BILLIONS OF GOLD IN CALIFORNIA.

For years California has been advertising sunshine. Now the publicity agents of the Golden Coast state are advertising gold—gold said to be under the surface of the earth. State Mineralogist Walter Bradley is the big ace of the publicity men. He declares that more gold remains hidden in the earth of California today than has been mined in the state since gold mining began in 1849. Indeed, Col. Bradley is telling it to the world that most engineers believe that at least two billion dollars worth of gold—half the amount of gold held in United States banks—remains in California soil awaiting lucky miners.

Is this a hint that the California tourist crop of 1933 is expected to hit a new high level?

It appears that Pres. Roosevelt made a great mistake when he put over his tree planting plan to furnish labor to an army of the unemployed. He should have turned the recruits loose in the placer fields of the Golden Coast state and made it possible to increase the gold reserves of the nation by an additional two billion dollars.

Sen. William Gibbs McAdoo should have kept his ear closer to the California earth surface. McAdoo is a very wise man. He never sleeps at the switch, but he missed the two billions said to be under the thin surface of his adopted state. Now a wild cry will issue from the throats of thousands—"California, here I come."

FINANCIAL AID FOR VALLEY CONTROL.

A Washington correspondent in his daily review of events predicts inclusion of the lower Rio Grande valley flood control project in Pres. Roosevelt's $3,000,000,000 public works program appears almost certain, following Secy. Cordell Hull's recommendation that the proposed emergency work be approved by Budget Director Lewis Douglas for incorporation in the program.

The budget commissioner has indicated that he is ready to accept the proposed project. According to the plans outlined, approximately $1,000,000 would be spent immediately to complete the emergency flood protection of the valley, with future expenditures to bring the total cost to approximately $4,700,000.

Self-liquidating projects are the ones which would be put across in the public works program. These projects afford employment to labor at living wages "until good times roll in again," and in addition to this it will be money well invested.

CHAIN STORES AND RECEIVERSHIPS.

The supreme court of the United States has ruled that federal district courts must refrain from appointing ancillary receivers in various localities for chain stores and similar large enterprises when they become insolvent unless they obtain the consent of the court in which original bankruptcy proceedings were instituted and then only with the consent of the receivers appointed by the original court.

Another ruling affected Texans. The court of last resort decided against the Texas Railroad commission which had sought to regulate motor carriers transporting goods from ports to the interior. This activity, the higher court agreed with a three judge federal court which had already ruled, was an extension of interstate and foreign commerce not subject to state jurisdiction.

We do not know where state jurisdiction begins but we do know where it ends. The last word has been said.

DEWEY HAS A TAX PLAN.

Prof John Dewey, known to Washington correspondents and the American world as president of The People's Lobby, has sent a new taxation plan from his workshop. He has asked the president to recommend that "congress impose an annual tax of at least one per cent upon the full assessed value of all taxable lands in the United States, exclusive of sub-soil wealth, or improvement on an in land."

Philosopher Dewey, exclusive of the pink intelligentsia, believes his plan would yield a revenue of between $850,000,000 and $900,000,000 to the federal government, "thereby making possible the repeal of most burdensome consumption taxes." Well, if the Dewey plan succeeded, no doubt the farmer, the real honest-to-God farmer, would be tickled to death. It would be the last straw to break his back.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

One with a social constitution as delicate as mine hesitates to mention it. The subject is considered taboo as a topic for polite conversation. The shady reputation that a perfectly good malady has endured dates from the period when the bath-tub was a luxury and nobody but an aristocrat took his regular Saturday night. The common clay scratched for his reason that scabies were regarded more healthful than soap and water. They had naive ideas of what the skin could stand in those days. Now scratching is a luxury, let him deny who will. It took a bacillus to convince the aristocrat. But instead of being grateful he is embarrassed.

Of course the itch is caused by a bug. Why a bug that nibbles on the epidermis should be considered deplorable in relation to its cousin who thrives on the innards of a man is more than I can figure out. I have seen some people as dolorously happy over an attack of unpronounceable syllables as a peacock is proud of a new tail-feather. Raise a tingling pimple on the hide of any one of them and he shuts himself up like an outcast.

Yet I remember an epidemic not so long ago when a person that didn't have the squirms was an exception to the rule. It happened in the best regulated families. A parlor social resembled a convention of amateur contortionists. It got to be so that if anybody sat perfectly still the rest of the folks thought there was something the matter with him. Curiously enough, so positive was the stigma of the itch that nobody dared ask his neighbor how said neighbor's itch was getting along for the reason that the questioner might be questioned in turn with embarrassing results. Everybody just sat tight and tried to look pleasant out of the corners of the eyes and talk about the weather. But every once and a while you'd see somebody with an Edna May Oliver expression and you'd know that some mighty gratifying results were being obtained on the sly. The drug stores did a rushing business in hair brushes—the stiff variety—in those days. It got to the point where it was considered good etiquette to hang one of the brushes on the guest bed.

The reason for broaching this subject is to add to the laical science of itch treatment. A former boss of mine, who writes one of the outstanding personal journalism columns of Texas, "The Tactless Texan", otherwise known as Gene Howe, of Amarillo, has already attacked the problem by giving his readers some domestic advice. This ought to canonize Howe as at least daring social martyrdom. It provides the precedent I've been waiting for.

week repeat the performance of rubbing in the ointment for three nights. Then bury the suit of underwear.

"I'll guarantee you'll be shed of the itch. And then boil the bed sheets and the towels and hang out your clothing and air it thoroughly or you may become re-infected. And understand I'm not joking about this. It's a remedy that never fails to conquer the itch."

That's good advice. But if Howe had ever lived in east Texas where pokeberries are a weed he would realize that his remedy is only fifty per cent good. They never have the itch out there. When one of the younger generation gets too eye-browish for the family circle and comes home with a case of scratches from mingling with the upper crust "Ma" doesn't waste any time. She grabs a mattock and goes prospecting down the cotton patch fence-row. In a little while back she comes with a lap full of brown roots that she dumps in a boiling kettle. Then she fills a wash tub with warm water, pours about a quart of the greenest liquor you ever saw out of the kettle into the tub and gives the prodigal his washing orders.

In about five minutes, or less, you hear sounds as of a rushing and mighty wind. There is more clawing going on to the square inch than there was in a whole mile of French trenches. It is theoretically and practically impossible for two hands with ten fingers to cover all the anatomical territory that demands attention. Talk about your hula-hula dancers. A poke-rooted itch patient would make the premier danseuse of a Hawaiian ballet look like a Mendelssohn sonata in slow motion.

Multiply a good case of west Texas chiggers by a couple of billion or so and you have a faint idea of what poke root does to the itch. Every bug makes for air and brings out a pimple. The patient looks like a French beaded bag in clear claret. That's fifty per cent. The sulphur and lard is the rest. And it works. It's like dropping into heaven after the other place. And it doesn't take three applications either.

DEPARTMENT STORE SALES ENCOURAGING

AUSTIN, May 19 — Many encouraging features appear in the report on sales and credit ratios just completed by the University of Texas bureau of business research, on the basis of reports from 90 Texas department and clothing stores.

"Records on sales by months are influenced considerably at this time of the year because of differences in the date of Easter," the University Bureau's report said. "But cumulative sales for the year-to-date including April are free of this influence and give a truer picture of the showing which has been made for the year so far by the reporting stores. And this comparison is more than encouraging."

"The decline in cumulative sales for the year-to-date as compared with the corresponding period last year was cut down from a drop of 21 per cent at the close of March to a decline of 16 per cent for the first four months of the year. Furthermore, the 90 reporting stores, sixteen had greater sales during the first four months of 1933 than in the corresponding period in 1932—a record as welcome as it is unusual (during the 'depression'). It is necessary to look back to 1930 before finding a similarly good showing."

Smaller Decline

"The decline of only 16 per cent in Texas sales for the first four months of the year as compared with a year ago compares favorably with the drop of 22 per cent reported for the entire United States by the Federal Reserve Board."

"Although Port Arthur has the best record for the year-to-date with sales for the first four months of the year showing an increase of 2 per cent over the sales during the corresponding period in 1932, several other cities also made enviable showings: Austin had a decline of only 2.6 per cent; San Angelo, only 5.3 per cent; Abilene 5.9 per cent; Houston, 6.9 per cent, and Lubbock, 7.1 per cent."

"Men's clothing stores shows declines in cumulative sales for the first four months of the year of only 11.8 per cent, while the large department stores made the second best showing among the groups of stores included with a decline of 15.3 per cent."

"A much more liquid condition of credit departments for April than in the corresponding month a year ago is indicated by the report on credit ratios for 66 Texas clothing and department stores! Whereas the ratio of credit sales to net sales declined from 58.6 per cent last year to 56.9 per cent this year, showing a larger share of cash business, collection increased relatively so that the ratio of collections to outstandings rose from 20.5 per cent for April, 1932, to 30.1 per cent, the highest for the year so far."

Horses Principal Topic for Firemen

FORT WORTH, May 19—Horses, rather than arson laws, motor equipment and water pressure, were a principal topic for discussion when firemen from central stations throughout the Southwest met here in annual convention.

"The real spirit of fire-fighting was lost when horses were taken to pastures," believes Charles F. Hafey, Little Rock, Ark., who spent 331 years of his 41 years in the fire-fighting service as chief.

"The motor-drawn equipment took away all spirit of rivalry. The competition between station houses is mechanical instead of personal nowadays," lamented the gray-haired retired fire-fighter.

All the old-timers agreed, however, the changing, speeding fire engine is here to stay—until fires are fought from airplanes.

Love Scenes Prohibit Body Odor Permit No M. S. Either!

New way discovered to end body odor at its source. Stale perspiration curds now reached by deep-pore cleansing and instantly removed!

Body-odor can kill romance. So can highly scented soaps that betray their purpose! A new and better way to prevent offense is by deep-pore cleansing. Here is why:

Every specialist knows that objectionable body odor does not come from fresh perspiration but from stale perspiration deep in the pores.

Stale perspiration contains calcium, salt and particles of fat. The thick and sticky lather of most ordinary toilet soaps is unsuited chemically to mix with this waste material and disperse it. Instead, it hardens into clogging curds!

That's why deep-pore cleansing is needed to remove the objectionable curds—and it is a scientific fact that there is only one way to accomplish this. Kirk's Coco Castile—being a 100% pure vegetable oil soap—mixes with the particles of perspiration curds, loosens them, then rinses out completely. Thus it ends the cause of body odor instantly. Ordinary toilet soaps—even though laden with offensive M. S. (medicine smell)—can merely hide the body odor; they cannot end it.

Try Kirk's Coco Castile today. Feel the invigorating effect of its deep-pore cleansing action. Experience the thrill of a clean, odorless body. The cake is half again larger, half again heavier than average toilet soaps—an exceptional bargain. Be sure to ask for Kirk's by name.

GULF COMPANY PUTS NEW DEAL IN OPERATION

Here's one of the most remarkable stories, as well as one that is of special interest to all the people of Texas. Three years ago the Gulf Refining company engineers made a discovery of revolutionary importance to the oil industry. A discovery so advanced, so significant, that it made possible a finer, longer-lived motor oil than the industry had ever seen!

This discovery was an utterly new refining process—the now-famous Alchlor Process, exclusive with Gulf. The oil made by it is called Gulfpride.

At first it was possible to produce only limited quantities of this new and remarkable oil. But so amazingly outstanding was its quality that—utterly without advertising and publicity—its fame spread throughout the United States and all foreign nations. It came into universal demand wherever the finest motor lubrication was sought.

Gulfpride has now proved itself beyond question the finest motor oil in the world. This oil is manufactured in the Gulf refinery in Port Arthur, Texas. It has established seventeen world's records! It has surpassed every set of specifications ever issued for a motor oil, including U. S. Army, U. S. Navy and British government.

Gulfpride is now in demand in all corners of the earth and shipped to all points from Port Arthur, Texas, where it is manufactured.

The current extensive advertising campaign of the Gulf Refining company now appearing in Texas newspapers is stressing this oil and, too, the fact that Gulf stations sell three grades of oil and gasoline at three different prices, ranging from the buying power of the motorist who wants a low priced gasoline or oil, but wants the most possible value for the money, to the motorist who wants the very best regardless of cost.

Will Rogers can be heard on the air every Sunday evening on the Gulf Refining company radio program at 1:00 p. m. and Irvin S. Cobb on Wednesday and Friday evenings at the same hour. A weekly comic paper is distributed free at all Gulf stations.

BILIOUSNESS

"My trouble was biliousness—the whole spring and summer I was almost down, felt so sluggish, tired and dizzy," writes Mr. S. W. Taylor, of Joplin, Mo. "I remembered that at one time Black-Draught had helped me. I went to the drug store and bought a package and began taking it at night. After then, I felt as well as anyone. I am full of pep and get out on the farm and do a real day's work, so I feel that I owe my good health to the use of Black-Draught."

NAVY BUILDING DIMS HOPE FOR ARMAMENT CUT

PARIS, May 19 — American hopes for reduction of naval armaments before 1936, when existing agreements expire, appeared futile today in view of naval building activity throughout the world.

A United Press survey revealed that France, Britain, Germany and Russia were speeding up their building programs, while Italy was renovating her fleet.

This activity in Europe coincides with the authorization of a huge naval program in Japan and the U. S. navy department's proposal strength.

The French super-cruiser Dunkerque, upon which work is going forward at Brest, is the most formidable unit in the 1933 program of any nation.

It will displace 26,500 tons, have a speed of 30 knots and fire a broadside of nine 13-inch guns. The vessel is designed to be the most efficient fighting ship afloat.

The French ministry of marine has also contracts for four cruisers of 7,500 tons each to be known as "furious fighters." They will have a speed of 31 knots, mount nine 6-inch guns and four torpedo tubes and carry planes and catapults.

The cruisers will be used in the Mediterranean to protect communications between France and North-Africa against a possible thrust by Italy.

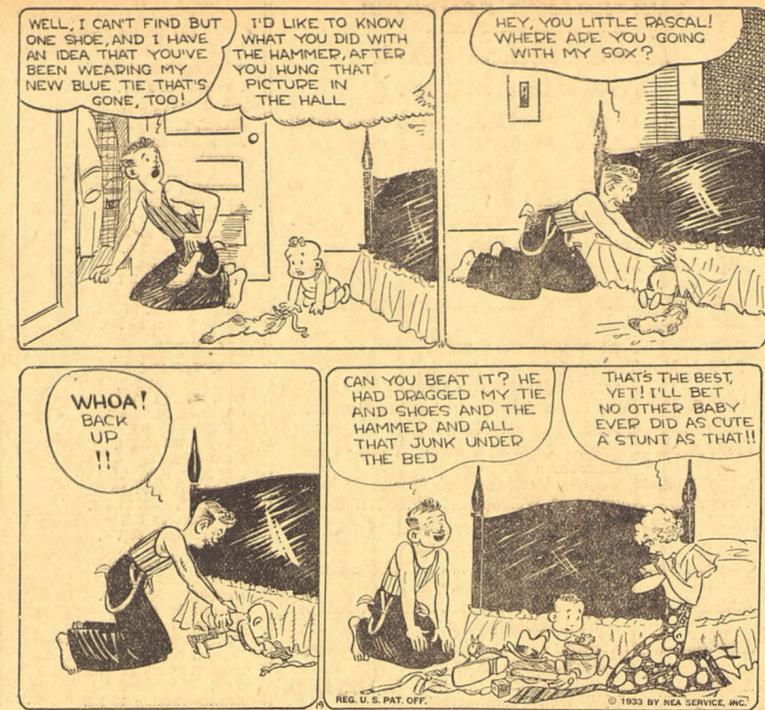

The British naval estimates for 1933 provide for the expenditure of $0,476,300 pounds, an increase of 3,093,700 pounds over last year.

The British building program includes four cruisers, one squadron leader destroyer and eight smaller destroyers, three submarines and five sloops. The cruisers are the final installment of the replacement program authorized by the London naval treaty and are due to be completed by the end of 1936.

Germany's naval program comprises four armored cruisers, or "pocket-battleships" to replace cruisers.

The Deutschland has gone into active service, and the Admiral Scheer was launched several weeks ago.

Construction of a third "pocket-battleship" is under way and the fourth will be started in 1934. Four reserve destroyers will also be built before 1936.

The Soviet Union has shown its intention to enter the building race by negotiating with the Italian government for the construction of a 3,800 ton marine and four cruisers of 7,000 tons each.

The submarine would be the largest in the world, dwarfing the 2,500 ton Surfcoat of the French navy.

Together with the cruisers it probably would be used in the Far East.

According to information from Rome, Italy is modernizing her four dreadnoughts—the Dullio, Doria, Cavour Cesare. All these ships were launched before the World War, but will be completely refitted. Their speed will be raised from 22 to 25 or 26 knots and their gunpower increased.

DARLING FOOL

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MONNIE O'DARE, in love with DAN CARDIGAN, local heir to a fortune, believes she is losing him to SANDRA LAWRENCE, who has pretended to be Monnie's friend. In spite of the attentions of CHARLES EUSTACE, handsome newcomer, Monnie pines for Dan. After neglecting her for some time Dan again seems interested. At a big party which Sandra gives, Dan is missing. There is a scene between Sandra and HETTY, her maid, who believes Sandra is "vamping" JAMES, the chauffeur. Monnie and KAY, her younger sister, have been trying to keep secret from their mother the fact that their brother, BILL, is in love with a married woman. MISS O'DARE learns this through a neighbor's gossip.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XX

"IT'S all—pretty unsatisfactory," Monnie murmured, pleating the folds of her white scarf.

"I know that—I know that," Dan protested, eyeing her uneasily. They were seated on the bank of the river under the low hanging branches of the willows. The day was clear and hot. No haze dimmed the imperturbable blue of the sky. Monnie's white linen looked cool in the glimmer.

"It's uncomfortable for me," Monnie went on, speaking quickly, eagerly, as if to justify her complaint. "Mother wants to know where I'm going and I tell her. She doesn't say anything—but of course I know what she feels."

"Well, what does she feel?" Dan's tone was almost sullen, although he tried to keep a bantering note in it.

"That—that I oughtn't to go on like this, seeing you all the time, being serious about it," the girl explained with difficulty. "I know we're engaged, Dan. That part of it's all right! But so long as you want to keep it in the dark, well, it makes it so much harder for me. You know as well as I do how tongue wag. And we've been going places together for a long time, Dan," she reminded him, trying to speak lightly.

"It's nobody else's business!" he declared. "You know—and I know. Whose affair is it, anyway? My mother'd raise the roof if she knew about it. All I want is to keep things dark until I come into Uncle Frank's money. That's in January, right after my birthday. Then we can walk off and tell them all to go to—!" He reached over and drew her toward him, his tones muffled. "Monnie, sweets, let's forget all about them. We're wasting our time talking about things that don't matter. Let's talk about ourselves."

INWARDLY the girl sighed. Their discussions always ended this way. Dan's kiss stopped her protests. While she was with him she, too, could believe that their affairs were distinctly their own. But when she left him, when she met curious, prying friends, she longed for the right to tell them her glorious secret. "Dan Cardigan and I are engaged."

The joyful comments, the pleased, envious, interested looks—all these would be part of being formally engaged. Notes, little presents, the right to be seen everywhere with Dan, his acknowledged choice. Best of all her mother's sense of security. She sighed aloud now, thinking of all this.

Dan turned to look at her. "What's the matter now?" he demanded. "I thought we had it all thrashed out?" He was frowning. Monnie, anxious to keep him in good temper, flashed him a reassuring smile.

"Just happy," she lied. "It's been a wonderful day. Let's gather up the things now and go along. I want to pick some raspberries."

But all the rest of the long, golden afternoon her mind kept harking back to the conversation. Dan was perfectly right about the whole thing, she would assure herself. And yet—and yet she would be willing to give up everything, all the brilliant hopes of Uncle Frank's money and the rest, if Dan would say to her, joyously, some afternoon, "Let's dash over to High Springs and get married!"

He had, once before, but he hadn't really meant it. He would have been terribly surprised if Monnie had taken him at his word. Now she would give anything in the world to hear him say those words. She would take the supreme chance, the chance of a battle with poverty, to be the acknowledged wife of Daniel Cardigan, junior. No more meeting Dan by stealth, so that the argus-eyed Mrs. Cardigan would not hear of their renewed devotion. No more eluding the subject, blushing and stammering, when people asked her about Dan.

"I know you love me, Dan," she would explain patiently. "I understand. Of course it's all right. In January—in January—"

It would not be long until January. They could wait. They were both young. But this was high summer. The days and nights were achingly beautiful. Never did Monnie see the moon riding high but that she longed to share the sight with Dan. She wanted to share homely things with him, too. Breakfasts and casual rides in the country. All the sweet privileges of the young wife seemed marvelous to her. It was difficult sometimes to believe that all this would be theirs a little later.

Meantime she had to be patient. CHARLES EUSTACE came to the house rather often these days. Monnie, resting, limp and relaxed, in the porch swing, would hear a light step on the walk, would look up to see Charles, handsome, dark, smiling, towering over her. She could be sure of this man. They could talk, simply, deeply, for hours. Charles, she felt certain, was enormously attracted to Kay. Of course, it was absurd—Kay was not yet 17—10 years his junior. And yet, what a splendid thing it would be for her little sister if this man were to want her for his wife! He had everything—looks, family, money, what the world called "background."

"He's fascinating," Monnie acknowledged to herself when alone. "I like him so much. But love—no, I could never love Charles."

It was just as well, she reminded herself, that Charles was attracted to Kay. Kay was sparkling, animated. She made a splendid foil for his dark and slightly mysterious good looks.

"He," averred Kay one night, discussing him, "had some sort of heavy love affair in France last year."

"How do you know?"

Kay shrugged. "Lib Waterman told Rissy. Rissy doesn't know the details but part of it got into the papers."

Monica couldn't have explained the queer little tug at her heartstrings. Charles involved in an affair with a woman—important enough to have got into the papers! Absurd! She didn't like it.

"I don't believe it," she said stoutly. "Rissy talks such nonsense and so does Lib."

"Well, I don't know," Kay told her carelessly. "He always sheers away from the subject of his stay abroad, if you notice it." Monica had observed this. But she refused to credit Rissy's gossip. It all sounded so—well, so shady. She just didn't believe it.

KAY gave her a sidelong glimmering look at the end of this discussion.

"Anybody'd think you were annoyed to find that Charles had ever looked at anyone else," she said in a small, child's voice. This Monica found extremely irritating.

"I think that's perfect nonsense," she said. "I never heard anything so silly." Her cheeks, she discovered, were hot—were blazing. She felt furious with Kay—with everybody.

"I can't see what possible difference it makes to you," Kay giggled. "As far as Charles is concerned you're the original Ice Maiden."

Monica stared at her. Was it true—was she completely indifferent to this distinguished young man who lent her books and walked with her under the trees and told her amusing stories in his lazy cultivated voice?

"He's been awfully nice to me," she said. "Naturally I hate to see his not—not all I thought him."

She couldn't understand why Kay smiled so meaningfully. It was odd how Charles' name cropped up in conversation these days. When she met Dan that night at the turn of the road where he had waited for her in the summer dusk he said, "Doesn't that fellow hang around an awful lot nowadays?"

Monnie, thinking of other things, frankly stared. "Who?" Grimly Dan indicated Charles' car, at that very moment stopping at the O'Dares' gate some hundred rods away.

Monnie was glad of the darkness, hiding her flush.

"Dan, don't be a goose. He comes to see the family." "Expect me to believe that?" But Dan's tone was milder. "He's interested in Kay. He's been wonderful to her. Dr. Waterman has recommended her for a job in the library. She's starting next Monday and is wild with joy."

Dan said nothing but he seemed, for the moment, mollified.

Later, lying awake in the little room under the hot roof, listening to Kay's even breathing, hearing Bill creep up the stairs, Monnie found herself thinking of Charles Eustace—of what Kay had said. She turned and twisted from side to side. She could not seem to get to sleep. After all, what did it matter what Charles had been in the past, what adventures he had known? He was nothing to her. She was engaged to Dan Cardigan—although no one knew it.

OLD COIN CACHE FOUND
VISBY, Sweden, May 19 — A cache of ancient gold coins has been found near here, on the Swedish island of Gotland, in the Baltic Sea. Some of the coins date back to 1411 and it is believed that they were buried in the earth around 1470 by Ivar Axelsson Tott, a powerful feudal lord of the island.
