

NEW COMMISSION MAKES BOW TONIGHT

Scores Frequent Lake Today as Fishing Season Opens

WEEK-END IS DUE TO BE BUSY TIME

The first day of the open season on game fishing found Lake Cisco today the mecca of scores of Isaac Walton devotees who came not only from Cisco but from points as distant as Fort Worth. The day, cloudy, was ideal for fishing from that standpoint but recent heavy rains had an unfavorable influence in rendering the water a little too murky for artificial lure.

Experienced fishermen were of the opinion that minnow fishing would prove the most successful method of luring bass and crappie. A large crowd was on hand at the lake early this morning taking advantage of the first hours of the open season and this weekend was expected to be a busy one at the resort with a general influx of sportsmen from outside the city.

Among those who arrived last night to spend the weekend here were Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Lane, of Fort Worth.

The city commission is due to set a season rate for fishing permits within a short while, probably at a meeting to be called tomorrow morning. The retiring commission took no action on this matter, leaving it for the determination of the incoming administration. The rate heretofore for a season family permit has been $5.00.

FIRST EFFORT TO QUELL WELL DUE SATURDAY

GLADEWATER, May 1. — Final preparation was made today for the initial attempt to blast out the flame spouting from the Sinclair company's Cole No. 1 gusher.

A heavy charge of nitroglycerin will be set off tomorrow at the mouth of the well where eight men were fatally burned. If the effort is a success the oil and gas pressure will be forced back into the well and the 200-foot pillar of fire will die before the fuel again gushes upward.

More than 50 workmen, clad in asbestos suits as protection against the heat, cleared debris from the fire area yesterday and laid out plans for the fight against the wild well which continued spouting flame 200 feet into the air and pouring billions of smok: over the countryside.

M. M. and Floyd Kinley, famous Tulsa, Oklahoma, oil fire fighters, arrived in Tyler by plane yesterday with 110 quarts of nitroglycerin to be used against the well. They went from Tyler to the well.

HERE'S CLOSEUP OF SANDINO, WHO HOOVER SAYS WILL BE CAPTURED

This illustrated map of Nicaragua shows the scenes of some of the major clashes between General Sandino and U. S. Marines, as well as other incidents that form the background of President Hoover's determination that he shall be captured. At the left is a closeup of Sandino on his favorite mount.

General Augustino Sandino, brought into the public eye again by President Hoover's recent bitter denunciation of him as "a cold-blooded murderer" with the added statement that he will soon be captured "and brought to justice," is the most colorful figure who has crossed the pages of American history since General Pershing invaded Mexico in his attempt to capture Pancho Villa.

For five years Sandino, with only a handful of motley followers who sail forth from the jungles of Nicaragua, has defied Uncle Sam's government of 120,000,000 persons, in addition to that of Nicaragua. His men figured in numerous bloody battles with U. S. Marines on duty in that country.

Sandino has been a thorn in the side of the United States ever since he emerged to prominence in the revolution of 1926. After two years of sporadic fighting, Sandino retired to comparable obscurity in 1928, but recent engagements in which eight Americans were killed have again focused attention on this picturesque warrior and brought forth announcement from the White House that the national guard of Nicaragua will "clean up Sandino and his fellow bandits."

This unusual fighter, who almost single-handed has combatted two nations, is said to be uneducated but is a born leader of men and an exceptionally clever tactician.

His followers are extremely loyal. Many of his soldiers are mere youths.

When Sandino took over American gold mines in Nicaragua, he called the workers together and paid them all of their back wages. He decided not to destroy the mine at San Albino because it might prove useful to his country, but he did wreck another mine when he found four tons of dynamite stored there.

Where Sandino obtains his arms is a mystery. Some come from Mexico and others are

This route will enable patrons at Sedwick, Moran and Albany to obtain much faster mail service than they have received since the M. K. and T. railroad changed its night trains to day trains.

This star route is that which the Cisco chamber of commerce fostered some time ago so that the towns named could secure overnight service. Under the previous condition their mail was delayed 24 hours in Cisco.

Contract for carrying the route was awarded by the government to an Albany bidder. He will make one round trip each day under a schedule to be announced by the postoffice shortly.

FORMER CISCO OFFICER DIES AT SANTONE

L. D. McCoy, San Antonio city detective, and a constable and police officer in Cisco about 1910 or 1912, died in a San Antonio infirmary early Wednesday morning, according to a story in the San Antonio Evening News.

Following is the paper's account of his death:

A long career as a capable and intrepid peace officer came to an end in Santa Rosa Infirmary shortly after midnight with the death of City Detective Luther D. McCoy, who succumbed after a brief illness.

McCoy, who had been a member of the local police department since October, 1928, was taken to the hospital Saturday for an appendicitis operation. Peritonitis set in after the operation, complicated by pneumonia, and an emergency operation late Tuesday failed to save the veteran officer's life.

Regarded by his superiors as one of the most competent members of the detective bureau, McCoy came here from Wichita Falls in 1928, after having served for 14 years as a member of the Fort Worth and Wichita Falls police departments. His service in the North Texas cities was during the oil boom in that section, when an officer's work required a high order of courage and integrity.

McCoy was born in Gonzales county on January 10, 1890. He had spent most of his life in North Texas and Oklahoma before coming here in 1928.

Definite funeral arrangements had not been completed at noon, but it was announced the services would be held at 3:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon at the chapel of the Hagy & McCollum Undertaking Co.

McCoy is survived by his wife, Mrs. Anna McCoy; two sons, L. D. McCoy, Jr. and Garland McCoy, all of San Antonio; four brothers, Raymond McCoy of San Antonio, Charles McCoy of Corpus Christi, Dan McCoy of Spur and John McCoy of Eastland, county, Texas, and two sisters, Mrs. Fannie White and Mrs. M. Davis, both of Eastland county.

PROGRAM AT CITY HALL AT 8 O'CLOCK

A new municipal administration for Cisco was inaugurated this morning in a simple ceremony in the office of retiring Mayor J. M. Williamson. A new mayor and two new commissioners were sworn into office in the presence of two representatives of the Cisco Daily News. They were J. T. Berry, mayor, and Joe Clements and J. T. Elliott, commissioners. The oath of office was administered by Mr. Williamson as his last official act before returning to the ranks of private citizenship he left 16 years ago to become the chief executive of this city. Elliott and Clements succeed Crigger Paschall and Luther McCrea, street and police commissioners respectively.

Tonight at 8 o'clock in the city hall the new administration will make its formal bow to the public. There will be addresses by the retiring and incoming mayors, members of the new and old city commissions. So far as is known this will be the first public inaugural of a municipal administration here.

Such an inaugural was decided upon by the city commission some time prior to the election April 7 and a committee of the commission, including none of the candidates for offices, was named to formulate a program. Principal items on this program will be a review of his 16 years of service as mayor by Mr. Williamson and an address by Mayor J. T. Berry.

Organization

The colored Methodist Episcopal church was given permission to erect for religious use only a building on a lot near the tourist park in east Cisco owned by the city.

STEPHENSON BILL IS UP FOR ACTION

AUSTIN, May 1. — A new phase of the fight over a proposed state road bond issue of $212,000,000 was reached today in the Texas legislature when the house took up the Coker-Stephenson bill for a road expense refund to counties without a bond issue.

Stephenson claimed for it that it will bring the tax relief demanded for counties more effectively than the plans proposed by bond supporters.

His bill calls for a direct appropriation of $6,000,000 a year out of gasoline taxes and motor vehicle registration fees to pay interest and set up a reserve to retire county road bond issues.

If the Stephenson bill passes, no need will exist for $112,000,000 of the proposed state bond issue.

EXPERTS HOLD DEAD BOY IS NOT DAUPHIN

By RALPH HEINZEN
United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS, May 1. — One hundred and thirty-five years after the disappearance of the Dauphin, Louis XVII, French scientists have practically concluded that the boy who died from ill-treatment at the hands of his cobler-jailer in the Temple was not the Bourbon baby, son of Marie Antoinette and Louis XVI.

If this conclusion is definitely established and the Republican government accepts the verdict, definite status will be given to many of the claims of families all over the world to be the true descendants of the blonde little Charles Louis, Bourbon Prince.

Theoretically and legally, Louis XVII, forgotten and neglected, was supposed to have died in the Temple, June 8, 1795. That, at least is the entry on the register of the revolutionary Republic. Actually Napoleon and his successors and the Republic have never believed that story. Millions of Frenchmen today believe that the Dauphin was smuggled from his prison and escaped.

Historical Fact
It is a historical fact that Charles Louis was brought from Versailles to Paris by the revolutionists and locked up with his parents and his sister, Madame Royale, in the Temple. Later the boy was placed under the charge of a Jacobin shoemaker named Simon who treated him cruelly, shamelessly and taught the boy foul language and obscene revolutionary songs and made of him a drunkard at five years.

Mrs. Atkins, a wealthy Englishwoman, plotted to get his freedom. She says in her memoirs that, the Marquis de Feneoy aided her, and that the Marquis' valet, Gamin, succeeded in getting Simon's job.

It is her story that as Simon and his wife left the Temple they wheeled their possessions with them in a cart and the young prince was hidden in the lead. The deaf and dumb son of a Normandy tailor, Hervagault, was put into the Temple and pointed out as Louis XVII. At night the boy hid in the walled-up cell on June 8, 1795, and was buried in the church of St. Marguerite under the name of the Dauphin, Louis XVII.

When St. Marguerite was destroyed under Napoleon III in 1853, the bones were dug up and subjected to a thorough study by the best doctors of the day, who decided that the boy who died in prison could not have been Charles Louis. That is the basis of the present inquiry.

Measurements Checked
Scientists have spent recent months in checking over the measurements of the remains as given 73 years ago and they have about agreed that the earlier conclusion was correct and that the boy who died in prison could not have been the Prince.

That leaves the door open to the 37 different who have made known their claims to the French government.

Foremost were Jean Marie Hervagault, son of a Saint Lo tailor; Mathurin Bruneau, son of a cobler, who went to America and left descendants; a Sashinawa Indian who was brought to France by the military officer Williams; Francis Henri Hebert, so-called Duc de Richemont who was well paid to drop his claims; and a Potsdam watchmaker, Karl Wilhelm Naumderf.

Mystery has surrounded the ends of many of the pretenders, and poisoning is believed to have caused the death of Naumderf, the "Duc de Richemont." Jean Hervagault, cobbler Simon valet Gamin and Hebert.

FOUR CITIES SEEK W. T. C. C. 1932 SESSION

LUBBOCK, May 1. — With four cities having announced their entrance into the contest for the 1932 West Texas chamber of commerce convention, and all of them already waving aggressive campaigns, indications are that this feature of the thirteenth annual convention are that this feature of the thirteenth annual convention of the regional organization here May 14, 15 and 16, will be one of considerable interest.

Sweetwater and Mineral Wells, both candidates last year at Abilene, when this city was the meeting for this year, are again bidding for the convention. Amarillo, host city to the big conference in 1926 is back again losing its claims on the marvelous growth of its population since the organization last met there and Dallas, although not in the West Texas territory is energetically trying to get the convention, in order, officials of the chamber of commerce, in that city say, to get West Texas better acquainted with them.

Voting in the convention on selecting the 1932 convention host will be by towns. Each community affiliated with the West Texas chamber being allowed one vote for each paid up membership in the body, and no town to have over 300 votes.

Briand Rose to World Fame From Humble Merchant's Home in Nantes

By RALPH HEINZEN
United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS, May 1. — Aristide Pierre Henri Briand was born to be a seaman or a merchant, in a humble dwelling in the busy Rue du Marché aux Nantes, Loire Inferieure, March 23, 1862. His father was Pierre Guillaume Briand, Breton son of generations of hardy Bretons, royalist, modest merchant. His mother, near Magdalene Boucheau, born of a Vendee family, likewise a royalist, was the only daughter in a family of farmer-folk. Both were staunch Roman Catholic families, though among the ancestors of each were Huguenots of La Rochelle.

This youngest of a trio of great statesmen which the Nantes region gave to France — before him were Waldeck-Rousseau and Clemenceau — began his education at the College of Saint Nazaire, his parents having moved there some time previously. Here under the tutelage of a certain Monsieur Gentry, the young Briand early displayed an aptitude for that passionate idealism which was to mark his life.

Passion for Reading
It was here, too, that the young Briand developed his passion for reading, alternating between the simple elegance of Racine's verse and the impassioned prose of Rousseau. Inspired by the latter, Briand prepared and delivered, at 17, a fiery polemic dedicated to Liberty which won him the prix d'honneur de discours francais at the Academie of Rennes.

Briand never forgot his years at Nantes. Until the latter phase of his education his thoughts had turned instinctively toward the sea, but the lure of the speaker's rostrum and the earnest opposition of his parents deterred him. Some time during this period of indecision Briand struck up an acquaintance with Jules Verne, and the incorrigible imaginalist must have urged his young friend to seek adventure, though often on their long promenades, their frequent visits to the Theatre Graslin, Verne despaired of ever properly interesting the other in his beloved Science.

But Jules Verne sailed away, young Briand returned to his neglected essays, and one day fishermen brought the body of his mother's brother from the sea. The nephew needed no stronger warning. His nearest venture was destined to be that of the young Frenchman whom Verne's fancy shipwrecked on a desert island, and whom, in his Deux Ans de Vacances, he called Briant, for the Briand of flesh and blood had long since chosen the law.

Lived in Latin Quarter
Thus he came, the gawkiest of provincials, to Paris. At the Faculte de Droit de Paris he worked hard for his license, but his life in the Latin quarter — was by no means all drudgery. Among his friends were Monselet, Gondeau, Sails, Rollinat, Andre Gill, the astounding Charles Cros, Hysmans. One famous night these student-adventurers descended upon Montmartre and founded the Chat Noir, which still remains to intrigue the tourist, though to be sure it is not the same Chat Noir.

Never the less, young Briand's penchant for politics was fed by the frequent barrangues with his able contemporaries, and later he came to know Ajalbert, Lucien Descaves, Gustave Geffroy, Mirbeau and many another writer who had to do with the founding of the Academie Goncourt.

Possessed of his license, Briand was obliged to sweat none too patiently through his apprenticeship as a clerk before he got his first case. Once through this, he returned to Saint-Nazaire and announced him-taking careful notes and drawing diagrams as he went. This done, he loaded the parts into a wagon and drove the borrowed team home, assembling the press the evening he arrived, and doing such a good job of it that it turned out Democrats until 1900, printing, in its final year, the announcement of the formation of Briand's first cabinet.

Thus, at 22, Aristide Briand forsook the law for the editor's chair — in France the inevitable prelude to politics.

AFRICAN WARS LIKE ATHLETIC GAMES IN U. S.

CHICAGO, May 1. — War among the primitive African tribes is not serious business that it is among civilized nations. It would correspond to American athletic contests, according to two University of Chicago anthropologists recently returned after living a year in Nimrah, Liberia.

The men are Dr. George Herzog, research associate, and Charles G. Bloch, son of a Djabo chieftain, who ran away from his home 20 years ago and came to America to achieve a degree at the University. Their expedition was made to obtain an ethnological survey of the Djabo people.

"The native Africans play at war and cease hostilities when the fighting becomes furious," Dr. Herzog said. "Drums beat the war call and there is a great excitement as every member of the village marches off to war."

Drummer Cheer Leader
The drummer serves as a cheer leader and talks to the men in their own language as they march along. When the enemy is met, the players of both sides talk to each other, pretending complete ignorance as to the identity or intentions of the other tribe.

"Next the two armies mix informally, starting by arguing with each other, and then ending up by slaps and blows. When the horn blower sees that the emotions are well worked up, he blows the signal to reform and the two armies engage in earnest battle with their bush knives. Horn players report the progress of the battle and sing the praises of individuals who are performing deeds of valor and encouraging them to greater achievements.

"When one side decides it is beaten, it retreats to its village. The enemy does not pursue into the town, for it knows that the war will be very bloody if it forces its rival to fight in defense of its hearth and home."

Puzzled by Our Wars
"One thing that puzzled the Africans about our great war was our failure to run home when the fighting became so terrible."

Bloch said the primitive Africans still believe the white man a witch of great power but they have learned it is not safe to harm any European. They could not comprehend why the white man wants to live in huge cities where he can know only a few people and they were puzzled how we could get along with only one wife, the explorers said.

Bloch's return was widely heralded by his tribe because they were in need of an educated representative to carry on negotiations before the Liberian government in a land dispute with a neighboring tribe.

TEXAS FACTS FOR TEXANS.

William C. Edwards announces the passing out of existence of the Public Service News, along with the Public Service Information Bureau which has directed its destinies for two and a half years. Mr. Edwards has made another connection. His Know Texas facts and figures have been appreciated by all Texas builders, including editors of Texas newspapers, heads of corporations, farmers who are interested in going forward along scientific lines, the managers of oil and gas companies, directors of textile institutions—in fact all men who are playing their parts on the stage of action. He will be missed. His bureau of information will be missed.

Texas has a pecan tree that yielded as high as 1053 pounds of nuts in one crop, that has given five million of its buds for the improvement of other trees and that gave California alone 100,000 buds this year. It is described by Will H. Mayes in a syndicated letter. It is known as the Jumbo Hollis tree and is located in San Saba county "whose citizens will vouch for the truth of the story as related."

Texas had the first artificial ice factory in the United States at Jefferson, built in 1873. A reminder that John Boyle, democratic leader and lawyer of San Antonio, is a native of Jefferson, Marion county, Texas. His father was one of the pioneer rail men of Texas. He was the inventor of artificial ice and built the first factory. He died and litigation followed involving the patent rights of his invention. His widow carried her case to the court of last resort—the supreme court of the United States where she won. John Boyles grew up, studied law and was admitted to practice in the courts of Texas before the final disposition of the case. All this is a matter of history and should be placed in the record.

Texas has 11 counties with areas of more than 2000 square miles—Brewster, Crockett, Culberson, Hudspeth, Jeff Davis, Pecos, Presidio, Reeves, Terrell, Val Verde and Webb. Texas has 1,323,774 families housed in 1,213,474 dwellings, according to the 1930 census.

A reminder that both branches of the Texas legislature adopted resolutions to relieve home owners from taxation. First, the senate adopted a resolution to submit a constitutional amendment to relieve all homesteads up to $5000 from state taxation. As for the house resolution it would relieve homesteads to the value of $2000. A glance at the record shows the vote was significant. It was 110 to 11 in the house and 27 to 4 in the senate.

Proponents of the measure are convinced that the amendment will carry by an overwhelming majority if submitted to the qualified voters of the commonwealth. While in session, why not submission of an amendment calling for repeal of the state ad valorem tax. Isn't this a commonwealth of one law for all and special privilege to none?

SPEAKING OF TEXAS GAS AND OIL.

We are told that consumption of natural gas in the United States has increased from 300 billion feet in 1906 to one trillion eight hundred billion feet in 1929; that Texas is now leading all the states in production of natural gas taking the lead from Oklahoma in 1930 with California, Louisiana and West Virginia following Oklahoma. Gigantic long distance pipelines are carrying the Texas natural gas fuel to the Great Lake cities, to the Rocky Mountain cities, to the cities of the midwest and elsewhere. We are told that East Texas continues to be a big play in the oil game. One company plans a 265 mile pipeline from the Rusk field to its properties in Texas. A 6000 barrel skimming plant costing $400,000 is planned for Tyler. Another 200 mile pipeline from the Lathrop area to the Gulf coast is projected "and each day sees more wells brought in, new areas coming into production, new wild cat ventures starting in on unproved territory" and the price of crude falling and gasoline price wars on in many states of the American union.

The News of Marshall, Harrison county, publishes a map showing recent extension and improvements made by the Southwestern Gas and Electric company, necessitated "by the amazing development of the oil field in the territory served by that company, Texas headquarters of which are at Texarkana. Extensions of lines are being completed to serve the principal oil fields and the entire field is being covered." According to the petroleum experts and statisticians the oil and gas industry in the near future, will take second place in Texas in point of investment and export values. Now why shouldn't Texas, in coming time, be the greatest of industrial states?

WOMAN SPENDS THE MONEY.

A Washington correspondent is responsible for the following:

Women spend 80 cents out of every dollar spent in the purchase of clothing and dry goods, generally outranking men in this respect by a ratio of four to one, according to a detailed analysis just completed of the Gulf Southwest distribution study of dry goods retailing.

Texas and adjacent Southwestern states are embraced in the trade territory covered by a survey made by the department of commerce. Man was made to work. He appears to be on the job. His chief duty is to buy clothes for woman.

DEBUNKING BYRD

The apparent effort of Anthony Fokker to "debunk" Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, aerial conqueror of both the North and South poles as well as trans-Atlantic flyer, is as surprising as it is futile. Commander Byrd himself seems to regard Fokker's book, "The Flying Dutchman," as merely an interesting addition to the current literature on aviation, and members of the crew who accompanied him on his many expeditions remark simply that "Fokker is getting old."

The complaint made by the plane manufacturer seems to be based upon the fact that Bernt Balchen actually piloted the Byrd planes on their most exciting flights, including the trans-Atlantic hop which ended in the waters of the French coast, to Balchen rather than to Byrd, he argues, should be given the glory and praise because of noteworthy achievements. Balchen himself is silent for obvious reasons, but Commander Byrd says Fokker is correct. In fact, he has said after each of his more daring flights that less of credit should be given to him and more of it to Balchen and others of his party who had served so skillfully and so faithfully that they had earned success. This was particularly true following the South Polar expedition. Byrd, upon returning home, not only praised Balchen and others of his helpers in most cordial terms, but his display of pictures proved beyond doubt that his praise was genuinely earned.

Perhaps the secret of the Fokker attack upon Commander Byrd is to be found in his complaint that Byrd upon his North Polar trip changed the name of his plane to "Josephine Ford", leaving off the name of the manufacturer which Fokker says was, by agreement, to be left on it. His personal pride is wounded, and on that account, he attempts to detract from the fame of a man who in every phase of his spectacular career has been as modest as he has been successful. — Brownwood Bulletin.

In the Political Arena

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD
Orange county is only 12 feet above the sea level. Orange county citizens are backing a bill introduced early in the session by Rep. McDougald. It is known as house bill No. 964. Orange county is the fifth smallest county in the state. It is the easternmost county bordering on the Gulf coast. It is bounded by the Sabine and Neches rivers as well as Sabine lake. It is the apex of the triangle between the rivers. Its average elevation is about 11 feet.

A petition setting forth all the facts has been given wide circulation. Copies have been placed on the desks of lawmakers. According to the foreword, the Sabine has a watershed of 10,400 square miles; the Neches has a watershed of 10,000 square miles. Formerly, these watersheds furnished practically all the merchantable timber in Texas and Orange was the greatest timber center in the state, having several mills. Today, the reader is told, "there is not a mill in operation in Orange county, practically all the timber having been cut off the watersheds of both rivers."

For many years there was planted to rice in Orange county from 10 to 20 thousand acres annually. "Today there is not one acre in rice in Orange county," more than 10 years ago "over $600,000 was raised by a county-wide bond issue of Orange county to match the dollar-for-dollar given by the federal government for the construction of the inter-coastal canal. Now, salt water instead of fresh water has resulted in the loss of investment in rice canals and irrigation plants of over $1,000,000 and this is one of the chief reasons there is no rice planted in Orange county today."

Since the clearing of the timber lands, many floods have played havoc and heaped untold damage upon the people of Orange. This is the reason assigned:

"The water pours down from the upper counties on the lower county of Orange and it stays upon the lands until it finally seeps its way out through the swamps and marshes and bayous. Arable land has become unfit to plant. It has become water-logged and is useless for anything but marshy grazing land.

For instance, the floods of 1929 washed out three miles of concrete highway known as the Old Spanish Trail and stayed over the lands for months. No crops were harvested in Orange county in that year. This is the verdict of those who are voicing the appeal of an organization known as Citizens of Orange county:

"It is impossible under the present tax situation for Orange county to bond itself further for the drainage and leveling of its arable lands. It will cost approximately $2,000,000 to build an irrigation and canal system with an intake far enough up the Sabine river to be free from danger of salt water. Until Orange county is freed from the danger of floods, by providing adequate drainage, no private capital can be secured to build this necessary system. However, should the county be drained, its people have ample assurance that the necessary private capital will be invested for the above mentioned canal system."

A committee of leading citizens of Orange county are appealing to the "Texas lawmakers for remission of the ad valorem taxes of the county. Their spokesmen have advanced the argument that of all the counties bordered by the Gulf there are only two which have not had a remission of ad valorem taxes over a period of years, "one of these being Chambers county, which has a population of less than 3000 people; the other being Orange county which has a population of approximately 20,000."

Orange county, they proudly state, was one of the first counties in the state to have a constructive road program, and approximately $2,000,000 was voted by the people of that county in 1919-22 for the building of the concrete Old Spanish Trail across Orange county and to assist in building bridges over the Sabine and Neches rivers. Another million dollars was voted by the people of Orange for the purpose of assisting the federal government "in developing the waterways which inure to the benefit of the whole state of Texas. This can be said also of the Old Spanish Trail because Orange is the gateway east and west to Florida and California."

This is the personnel of the committee: Col. Bill Lea, Capt. O. L. Baker a former representative; Monroe Chapman; W. M. Reid; Johnson Lewis of Deweyville and former Rep. O. D. Baker, one of the pioneer citi-

BILIOUSNESS

The Rev. J. J. Wisener, of Drake-town, Ga., says he has taken Black-Draught, when needed, since childhood, and he is past fifty years of age. "When I would get bilious," he says, "I would feel like shuffling along instead of walking. My feet felt too heavy to lift. I had such a dull, tired feeling, and I would feel dizzy and nauseated like I couldn't hold my head up. I found how much the Black-Draught helped me, and I took it. I quit having these bad spells, and find now I only have to take a few doses and I am good as new. Don't have to take much now. My health is good."

zens and builders of his section of the state.

Judge Geo. W. Riddle, for many years prominent in the banking and political circles of Texas, has issued a pamphlet calling for the repeal of the death penalty in Texas. There is a bill now pending before the legislature, introduced at the request of Judge Riddle, to abolish capital punishment.

Very active indeed is the chief electrician at Huntsville who officiates in the summary taking-off, speaking of the unfortunates who pass out of this and enter another world in what is known in prison parlance as "the pan route". Many executions have taken place in recent years and the prison death cells are said to be crowded. It is a shocking record of shocking crimes and the finish of those who have been adjudged as criminals and awarded capital punishment for their sins against the law.

Judge Riddle is a devout churchman. This is his dictum: "The state, the people who constitute the state, take that which cannot restore and their hands are reddened with the blood of the victim. Every person who is a citizen of a nation, a state or a community that takes a life is just as guilty as the state itself. The people make the law and the law cannot rise higher than its source. It is simply an old custom that lingered in the shadows when we began to build this nation and it ought to have been abolished when witchcraft was put away. We all are embarrassed by reason of its presence but do not seem to have the courage to get rid of it."

All this is a reminder that in his argument, Judge Riddle lets it be known that the state of Maine was the first to lead out for the change from capital punishment to confinement for life within the walls of a prison. His information is that while it was a success in Maine, dissatisfied citizens asked for a referendum. He quotes from a letter written by an assistant attorney general as to what happened:

"We acknowledge receipt of yours of the eighth and in reply would say that the people are perfectly satisfied with the law. A bill to revise capital punishment was introduced in the legislature which has just adjourned and it was overwhelmingly defeated. The state of Maine, being among the earliest states to abolish capital punishment, has the smallest per cent of murder per population of any state in the union."

According to the record furnished by the judge, the following states also have abolished capital punishment: Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Rhode Island, Kansas, North Dakota and South Dakota. In a recent election in Michigan by a majority of 50,000 the people refused to vote to restore the death penalty and the Kansas legislature which adjourned in the recent past enacted a measure restoring the death penalty and the bill was promptly vetoed by the democratic governor of the Sunflower commonwealth, and the lawmakers failed to pass it over his condemnatory message.

Judge Riddle, in his pamphlet of protest against the infliction of the death penalty, predicts that the days of public hanging as well as the electric chair plan of removal are over and that it is not possible for a country "that is thoroughly refined in the elements of civil life to have a relic of savagery like that tied around its neck."

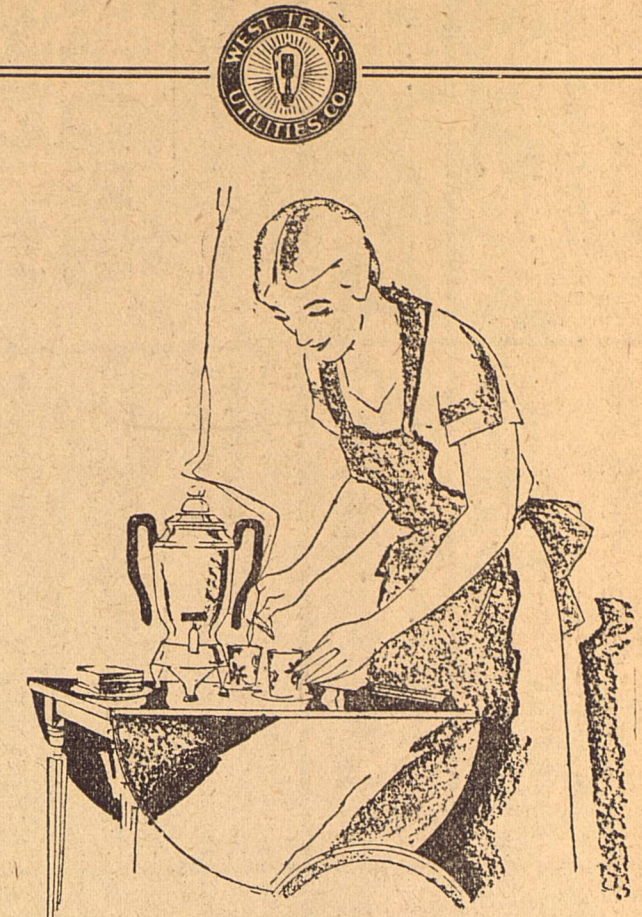

He quotes from an article in The Literary Digest, which he asserts is almost conclusive of the subject that "more murders, it seems, strangely enough, occur in states having the death penalty than in the states that do not have it. No evidence can be produced to show that capital punishment acts as a deterrent or hindrance to even the worst sort of murder records conceivable. The death penalty, rather to the contrary, acts as a deterrent to swift and adequate justice imposes heavy burdens upon the taxpayers as the result of long trials, fosters sensationalism, and of the worst possible types and stains the civilization of those who enforce it." This was the conclusion set forth by a noted statistician for one of the most widely known life insurance companies of America after a study of the 1928 homicide record covering the states of the American union.

A Rolling Kitchen

NOT SO LONG AGO, party refreshments consisted of cold sandwiches or hot dishes that had to be eaten quickly before they cooled. Now, the modern hostess merely prepares her "rolling kitchen" (a tea table carrying her precious electric appliances) and plugs efficient little Electric Servants into a convenient electric outlet, preparing her delicious waffles, rarebits or toasted sandwiches as they're needed.

The fun of happy, informal parties is greatly enhanced this modern way. Everyone enjoys the tempting dishes, including the hostess, who can enjoy her guests and prepare their refreshments at the same time.

JUDGE SEES INCREASE IN ANNULMENTS

By LEICESTER WAGNER
United Press Staff Correspondent
LOS ANGELES, May 1. — Mexican marriages may be good and Nevada divorces bad, so the formula of marrying "in haste at Tijuana and repenting in Reno" may not always work, in the opinion of Judge Leon J. Yankwich of the Los Angeles County Superior Court, internationally known as an expert on libel, plagiarism—and divorce.

The rise in popularity of the Mexican resorts, particularly Tijuana, as Greta Greens since the enactment of a three-day declaration of intention law in California, has brought a corresponding increase in suits for annulment, Judge Yankwich finds.

So numerous have these smash-ups been that the question is being asked: By what right can California courts annul valid Mexican marriages? The answer, the jurist finds, is that neither the courts of California, nor any other courts can annul a valid marriage, whether contracted in Mexico, or elsewhere.

Mexican Annulments
"When our courts annul Mexican marriages, they do not do so because of their invalidity according to California law, but because of their infirmity according to Mexican law," Judge Yankwich said.

"Among these infirmities are the following: the consent of a parent, guardian or judge is necessary if either party is under 21. Most Mexican states require witnesses who have known the parties for a definite length of time (three years under the Ley Sobre Relaciones Familiares) and strict requirements as to performance of the ceremony.

"Included in the ceremony is a declaration of these witnesses that they have known the principals for the necessary length of time. How were they to know, if they had just met at the American bar? There is your ground for annulment.

"California is not bound, on the other hand, to recognize a Nevada, Yucatan or Paris divorce granted to a Californian who goes to any one of those places for no other purpose than to secure a divorce.

Matrimonial Domicile.
"Under international law, the 'matrimonial domicile' of the married pair affords the only true test of jurisdiction to dissolve the marriage.

"Where one spouse goes to a state other than that of the matrimonial domicile and there obtains a divorce under a residence simulated for that purpose and not in good faith, the judgment is not binding upon the courts of other states of the union.

"As distinguished from legal domicile, mere residence of the plaintiff in an action for divorce is not sufficient to confer jurisdiction upon the court to dissolve the marriage relation between the plaintiff and a non-resident defendant.

Divorce Fraud.
"If it appears that the residence in Reno, Yucatan or Paris, began under circumstances which showed no reasons, or inducements—personal, business, social, cultural or other—for establishing a permanent residence therein, and that an action for divorce was instituted immediately after the expiration of the minimum residential requirement, and that the recipient of the decree left after it was signed, it would need no argument to convince a California court that the divorce was a fraud upon it.

"But, if a person should go to Reno, Yucatan or Paris in search of health, amusement, or for business, and while there, long after the expiration of the minimum requirements, institute an action for divorce, his or her subsequent return to the state of the marital domicile would not, in itself, deprive the decree of validity."

Producers Take Milk to Consumer

EL PASO, May 1. — A milk war has resulted in milk producers taking their products directly to the consumer by buying a dairy.

The El Paso Better Dairy league has bought a building of Link and company and within the next month hopes to be marketing its own products in El Paso. Work is underway now for remodeling the building.

Plans are being made for the distribution of milk, produce and fruits produced in the upper and lower valley near here. Milk handling will be the first product.

Community distribution of the farm products is the object of the league in going into business for itself, F. A. Reedy, league president, said.

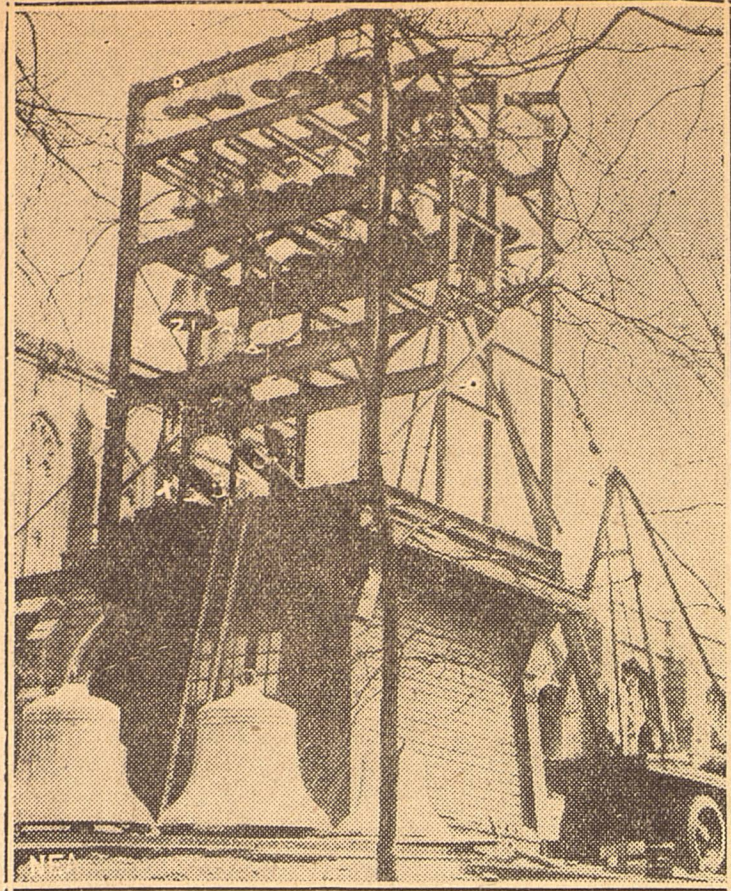

The co-operative distribution of produce is expected to lead to the development of diversified farming in the valley. Crops never before raised in the valley for profit are expected to be produced and marketed through the new plant here.

League officials hope that farmers in this section will turn from the wholesale production of cotton and alfalfa.

Distribution of milk will be similar to methods used by other dairies. Milk will be brought to El Paso by trucks and handled here by the dairy league's sales organization.

In one wing of the building, huge cold storage units will be used to handle vegetables and fruits. There will be no cutthroat competition among El Paso wholesale product distributors Reedy promised. Instead efforts will be made to assist local produce distributors, in securing and marketing products from this section, he said.

New Chimes for Valley Forge

Reverent tribute from every state in the union, 48 bells are to be hung in the tower of the Washington Memorial Chapel at Valley Forge, Pa. This picture shows the chimes being overhauled for the addition of the twenty-eighth bell — Michigan's contribution to the carillon. One extra chime, not the gift of any state, will be known as the Washington birth-day bell. The chimes are being assembled by the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Plaque Marks House in Which Guy de Maupassant Wrote His Masterpiece

By MARY KNIGHT
United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS, May 1. — A memorial plaque has been placed on the old residence where the French master of the short story, Guy de Maupassant, wrote his masterpiece, "Boule de Suif."

"Boule de Suif," is considered by many critics as the best story written by de Maupassant and the house in which he wrote it is also the house in which the model for the heroine of the celebrated story lived. She was a kind-hearted if simpleminded French daughter of joy and her fame will live long through the pen of the famous writer.

De Maupassant gained his first real recognition through this particular story, which is another re-son for honoring the house in which it was written. He was in the habit of visiting the house of Emile Zola, who was at the height of his fame, with Huysmans and many other young and unknown writers. Every Sunday a group of friends would get together and on one occasion it was suggested that each one should write a war story, to make up a volume. Zola consented generously to contribute which assured them the success of their venture. The next day Zola wrote "The Attack of the Mill," the manuscript of which is now in the possession of Edward W. Titus.

"None of us thought of De Maupassant as being especially talented," Zola is reported to have remarked. When the tall blond young man appeared the following Sunday, however, with a manuscript in his pocket, his companions listened first through courtesy, and afterward with caught breath and with tears in their eyes Zola was the first to congratulate him. Flaubert was immediately generous with his praise. Huysmans opened a bottle of wine and the company was thoughtful and hilarious in turns.

Since then, "Boule de Suif" has been translated into every known tongue and the story of the fat girl who shared her lunch with her fellow-travelers and was snubbed the next day for having yielded to a Prussian officer, remains a favorite of all time with the admirers of De Maupassant.

When your dealer

urges you to buy an unknown substitute product rather than an advertised brand by telling you.. "It's just as good and cheaper"

ask him this Question . .

"If that is true why doesn't the maker advertise it to the world and sell more?"

You will ask him that question because you are an intelligent woman who can not be fooled by a little glib talk.

You know that if the manufacturer of that substitute product had discovered a method whereby he could produce equal quality at reduced prices, he would be eager to advertise this fact convincingly and greatly increase his sales.

You know that you could not buy, say your present car, at the price you paid unless it was produced by mass production.

You know that mass production is possible only by advertising the merits of the product to millions. Also that high quality and low cost can be maintained only through continued mass production made possible by continuous advertising.

You know that advertising does not increase, but decreases prices and adds extra quality never before possible. To illustrate how little advertising costs, a well-known brand of breakfast food costs $0.15, and the cost of advertising each package is only $0.003 (one-third of 1c). If an unadvertised substitute contained the same quality it would cost at least $0.20.

You know that a cake may be baked with cheap ingredients and still be made to look just as good as if only the best of everything had been used. But when such a cake is cut and tasted, the difference is discovered. The catch is that the cake is bought and carried home before that difference is discovered. Just so are all substitutes whose claims are "just as good and cheaper."

Beware of unknown substitutes, for you don't know how they were made nor the quality of their ingredients. Be guided by known, advertised brands, for they always give you the highest quality at the lowest prices.

The MELODY GIRL

BEGIN HERE TODAY
 BERYL BORDEN discovers that her half-sister, IRENE EVERETT, is planning to elope with TOMMY WILSON. She tries to prevent the marriage by kidnapping Tommy with the assistance of her neighborhood "gang."
 They capture him on the eve of the elopement and drive him out to the country where Beryl urges him to continue in college and not break the heart of his adoring aunt, MRS. HOFFMAN, who is financing him. Failing to convince him of his folly, Beryl loses her temper and calls him a "sap" and then drives him back to her sister.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER II

A wave of anger, overwhelming and savage in its intensity, swept over Beryl with Tommy's words, thin brown hands and shaken him. She could have taken him in her arms as a terror shakes a rat. But the practice of restraint kept her standing silent, waiting with bated breath for Irene's answer.
 Irene laughed—a dramatic, taunting laugh. Then, "That's all there is to it, is it? Just like that! Irene, will you come with me?" she mocked. "You've got a nerve, Tommy Wilson, to ask me that when all I've heard out of you for keeping me waiting here at a lot of crazy talk about a gang of kids kidnapping you. A hot one, that is!"

She paused and turned to Beryl. "But if I'd known that you were mixed up in it I'd have believed him if he'd said wolves had got him."
 As Irene faced her sister, flaming with outraged pride, Beryl's anger against Tommy abated. She could not blame him so much, after all. Irene was magnificent when in a rage—the only time that she was anything but insipid in Beryl's estimation. Her blue eyes were dark and flashing, and there was life with a thousand facets revealed in her furious gestures, in the play of emotion upon her features, in the red of her mobile, trembling lips.
 "If only he were not equally infatuated with the marshallmoo Irene I could forgive him," Beryl thought.

"Well," she said to Irene, "now that you know it was all my fault why don't you go with Tommy?" She was suddenly weary. If Tommy couldn't be stopped—she couldn't. It was all up to Irene now—and it would be a relief to know how it was going to end.
 "I'll tell you why!" Irene exclaimed, her fury still at a high pitch. But now she was directing her attack at Tommy. "You wouldn't tell on her, would you? Just a gang of kids! I might have known whose gang," she added bitterly, a whole album of memories in which Beryl's young friends had played a part rushing to her mind.

Beryl looked at Tommy. Queer, funny Tommy. So he had tried to shield her. Her eyes thanked him, though he did not see it. For him there was no one in the world but Irene—Irene who, for a runaway marriage, had dressed herself in pink chiffon and a picture hat and looked for all the world like a Dresden doll. (Or at least she would when her anger subsided).
 "Let's go," Tommy begged. "We'll be too late to catch a train to New York at all."
 "You can take Water Baby," Beryl offered, pretending to forget that Irene had vowed never to ride in the rattley old car. "Anyway, where are you going in New York? You can't be married to-night."

His voice was earnest, and Tommy answered her. "We're going to a friend's of Irene's," he said, "so we can get down to city hall and be married first thing in the morning."
 "Oh, we are, are we?" Irene jibed. "Well, we're not. You can't treat me like this and get away with it."
 "Poor Tommy," Beryl murmured softly, "just because you wouldn't tell on me."
 Tommy's temper, which until now had been dormant, was slightly aroused.
 "Don't be foolish," he said sharply to Irene, and right there his chance of coaxing her into a good humor went glimmering. To have him anything but humble and pleading in Beryl's presence was more than Irene would tolerate. It all ended with the elopement being indefinitely postponed and Tommy going home, torn between disappointment and anger toward Beryl.

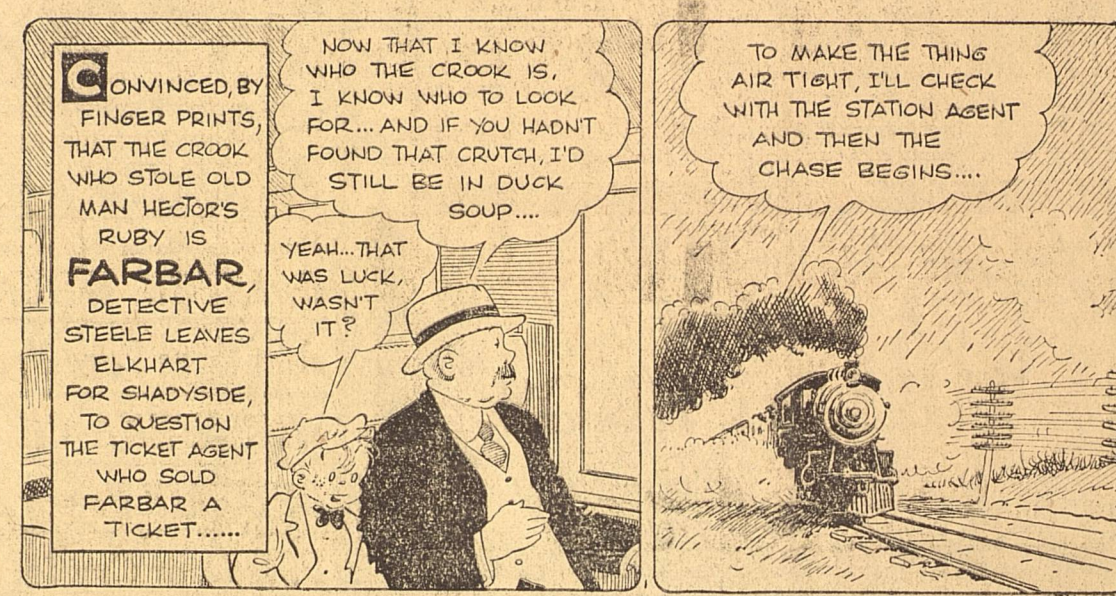

She offered to drive him back but he ignored her completely as he strode out of the room in high dudgeon.
 The sweet scents of the night and the serenity of a pale moon meant nothing to him as he stalked moodily down the tree-lined street to his aunt's house.
 Of course Irene had shown a lot of temper—but who could blame her with a sister like that? The kid had always been bossed and badgered by the older sister. Why, if only half the things she told him were true he wondered that she hadn't left home to make her own way in the world, long ago.

When he reached home he saw a light in the living room and guessed that his aunt was waiting up for him. He hid his suitcase under the porch hammock before he went in, then forced himself to assume a cheerful air.
 "Early to bed and early to rise" he began, and "For some old ladies is very unwise," she finished for him.
 "But really, Aunt Em. . . ."
 "Come, let's have a snack of lemonade and gingersnaps," his Aunt Em said, getting up heavily from the armchair that Beryl had covered in chintz during the short period that she was a professional decorator. The business had been going quite nicely, too, but it didn't synchronize with her duties as cashier in Everett's Grocery. Between the two even Beryl saw that it would cause less disturbance generally to let the interior decorating go. And anyway, she'd only spent a small amount of money for the mail order course she'd taken to learn what she knew of the profession. While on the other hand, as she pointed out to herself, "Look at the years I've spent learning the grocery business."
 "I wonder, is there anything wrong at Everetts?" Mrs. Hoffman remarked when she and Tommy sat down at the kitchen table for their "snack."
 "Tommy gave her a startled look. 'Wrong?' he repeated in alarm.
 She nodded. "Mrs. Everett called me up about an hour ago," she said, and asked for you. Said it wasn't anything important, but I thought it was strange, her calling like that. If it had been one of the girls. . . ."
 "I guess nothing's wrong," Tommy interjected. "I was there a little while ago. Kinda late. Met some of the boys and went for a ride with them."
 "None of that tough Larkin outfit I hope, Tommy?"
 Tommy grinned. "Naw. These kids are all right."
 His Aunt Emma signed. "It's so easy to make a mistake," she said gently, "and when you're young it's so much. Sometimes you have to live with them all your life."
 Tommy stirred uneasily, and swallowed the last of his gingersnaps.
 "I think I'd better be going to bed," he said when he'd washed his hands down with his lemonade. "You, too, Aunt Em; you look tired."
 Mrs. Hoffman usually complained of feeling tired when she'd lost sleep. Tommy quite often saved himself a lecture by talking her into going to bed.
 She got up now and lumbered about, putting the dishes in the sink for the girl who came in to help her, to wash in the morning. She, herself, couldn't do much housework any more but there was no need of it, for she could afford a maid. This fact drew attention away from her growing helplessness and no one realized that she was really a sick woman—not even Aunt Em herself.
 When she busied herself in the kitchen Tommy had a chance to retrieve his suitcase, but he had forgotten all about it and went upstairs without it.
 He did not go to bed at once, for sleep was far from his eyes. The night was pleasantly warm—or cool—just right for sitting by an open window, as Tommy did writing out his loneliness to Irene. He could see her, he said, a lovely creature with her blond curls spread out upon her pillow. Crying—was she crying? He didn't want her to suffer, but he hoped she was as miserable as he.
 Having finished the letter Tommy sat smoking innumerable cigarettes, his head in his hands, his mind filled with lovely pictures of Irene—soft, alluring Irene.
 When at last sleep overpowered him he tossed about restlessly and cried out from his dreams. It was not until the wee small hours of the morning that his mind grew quiet and he slept soundly.
 Shortly after that he was awakened by his uncle's alarm clock in the next room. He at once pretended to be asleep again, lest his uncle should want him to get up and go fishing with him.
 Then he remembered, with exasperating clearness, his suitcase on the front porch. He slipped out of bed, threw on a dressing gown and crept to the door. When he opened it, it was full in his Aunt Emma's face.

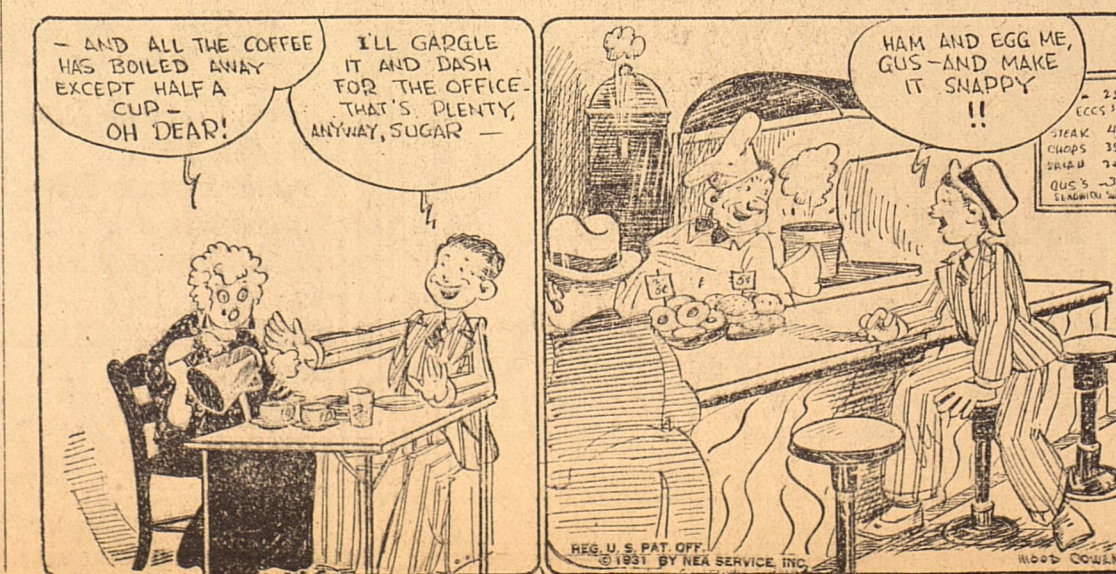

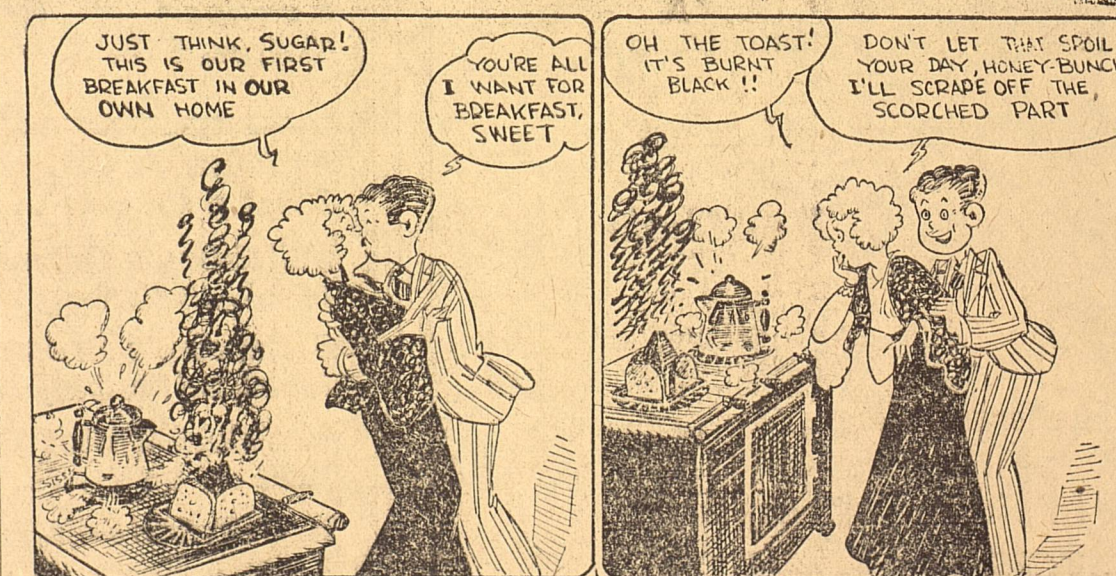

"Why, I only took a few potatoes and a few onions and a little meat and some bread and some stuff—GOOD NIGHT!"
 "COME ON—YOU DON'T NEED TO HUNT ANY FURTHER—I'VE FOUND OUR DINNER!"

MEN AND WOMEN NEED NOT HAVE GRAY HAIR

Nature Will Keep the Hair Youthful Shade, Free of Gray
LIFELESS GRAY HAIR REGAINS OLD BEAUTY
 Everybody knows if color glands and hair roots are healthy and active the hair will continue indefinitely a rich, natural color entirely free of gray or streaked locks. A doctor several years ago asked himself this question: If I can stimulate digestion, liver, heart, etc., with a tonic, why not rub stimulating tonic into the scalp that will revive those inactive glands so nature in her own natural way will resume putting plenty of pigment into the hair tubes—surely the hair will then resume its original beautiful shades of youth regardless of user's age or previous condition of their hair.
 The doctor's search led to endless experiments. He didn't want a regular dye or tint, and it, of course, must be harmless even if a person used it many years. Now under the name "Lea's Hair Tonic," anyone may purchase the preparation he finally perfected. For several years hand-dressers over the country have been using it. Results are so nice and gradual men use it too. It doesn't stain the scalp and as a test one need only apply it to some small spot a few days to watch results. Shampoo as often as desired. Easy to apply yourself at home and look years younger.
 Most people first try Lea's for gray hair, but it is primarily intended as a stimulating tonic to put the scalp and hair in healthy, vigorous condition. Of course with a healthy scalp comes more beautiful hair and restoration of the natural brilliance and shade exactly suited to your complexion. There are some three thousand shades of color in human hair—no dye expert can paint one's hair as exquisitely as nature. Lea's merely stimulates nature when massaged into the scalp—puts nature back on the job, you might say, and what is more beautiful or becoming than nature's own choice of shade to match your eyes and beauty.
 If reader desires to try Lea's Hair Tonic on guarantee of complete satisfaction, they should get a bottle at drug store or pin dollar bill to this advertisement and send to Lea's Tonic Company, Brentwood, Md., for regular size bottle, full directions, postage paid. Experts cannot detect the use of Lea's Hair Tonic. Sent parcel post, C. O. D., if you wish—12c extra—Adv.

"Belled Buzzard" Found at Last

production, Mark Twain's "A Connecticut Yankee," opens Sunday at the Palace theatre, is one of this country's most unique personalities.

He is more completely himself than any other without shame or pretense. He is entirely without sham or pretense, is kindly and good humored because that is his nature.

Like so many of America's great, Rogers sprang from humble beginnings. Born in Indian Territory his earliest work was that of a ranch hand. He became such an excellent cowboy that he decided to capitalize his skill with the lariat, and rode forth from his father's ranch one day to throw and hog-tie the world. After considerable struggle, he obtained a small time vaudeville booking. The money he received was scarcely adequate to feed himself and his horse, but he kept struggling.

spotted him, and he rapidly climbed to fame as a headliner. From vaudeville he graduated to Ziegfeld productions.

One night he was called upon to make an announcement for the manager. His drawing voice, with the humorous twist got a great laugh from the audience, and starting with the next performance Rogers became a monologist as well as a crick rope thrower. He wrote all his own material. His lively interest in the news of the day led him to start making comments on things he had read in the newspapers, and because his talk was so witty and philosophical he became an overnight sensation.

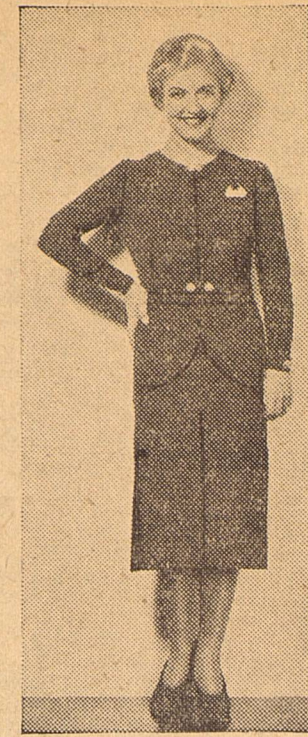

When the talkies arrived Rogers became a star at once. He has made three of these for Fox, "They Had To See Paris," "So This Is London," and "Lightin'."

Selection of his present vehicle, "A Connecticut Yankee," was an ideal one, combining as it does the wit and humor of America's two greatest humorists, Twain and Rogers. He is supported by such able players as Maureen O'Sullivan, Myrna Loy, Frank Albertson and William Farnum. David Butler directed.

THEY wear the latest clothes with such stunning effects. For every woman within this charmed circle there are thousands dieting to achieve such a figure.

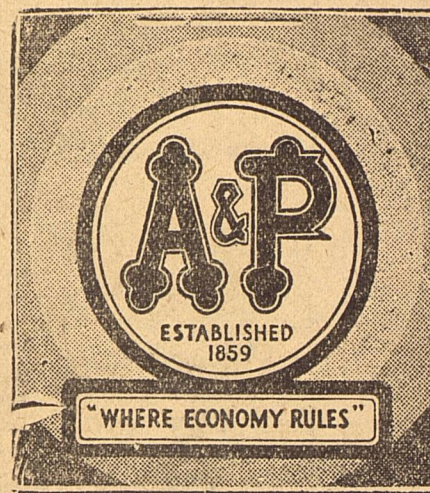

Some succeed. But too many pay the penalty. Weight may be lost but years of age are often added. The skin becomes sallow. The eyes tired. Energy is lost.

The diet that produces such unhappy results frequently lacks roughage.

PERSONAL
Every newspaper, magazine, and radio station in the country right now seems interested in teaching women how to get their money's worth from the grocer and the butcher. We're glad to see them so worked up over victuals. For A. & P. stores are for women who are keen judges and shrewd buyers of food — who make a business of running their household well at low expense. The more women know customers A. & P. will about food, the more have.
