HOLMES RESIGNS SUPREME BENCH City Comm'n Sets C. of C. Budget at $8,000 for 1932

EXPENSES ARE DISCUSSED AT HEARING MON.

The Cisco chamber of commerce will operate on a budget of $8,000 during 1932. This was the amount allowed for the operation of the organization after a hearing before the city commission yesterday attended by eight directors and former directors of the chamber when the expenses for the year just past were analyzed and a tentative budget for the current year, providing for a saving of approximately $4,000 per year exclusive of the zoo costs, presented by Secretary J. E. Spencer.

The hearing was held in reconsideration of a previous action of the commission when the budget had been set at $9,000 for 1932. Closing of the city depositories and slow tax collections had impressed the commission with the need of further reducing the expenses of the city and the chamber directors had been asked to submit further possible reductions in its budget.

THE ONLY GOD:—Hear, O Israel: the Lord our God is one Lord.—Deuteronomy 6: 4. OUR CONFESSION:—God is our God forever and ever: he will be our guide even unto death.—Psalm 48: 14.

MARTIAL LAW ISSUE.

Decision of the three-judge special federal court at Houston before which the martial law proration issue in east Texas is being tried in protest of its unconstitutionality by certain east Texas operators, is being awaited by operators generally in some apprehension as to what the probable effect of a decision adverse to the governor's program will be. There is little doubt but that the end achieved by the martial law enforcement has been beneficial to the industry. But the end in the mind of the governor and those associated with him in spirit and fact does not concern the judicial mind which confines its consideration to a technical estimation of the virtues of the machinery by which the end is achieved. If that machinery is illegal it is illegal and cannot justify the result.

Assertions categorically made from the bench during the course of the hearings at Houston tend to support a presumption that the forthcoming decision will not favor the governor's program. These statements, in view of the extreme impartiality that the public expects of its tribunals, particularly its higher tribunals, have occasioned surprise in some quarters. But, in view of the hypothesis upon which Governor Sterling has erected his martial law decision there is at least a reason for these outspoken indictments.

The governor has justified his action in calling out the militia and clamping down the proration lid with the argument that the action was necessary to prevent riots and violence. There probably existed at the time his action was taken the incipient features of such conditions but the reasonable mind must admit that the militia had no excuse to remain any longer than this was true. The ultimate purpose of the order was the conservation of the state's resources and it is unfortunate that the governor did not come boldly out and admit that this was the basis for his action. Upon that issue he cannot say he would not have had the public sympathy and hence a public support that would have made his move all the more impressive.

More particularly as concerns a resource such as oil is it true that no individual or corporation has the right to exploit natural wealth to the detriment of the economic well-being. Conservation of these resources is not only the right but the duty of the state. Where waste and dissipation occur the state is clearly justified in taking action that will enforce orderly development to the extent that benefits will be equal, and no individual or group of individuals will be permitted to profit at the expense of the majority and the interests of the public in general. The end that Governor Sterling had in mind conformed to this view and it is unfortunate that he did not base his action admittedly on the premise.

Whether or not martial law was the proper means to use in accomplishing the purpose can be answered only from a consideration of the efficiency of the state's civil machinery in dealing with the problem. The fact that the governor did summon the militia to do the work infers some criticism of that efficiency.

RAIL OPERATION OF MOTOR LINES.

Rail operation of motor lines was recommended to the Interstate Commerce Commission by Leo J. Flynn, known as the chief examiner of the commission. He made 50 recommendations and first and most important that motor busses and trucks operating in interstate commerce should be regulated by the commission and that motor and rail transportation should work with and not against each other. Another important recommendation made by Examiner Flynn after his two years study had convinced him both railway and water transportation companies should be allowed to supplement their services with motor vehicles, that railroads should be permitted to acquire lines already operating, even though modification of the anti-trust laws might be necessary to bring this about.

Machinery for regulating as outlined by the examiner would be state boards named by governors and regulatory bodies but the commission would have full authority to review findings and would have general supervisory authority. He would have all motor vehicles operating in interstate commerce required to secure federal permits, including contract trucks which the rail chieftains have claimed were taking thousands of tons of freight from them each year. Examiner Flynn's report asserts that many railroads though subsidiary companies control bus and truck lines at present and he recommended that these lines should be supervised by the I. C. C.

This should interest the Texas Truck Owners Bureau, Inc., which alleges that permits of common carrier trucks are being cancelled on technical charges and that the railroad commission "in reality sought to destroy this type of transportation." Railroad commissioners, here and elsewhere, are public servants and just now they are having a rocky road to travel. They are damned when they do and damned when they don't.

DEATH OF A MAN OF MILLIONS.

Julius Rosenwald is dead. He was numbered among the greatest philanthropists of all time. He was 70. He was born in Europe and came to America at an early age. For his first pay job he received five cents an hour. Step by step he rose from poverty to affluence, and in his time he had given for uplifting of humanity more than $40,000,000. His great fortune was founded on the growth of Sears, Roebuck and Co. and he pitted this fortune against religious and racial intolerance, ignorance and poverty, and his benefactions more than established the truth of the saying that he was one of the greatest public benefactors of the age in which he lived.

Think of it. His personal contributions reached $21,568,670, and in addition, he had created the Rosenwald Foundation through an endowment of 200,000 shares of Sears-Roebuck stock worth $20,000,000 at the time of the gift. He erected his own monument as he walked down the highway of life. He hated intolerance; he hated hypocrisy; he believed in the gospel of the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. He was not a great warrior or a statesman of renown. He was a merchant prince for years and years, and he had a memory. He knew the underdog, the dog in the ditch, because he had been in the ditch as a youngster and he used his wealth when wealth came to him to do his best to lift the dog out of the ditch and to teach the sublime gospel that God Almighty made all men and that the Man of Galilee, while on earth, preached the doctrine that they should live together as brothers in peace and unity.

TEXAS COTTON AND THE HOLDING MOVEMENT.

It is said that nearly 50 per cent of the Texas 1931 cotton crop is held off the market by farmers and the holding movement by bankers. Furthermore that the crop has been practically gathered in all parts of the commonwealth except in South Plains section. According to a San Angelo exchange from sheep, goats, wool, and mohair sold in 1931 the range county of West Central Texas is estimated to have received more than $15,000,000 even with prices of a very low level. Not so bad.

OTHER OPINIONS

HE WAS WORTH MILLIONS.

The chances are that Dr. J. A. Udden, director of the bureau of economic geology at the University of Texas, died a comparatively poor man, for he was never one to seek his own wealth. Yet he died worth literally millions to the State of Texas. It is a loss which hits us hard, despite the fact that the results of his work continued and will continue to enrich us and our children's children.

Dr. Udden was a man of retiring disposition and of great modesty. Even on the campus of his own institution he was rarely seen. That was because he spent most of his time at his work, which was his chief delight. He found pleasure in ferreting out the under-ground patrimony of Texans and making it available to them without reward to himself.

Because of Dr. Udden's work Texas will eventually produce vast quantities of potash. At his suggestion prospecting for oil on the lands of the University of Texas lifted that school from penury to fabulous endowment. Individual industries in Texas by the score could point to him for expert assistance which he furnished as a matter of course. There is no way to set a value upon his services rendered through the years, but if it could be determined it would assuredly be enormous. —Dallas News.

In the Political Arena

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD

Chmn. John J. Raskob sent questionnaires to 77,500 contributors to the democratic campaign fund in 1928. He received 25,378 answers, or 33 per cent of the total. According to a Washington correspondent 99 per cent of the Texas replies favor a short platform, 88 per cent favor submission of 19th amendment to the people for decision, 93 per cent requiring all federal amendments to be ratified by the people instead of the legislatures, 77 per cent for submitting straight repeal of the 18th commission to the people through conventions in each state, 55 per cent favored home rule instead of straight repeal amendment, 32 per cent stated that democratic platform could easily ignore the prohibition issue, and 84 per cent voted in favor of submitting either home rule or repeal to the people.

Reaction to the Raskob report is interesting. James A. Farley is chairman of the democratic state committee of New York. His heart and soul are committed to the cause of Franklin Roosevelt. He termed as most encouraging the recommendation of Chmn. Raskob that the stand of the party on the prohibition be formulated at the national convention. Indeed Raskob's willingness to accede his personal views in favor of harmony, Farley said, "is very encouraging and will aid our republican friends."

Sen. Tom Connally of Texas made this declaration: "I am gratified that Raskob will not seek to force a vote on prohibition at the coming meeting of the democratic national committee. It is to be hoped that he will not inject the issue into the national convention next summer and thereby bring strife and dissension into the party on the eve of the presidential campaign. The democratic party never has treated the liquor question as a party issue and there is no occasion to do so now. Raskob says prohibition should be taken out of politics. I hope he will not insist upon putting it into politics."

"Sen. Morris Sheppard ran true to form. His declaration: "Any one could have predicted the questionaire contributors to the 1928 campaign fund would have resulted as it did because an overwhelming majority of them are overwhelmingly wet. In my judgment the best course is to leave prohibition with the district and state constituents of representatives and senators where it does belong and not inject it into party councils where it does not belong."

Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt in his masterful message to the New York legislature which may claim to be a formal bid for a presidential nomination, ignored the burning issue, but he did not ignore the Hoover administration and its policies, although he never mentioned the president by name.

Well, the big show will open in the city of Washington Friday night, meaning the democratic banquet, and on Saturday, the national committee will transact the business submitted and select the convention city for the naming of the standard bearers. Texans are in the big picture. Speakers Garner did not have any reaction to the Raskob report. He smiled and said "nurf-furf."

Rep. Wright Patman called for the impeachment of Secy. A. W. Mellon. Indeed he introduced a resolution bringing with charges or allegations or reasons why Uncle Andy should be impeached and thrown out of office. As usual this will make the rosy checked Patman the headliner in thousands of American newspapers.

Not to be out done, Rep. Hation W. Sumners called for an embargo on the patent office production. He insists that it should cease to function as it is responsible for the machine age and daily throwing hundreds of willing workers out of employment. Why go back to the stone age to provide a remedy for the alleged ills of the toilers of America? Uncle Andy has been the second Alexander Hamilton for a period of 11 years. Criticism rolls off his bald head as water rolls off the back of a duck. Why should he be as "the strong right arm of the president" and he has the absolute confidence of eminent American financiers, known internationally as well as nationally.

That there is nothing that so appeals to the buying public as good advertising. The greatest opportunity for expanding a business is through the printed page. It teaches the buyer to do business with the firm that advertises. Many successful business concerns use a friendly style in their advertising—a sort of friendly chatty way of telling the public about their business and what they have to offer.

Business concerns that are well advertised are known as leaders in their line of business. They keep the public thinking and talking about their business. That is why their goods and service are always growing in popularity. There is no better indication of the public's regard for advertised goods than the reputation that manufacturers of quality and advertised goods have.

TRADING STAMP IDEA. KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 12.—Kansas City's cheaper bootleggers have adopted the "trading stamp" idea. Liquor of drinkable quality can be had for 25 cents a half pint. Under the new scheme, if a person still lives after drinking 25 bottles, he can trade them in at a value of one cent each and get a new half pint.

THREE KINDS OF LOVE

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Ann, Cecily and Mary-Frances Fenwick live with their grandparents. The sisters have been orphaned since childhood. The grandparents—known as "Rosalie" and "Grand"—have long since lost their wealth and the household is supported by Ann's and Cecily's earnings. For this reason, Ann, 28, and Philip, 26, a young lawyer, are still postponing their marriage though they have been engaged 8 years.

Cecily, 22, is in love with Barry McKeel, an engineer, but when he proposes she refuses to name the wedding date because she cannot leave Ann with the financial responsibility of the home.

Mary-Frances, 15, and still in school, strikes up an acquaintance with Earl De Armonth, stock company actor. She meets him secretly on several occasions. Mary-Frances has led him to believe she is 18 years old. He tries to persuade her to become his partner in a vaudeville act.

Phil takes Ann to dinner and a girl she has never seen before sends a note. Phil's explanations are vague. On the way home Phil stops the car to investigate some engine trouble. Letty King, who wrote the note, and Kenneth Smith, her escort, come along in another car. Letty addresses Phil with endearments and Ann, angry gets in Smith's car and asks him to take her home. He tries to make a date for the next night but she refuses.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXIX
In the morning, a Sunday morning with robins and church bells, a messenger by came to the Fenwick's front door to deliver a letter. Ann went to the door and took the letter and read it in the hall and went back to her ironing in the kitchen.

Cecily, putting fresh papers on the cupboard shelves, asked, "What was it?"

"Nothing," Ann answered, and sizzled a damp finger against the iron, and pulled the cord loose for it to cool, "except a note from Phil. I knew almost exactly what would be in it before I read it."

Cecily laughed. "Well, that's one way to say it. But it isn't what I'd say if Barry had sent me a note in the morning. You do take things for granted, don't you, angel? You know, I think it is wonderful, this devotion of Phil's for so long. Barry loves me—but I couldn't keep him as you've kept Phil. That is, I'm afraid I could not."

"Suppose you read my love letter," Ann said.

Cecily, amazed, refused to do anything of the sort, and upset a can of cinnamon.

"Do, please," Ann insisted. "It is funny. It's—too terribly funny. Read it, and I'll tell you about it later. I wanted to tell you, but I couldn't seem to get started."

Cecily read uneasily. "Dear Ann, if you care to telephone to me to explain, I shall be in my room until noon today. Yours, Phil."

"H'm?" Cecily questioned.

"Cavalier, sort of," Cecily said.

"It is simply too funny," said Ann, and laughed and laughed.

"It may be funny," Cecily objected—it seemed barely possible that Ann's laughter was hysterical—"but it can't be as funny as all that. Tell me about it. You said you would."

Ann told, sparsely and with a lack of quotation that would have moved Mary-Frances or any other gifted expositor to pity and to shame. "And now," she finished, and waved the sheet of paper, unfolded so that it flapped, "now—this!" She began to laugh again.

"If I want to explain why he told me lies and why she called him 'darling sweetheart,' he'll listen to me at any time before noon today. Did he say 'a. m.'?" She consulted the note. "No. Well, he should have said 'a. m.'" She kept on laughing.

"But, Ann," Cecily's very voice was shocked, "don't you—care?"

"I must care," Ann seemed to be arguing with herself. "I must care—terribly. But it hasn't started in yet. I suppose it is—excitement or something. There's a hole, of course. When I woke this morning I fell in the hole. But now it feels more like the place left after an aching tooth has been extracted. It is—sort of empty but comfortable—if you understand?"

Cecily, in her first love affair, up in a rarefied atmosphere amid stars and rainbows and sky things at a height from which the earth below was indiscernible, could scarcely be expected to understand the comforts of holes. She said, "Hum-um," ambiguously, and eyed Ann and wondered as to the wisdom of attempting either advice or consolation.

Ann appeared to need neither. She seemed to be finding the full requirements of life in a hot iron and a nightshirt of Grand's. Ann was smiling a little, and amazingly beautiful in that yellow smock.

Rosalie, full rigged from church, came cruising into the room.

"Dear girls," she said, "I come bringing good news, and—pause, overlengthened, and a bright smile—"I fear, bad news. Now, which shall we have first, the good news or—the bad news?"

Ann did not answer. Cecily suggested that the bad news might better be gotten over with first. She didn't believe that Rosalie had either good news or bad news, for that matter.

"Bring me a chair, will you, please, Cecily, darling? Ann, dear, could you reach and lower the shade just a trifle? Thank you, wear, so much. I was sorry that you girls missed church this morning. Dear Dr. Tureck gave us uplift for the entire week—stimulation—um—all that. I am sure I have never listened to a more marvelous discourse. I told him so. I believe one should. I think, however, that it is in the worst possible taste to wear diamonds in the House of the Lord."

"Did Dr. Tureck wear diamonds?" Cecily asked. "And is that the good news or the bad?"

Rosalie shook a playful finger at Cecily. "My dear! Indeed he did not. He has never to wear, I'm sure. That's horribly overdone, isn't it?"

"Of course," Rosalie went on, "Grand and I know that Miss Lane was well, at least, overly pessimistic. These old maids, you know. One does hate to be censorious—particularly on Sunday—but Miss Lane—of course, never having married."

"Rosalie," Cecily interrupted firmly, "what did Miss Lane say? It was about Mary-Frances, I suppose?"

"My dear! Have I worried you? I shouldn't have called it bad news—really. She began by asking after Mary-Frances' health. And then she did go on to say that Mary-Frances' school work of late had not been—well, entirely satisfactory."

"Did she say how it was unsatisfactory?" Cecily asked.

Ann questioned, "Was that all she had to say?"

"Practically all, yes. She talked rather long. We got so weary, so very weary, standing in the sun. She praised Mary-Frances, you know—um—all that. Charming, really—or, rather, you understand me, she tried to be, though of course she had no real personality of any sort. It is no wonder that she hasn't appealed to gentlemen, is it? She is so sort of—well, unwhimsical. So sort of—" gested that the bad news might better be gotten over with first. She didn't believe that Rosalie had either good news or bad news, for that matter.

"Bring me a chair, will you, please, Cecily, darling? Ann, dear, could you reach and lower the shade just a trifle? Thank you, wear, so much. I was sorry that you girls missed church this morning. Dear Dr. Tureck gave us uplift for the entire week—stimulation—um—all that. I am sure I have never listened to a more marvelous discourse. I told him so. I believe one should. I think, however, that it is in the worst possible taste to wear diamonds in the House of the Lord."

"Did Dr. Tureck wear diamonds?" Cecily asked. "And is that the good news or the bad?"

Rosalie shook a playful finger at Cecily. "My dear! Indeed he did not. He has never to wear, I'm sure. That's horribly overdone, isn't it?"

"Of course," Rosalie went on, "Grand and I know that Miss Lane was well, at least, overly pessimistic. These old maids, you know. One does hate to be censorious—particularly on Sunday—but Miss Lane—of course, never having married."

"Rosalie," Cecily interrupted firmly, "what did Miss Lane say? It was about Mary-Frances, I suppose?"

"My dear! Have I worried you? I shouldn't have called it bad news—really. She began by asking after Mary-Frances' health. And then she did go on to say that Mary-Frances' school work of late had not been—well, entirely satisfactory."

"Did she say how it was unsatisfactory?" Cecily asked.

Ann questioned, "Was that all she had to say?"

"Practically all, yes. She talked rather long. We got so weary, so very weary, standing in the sun. She praised Mary-Frances, you know—um—all that. Charming, really—or, rather, you understand me, she tried to be, though of course she had no real personality of any sort. It is no wonder that she hasn't appealed to gentlemen, is it? She is so sort of—well, unwhimsical. So sort of—"

"Well, as to that, she did mention that she had talked with the other teachers. She said that until this term Mary-Frances had been so unusually brilliant. She wondered about her health. Grand and I think it might be wise to take her out of school for a time."

Ann and Cecily spoke together with one voice. "No, no, we'll not do that."

"We'll think it over, of course. We might allow her to finish this term—it is only a month now, isn't it? And then we'll see whether her strength can be built up during the summer. And now for the good news. Mr. and Mrs. Carmichael have invited Grand and me to spend the first week in July with them in their beautiful new home at Seaside. They are going to have a small house party—to celebrate their wedding anniversary. Mrs. Carmichael's charming sister and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Day—her name is Deborah—Deborah Day—aren't they utterly quaint and delightful?—are also to be their guests. Our first thought was, as you may know, that we couldn't leave out little girls. We said as much, and frankly. But Mr. and Mrs. Carmichael were so charmingly insistent. They quite overpowered our every objection. As they said, we see so very little of you now, either of you since you both have your sweethearts—"

Cecily put a stop to that. "Of course you must go. It will be splendid for both of you. Won't it, Ann?"

Ann agreed as wholeheartedly as a person whose mind is fully occupied with two other subjects at the same time could be expected to agree.

"I fancy," Rosalie said, "that our Ann may be wondering how we are to return such hospitality. Grand and I considered that, dear, you may be sure. We discussed it alone together, after we left the Carmichaels. Grand says that with his affairs as they are at this time he feels reasonably certain—rather more than reasonably certain—that within a year we shall have our country home of our own—or, at best, two years; those places we are informed take rather long in building—in which we can return this hospitality and many others."

"We plan to do as the Carmichaels are doing. We intend to fill our home with our friends throughout the season. And if you darlings are married by that time, as I hope you may be, it will be the place where you and yours will spend your vacations—always. Grand rather favors the mountains for a vacation. But we love the sea. It will be a difficult decision: the mountains or the sea. Though, as Grand says, both are possible: a few months in the mountains; a few months by the sea. We need more vacationing. We need more playtimes. All of us. And Grand and I hope and intend to see that we have them; long, lovely, happy playtimes together, and soon now. You darlings will, of course, marry. Grand was saying this morning, in that connection, that he hoped shortly, very shortly, to be able to help both of your sweethearts in a material way. . . ."

Ann was busy with her ironing. Cecily was busy with her selves. Rosalie talked on for a while before she pulled herself out of her chair and went away, moving slowly through her performed vicinity.

CAT HAS ELEVATOR
CANNES, Jan. 12.—The cat that has a private elevator in one of the most fashionable hotels here is rapidly becoming famous. He arrived recently with his mistress, an elderly lady. If he thinks he would like to go for a walk he gets into a basket, his owner lowers out of her window. When it reaches the ground the cat steps out and makes a tour of the gardens. When Madame feels that the cat has been out long enough she rings a bell and the cat is pulled back.

$750.00 Cash Offered For Name of Movie Actress

Reward Will Be Paid Everyone Who Submits Most Suitable Name

From Hollywood comes an extraordinary announcement. A movie actress in need of a name, and $750.00 in cash will be paid for the best suggestion. You can give her yours, or any other name you think of, it may mean $750.00 to you.

This movie actress, whom you have probably seen on the screen of your favorite motion picture theater, is the beautiful Helen Mann. Like most of the stars, she prefers to use a name other than her own, and in order to help her obtain it, $750.00 in cash is offered to anyone who is quick in sending in the name selected. Miss Mann's publicity director says, "Most any name may win. It may be your very own, a name of a friend or relative, or a coined name made up by you. Readers of this announcement are urged to send their suggestions for a name at once, because $250.00 extra will be given the winner if name is mailed and postmarked before January 17, 1932. Just make it easy to pronounce and easy to remember. But send it right away, or you may be late for the promptness prize."

All entries must be sent to the Publicity Director's office, E. A. Williams, Studio AA-264, 1023 N. Sycamore Ave., Hollywood, California. Only one suggestion for a name should be submitted by each contestant. Everyone is invited to submit a name, and in case of ties, duplicate awards will be given. Officials say that any name may win the $750.00, even if submitted on a post card or scrap of paper. If you can use $750.00, here is an opportunity to get it. Send your suggestion at once.—Adv.

Arkansas Finds New "Business"

BENTONVILLE, Ark., Jan. 12.—Northwest Arkansas, long noted in agricultural circles for its adherence to the one-crop system looks forward to renewed prosperity in 1932 through diversification.

Apple growing constituted virtually the entire production of the section for years. Then came six years of "hard luck"—late freezes, low prices, drought.

Castling about for some means of salvation, the farmers went in for trucking, gardening. Dairies began to dot the landscape. Strawberry farms sprung up. Tourist camps were established along the main highway. Trout pools were built and streams of rustic beauty were converted into parks and play grounds.

The latest innovation is the opportunity offered by the 90 day Arkansas divorce law.

Bentonville is but briefly removed from St. Louis, Kansas City, Tulsa, Oklahoma City and Dallas. It is making a strong bid for its share of the "divorce business."

From Bella Vista, one of the outstanding resorts in the Ozarks, recently went out 2,000 letters to Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas and Missouri lawyers advertising the "advantages your clients may find in this beautiful northwest Arkansas City."

Cuero — Cuero farm acreage given over to planting of peanuts in 1932 will total well over 1,500 acres, according to estimate of J. T. Newman.

GANGSTERS AND RUM RUNNERS ENTER BRITAIN

By HARRY FLORY
United Press Staff Correspondent
LONDON, Jan. 12. — Racketeers and rum runners have come to Britain. But the racketeers carry toy pistols and the rum runners smuggle liquor out of the country instead of in.

One of the first racketeers came to grief after only two exploits, neither of which was successful. Arthur Rothwell, 29, now awaits sentence for threatening a shopkeeper that his shop would be "smashed and grabbed" the next day unless he paid a $60 protection fee. He ran away when the shopkeeper threatened to report him to the police.

Later the same day he entered another shop, showed a toy pistol and he represented four crooks, but that the shop would be immune from thefts if the owner paid $25 weekly. He was handed over to the police.

The rum runners are a more serious proposition. They are engaged in running spirits into Norway and Sweden, where the liquor traffic is controlled by the state and prices are high.

Rum running activities came in light when a sloop, Venus, laden with spirits, was wrecked recently on the Norwegian coast, all members of her crew, except two, being drowned. The Venus had sailed from Lerwick, in the Shetland Islands. Investigation since has shown that many similar vessels make Lerwick their home port.

Aberdeen and Dundee also see their share of rum runners, although the vessels clear ostensibly for some likely port. In reality they cruise about the Scandinavian waters, watching for opportunities to land their contraband.

Speaking of the Weather--

by Charles Fitzhugh Talman of the U.S. Weather Bureau

Our Climate Isn't Changing, the Moon Doesn't Regulate the Weather and Battles Don't Cause Rain.

The poet does not sing that "Truth crushed to earth shall rise again," but it is a painful fact that certain popular errors bob up so often as they are knocked down by the bludgeon of science. Meteorology has its share of these invincible fallacies to deal with.

Here are a few things the man in the street knows about weather that aren't so.

1. "The climate has changed. Especially the winters. In our childhood snow lay on the ground for months at a time. Those good old days of unlimited sleighing! On Christmas Eve, for instance, St. Nick always had plenty of snow for his sled and reindeer. Did you ever see Christmas Eve depicted on a Christmas card without snow?"
2. "The moon regulates the weather." Why, not? Doesn't the moon cause tides in the ocean? There are dry moons and wet moons, and the moon and the weather are likely to change together. For a hundred years the almanacs have been printing a table ascribed to the great Sir William Herschel, for predicting the weather from the hour of the day at which the moon "changes." (Sir John Herschel indignantly denied that his father was author of this asinine production.)
3. "Rain follows a big battle." (It also been known to follow a dog fight.) Think of the drenching downpours our soldiers had to endure in France during the World War—all due to the violent cannonading. (What about the rainfall records for the same region in time of peace?) Abnormal weather (anywhere on earth) during the war was caused by the discharge of explosives, if you would believe these weather seers.

4. "When the sun 'crosses the line' in spring and autumn we generally have an equinoctial storm." Well, so do we have Easter lilies somewhere around Easter; which is even more remarkable, because Easter is not confined to a fixed date, while an equinox is, or nearly so.
5. "Indian summer is a definite event in the calendar, following an equally definite 'squat winter.'" In Europe they tie it down to a particular date, which differs, however, from one country to another. In England and France the date is Nov. 11, St. Martin's Day. Strange to say, when the calendar was changed from the Julian to the Gregorian, setting all dates ahead 101 days, this event in the weather calendar shifted with it.

A funny world.

TOMORROW: Can rain-makers make rain?

Collins Presents Case.

President Collins presented the chamber of commerce case. He pointed out that much of the results of the chamber's operation are not realized for years but that these operations are similar to advertising the results of which continue to be felt over a period long after they have been completed. He told the commission that the chamber is now working upon an important proposition looking to the shortening of Highway No. 1 east of Cisco which will mean much in tourist traffic through the city, pointing out that a conservative estimate of the money spent by motorists travelling through Cisco is $1.50 per car.

He reminded the commission that the chamber is the only medium through which such development projects as these can be carried on and if the chamber is eliminated Cisco will have to depend upon its neighboring cities to take care of its interests. The directors, he said, give their time to this work without cost and they should be given funds with which to operate. He said he wanted the commission to be frank in its discussions and then asked Mr. Spencer to present the budget figures he had prepared.

The hearing was held following two other actions taken by the commission, one to extend the time for payment of 1931 city taxes without penalty or interest to and including February 10 and the other to permit construction of an airplane hangar on the city airport by J. W. Penn. In the former action L. B. Campbell, Laguna hotel manager appeared before the commission and requested that the hotel be allowed an extension of time for paying its taxes until February 6. His request resulted in a motion to extend time for all tax payments without penalty and interest to February 10, which was carried.

Judge Eugene Lankford appeared in behalf of Mr. Penn asking that his client be allowed to construct a hangar capable of holding two orinary planes at the city air field, his own and any visiting plane. The commission, after a brief discussion, voted to allow the request and instructed City Attorney Wright to draw the necessary contract, taking care of the city's interest in the matter.

Mr. McMahon declared, as a member of the board, in favor of reducing expenses of the chamber wherever possible, asserting that all concerns are cutting salaries and operating expenses.

President Collins assured the commission that the chamber would conduct its business in the most economical fashion and that he was sure it would not spend the amount allowed to spend during the first four months of the year. He said that "it looks like we are going to have to ask you for $12,000 during the last six months of the year and that you will be able to allow it."

After disposing of the chamber of commerce issue Commissioner Clements made a motion to turn off all center street lights in the business district during the entire night instead of at 11:30 p. m., declaring that each of these lights cost the city $3.60 a month to operate and that the saving would be about $165 a month to the city. He said the West Texas Utilities company had assured him of its desire to cooperate in the matter. The motion was carried by a vote of three to two. Commissioner Donovan and Fee opposing it. Commissioner Burnett and Elliott voted for it with the statement that they would be willing to give it a trial and if cutting out the lights proves unsatisfactory to rescind the action.

Cut Down Street Lights.

According to figures presented by him the city could produce its own pumping power at a great saving that would pay for the equipment within a few years. He said that Lubbock installed pumping equipment of the chamber 16 years ago and now operates a municipal lighting plant which is paid for and is producing revenues that permits the city to reduce its tax rate this year to 50 cents. Vernon has a similar plant, he said, paid for, while Cleburne is pumping its water at a very cheap rate, having paid for its equipment out of the savings secured. He asked the commission to go into the matter thoroughly and to visit the plants named for verification of his statements.

Check Local Situation.

He and City Engineer Reagan are now working on estimates and figures for the local situation. The commission announced that it would go into the matter and determine just what could be done in the connection.

Mr. Russell also declared that the city could pull the street lighting system from a Diesel plant and pay for it out of the savings effected. He named examples of cities where this is being done.

Mr. Russell assured the commission that purchase of the equipment would not constitute an obligation against any city fund other than the waterworks fund and that the company could never demand payment from any fund raised from taxation or to be raised from taxation. He said that payment would be made from the water revenues on the basis of savings effected.

He said he did not want the commission to take his word but he invited them to make careful investigation of his proposition and to study plants and the results obtained in cities where these plants are in operation.

The commission, at the request of City Attorney Wright, said that it had no objection to an engineer sent by bondholders or representatives of city bondholders, checking over the local water system to determine its efficiency and costs and revenues.

The commission voted to pay the expenses of Water Supt. J. G. Reagan to the annual meeting of the state waterworks association at Mineral Wells this spring.

Wichita county showed increase of 6,773 bales cotton ginned in 1931 over record of 12,726 bales for 1930.

Sacramento Christian Science Subject

"Sacramento" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, January 10.

Revelation 7:13,14 supplied the golden text. "What are these which are arrayed in white robes? and whence came they? These are they which came out of great tribulation and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb."

Included in the passages read from the Bible were these from Psalms 51:2,7: "Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin... wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow."

The service also included citations from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, among them being the following from page 241:

"We should strive to reach the Horeb height where God is revealed and the corner-stone of all spiritual building is purity. The baptism of Spirit, washing the body of all impurities of flesh, signifies that the pure in heart see God and are approaching spiritual life and its demonstration."
