DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

FATE OF THE ROBBER: — Behold, at evening tide trouble; and before the morning he is not. This is the portion of them that spoil us, and the lot of them that rob us.—Isiah 17: 14.

PROPOSED COTTON PRODUCTS LABORATORY.

The proposed cotton products laboratory to be established in Texas by the federal government is sponsored by the three regional chambers of commerce of the Lone Star commonwealth. Representative Marvin Jones of Amarillo has introduced a bill creating the laboratory and it is now pending in the house. Progressive Texans, Inc., submitted some facts and arguments showing the urgent need for a cotton research laboratory establishment and urging the state of Texas as the logical location. Under the heading of "The Present Distress of Cotton" the argument presented for the establishment of the laboratory declares world economic conditions have combined to make difficult the solution of agricultural problems, especially the problems of the producers of cotton which have since 1870 played an important role in international trade, exceeding in export value any other American product and maintaining more than any other commodity, a favorable balance of trade for the nation.

This is an excerpt: "During the World war period the United States liquidated its debts to the balance of the world and today we find the European nations unable to buy our cotton and as a consequence we now have on hand millions of bales of cotton unused. With the price of cotton below the present price of production the situation has caused drastic cuts in cotton acreage."

As a relief remedy, the very pointed address drafted by Progressive Texans, Inc., makes interesting reading: "It is admitted the South would be indefinitely better off to maintain other enterprises on the farm and not to be altogether dependent on a cash crop. The South must plant feed crops needed to be converted into livestock or livestock products for home use or for sale as a recommendation. A warning is given that large scale violent shifts of land use are not desirable or profitable. At the same time it is admitted that it is not economically sound or socially desirable to continue to produce any crop at a loss: "therefore, in the interests of a balanced national life and agriculture it is vital to the nation that we have a wise utilization of the great cotton crop of the South. To this end a cotton products laboratory is needed to provide for research on cotton uses and cottonseed products and other agricultural products."

It is advised that the greatest need of both agriculture and industry today is a liaison agency which will discover new uses for agricultural products and develop improvements on present methods of utilization, as such an organization understanding the needs of both agriculture and industry would serve both enterprises to the mutual profit of both. We are told a start in this direction has already been made: a corn products laboratory has been established in Iowa; a wheat products laboratory in Nebraska; and a similar enterprise serving forestry, known as the Forest Products Laboratory, has been established in Wisconsin. Why not a cotton products laboratory in the greatest cotton producing commonwealth of the union?

HIRAM JOHNSON ON THE ROAD AGAIN.

Senator Hiram Johnson of California is a republican and yet a thorn in the side of the republican administration. He has demanded legislation to prohibit sales in this country of securities of any foreign government in default on its obligations to America. Indeed, he has introduced a bill covering all the ground. This is the Hiram argument: "Many individuals and officials abroad are merrily suggesting that the debts due the United States from foreign governments will never be paid. Perhaps the proposed enactment may have a different effect."

JOHN BULL AND HIS FRENCH BROTHER.

John Bull speaking through his representatives at the Geneva disarmament conference urges abolition of all U-boats and gas warfare, while the spokesman of France demands a national league army sufficiently powerful to put down all offenders who are outside of the league. This did not appeal to Senator Borah of Idaho. He branded the plan as absurd. He branded the proposed international boycott as more than absurd. It is a matter of record that the lone eagle of Idaho always travels alone. It is likewise in the record that he speaks his convictions regardless of platforms or political leaders or bosses.

OTHER OPINIONS

DECLINE OF EPIGRAMS

Fashions in epigrams change. If the long involved epigrams were popular in one decade, the next will see the short and snappy and retort at the height of approval. The present generation is tortured by a deluge of puns, terse and sometimes witty characterizations, and smart sayings of young journalists and others not so young.

The authors of the modern variety do not call their inventions epigrams. It has been said they set their alarm clocks for dawn and each morning spend a few serious hours thinking up "gags" to console their playmates. Spontaneously blown like zephyrs across a luncheon table, their effect may be seen before the final decision to put them in print.

In the case of the modern epigram, the shorter the more popular. It may be brutal, untrue or foolish, but it must be brief. If brevity is the soul of wit, it is the essence of the epigram of today.

Everybody today shows at least a tendency toward epigrammatic efforts. Even the youngest generation, coming along rather solemnly, is influenced. A "wise-cracking" flapper has made a hit of a Broadway production and a staid New York banker in an address on art referred to the "sluggish soul that is as bad as a sluggish liver."

at close contact must convince one their serious attention is concentrated on inventing jazz-age epigrams and slang expressions.—Paris News.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By EDSON R. WAITE Shawnee, Oklahoma.

J. C. Howerton, editor of the Cuna (Texas) Daily Record, says: "That success lies not always in achieving the heights, but more often in aiming at what one ought to achieve and pressing forwards, rising above reverses, and achieving this goal regardless of all else. Success does not always call for one's 'bitching their cane to the stars.' In this great drama of life we all have a part to play, and in playing that part well we achieve success. If you can't be the castle on top of the hill, then be the little house in the valley, but play your part well. If you can't be the star of this great show, then be one of the 'mob' but be the best in your class. Great your task with a purpose not merely a wish. Set first as your goal something you should achieve not something you would like to achieve. Success lies in concentrated effort, courage, determination. Have patience, its fruits are sweet. Work not toward the improbable. We can't all be kings. Regardless of your task, do that task well. The future looks back upon the past for its references. Failure does not always mean defeat. Defeats are the quicksands of life. The leader of success can never be laid in quicksands. Be content with your lot, but strive to climb higher. Aspire to be the general, but first make a good private. Success is gauged by our accomplishments, not by what we hope to accomplish."

TEXAS TOPICS

By RAYMOND BROOKS AUSTIN, Feb. 15.—Here is some of the stuff, the United States government is sending out, under frank, on government stationery, printed by government employes, with the information collected by government employes: "Wages for women in China are lower than those for men." "Albany opposes night work for women." "Almost 8000 women were appointed in the federal classified service during 1931." "A woman manages a coal company." "Discharging married women causes hardship, according to conclusion drawn in a survey made by the industrial research department of the University of Pennsylvania Wharton school of finance." This is some of the press sheet, or publicity bulletin of the woman's bureau of the U. S. department of labor. Other bureaus and other departments at Washington may be engaged in just as rankly professionalized, and just as purely useless, propaganda; but we can't imagine what they are.

Physicians of Texas, through a law sponsored by the Texas board of medical examiners, are feeling the inconveniences and will experience whatever benefits there are from a special law requiring them annually to register and to pay in a $2 registration fee. They are getting notices that if they shall not have registered and paid the fee by March 1, they will be subject to prosecution for practicing their profession, and will be debarred from collecting any fee for professional service. This year started the annual registration under the new law.

Numbers of Texas school districts, feeling it was a little hard to raise interest and sinking fund money this year, sought to refinance their outstanding bonds by funding issues, spreading the amortization of the unpaid balances. But they met stiff opposition among some members of the state board of education in a special meeting at Austin during the past week. As a result, the districts that are able to do so likely will go ahead and pay their interest and sinking fund obligations and clear up their bonded debts, rather than to renew for another 40-year or 20-year period.

Former Governor Dan Moody, who admits he's a poor hand with figures, such as adding up a lot of them; has this reputation challenged by Attorney General James V. Allred.

Lawyers for the oil companies in Allred's anti-suit have a seriously-spoken contention that his application for default judgment is void, among the many other groups alleged, because he figured out his maximum possible claim at $1,074,500 apiece instead of $1,174,500 against them.

By RAYMOND BROOKS AUSTIN, Feb. 15.—Defenders of the natural gas common purchaser law read with quick interest the federal court decision that sustained the gas conservation statute. They believe much of the court's reasoning to sustain the conservation law likewise is applicable in support of the common purchaser statute, now under fire in the suit of five large Panhandle gas producers. The decision said the state has "ample" power to enforce rules to conserve the supply of natural gas, and reiterated a statewide community interest in preventing waste of this natural resource. It is brushed aside the old "property in place" interpretation of statutes as a ground of attack on this law, and said the state has broad enough powers to deal with such "fugacious" or migratory substances as gas and oil in the interrelated interest of various property holders. The decision said that the Henderson gasoline stripping plant has blown into the air 46 billion cubic feet of gas in the 1000 days it has operated, after having extracted only 1-24th the heat units from the gas it sought for extracting gasoline.

The business of killing ticks is one of considerable financial size for Texas. Besides the setup of the livestock sanitary commission, the county quarantine enforcement, the inspectors, the dipping vat properties and other elements of cost, it is this week buying nearly $80,000 worth of cattle dip—175,000 gallons of it, for one year's supply.

Representative Gordon M. Burns of Huntsville, one of those who fought the cotton acreage bill, has been in Austin, but without a single "I told you so," now that a court has declared the act void. Representative Burns predicted the courts will overturn the latest oil conservation law, when they heard down the first decision on it, but he does not, he said, foresee any other early special session of the legislation on this or other matters.

LOCATION OF MASON-DIXON LINE FAULTY

Where is the famous Mason and Dixon line, immortalized in a thousand songs and stories?

The writers and composers of the many ballads singing its praises, or rather, the praises of what may be found below it, would be least of all qualified to answer that question. When surveyed by modern methods, the Mason and Dixon line was found to be as much as 400 feet off in one place.

Judged by present-day standards, much of the early surveying work done in this country, some of it accomplished as long as one hundred years ago, is highly inaccurate. No attempts, however, is made by modern engineers to correct such errors. The original inaccurate line has been a starting point for the work of generations of surveyors, and to relocate its stations and markers now would result in chaos. So highly accurate present-day surveys are tied into the old inaccurate lines, writes Clayton R. Slaughter in the March Popular Science Monthly.

In relocating much of this old work, surveyors frequently find triangulation stations and monuments buried by acts of nature or moved by the hand of man. Two of the original markers of the Mason and Dixon line were recently found serving as doorsteps in an old church.

The stupendous task of surveying the entire country today, according to Major William Bowie, chief of geodesy of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, to which the giant job of measuring Uncle Sam's domain has fallen, is made necessary by human nature, which is impatient to settle in new lands. When the interior of this country was first opened up to settlers, people moved inland from the Atlantic seaboard with the irresistible rush of water escaping from a burst dam. They took up land where they pleased, regardless of surveys. Where they had an entire continent for their oyster, and where land was to be had almost for the asking, why worry about surveys?

Take the case of the line between Texas and Oklahoma, the boundary that runs in a straight line along the hundredth meridian of longitude. For more than half a century no one knew exactly where this boundary was. Many different surveyors tried to locate it, but they disagreed by as much as 3,699 feet because astronomical methods of determining longitude were then inaccurate.

For a long while the strip of land involved in this inaccurately known boundary meant little to either the governments of Texas or Oklahoma. No settler lived in it and the ground was so cheap that neither state worried much about it. Finally oil was discovered in that region, and land rose in value so tremendously that the disputed strip became worth many millions of dollars. Each state then claimed it, and the dispute was carried into the supreme court. That body finally ruled that the one hundredth meridian be established with a degree of accuracy that could be accepted by both parties involved in the dispute. The Coast and Geodetic Survey was given this task, and so accurately did it do the work, the writer was told, that the boundary markers between the two states are now not more than one or two feet off the one hundredth meridian.

Star Gazers Plan Meeting

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 15.—Astronomy's progress during the past four years will be described when the International Astronomical Union holds its quadrennial convention at Harvard University, Sept. 2-8. The Union never before has met in the United States.

The chief business will be the regulation of astronomical standards, measurements and nomenclature for the scientific world. At the last convention, in Leyden, Holland, in 1928, some 30 commissions were appointed to investigate various celestial problems, and their reports are awaiting eagerly. Among these will be the report of the commission on variable stars, of which Professor Harlow Sharpley of Harvard, is chairman. It is expected that more than 500 delegates representing astronomical societies throughout the world, will attend. Officers of the Union, whose terms expire this year are: Sir Frank Dyson, Royal Astronomer of England, President; F. M. Stratton, Cambridge University, Secretary; Frank Schlesinger, Yale University; J. R. Betri, Royal astronomer of Italy; H. N. Doyer, University of Paris; N. E. Norlund, University of Copenhagen, and F. Nusi, University of Prague, vice-presidents.

WASHINGTON

HIS LIFE STORY IN PICTURES, COMMEMORATING THE 200TH ANNIVERSARY OF HIS BIRTH

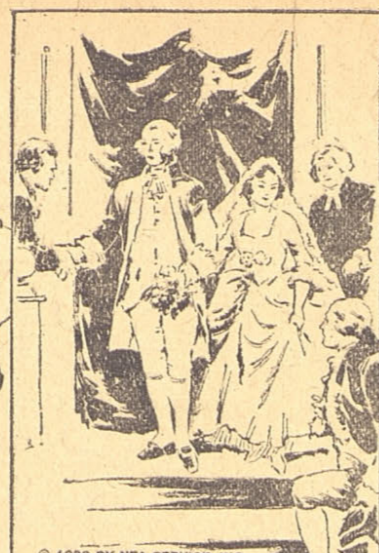

4 His Romance

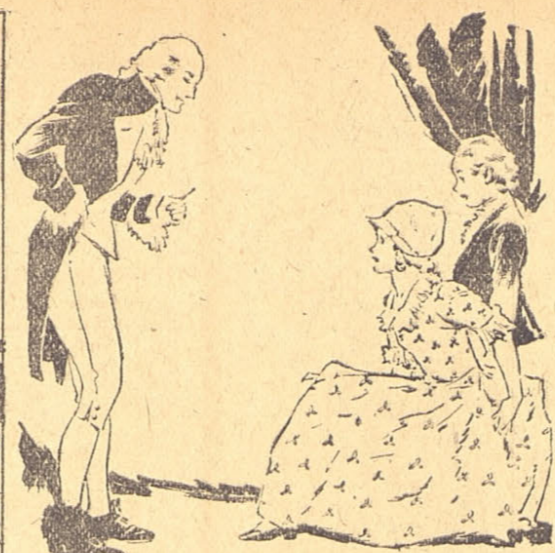

Washington met Martha Custis, wealthy and charming widow, at the home of a friend, in 1758. It was a case of love at first sight.

He extracted her promise to permit him to call, and within two months he proposed.

They were married, in an elaborate ceremony, less than a year later.

Washington became devoted to his two step-children, Patsy and John Parke.

The dime-a-dance girl

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Beautiful Ellen Rossier, a salesgirl in Barclay's Department Store, lives with her extravagant mother, Molly Rossier, her older sister Myra and her young brother, Mike.

Steven Barclay, a man of 57 and Ellen's employer, sees the girl crying and discovers the situation. Obviously interested, he loans Ellen a lovely white taffeta frock when she refuses to accept it as a gift.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER IX "You were perfectly right. You should have been angry. I didn't realize, and I know neither did, how selfish we were being."

"No, it was my fault," insisted Ellen, eager now for her share of the blame. "I don't know what got into me. Thank goodness it's over now."

"At the first reference to Larry Harrowgate Ellen was pink-cheeked and stony-eyed. From her position on the edge of the bed Myra saw the sudden radiance that lighted her sister's face. She knew that Ellen had found the real thing."

"Go ahead, Ellen," she said calmly enough. "Go ahead about your man before curiosity kills me."

"There isn't much to tell," Ellen confessed in her shy, eager voice. "Nothing serious, I mean. All I know is that Larry likes me."

"But you haven't any idea how I felt, Myra, when I first saw him," Ellen admitted dropping to the bed beside the other. "He's tall—did I tell you?—and red-headed. He was coming across the dance floor toward me and all of a sudden something went click."

"I know," murmured Myra sympathetically, meeting Ellen's eager gaze. "I know exactly what you mean."

Ellen abruptly remembered Bert, in her own happiness came a sudden sharp pang for her sister's sake. But underneath was the selfish little thought that—she and Myra were different—different as Larry was different from sober, plodding Bert.

"Do you know what he does?" "You mean?" Ellen laughed. "I'm almost sure he hasn't. He's an artist and they're always as poor as church-mice, aren't they? But I don't care."

"You mean?" Ellen laughed. "I'm almost sure he hasn't. He's an artist and they're always as poor as church-mice, aren't they? But I don't care."

She raised her young arms above her head and stretched luxuriously. How could love, delightful shining love be fettered with care or trouble? What did money matter?

Both girls began to dress with the speed of long accustomed practice. It was nearly half-past seven.

Ellen paused in the act of putting on a shoe. She had been reflecting that somehow she must manage new ones.

"Then why were you so surprised?" Ellen asked caustically, adjusting her stocking to sheer tightness and standing up.

"What is it?" she asked anxiously. "Do you know something about him?"

"If you've heard anything about him that you think would turn me against him, you're wrong. I won't believe that you have. It's simply not true."

There was a streak of yearning wishfulness in the older girl, a vague reaching out for gay scenes in which she could not be a participant.

Ellen was not sympathetic toward this trait. Now she was completely at sea. Myra tossed a clipping to her.

"I remembered him," Myra said painfully, closing the dresser's open drawer and turning around again, "because I only cut it out on Tuesday. It's an odd name."

"Oh, Ellen, you don't look like that," she begged. "I'm sorry I ever cut the darn thing out."

stopped by the chair where Ellen sat staring into space. "What are you going to do about your date, Ellen?"

CONSTABLE'S SALE. COUNTY OF EASTLAND. By virtue of a certain Order of Sale issued out of the honorable 88th District Court of Eastland County, on the 2nd day of February, 1932, by W. H. George Washington was essentially a "man's man"—tall, straight and athletic—but he also was a great favorite with the ladies. From boyhood, he was quick to fall victim to the fascinations of the fair. Some historian have greatly exaggerated this amiable weakness. The truth seems to be that he often lost his heart—but experienced little difficulty in finding it.

Washington was devoted to his two step-children, Patsy and John Parke Custis. Their health, education any property were carefully supervised. He engaged a special tutor for Patsy and made every possible effort to cure her of epilepsy. Her death in 1772 was a great shock to him. He sent his step-son to King's college in New York.

During the war, Martha refused to be separated from her husband, and whenever possible, even in winter, she stayed with him in camp.

BWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Cremolium, an emulsified crocote that is pleasant to take. Cremolium is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, crocote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Cremolium contains, in addition to crocote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the crocote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Cremolium is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

is being encouraged by offering "High Honor Certificates" to those students making an average of 90 and above, and having perfect attendance records.

"5. Changes have been made whereby only one ward school room in the entire system has more than one grade section of students.

"6. All students are required to participate in some extra-curriculum activity. This work includes clubs, athletics, spelling, debating, essay writing, etc.

"7. Regular monthly faculty meeting have been held.

"8. Personal letters from the superintendent have been written to parents of failing students.

"9. Considerable improvement has been made in the plan of conducting summer schools in that no work is being offered below the seventh grade. Summer school teachers are elected and paid by the board and regulations as to the number of subjects a student is permitted to take have been made to conform to state requirements.

"10. Closer contact between school and community is being developed in several ways. Among these are the following: 1. A series of free monthly community programs is being conducted at the high school. 2. The vocational teachers, through their project work, and in other ways are constantly serving the community. 3. Business and professional men are being asked to appear before selected groups of students.

"11. Transfers have been increased during the past two years from 54 to 98.

"12. Final arrangements have been made for holding the Eastland County Interscholastic League meet in Cisco this year.

"13. Devotional exercises are held once each week in all schools.

"14. Encouragement is being offered graduates not able to attend college to return to high school for physical improvement in basic industrial lines is to be provided simultaneously with the bulwark against further liquidation that will be built up by more liberal redcounting privileges. Since nothing more invigorating psychologically could be imagined than a definite ending of the deflationary movement, the enthusiasm shown by Thursday's markets over developments at Washington and Detroit was readily understandable.

The steel industry started the week discouragingly. Operations sagged a point to about 26 per cent of capacity and responsibility for the decline was placed upon the automotive manufacturers whose orders had failed to live up to even the most modest anticipations. At the same time, the United States Steel Corp. announcement that unfilled orders for January had declined 87,203 tons was released.

After mid-week, however, several constructive factors in the trade became evident. American Can placed a $35,000,000 contract with the Steel Corp. for tin plate, Ford announced he would resume operations almost at once, or a month earlier than anticipated, and independent producers of steel sheets marked their product $2 to $4 a ton above recent low levels, convinced that price cutting was useless as a stimulant to business. The Ford announcement resulted in immediate resumption of steel activities at Ohio plants, as mills prepared to furnish materials. At the same time, hopes were raised regarding the prospect that other low-priced motor producers would resume operations, now that their chief competitor was coming forward with the long-awaited new model.

This week's range of the Dow-Jones averages follows:
30 Industrials—High $78.60; low $71.80; close $78.60.
20 Railroads—High $35.57; low $32.76; close $35.57.
20 Utilities—High $31.80; low $29.85; close $31.80.
40 Bonds—High $78.59; low $78.01; close $78.10.

90 million dollar
reason

A SECTION OF A LIGGETT & MYERS TOBACCO WAREHOUSE WHERE TOBACCOS ARE STORED TO AGE AND MELLOW

why Chesterfields are Better!

Just think what this means for Chesterfield smokers. It means that the larger part of 90 million dollars is invested in Domestic and Turkish tobaccos that are being properly aged in Nature's way, and cured so as to make them sweeter and milder.

CHESTERFIELD tobacco is packed in wooden casks, each containing about 1,000 pounds, and stored for two years in modern, up-to-date warehouses.

These warehouses, if placed end-to-end, would be about four miles in length. From floor to ceiling they are filled with these casks of fine tobacco, ageing in Nature's slow but sure way. It takes a lot of money to make a good cigarette—money to buy good tobaccos and money to age them properly.

CHESTERFIELDS are milder, and taste better... there's a 90 million dollar reason why! Just try them!
