of building work. The Minister of Health is expected to announce soon that the government is ready to sanction loans for such purposes.

Since September, a slow paralysis has spread over the building trade, the second largest industry in the country. More than $250,000,000 worth of construction work was held up or abandoned by the local authorities, when the government withdrew financial assistance and 343,000 operatives were thrown out of work over the dole.

Toward the end of the year, however, as the budget situation improved, representations were made to the government by builders, manufacturers, operatives, architects and surveyors. In early February a united deputation, representing 100,000,000 pounds of invested capital and nearly 1,000,000 workers visited the Minister of Health.

Strong Argument
Their strongest argument was that it was costing 9,000,000 a year to keep the unemployed building trade workers on the dole, or 16 per cent of the amount it would cost to finance the building schemes.

Another important factor is the reduction in the labor cost of the proposed work. Effective during the first week of February, wages were reduced by a half-penny (equivalent to one cent) an hour. This will result in a saving of 4,000,000 a year.

Recluse Eats Meals From His Coffin
MINERAL WELLS, Feb. 26.—The food that sustains life in Albert Schnocke, Texas hermit, is eaten from the top of the coffin that will hold his body.

"I'm going to eat my nineteenth birthday dinner off of my coffin-finding table soon," he said. Schnocke has used the coffin for a dining table for eight years.

Eight years ago he rode into Perrin, bought his coffin, placed it on his wagon, sat on top of the rough box that covered the casket and rode home.

"That's to put me in when I'm dead," the hermit readily explains to infrequent visitors.

The coffin is in his one-room house. One end is stacked with canned goods; the other is his dining table.

The coffin is only one of his eccentricities. Until recent years, he tended his cattle clad only in a burlap sack, with holes for arms and neck.

Two cowskins laid on the floor served him as a bed for 25 years. Then he bought a four-poster.

Artificial light never has lighted his cabin. He goes to bed at sundown and is up with the sun.

Schnocke is a Civil War veteran. He was born in France, in 1842, but has lived near Perrin for 60 years.

Doubt Is Cast On Education Plan

LONDON, Feb. 26.—Doubts as to the utility of the modern complicated systems of education were cast by Dr. C. A. Aldington, Headmaster of Eton college, in an address before the Workers' Educational association.

Even the question of whether boys were any better for a wash was raised by Dr. Aldington, who declared that it was difficult to show that the boys of today were any healthier than in the days when school authorities knew nothing about modern sanitation, and the boys seldom washed and even more seldom bathed.

"There are very few things," said Dr. Aldington, "of which we can say with certainty that everybody ought to know. It is obvious however, that everyone should be able to write intelligently and express themselves intelligently. One must be able to subtract, divide, add and multiply reasonably well. In my profession we try to teach all students in the same way as if they were going to be scholars whereas 70, 80 or 90 per cent are not. Nevertheless, we give them the same number of subjects. I do not think it is fair."

Indian's Scalp Is Prized Trophy

FORT WORTH, Feb. 26.—The well-preserved scalp of an Indian chief is a prized possession of Mrs. Burch Young.

For it represents a hand-to-hand death struggle of an Indian chief with her father, Ira Long, former Texas Ranger captain, of frontier fame.

The scalp was taken 50 years ago in an encounter at Lost Valley, Jack County.

Captain Long had killed more than one redskin during the years he was engaged in Indian warfare but the Lost Valley fight was his narrowest escape. It was for this reason that he saved the scalp and trophies taken from the chief.

The redskin chief apparently had singled Long out for battle as Long's squad of Rangers approached the edge of the clearing where the Indians were encamped.

His horse shot from under him, Long leaped to the ground and closed in with the giant chief. Both grew tired, Long apparently was losing ground. Then one of Long's men came to his rescue.

A volley at close range caused Long's foe to release his hold. This gave Long the chance to send a bullet through the red man's skull.

The dime-a-dance girl

BY JOAN CLAUTON

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Beautiful Ellen Rossier, salesgirl in Barclay's Department store works at night as a dance hall hostess at Dreamland. She lives with her extravagant mother, Molly Rossier, her elder sister, Myra and her young brother, Mike.

Seven Barclay, 57 and Ellen's employer, becomes deeply interested in her. Ellen quarrels with her mother, refusing to break a date with Larry to accept one from Barclay. Mrs. Bondy, a store gossip, tells scandalous stories of Barclay's attentions to Ellen. The girl determines to see him no more.

Without Ellen's knowledge, Molly invites Barclay to dinner, borrowing money to make the apartment more attractive and to buy expensive food. Ellen is furious but when Barclay arrives she is compelled to greet him in a friendly way. Molly is delighted when Barclay gives Mike a much desired bicycle.

Later Ellen and Barclay go driving and he asks her to marry him. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XIX

Ellen brushed aside all coquetry and pretense as she told Steven how proud he had made her. She tried to make him understand how much she liked him, at the same time explaining that she did not love him. She was more successful than she had hoped to be. She should, of course, have explained that she was already hopelessly in love with Larry Harrowgate.

Pride, backed by a desire to hurt him as little as possible, forbade that.
Because she had not told him Steven felt he had not a chance to win her. He fancied that he had frightened her by being premature, by rushing his suit. Ellen was to blame for that. All unconsciously she had hardened his determination to make her his wife. The girl was pleased and grateful that he had made her refusal so easy.

"Will you do me one favor?" he asked.
"I'll be so glad to."
"Then call me Steven."
"Steven," she said obediently flushing. "Steven, Steven — it sounds odd for me to be saying that."
"It sounds rather nice to me," he amended boyishly.
They parted as friends. Ellen would have preferred that they should see each other no more but such a suggestion was impossible to speak to him of the gossip at the store. The inference would be too plain. The one step to protect her from this gossip would be so obvious.

As she said good night Ellen determined that in the morning she would resign her position at the store and seek another. In this manner she would obviate the possibility of encountering him each day. Another job would carry her out of the reach of wagging tongues. Another job was the solution. She must leave Barclay's.
She was not surprised to find Molly up and about. At the sound of the key in the door, Molly appeared, a cold duck sandwich in her hand. She offered half to Ellen, an offer which was refused then perched herself on the arm of a chair to demand an account of the drive.
Ellen lunged off her hat. "I'm too tired to talk," she said, moving toward the bedroom. "Nothing happened except that Mr. Barclay asked me to marry him."
"Oh, Ellen! You call that nothing!"
"And I refused him," Ellen stated with serene finality.
Molly's face was almost comic in its abrupt transition from delight to complete dismay.
"Ellen, you didn't!"
"I did. And furthermore in the morning I'm leaving Barclay's for another job."

She was very tired to have refused Steven had been hard enough in itself. How could she bear a recapitulation of that refusal? How could she bear to meet Molly remained unexpectedly calm. "If you don't feel that you love him," she said quietly, "you did the right thing."
The desperate move on which Molly had risked everything was successful. Ellen's surprise mastered her fatigue.
"Mother! Then you do think I'm right?"
"Of course, my darling," said Molly, as she relinquished her sandwich and came toward her daughter.
She drew Ellen into her arms murmuring that now she was no longer a little girl and must decide her own problems. She was so calm and reasonable that Ellen was reassured. Strangely enough she felt her own attitude veering. She began to wonder if she had been unwise, to wonder if Larry were not the illusion and Steven the reality.
"I like him," she said wearily "but I just don't love him. You've no idea how hard it was for me to refuse him!"
"I know I didn't understand it the first place," Molly said, feeling her way, "but I do now. You must make your own decision — I can't do it for you. You'll have to live with the man you marry, not I'd have been pleased for many many reasons if you'd decided for Mr. Barclay — he would be so good to you."

"I know."
"It would have been so much easier for all of us," Molly sighed. Ellen began to feel selfish. She could not know as Molly herself scarcely knew, that her mother was laying a deep and subtle trap. When Ellen went into the bedroom, she was unsure of herself and her wisdom.
Myra was in bed with a book on her knees. She looked up and smiled a welcome but she had determined to let Ellen alone and not ask questions.
Ellen, however, wanted a confidence. She came over to the bed, framed the book from Myra's hands and sat down.
"Steven Barclay asked me to marry him," she said abruptly.
"So soon, Ellen!"
"Too soon," Ellen answered darkly. She added, "I shouldn't have said that. I really think we've all desperately needed a lift. Myra has been wonderful, wonderful. But I don't want to marry him."
"You won't be seeing him any more then?"
"Oh, I'll be seeing him."

There was a silence in the dim bedroom where only one light burned. Pale moonlight filtered through an open window, lay in patches on the scarred floor and shone on the old-fashioned bed with one grave-eyed girl against the pillows and the other at her feet.
"Do you think it would be very wrong to marry a man you liked because you — because you couldn't marry one you thought you loved?" Ellen asked suddenly.
"Oh, I don't know, Ellen."
"The funny thing is I don't really know where I am," Ellen went on in a puzzled way. "My feelings whirl around like a shuttlecock. There'd be no problem at all if I didn't like Steven, but I do! I can't decide whether I'm being mercenary and grasping or—"

"You're not that. You know you're not! Don't even imagine such things!"
"That's extremely foolish of you," Myra interrupted sharply. "I'm not taking sides in this but I won't have you imagining that you're something you're not. You're every bit as good as Steven Barclay. What if he does have money? You're beautiful. You're sweet and good. You're well-born that."
"You sound like a novel of the '20's," Ellen broke in with a rueful little laugh.
"Just the same, it's true," persisted Myra.
"D'you know, I wasn't sure whether I was going to say yes or no until I did," Ellen said, starting out at the winking electric sign across the street.
"You'd know what you were going to say, wouldn't you, if it had been Larry Harrowgate?"
Ellen's face turned scarlet.
"He hasn't asked me," she answered, her cheeks continuing to flame. "I haven't a reason in the world to imagine he will when he's engaged to another girl."
"Has he — ever said anything that might suggest he meant to tell you about that?"
"No, he hasn't," Ellen admitted in a low strained voice. "That's what makes me — well, it doesn't make me hate him but it makes me think I should. Oh, why can't men be more fair?"

There was no answer to that question. Both girls knew it. Presently Ellen murmured a good night and slipped off to her own bed. Myra dropped her book to the floor and snapped off the light.
Ellen was awakened by a pouring on the door from the living room. Earlier in the night her sleep had been light and troubled but toward morning she had fallen into heavy slumber. Nevertheless the terrific noise brought her wide-awake at once. Sure that the building must be on fire, she roused Myra, told her to wake Molly and Mike, grabbed her kimono and ran through the living room to the door. It was barely 6 o'clock.

She jerked open the door and stood in foolish surprise, abruptly conscious of her disheveled attire. Facing her was John Farnum owner of the building.
"What do you mean rousing us at this hour?" she gasped indignantly, trying to hide her beat feet.
"I mean I want my rent and I

VITAMIN B IN BRAN, RESEARCH REVEALS

Also Has "Bulk" to Further Assist Elimination, and Iron for Blood

One of the functions of Vitamin B is to help tone the intestinal tract, and promote elimination. Now, laboratory experiments show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN contains this valuable vitamin.

In addition, ALL-BRAN brings a plentiful supply of "bulk" — which provides the "ballast" needed to exercise the intestines.

This "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is similar to that of lettuce. Inside the body, it is different from the way you see it in the package. It absorbs moisture, and forms a soft mass which gently cleans the intestines of wastes. Special cooking processes make ALL-BRAN finer, milder, more palatable.

Another healthful element brought by ALL-BRAN is iron. Tests show this cereal has twice as much usable iron as the same weight of beef liver.

Check common constipation — with its frequent headaches, loss of appetite and energy — by eating this delicious cereal. How much pleasanter than taking pills and drugs — so often habit-forming.

Just eat two tablespoons daily — sufficient to overcome most types of constipation. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Appetizing recipes on the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

British Halt Seaplane Work
LONDON, Feb. 26. — Under orders from the Air Ministry, the Supermarine Works of Vickers (Aviation) Limited at Southampton have abandoned work on what was to have been the largest flying boat ever constructed in Great Britain. The step was taken, it is understood, to purchase of the economy campaign.

The flying boat was to have been a huge high-wing monoplane weighing 35 tons and fitted with six engines of 325 h. p. set in tandem pairs above the wing. Its specification called for a top speed of 145 miles an hour and a range of 1,300 miles. Its wing would have been six feet thick, with a span of 174 feet. Cancellation of work is regarded as a distinct blow to Great Britain's progress in aviation. Its designers had in mind the construction of a flying boat able to operate on much rougher seas than any flying boat in existence. It would thus, it was claimed, be the source of securing valuable data regarding the construction of flying boats able to accompany the British fleets in all weather and in any part of the world. It is also understood it was to have been the forerunner of a 60-ton flying boat, which would have incorporated the constructional and operational lessons learned from actual service work by the 35-ton machine.

STUDIED AGRICULTURE
EDINBURGH, Feb. 26. — Scientific plant breeding and selection was known to the ancient Egyptians of King Tutankhamen's reign. Col. WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—A few members of the House of Representatives got together in secret session the other day and decided that 40,000,000 bushels of Farm Board wheat should not be given to the hungry unemployed.

The Senate had voted to give the wheat, which was equivalent to 10,000,000 barrels of flour, but the House Committee on Agriculture, voting 14 to 9, turned down the proposal and kept it from getting to a vote on the House floor.

Explanations for the action range from the assertion that there was not a sufficiently loud clamor for the wheat to the accusation that a majority of the House Committee on Agriculture is a bunch of do-nothings.

The argument that people were "starving in the midst of plenty" while the government kept 160,000,000 bushels of useless wheat was met by the charge that wheat donation would be a "dole."

Senator Bratton of New Mexico had pointed out that the gift would be "like a pogrom in a cyclone," but there were those who didn't care to shoot off the pogrom.

Although Speaker Garner and Chairman Marvin Jones (Texas) of the Agriculture Committee favored the resolution they did not force it to the floor.

WHAT happened at the secret session where the resolution was snuck?

Well, one understands that the boys discussed it informally around the table. They represent all the agricultural sections of the country, of course. One wanted to know why the government couldn't also buy up a lot of cotton for the unemployed. And another asked what about rice. And others suggested pork, milk, wool and so on, having in mind the products of their home districts.

And why didn't the government go out and buy the wheat on the open market? A course, it was argued, which would do more to help the wheat farmers. One or two members dwelt on the expenses of transportation and distribution. It was pointed out that the Farm Board would like to be reimbursed for the wheat from the treasury, instead of charging it up to its revolving fund as provided by the Senate.

CHAIRMAN JONES argued that the Farm Board wheat was deteriorating and costing 18 cents a year per bushel to carry. He said it didn't seem like a dole to him, but "more like a fellow discarding an old overcoat which he didn't need."

But the majority indicated an opinion that the bill wasn't of much consequence. It was said that there has been no general excitement about it and no insistent demand for the wheat.

Anyway, the wheat program would only be a drop in the bucket. And there were those who warned solemnly that passage of the wheat bill would be a pretty radical step to take unless there were really a tremendous emergency. Congress had better go slow until it decided more definitely just what it wanted to do about this relief business.

So, between one thing and another, the resolution was voted down. Chairman John Barton Payne of the Red Cross, at the open hearing, which considered 20,000,000 bushels as the amount instead of the Senate's 40,000,000, said his organization would distribute the wheat if asked.

It would take care of the cost of processing into flour by selling the wheat by-products and would arrange with bakers by competitive bidding to receive so many loaves of bread for so many bushels of wheat.

The Salvation Army and the Quaker Relief organization were among those urging passage of the resolution, although a Salvation Army representative did not show up to testify as promised.

Fred Croton of the President's Unemployment Relief organization said: "People do not generally starve. They die of undernourishment before they starve." It was pointed out that each bushel of wheat made 60 loaves of bread.

"ATONEMENT" SUBJECT FOR REV. JAMES

Those who are in attendance at the First Baptist church next Sunday will be privileged to hear a message on the greatest subject mentioned in the Bible. The pastor, E. S. James, will be in the pulpit again and will use for his subject of discourse, "The Atonement." This message was deferred from two weeks ago that those who were then prevented from attending on account of the inclement weather might have the opportunity of hearing this subject discussed. This is the seventh of a series of sermons on "Great Bible Doctrines," and the pastor is eager that all may have the opportunity to hear this message which is greatly believed, but little understood. He announces that he will attempt to explain the greatest question of all ages, "How God can be just and yet the Justifier of sinners."

Mother and Son to Be Buried Together

FORT WORTH, Feb. 26. — A mother and son, who died here today of the same disease and within ten hours of each other, will be buried at double funeral services tomorrow.

Mrs. L. L. Moore, 83, widow of a prominent live-stock dealer, died this morning of heart disease which last night caused the death of her son, Leon Moore, 47 years old.

Both died at their residence here where Moore lived with his mother. Moore was a civil engineer working for the Lone Star Gas company.

Eagle Pass — Eagle Garage moved to remodeled building at corner Adams and Rio Grande streets.

Girl, 19, Held in Second Slaying

Helen Spence Eaton, above, a divorcee, is only 19, but she is facing her second charge of murder, following the death of Jim Bohots, well-to-do restaurant owner, at Dewitt, Ark. Mrs. Eaton is also charged with the slaying of Jack Worls, 22, as he was being tried for the murder of her father a year ago. She has been motherless since infancy.

Course to Begin Sunday Evening

All teachers and officers, as well as those who wish to take the course whether they occupy any official position in the Sunday school or not, are invited to meet Sunday afternoon at the First Presbyterian church at 3 o'clock. Miss Kate Payne Owen, of San Antonio, will begin a class at that time teaching "Organization and administration of the Sunday school." Miss Owen is a graduate of Northwestern university, a successful teacher of English for several years in high school and for the past six years director of religious education in the Presbytery of Western Texas. Those who desire to take the course can secure text-books either from Mr. E. P. Crawford or from Rev. J. Stuart Pearce.

"I like a Fair Fighter"

THAT'S one of the things I like most about Chesterfields... the attitude of the people who make them. They positively lean over backwards to be fair and square.

"I've been watching their advertisements for years. And do you know the thing that struck me most forcibly? They're so reasonable! Just a plain straightforward statement of facts. No wild claims... Nothing that's hard to believe!

"I wouldn't want to be a competitor of Chesterfield! They make too good a cigarette! I really believe they're the mildest I ever tasted.

"I can smoke Chesterfields any hour of the day or night... They're so mild, I don't even bother to keep track of how many I've smoked. They must be purer, too... they certainly taste better to me!"
