Railroad Man Is Murdered At Baird

M. B. Jones, locomotive engineer for the Texas & Pacific railway company for 25 years, died of gunshot wounds at 6:30 p. m. Tuesday in Griggs hospital at Baird.

Fred Bracheen, 26, former cook at a Baird restaurant, gave himself up to Sheriff Bob Edwards shortly after the shooting at 12:30 on a downtown street. Bracheen telephoned the Sheriff's office and asked to be put in jail. He arrived there in a few minutes, accompanied by W. L. Henry, a bystander, and surrendered a .25 Colt automatic, said Edwards.

A charge of murder was preferred against Bracheen in justice of the peace court Wednesday morning by County Attorney F. E. Mitchell. The complaint will go straight to the 42nd grand jury, which began deliberations Monday.

Officers learned the two men had been talking in the Baird postoffice and walked down the street to an office of a lawyer. Jones entered. Eye witnesses to the shooting told officers that when Jones came out of the office, Bracheen pulled a pistol and fired three shots.

Attendants at the hospital said one bullet entered the head above the left ear, another grazed the back of Jones' neck and a third entered the chin and came out through the mouth.

Officers said they removed a .25 automatic from the person of the injured man.

Although Bracheen had not made a signed statement, police attributed the killing to family troubles.

Mrs. Jones, the former Jewell Johnson of Baird, arrived from Fort Worth, the family home, shortly before the death of her husband. They have two sons, Carl and M. B., Jr. She remained in Baird with relatives, an uncle, Sam Wristen, and a cousin, Mrs. Corrie Driskell. Jones' regular run with the railway company was from Fort Worth to Baird.

Bracheen is a member of a pioneer Callahan county family. He is separated from his wife, who is with her family at Strawn.

Coleman And Bangs Fall Before Locals

HERD PILES UP 80 POINTS IN 2 GAMES SINCE LAST FRIDAY

Cross Plains high school Buffaloes may not win the district championship, but at least 500 local fans will tell you that the domestics have the best football combination in district 23-B.

The herd piled up 80 points and yielded only six, in two games the past week. The first was at Coleman Friday night, which Coach Bill White's charges took 33 to six. The week's second victory came Wednesday afternoon on the local grid as the Buffaloes trounced the Bangs Dragons 47 to nothing, in a lop-sided affair.

In the Coleman game, Childs scored 15 points and Gray, Cross and Hemphill, six apiece. Coleman's only counter was made by Stoup in the second period.

The Buffaloes' passing attack was perhaps the brightest angle of the game from a local standpoint. Out of 16 heaves the herd connected with 10 for a total of 171 yards.

Cross Plains made seven first downs to six for Coleman.

Against Bangs Wednesday afternoon, it was the domestics' running attack—and not passing—that proved most effective. The herd was able to connect only five times out of 23 against the Dragons, and then for only 53 yards. Bangs' passing, however, was even worse; out of 21 passes, the Dragons completed only two. Cross Plains made 16 first downs as compared with two for Bangs.

The domestics' points were made in the Bangs game by: Childs, 29; Gray, 12; Cross, six.

The most sensational run of the afternoon was possibly in the second quarter when Cross received a Bangs punt on the 50-yard stripe. He raced half the distance of the field, weaving and side-stepping would-be tacklers to cross play dirt standing up.

In five games the locals have piled up 160 points against 18 for all opponents. These figures do not include the Santa Anna game which was forfeited (1 to 0) to the Buffaloes.

TERRACE LINES RUN BY HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS

Lines for four terraces were run Thursday, on the L. F. Neeb place seven miles south of town, by the third year vocational agriculture students in the Cross Plains High school under the direction of V. A. Underwood, instructor.

Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Caton and Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Caton, all of Eastland, were visitors in the J. A. Caton home here Sunday.

Mrs. Fred Cutbirth, Mrs. J. H. McGowen, and Mrs. S. R. Jackson were Abilene visitors Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Newton, of Putnam, were visitors here Monday.

Texas Centennial Fails To Honor Callahan Woman, Who Was San Jacinto Hero's Bride

Officials of the Texas Centennial have bent themselves double extending courtesies to out-of-state dignitaries; to citizens of Texas who have achieved something or other; and to this group or that, including, recently managing editors of Texas newspapers—but "they haven't done anything for the widow of San Jacinto." The snub—stupid omission may be a more charitable way of putting it—is hard to understand in this most historical of our years.

The widow of San Jacinto is Mrs. Mary C. Berry, whose husband, Andrew Jackson Berry, fought under Capt. Jesse Billingsley as a youth of 20 in the battle that made the Texas Centennial possible. Mrs. Berry, now 83, sits in her white cottage on a country lane five miles south of Baird, and waits for the invitation that hasn't come.

ROOSEVELT WINS WITH LANDSLIDE IN VOTE TUESDAY

In one of the greatest political landslides in the history of the United States, Roosevelt and Garner, standard bearers of the democratic party, carried 46 of the 48 states in the nationwide balloting Tuesday. The electoral vote stands Roosevelt, 523; Landon, 8.

Maine and Vermont alone held the beaten banner of republicanism. The final thinning of the Republican ranks left them with the smallest electoral vote the party has had since the Taft debacle in 1912. Taft had just eight votes; 88 had gone to the Bull Mooseers of Theodore Roosevelt and the rest to Woodrow Wilson. Not since 1820, when James Monroe was re-elected with just one dissenting vote in the electoral college, has there been so close an approach to unanimity of electors.

Texas rolled up the customary democratic majority, with virtually all local interest centering upon six proposed amendments to the state constitution. Of the group, it appeared that all would carry except number one, which provided for state control of the liquor business.

CROSS PLAINS MAN WEDS IN CALIFORNIA

F.F.A. BOYS ATTEND BROWNWOOD MEETING

F.F.A. officers of the Cross Plains chapter attended an officers training school held at junior high school in Brownwood, Tuesday night, October 26. The school was divided into four sections: presidents and vice-presidents, secretaries and treasurers, reporters and historians, and parliamentarians and farm watch dogs.

Those attending from here were: Colvin Lackey, Harold Barclay, Bobby Henkel, Paul Harlow, and Roland Bryan, with V. A. Underwood, advisor.

BETTER BEEVES FOR NEXT STOCK SHOW IS LOCAL FEEDERS AIM

Producing a good quality of beef is no mystery to the Future Farmers and Future Farmer Aggettes of the Cross Plains chapter.

This was shown by 15 of the 16 calves exhibited in the third annual F.F.A. Fat Stock Show here and sold to Swift and Company in the spring.

In the official grading of the carcasses by Swift's representatives, six of the carcasses placed prime which is Swift's best grade of beef, five placed choice, three from good to choice, and one good, respectively.

Members of the chapter trying to better this mark for the fourth annual F.F.A. Fat Stock Show are as follows: Leonard Baum, Deel Edington, Glenn Payne, Hadden Payne, Jimmie Payne, who have two calves each in the milk-fed class, while Vernon Baird, James Allen Burns, and Leo McDermott are feeding one each in this class. In the dry-lot class, Kent Davis is feeding two calves, Toody McDermott, Sanford Mason, and Bobby Pyle are feeding one each in the same class.

Many Stores To Close Wednesday

Most Cross Plains stores are expected to observe "Sunday hours" Wednesday, November 11, in celebration of Armistice Day.

While no petition has been circulated among merchants to secure blanket closing as the Review went to press, many firms were planning to be closed the full day. No celebration is scheduled here for Armistice Day. It is expected that most of those who take the holiday will follow the Cross Plains high school football team to Ballinger to view the conference football game there Wednesday night between the powerful Runnels county team and the locals. It is a conference clash.

The public is being urged to keep in mind that many of the stores will be closed Wednesday and make purchases accordingly.

2 PIONEER TEACHERS MARRIED THIS WEEK

Then Monday evening, Miss Carlene Gray and Bob Howell, formerly of Trent, were married.

Both couples are making their homes at Pioneer.

History of Red Cross Proves Its Fitness For Public Support At Annual Roll Call

Editor's Note: Within a few days committee women will canvass Cross Plains to secure membership for the American Red Cross. To stimulate support for the great, humanitarian organization, the Review asked Dr. J. H. McGowen, local dentist, to prepare an article on the history of the Red Cross. This, he generously did. The article appears hereunder.

The annual Red Cross Roll Call will begin on November 11 and continue until Thanksgiving. At this time it is well to consider the origin and purposes of the Red Cross movement.

The Red Cross is "The Symbol of Service to Mankind", and is the greatest humanitarian movement of modern times. It originated in a practical attempt to meet a practical need with a practical remedy. It began with Florence Nightingale, who developed the modern system of scientific nursing in a hospital with actual nursing of sick and wounded soldiers. Among those inspired by her example was a young Swiss gentleman of leisure, Jean Henri Dunant. In 1859 he came upon the battlefield of Solferino, littered with the dead and wounded of the Italian, French and Austrian armies, with a total of over 90,000 victims. Dunant organized bands of volunteer helpers and cared for the wounded. Afterward he wrote a book in which he gave a vivid description of what he saw and what he and others did. He originated the idea of permanent volunteer relief societies in all civilized countries, which in time of peace would prepare for the emergencies of war. His two governing ideas were permanence and neutrality.

As a result of his book a conference of representatives of European powers was called to consider ways

2 TEACHERS AND 10 MOTHERS ESCORT 75 PUPILS FROM HERE

300 Callahan county school children, including 75 from Cross Plains, will visit the Texas Centennial in Dallas this week-end. The local contingent headed by Superintendent Nat Williams, Miss Anna Mae McConathy, principal of grammar school, and 10 chaperones, left here early Tuesday morning for Cisco, where they will be met by cars and conveyed home.

Thursday and Friday have been set aside as official days for school children of this deputy state supervisor's district, which envelopes 13 counties.

Arrangements have been made whereby the students may make the entire trip for $5.00. This fee includes rail fare both ways, meals, lodging, and entrance to the Centennial grounds and principal attractions.

School will not be dismissed in Cross Plains either Thursday or Friday, however, those making the trip to Dallas will not be charged with a day's absence. Mr. Williams told the Review in an interview Wednesday afternoon.

News dispatches from Dallas early this week stated that 100,000 school children have visited the Centennial to date and that none has been hurt, none has lost a piece of baggage and all have been housed in comfortable quarters. Officials expect half a million before the exposition closes, November 29.

NEW CHEVROLET TO GO ON EXHIBIT IN CROSS PLAINS 7TH

The new model Chevrolet will make its bow in Cross Plains Saturday, as Anderson Chevrolet Company, local dealers, place four of the new models on exhibition at their show rooms.

F. R. Anderson and Babe Wood, of the local dealership, have recently returned from Dallas, where they received full information concerning the new model and its advantages over predecessors. "The new models adhere closely to the time tried Chevrolet engineering principles, but combine greater power, economy, safety and durability with striking new beauty and grace," Mr. Anderson stated.

M. E. Coyle, president and general manager of Chevrolet, announced this week that the company had shattered all previous records during 1936, selling more cars and more trucks than any previous year in its history, and leading the world in sales for the seventh time in the last 10 years. The total for the year will exceed 1,125,000 units, he said, and the objective for 1937 is 1,200,000.

BROWSING AROUND WASHINGTON

By Myrtle Bryant

Cardinal Pacelli, the first Papal Secretary of State ever to visit America, is making a visit here this week. The Pope's "Prime Minister" will have a very busy two days, as he is to make an address at the Catholic University, visit the Library of Congress, be a luncheon guest of the National Press Club, go to Mount Vernon to place a wreath on the tombs of George and Martha Washington, and make a visit to the Georgetown University, one of the historic Catholic institutions, as it was founded by the first Catholic Bishop of America.

The former Queen Victoria of Spain slipped into Washington very quietly for a two-day visit last week at the British Embassy. Their royal visitor was received at the Embassy with the honor befitting a British princess. As you know, she is British on both her father's and mother's side. There were no parties in her honor, no interviews, and her only visitors were members of the Embassy staff. However, the photographers succeeded in obtaining photographs of the Queen and Lady Lindsay in an automobile on their way to the Embassy.

They were presented by two French ornithologists who are visiting the United States with a view to studying our birds and gathering a representative collection to carry home with them. The organ-grinder, or "hurdy-gurdy man", has become extinct in the nation's capital. As a result of complaints that his music disturbed some of the citizens, the police department last week decided to enforce an old law and refused to renew the permit of the sole remaining organ-grinder. For several months we had missed the little monkey who had been with him for such a long time and who amused the children by passing around his pill-box hat for pennies. Upon investigation it was learned that the monkey had bitten the finger of a child and was therefore banned from the streets.

If it is an antique piece of furniture, a rare Japanese plate, a pair of French shoes or just a mismatched pair of socks you are hunting, more than likely it can be found at the Thrift Shop. This shop was established by a group of prominent society women several years ago for the benefit of five charitable organizations devoted to children who profit from the proceeds. It started with two or three-day rummage sales during the Christmas holidays, held in a downtown vacant store which was loaned for the purpose. The women not only ransacked their own homes from cellar to garret and donated everything usable, but also gave of their time. A few found they had unusual talent as saleswomen.

From the thrift rummage sales came the idea of a year-round thrift shop. It was a success from the beginning. At first the women gave specified days each week, some receiving and assorting, others marking and selling, but long ago the profits permitted salaried employees. It is not unusual to receive boxes of slightly-worn French gowns, handmade underwear, and expensive children's clothes to be placed on sale. In the same pick-up load may be a motley collection of cheap but still wearable clothes and cooking utensils, or maybe a Sheraton chair, or toys. The merchants, too, have been most generous in their donations of new goods. Interest in the organization has constantly increased, and this week a necessary move to more spacious quarters was celebrated by a much-advertised housewarming.

It is generally conceded that driving an automobile in Washington is a fair test for any motorist. The district commissioners are aware of the traffic conditions and are doing everything possible to remedy it. A number of testing machines have been installed in the traffic department for experimental purposes. Now, besides listening to talking motion pictures on the subject of safe driving, the applicant for a operator's permit must submit to a test for color blindness; his reaction to approaching headlights at night to determine the number of light units needed to overcome the glare; and the test showing the length of time required to move the foot from the accelerator upon the change of traffic lights. Another experiment which is being tried out in the city is that of placing orange lights in place of red ones over fire alarm boxes. Motorists complained that the red lights were confusing.

Here is something that will interest you interior decorators. The government of Finland has on display at one of the department stores in Washington an exhibition of arts and crafts of that country. There are at least 10,000 pieces, representing the evolution of Finnish arts and crafts from the primitive ages. Some of the pottery vases and jars are copied from originals that were buried in graves in 1000 and 1500 A. D. A large part of the display consists of glass, mostly factory-made and engraved by hand, but in some instances hand-blown. It is in various colors, dark smoky ash that goes so well with yellow lines, pale heavenly blue, amber, and pure crystal.

Howard Coburn, of Big Spring, visited with his family here over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Murman McGowen and family, of Eastland, were week-end visitors here.

In Memory of Eddie Joe Koenig

OUR BABY BOY

He came one day, our baby boy, To brighten our dear home. And Oh, our hearts were full with joy.

We were so glad he'd come. We cherished him with tender love, That tiny little mite; His eyes as bright as stars above, His face an angel's bright.

Day after day love's tendrils grew About our yielded hearts; And greater than he ever knew The joy he did impart.

We watched him grow from day to day With constant, tender care. We watched o'er toddling feet at play, O'er bed time's little prayer.

Six happy years we had him here, Our precious Eddie Joe. Then Angels ope'd the gate up there And bade him home to go.

We'd made our plans and dreamed our dreams Of what we'd hoped might be. But now we know our better dream Comes true eternally.

We then rejoice that for a while 'Twas ours to cherish him, And since he came as God's sweet smile We yield him back to heaven.

HIGGINBOTHAM WILL EXHIBIT $1,000 BED ROOM SUITE HERE

A $1,000.00 bed room suite will be exhibited in Cross Plains next week by Higginbotham Brothers & Company, local furniture dealers, says an advertisement inserted by the firm, on this page of today's Review.

V. C. Walker, manager of the furniture department at Higginbotham's, declares that the elaborate suite has been praised the nation over, since being shown at the national furniture exhibit in Chicago a few months ago. It is reported to be daring in design, yet a forerunner of the furniture trends of tomorrow.

"We would especially like to have all those who love fine furniture to visit our store while this expensive suite is on display," Mr. Walker said for publication yesterday.

"THESE THREE" HAS THREE GREAT STARS

"These Three," Samuel Goldwyn's powerful new screen drama, brings Miriam Hopkins, Merle Oberon and Joel McCrea to the screen of the Liberty theatre for two days beginning Tuesday.

The most talked-about story of the year, this Lillian Hellman screen play depicts how a whispering campaign growing out of a child's malicious lie nearly wrecked the lives of three innocent people.

The drama is laid in a small girls' school run by two young college women, Hartha Dobie (Miriam Hopkins) and Karen Wright (Merle Oberon). Both fall in love with Joseph Cardin, a young local doctor (Joel McCrea), but Hartha, seeing that he loves Karen, conceals her affection.

Mary Tilford, the school's problem child, resenting punishment for wrongdoing, runs away from school, concocting a vicious lie involving the three adults as her reason. As a result Hartha, Karen and Joe become the center of an ugly scandal. The school is lost and the romance is broken.

The situation seems desperate until an unexpected turn of events brings the truth to light and the story ends happily.

MURDER MASQUERADE

BY INEZ HAYNES IRWIN
W.N.U. SERVICE

SYNOPSIS

Mary Avery, a widow who lives in the harbor town of Satuit, Mass., with two negro maids, Sarah Darbe and Bessie Williams, writes a manuscript describing the famous Second Head murder, which occurred on her estate. Next to Mary live Mr. and Mrs. Peter Stow who every year give a summer masquerade party. One of the guests of this function is murdered. Nearby live Dr. and Mrs. Geary and their married daughter Edith and her husband Alfred Bray, Doctor Myron Marden and his step-granddaughter, Caro Prentiss, a beautiful young girl who was born in France. Next live Paul and Lora Eames and their daughter Molly. Molly was engaged to the murdered man, Ace Blaikie. She had previously been engaged to Walter Treadway, who had been Blaikie's secretary, but the engagement was suddenly broken and he had left town. Other neighbors are the Fairweather sisters, Flora, a hopeless invalid, and Margaret. All but the latter two attend the masquerade. Mary's eight-year-old niece, Sylvia Sard, is visiting her for the summer. The wooded part of Mary's estate is called the Spinney. In it is a tiny log cabin, called the Little House. On the day of the masquerade excitement is high. Mary decides to take Sylvia, who is an unusually observant child. Caro Prentiss and Molly Eames drop in during the afternoon. Soon a car arrives and Blaikie, Doctor Marden and Bruce Hexson, a friend of Ace's, alight. Molly is impatient to leave and they all excuse themselves. At the party Sylvia identifies each of the masked guests as they arrive. Ace comes garbed as Julius Caesar. Molly Eames appears as a Snow Queen, accompanied by a man in a fur whom Sylvia identifies as Walter Treadway. They dance together continuously. Caro Prentiss and Marden arrive dressed in Revolutionary costumes, the doctor wearing jeweled shoe buckles. When the guests unmask, Ace, Walter and Molly have disappeared. Sarah Darbe confides to Mary that someone apparently had spent the night in the Little House. Sylvia finds a shoe buckle in the Spinney. Sarah walks down to the Little House and returns screaming. She has found Ace Blaikie stabbed to death in the Spinney. Mary summons Patrick O'Brien, chief of police. Her manuscript recalls early impressions of Ace—how he had been wealthy, the most popular boy in town, how he had studied in Paris to study medicine, became an aviator in the World War, returning to practice in Satuit, how he was recklessly generous and the principal in scores of love affairs. Bruce Hexson had come back from the war with Ace. He was a lawyer, a man of private means and had "got" religion, become a ritualist. Sarah tells Patrick that someone had slept in the Little House the night of the murder. Patrick reveals that she had gone to the Spinney to meet Tony Tordiano, his bootlegger. He does not believe Tony guilty. He also discloses that Walter Treadway had been in the Little House. Meanwhile Walter and Molly come to Mary's house, unaware of the tragedy. Walter readily admits he had spent the night in the Little House, since he had come to town secretly. He and Molly are thunderstruck by the news of the murder. They announce their marriage.

SUNDAY—Continued

I shook my head. "No, I couldn't go away. I shall stay here until you clear up this awful business, or you decide to give it up as unsolvable. I'd like you to talk it over with me. I have a feeling that that's the only way I can wash it out of my mind—by talking about it."

The telephone was going strong now. "Mary, I've been trying to get you all day. I can't believe it. It's the most dreadful thing that's ever happened in Satuit. Oh to think that our lovely quiet little town—Mary, has anybody any idea who—Oh, I suppose you won't want to talk about it over the telephone. Mary, when can I come to see you?"

This is a composite conversation. Everybody said the same thing. I told Ida Lovett, the town gossip—of course she was the first to get me—to come that evening and to bring Lyle Lovett, her husband. And then—a little helplessly—as fast as they asked me, I told the others that she was coming and to come too if they wanted. I knew I'd got to go through all this and I thought the sooner I got it over with the better.

Very soon after dinner, people began to appear. It was more like a funeral than any gathering that has ever been held in my home, except my husband's funeral. My friends entered the house with carefully muted footsteps; they greeted each other with wordless handshakes, voiceless nods; they talked in carefully muted voices. Every look was somber and sad, or worn and weary. Of course I had always known that everybody loved Ace Blaikie, but even I had never realized how much. And yet with all their love, when my friends spoke of him, they looked questioningly at each other.

MONDAY

My night was not so restful as I had hoped. Until long after my clock struck twelve I tossed and turned. I kept living over again that walk down to the Spinney. Finally I drifted off to sleep. I had told Sarah to wake me at ten. Just as the old clock in the hall lit its silvery voice to announce the hour, she appeared with the ray.

"It's a beautiful day, Mrs. Avery," she told me. "I hope you've rested well."

"I did Sarah. I feel much better. You look better too, Sarah."

"Oh I do feel better, Mrs. Avery. I began to feel better the moment I told Mr. O'Brien what was on my mind."

"How's Bessie feeling?" Sarah hesitated.

I looked at her inquiringly. Sarah said nothing. I continued to look at her inquiringly.

"Well, I don't know quite how to describe it, Mrs. Avery. But Bessie doesn't seem to get over the shock the way you and I have. I don't think she closed her eyes all Saturday night."

"It's not surprising," I commented. "Do you think it would do any good if I had a talk with Bessie?"

Sarah meditated. "Maybe I'd wait a little, Mrs. Avery. If she doesn't sleep tonight, perhaps Doctor Geary would give her something that would make her sleep."

"All right, Sarah, we'll wait a day. Is Sylvia up?"

Sarah smiled the charming, indulgent smile which any mention of Sylvia always seemed to evoke in her. "Oh yes, she was up at eight with Dorinda Belle, all dressed up in a clean dress. They had breakfast together. Sylvia and Nancy Burton are playing at the Merry Mere now."

"And Mr. Hopstill?"

"He had breakfast with Sylvia and then he left in his runabout. He went up to the Marden house and got Miss Caro. They stopped here on their way back and they

He obeyed, throwing himself with a sigh into the big chair opposite my hammock.

"Nothing seems to have happened," I said tentatively.

"A lot's happened," he answered tersely. "I've arrested Tony Tordiano."

"How come?" I exclaimed, surprised into some of Hopstill's slang.

"It come very easy," Patrick replied. "Tony practically arrested himself. This morning I'm sitting in my office when in gallops Tony and his brother Frank. Frank brought him in by the scruff of the neck. It seems that Tony hadn't told the whole truth about his talk with Ace Friday morning. Tony was in a jam. He wanted his money and he wanted it quick. He told Ace he had to have that three hundred dollars that night. He wasn't going to take no for an answer and he didn't mean maybe. I find out that Ace has overdrawn his account. They said it wasn't the first time he'd done it. Ace has been sailing pretty close to the wind for a long time. Tony knows all this. He makes Ace realize that his situation is pretty tough. Ace tells him to meet him in the Spinney that night at half past ten and that he'd have the money for him. Tony was prompt at the appointment and so was Ace. Ace pays him three hundred dollars in cash, settling the account in full. Tony swears that the talk was pleasant and he says the whole transaction didn't take more than five minutes. He said, 'When I got the three hundred smackers in my fist, I screamed!' Tony drove over to the Head in his Ford and drove back. Tim saw him come and go, but naturally he didn't stop him. After all nobody knew a murder was going to be committed."

"And so you arrested him!" I put in.

"Yes. As a material witness for the present. It seemed to me the next step in the game. And it'll give the papers something to chew on. I still don't think Tony did it. He showed me a receipt for two hundred and fifty dollars that he paid on Saturday on his mortgage. That came out of the three hundred he says Ace gave him. He spent nine dollars Saturday night, taking his girl to Boston. They had dinner at Little Italy. But I told Tony not to worry and I don't think he is worrying."

Patrick looked at me with all his Irishness glinting in his eyes. "I think I'm giving a pretty good imitation of a detective, Mary. Don't you?"

"I think you're acting with a great deal of common sense."

"Tony told me one thing more. I told him to keep his mouth shut over it and not to spill it to anybody—not even to the force. He said he wouldn't. But I'm telling you, Mary. Tony says that he left Ace standing there in the Spinney. You remember it was a late moon."

"Yes," I answered. "I remember everybody was heartbroken because we didn't have a full moon."

"He says that Ace was waiting for somebody else. Perhaps he owed somebody else money? Is Tony's natural explanation. Tony said that when he left Ace, instead of keeping to the path, he took a short cut through the trees and jumped over your stone wall. But just as he started into the brush, something—he wasn't quite clear what—made him turn and look back. And there was a woman coming around the path from the direction of the Little House in Ace's direction."

"Who was she?" I demanded breathlessly.

"Tony didn't know."

"You mean she was a stranger to him?"

"He doesn't know whether she was a stranger or his best friend. He couldn't see her face. She didn't come under the moonlight. She kept under the trees."

"And you're sure no woman left the party?"

"Nobody, man or woman, so far as we know but Ace himself, who—as you know—Tim Dolan saw and spoke to, and Molly Eames and Walter Treadway who got into Molly's car and drove off. And then Bessie at about twelve. Bessie's alibi is pretty good—if, as Joe Geary says, Ace was murdered before twelve."

"Looks to me," Patrick went on "as though it was some woman on the Head. I don't mean that a woman committed the crime—but that the woman Tony saw lived here!"

"A woman could have walked over the causeway to the Head," I pointed out. "Some do every day."

"I think one of the boys would have seen her," Patrick answered, "unless she came in the day sometime and hid somewhere until night. For the time being, I'm assuming that she lived on the Head. Let's go over the list of people here. Got a big piece of paper, Mary? I'd like to draw a map."

I found an uncreased sheet of brown paper. I brought a pencil and an eraser. I cleared a big table and we sat down to it.

"Now we'll start here with the Stow house," Patrick said, drawing a square at the left near the bottom of the paper. "Everything sewed up there as far as I and six cops can sew it up."

"Let's go up the hill," I put in.

"Here are the Brays and the Gearys." I drew two squares close together. "All four accounted for."

"Now we come to the Marden house," Patrick added a square.

"Both there!" Patrick ticked them off.

"Both there!" I echoed.

"Eames house," Patrick went on, putting another square. "Paul, Florence and Molly accounted for. The Fairweather house next."

"Flora, dying!" I threw in. "And Margaret beside herself with grief!"

"We don't have to think of them at all," Patrick admitted. "Next comes your Little House with Walter—coming back, after the whole thing's over, to sleep. If he had just happened to discover Ace—Oh, but perhaps it's lucky he didn't. With Ace and Molly and him all mixed up in that love tangle, nobody'd given him a break."

"Then you come to my house," I took up the count, "with Bessie and Sarah—"

I heard a little voice talking to its doll, as Sylvia, trotting briskly, came into the room.

Patrick's eyes lighted up. "Come over here, young lady," he ordered. He lifted her up and Sylvia snuggled down into his lap.

"Sylvia," said Patrick, "did you have a nice time at the party at the Stows'?"

"Oh, I had the most beautiful time. I danced with Doctor Ace!"

"Sylvia," Patrick asked playfully, "did you see anyone leave the Stow house before the people took off their masks?" And then, before Sylvia could answer him—and a little as though he regretted this whimsical impulse—"Oh Mary," he exclaimed, "that reminds me—"

He slipped Sylvia down from his lap onto the floor. "Run away," he ordered in a gentle voice. "I want to talk to your aunt."

If Patrick had only put his question seriously to Sylvia—I mean if he had listened to her answer, how much we would have been spared.

What Patrick asked me was, "Mary, what I want you to do now is to tell me all you know about Myron Marden and Caro Prentiss."

"I know a great deal about them," I said in a voice that, to my disgust, contained an acrid defensive note. "They're the loveliest kind of people, Patrick!"

"That may all be true," Patrick agreed with me, "but what I want to know now is what you know and all you know."

"You're quite right, Patrick," I admitted humbly, "and I'm wrong. Well to begin with, Doctor Marden has practiced in Paris ever since long before the war. Caro was born in France and has always lived there. This is her first visit."

"How did they happen to come to Satuit?"

"Friends in Boston recommended it to them."

"Served as surgeon in the war, I believe?"

"Yes."

"No doubt about that, I suppose?"

"Absolutely none. How could there be? In the first place, Doctor Marden is a gentleman and a thoroughbred."

"I'm prepared to agree with you. I'm only asking you—have you any proof of the war record?"

"Only Doctor Marden's word," I answered. "And the fact that Ace Blaikie talked World War with him whenever they got together. They were thrilling talks too, Patrick. I can tell you. And when Bruce Hexson was there, it was marvelous. They never questioned the authenticity of Doctor Marden's war record."

"Well, that's all I wanted to know," Patrick said. "Well I must be getting back to the P. S. Thank you again, Mary, for letting me spill everything to you like this."

"That's all right, Patrick. I hope you do. I hope you come back tomorrow."

"I'll probably be back this afternoon," Patrick declared, taking his hat.

"Oh, one moment." I called as with his swift, light boxer's step, he was hurrying across the piazza. "Bessie's a little worried, I think, and I've been saying to Sarah, so that Sarah would repeat it to Bessie, that I didn't think a woman could have committed this murder. In point of fact, I'm not at all sure. What do you think, Patrick?"

"A woman might—that is, provided she was big and powerful. I've seen women golfers—Well, a woman of the build of Margaret Fairweather for instance. Margaret might—"

His breath died down. The words dried on his lips. He stood staring at me. I stood staring at him. I knew Patrick was seeing the picture I saw—a big woman all in black coming down the path from the Little House. But I am sure Patrick did what I did—blanked that picture. Margaret Fairweather had been in our class in school. We had coasted, skated, picnicked together. Then Patrick said, "I'll be seeing you!"

I repeated, "Come any time you want."

Snakeroot Poisons Animals

Veterinarians say white snake-root causes a disease among cattle, horses, and sheep commonly called "trembles." It seems to affect the nervous system. The poisoning is sometimes contracted by human beings from drinking milk or eating milk products from poisoned cows. The disease is called "milk sickness" in man. White snake-root poisoning is accumulative, according to authorities, and a small amount of the plant eaten over a long period of time may produce the same effect as a large amount eaten at one feeding. Calves and lambs have been fatally poisoned from nursing cows and ewes that had eaten snake-root.

Wives, Know Yourself!—

Accurate Analysis Will Do Much to Overcome Difficulty in Wedded Life

Speaking on the question of trial marriages, a well known writer said, "There should be no need for trial when two people know their own abilities and have measured themselves accurately. Two people who understand themselves will never, I believe, have any difficulty living happily together after marriage."

That is a new slant on the question of success in marriage, supplements a woman writer of national fame. Not "Know thy husband"—or "wife," but "know thyself!"

And, come to think of it, isn't most of the discontent and dissatisfaction in marriage traceable to ideas of ourselves—that may be misconceptions, no less than our illusions about the other person?

How many women's dissatisfaction with their husband has as its source the thought of all they gave up to marry him, all they "might have had" if they had married a certain other man?

How many women's discontent with the role of wife and mother springs from the thought of how much more fascinating pastimes they might have had if they had followed that career?

How many girls' impossible expectations of a fulltime lover and Prince Charming originates in an exaggerated notion of their own devastating beauty and charm?

If all discontented wives would look deeply into themselves, measure themselves, stop fooling themselves, many might discover that the other man they might have married is a self-nurtured illusion; that the career of their dreams is not a soft snap and a joy forever; but a grueling, exhausting job which might have worn them out if they had qualified for it, which they probably would have been unable to do; that they themselves are neither devastating beauties nor always charming, but women who are frequently disappointing and difficult to live with. They might discover and admit to themselves that they are greatly in debt to their husbands for many things that make life easier and better and more worthwhile—that they would not get along so well without them.

Then they might think more of doing their part of trying to make those husbands happy. And that effort on the part of one must inevitably go a long way toward a mutually happy and successful marriage.

and means of organizing and operating relief societies. Ten articles were framed, one article stipulating that "They shall wear in all countries, a white band around the arm, with a red cross upon it, as a distinctive and uniform badge." This is the reverse of the Swiss flag, and in honor of Dunant. Although each country has its own individual organizations operated under the name and plan it desires, the sign of the red cross on a white ground is universal and assures neutrality of the medical corps, wounded, ambulances, hospitals, and all personnel who render aid to the wounded.

This reminder led to the modern Red Cross, which now includes almost every conceivable activity designed to lessen human misery not merely in time of war but also in great natural calamities.

The American Red Cross was founded in 1881, and in 1905 was incorporated by Act of Congress, and is now under governmental supervision. It is supported by voluntary contributions, for which the time is now at hand. The appeal of the American Red Cross is based on a record of service in over 1,200 disasters, which is an average of 80 major disasters a year. In the ten years from 1924 to 1934 the Red Cross spent over $58,000,000 in disaster relief work.

Like a fire department, the Red Cross is always alert and ready to go on a moment's notice to the scene of any emergency. To support this great agency of relief, the roll will be called in 12,000 communities in the week of November 11.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Newton, of Sweetwater, were week-end visitors here.

San Jacinto Widow—

more than 90 miles from her home. They are just names to her. It might be more than she could bear to be escorted before the water curtain to make her bow to the great concourse viewing the Texas Cavalcade, noble spectacle which twice every night re-enacts events of that hot afternoon of April 21, 1936, when A. J. Berry and the other Texas heroes overthrew the yoke of cruel Mexico. It might be too taxing of her strength to be met with ceremony at the Centennial gate—like that 5,000,000th visitor—escorted into the radio room at the Gulf Building and have her greeting to modern Texas, spoken into WFAA's or KRLD's mike, go out waveringly over the loud speaker system reaching the outermost corners of the grounds.

IN GOOD HEALTH
But then—would it? It would not. Mrs. Berry is in excellent health physically and mentally. She still works about the house and would work outside if her sons would let her. The only mark of advancing years is slowly failing eyesight, but she can see well enough to take in all the sights at the exposition. She said today, "Why, in the last 35 years I haven't spent more than $30 with doctors, and only one dollar for a dentist's bill. I feel just as young as when I came here with my husband more than a half-century ago and we started the hard business of making a living from the wilderness."

Facts about Mrs. Berry:
She was born August 29, 1853, in Nashville, Arkansas and was brought to Texas as a baby of two years. Her parents settled first in Brazos county, then in Robertson. In 1871, before her 18th birthday, she was married to Andrew Jackson Berry.

Now San Jacinto was fought 100 years ago and that was 17 years before Mary Berry was born. Andrew Jackson Berry, 29 years old in 1836, was a middle-aged widower of 55 when they married. He had been a captain of the Confederacy and had children by his first wife who were older than his second wife. Berry was an Indian, born in 1816, and came to Texas in 1828 when Stephen F. Austin was still developing his colonization scheme under the laws of Mexico.

START WESTWARD
After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Berry started westward from Williamson county. They settled first in Lampasas county and then, because the country was beginning to settle and Berry could not endure cramping, moved farther west into the cross timbers of Callahan county.

Thirty-seven years ago Captain Berry was killed on the main street of Baird when his team of mules, shying at a passing train, pitched him off his wagon and ran over him. This year the state of Texas erected a monument to him in the little Ross cemetery, and it will be unveiled late this fall. It bears the notation that he was a veteran of San Jacinto, born in Indiana, May 16, 1816, and died at Baird, July 31, 1899. Last August 29 Mrs. Berry was tendered her 83rd birthday party at the home of her youngest son, Ode Berry, in Baird.

Mrs. Berry's living children are George and Grover Berry, who live on the farm with her; Mrs. Fannie Murphy and Ode and Bob Berry, of Baird; Mrs. Pearl Gaines, Abilene; and Harry Berry, of Clyde.

There is another San Jacinto widow living, but she is a 93-year invalid, confined in a hospital for many months in her home city of Rochester, New York. She is Mrs. Mary M. Price. Her husband was William Hardy Brown Price, who died in Atlanta, Ga., in 1906.
