SUGAR ONCE MORE CAUSES TROUBLE

GOVERNMENT TRYING TO FIND OUT WHY THE PRICE HAS BEEN ADVANCING.

"LEAK" IN CAPITAL INVOLVED

Speculators Learned the Contents of Department of Commerce Bulletin Three Days Before Its Release, and Someone May Be Punished.

By EDWARD B. CLARK

Washington.—Uncle Sam is taking a deep and rather sudden interest in the country's sugar bowl. Secretary Hoover of the Department of Commerce and Augustus T. Seyar, Jr., assistant to the attorney general, jointly are trying to learn the who's and wherefores of the sudden rise in sugar prices, which began about eight weeks ago with a jump of one cent a pound. The tariff commission is also looking into the matter.

Sugar, curiously enough, is more than one occasion has done something to sour the disposition of the governmental Uncle of us all. Sugar growers, sugar refiners, sugar sellers, and sugar speculators have individually or collectively borne the brunt of governmental attack off and on for years. Now there is in progress another assault, and the wonder is that if this time anything or anybody is to be brought back captive.

Again, Washington is interested in what specifically, sharply and perhaps picturesquely is called a "leak." A lump of sugar information which was to be carefully guarded for some days, leaked through a crevice in the receptacle of secrecy, and the charge is that speculators and others interested in the sugar market secured a few drops of the leakage and were enabled to profit thereby, to the disadvantage of the general consuming public.

Leaks Don't Come Often. It is the habit of government departments to prepare statements of various kinds for publication and to put thereon a release date, binding those who receive the information to hold it sacred until the day set for its submission to the reading public. It is not once in many hundreds of times probably that any one violates the conditions thus imposed in him. On only a few occasions has a "leak" been traced to persons who were given the advance notices because of confidence they would not reveal anything until the proper time. Generally speaking, leaks have come from persons who had no right to the information, but who managed to secure it through means best known to themselves.

On February 9 of this year a bulletin was issued by the Department of Commerce which contained a statement on the supply of sugar in this country. The contents of the bulletin were not to be released for publication until February 12. Somehow or other the speculators in New York and elsewhere were notified of the contents of the bulletin, their information coming to them late on the day of the bulletin's issue.

It seemingly is the suspicion of the government that the information in this bulletin was used in a distorted form to bring about an advance in the price of sugar, and to give an opportunity to certain interests to make preparations for further advances in the price of the commodity to the consumer. It may be that investigation will show who it was that "leaked" and it may be as a result that someone will be punished. If a department employee gave out the information he probably will lose his job. If some person to whom the information was sent for publication at the proper time released it in advance, he will be blacklisted so that no more confidential government documents shall reach his office.

Woman Vote Losing Potency. The National League of Women voters is to hold its fourth annual convention in Des Moines, Ia., the second week in April. It is understood that one of the matters of interest to be brought before the convention will be what might be called a plan to insure full female representation at the polls when the election days come around.

It probably is not at all beside the truth to say that many of the organizations of women are somewhat disappointed because all of their sisters seemingly have not taken advantage of the change in the Constitution and in the laws which give the gentler sex the right to cast its ballot on an equality with the heat of the sterner sex. Men politicians seem to believe that in a way the women constitute a house divided against itself. Many thousands of the women of the country believe that women should vote as women and that therefore there should be a woman's party. Hundreds of thousands of women believe that a woman's party is, so to put it, "bad business" and that it is the duty of the women voters to align themselves with an existing political party and to attempt through it to secure legislation which they believe will be particularly helpful to the causes in which they are interested. The rallying cry of one branch of women is, "Do It Through a Woman's Party," while the cry of the opposition is, "Do It Through the Old Parties." There will be only one woman to hold a seat in the next congress of the United States. The sex seemingly has not made as much progress toward recognition in the field of national office holding as it was thought would be the case. There are political leaders here who say the women made the initial mistake of thinking that they must press for their legislation as women and not merely as American citizens seeking that which is good.

It is certain, as has been said frequently in Washington correspondence, that woman has the most some of her influence with the national lawmakers and largely because the women have not succeeded in getting together upon any one program of action.

Don't Get Together. One needs to be in Washington only for a short time to learn something of the division in the ranks of the women. There is one woman's organization which is spending a large part of its time and energy in trying to influence congress to do away entirely with the army and navy, to recognize soviet Russia, to condemn the action of France in entering the Ruhr, and to secure the release of the prisoners in penal institutions who were convicted of sedition or seditious utterances during the war.

On the other hand, there is a large body of women which is seeking to nullify the efforts of their sisters who are moving along the paths outlined in the foregoing paragraph. There is one body of women which tried and partly succeeded in securing the passage of legislation in congress which would in a way give to Uncle Sam control of what might be called the family affairs of the people. Another body of women opposed this legislation, and it will oppose any other attempts along like lines.

Troubles of the Party Chairman. The chairman of the national committee of the two great parties have had their troubles recently. Cordell Hull, the Democratic chairman, has had intentions credited to him which he has been in haste to deny; while John T. Adams, now abroad, unquestionably has heard the rumors to the effect that he might possibly be relieved of his duties.

Investigations show that Mr. Adams unquestionably will keep his present place until the choice of a new chairman is made at convention, time next year, and that then he will either continue his work or step down and out as the party nominee for the presidency shall indicate his wish in the matter. Chairman Hull has not been troubled with rumors of a coming change in his office, but he has been troubled otherwise.

A story received wide publication recently that Mr. Hull intended to use his influence as a party man and as committee chairman to compass the nomination of a certain candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination. Recently the writer in his Washington correspondence said this: "In the Democratic national committee headquarters there is no sign of favoritism toward any one of the party's candidates. It is not within the province of a national committee to play favorites before the convention has done its work. The course of the committee is to extol the party and not the man."

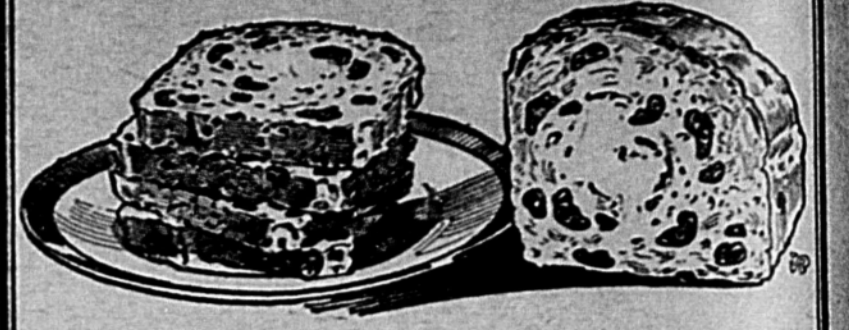

Hull Denies Favoritism Rumor. The quotation expressed and still expresses doubtless the attitude of the chairman of both the Republican and the Democratic committees. Seemingly Chairman Hull did not realize that some persons, presumably seeking to secure advantage for their favorite in the nomination race, would try to give the impression that their favorite was the chairman's favorite.

The attempt to give this impression, however, was made and Mr. Hull was compelled to issue a statement to the effect that he had held no conference with other party men and that the published statement was untrue. He said this directly: "Democratic national headquarters was not created for the purpose either of formulating a platform or of nominating a candidate."

Signs are multiplied today that the contest for Democratic nomination for the presidency is to be as brisk and as breezy as was that in the ever-to-be-remembered Democratic year of 1912, when prior to the convention at Baltimore the track was full of runners with no heavy odds-on favorite. Recently William Jennings Bryan suggested five or six names of men who in his opinion would make good Democratic candidates for the presidency. The name of one candidate believed today to have at least a fair show of securing the nomination was not mentioned by Mr. Bryan. It is true that the Nebraskan, who now lives in Florida, omitted the names of several quite prominent candidates. The fact, however, that he omitted the name of Senator Underwood seems to have attracted sharp attention among political leaders in Washington. Mr. Underwood generally is regarded as a more or less conservative, and as Mr. Bryan is looked upon as one of the extremely liberal party leaders. It is held by some politicians here that the conservatism of Senator Underwood is the reason for his name's omission.

Democratic leaders are wondering today just how much power Mr. Bryan yet wields in the party. One leader says he still is a "powerful power," and while some others seem to disagree with him the general opinion with him is that he is right. The wet and dry issue, it is figured, is likely to be a strong factor in the problem of who is to be who in the Democratic national convention next year. It is fully recognized by military authorities in the United States that the principal instruments of destruction in the next war will be the bomb.

RESENT TAKING OF CENSUS Enumerators in India Find Their Jobs Full of Unpleasant Thrills—Many Are Beaten.

The trials and tribulations of a staff of some 2,000,000 census takers to find out there were approximately 310,000,000 people in India in 1921, have been related by J. Marten, census commissioner for India. The employment of this huge army of enumerators, said Mr. Marten, was necessitated by the fact that, owing to the illiteracy of the population, the employment of the householder as enumerator of his household was impossible. He told of instances of enumerators being stabbed by suspicious Hindus, who considered the census takers too inquisitive. Some of the natives, on the other hand, resorted to violence when bribery failed to induce the census takers to make false entries showing that the natives enjoyed higher stations in the social scale than was really the case. The census, Mr. Marten said, showed gain of 12 per cent over the population of 1911. The average density of population over the whole of India was 177 to the square mile. The maximum density of any province was in Bengal, where there were found to be 608 to the square mile.

Every cellar window was broken by Mr. Jones' old tumble-down house. Consequently, all the small domestic animals in the neighborhood—particularly the cats—ran in and out at will. Sometimes there was quite a gathering in the cellar, and when a pet was missing, it was the regular thing to go to "Uncle Bill's" door with, "Have you seen my cat?" One evening a nearby family missed their "tortoise-shell" at bedtime, concluding that she had joined the happy throng at Uncle Bill's, sent the man over to ask him if he would take a look and see if she was among the number. It may have been a day or many similar demands; at all events, Uncle Bill was not in his usual good temper. "Your cat may be there, or she may not be there," he said, "but I ain't goin' to light up no lamp an' go down in that cellar this time 'n' night searchin' out cats for nobody!"

LESSON FOR APRIL 29

RUTH THE FAITHFUL DAUGHTER

LESSON TEXT—Book of Ruth, GOLDEN TEXT—Thy people shall my people and thy God my God.—Rut 1:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Story JUNIOR TOPIC—Ruth and Naomi. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Ruth's Choice and Its Outcome. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Secret of Ruth's Noble Life.

1. Ruth's Connection With Naor (Chapter 1:1-15). On account of famine in Bethlehem of Judah, Naomi with her husband and two sons sojourned in the land of Moab. After the death of her husband her two sons married Moabish women. After a time her sons died also. After the death of her son Naomi resolved to return to her homeland, having heard that the Lord had visited His people in giving the bread. They went to Moab to escape trouble but only got into more.

was not until Naomi was thus comforted that she resolved to return to her homeland. The good sense to recognize that the hand of the Lord was upon her for good. When the time came for her to go Ruth and Orpah were parted her, for a distance. This was permitted but determined to place before them frankly the difficulties which would necessarily confront them. This was the frank presentation of the difficulties and her repeated urging to go back that called forth from Ruth the expression of her noble choice.

11. Ruth's Noble Choice (1:16-18). Much as Naomi loved her daughters-in-law, she would not have them go in this matter blindly. She told them worst that could come upon them. The principle ought to be carried out by in all our relations in life. In business the spirit of frankness should manifest. At home we should be with each other in the most straightforward way. The same thing characterizes our behavior in church and society. Note the difficulty which confronted Ruth:

1. No Chance to Marry. As Naomi told her that she had no sons for whom she could wait. In day to be unmarried was the great disgrace. Society differed then from now.

2. She Must Renounce Her God. Her idolatrous worship could not be carried on in the land where her people dwelt. This was delicate touched upon when Orpah went back (v. 15). Orpah went back when it plain there was no chance to get a husband. Now Naomi puts a national test upon Ruth, that of giving up her religion. Ruth was equal to occasion. Her mind was fully in God. She was willing to accept as God the one who was able to prove his subjects the nobility of character had observed in Naomi. No very frankness in dealing with caused Ruth to be more determined cast her lot with her. Ruth's pos was so definite and unflinching that the very expressions have come to us in those which "no poetry over-ruled, and no pathos has ceased, and which has gone through centuries with the music that will let them be forgotten." She was determined to share Naomi's journey home, her lodger, her lot in life, and her life in death, whatever that was to be. To crown it all she would announce her heathen gods would Jehovah.

111. Blessings Which Attended Ruth's Faithfulness. Ruth was never for her choice, because—

1. She Found the True God (1). Instead of her heathen gods who were unable to help her she now had living God, the God of Israel, as God.

2. She Found Human, Friendly (Chapter 2). As she went to glean the field she was led to the field of Boaz, a man of wealth and grace. Servants of Boaz treated her with consideration. Even Boaz gave in attention for special consideration given her.

3. A Good Husband and a Home (3-4). She not only secured a husband, but a man of God who was able to give her the abundance of this world's goods.

4. An Honored Place in the Jewish Nation (4:13-17). Though glad to forsake her own people she came one of a noble people.

5. She Became a Link in the Chain of Christ's Ancestry (4:18-22; Matthew 1:5). The one who fulfills the promise of Christ and gives up his all shall get a hundred-fold in life, and in the world to come, a life.

NEW KNOWLEDGE. Former Sergeant Snodgrass and Ditto Private Whipper hadn't seen each other for a couple of years until they joined the same legion post.

Do you still dream your old dream about getting a government farm? asked Snodgrass.

"But now when I dream it, I've got sense enough to know I'm asleep," replied Whipper, sadly.

BETTER WITHOUT. "I asked her to kiss me, without avail."

Dazzled. Jewels move a woman's mind. So the poet said.

Just Think About It. "Well, it's almost time to begin thinking about going fishing."

No Need of Hurry. Georgetown—Oh, look, Ludwig, we are right under the mistletoe!

The Effect. Aunt Lucy—You shouldn't allow the men to kiss you. It's not only unladylike but highly insubstantial.

On Second Thought. He—Did you ever think of getting married?

Art Interference. "Do you take music lessons?" "No," replied the little girl; "mother says my practicing interferes with the phonograph."

Heard at the Show. "That actress' lines are very uninteresting. Why do they applaud her?" "For her outlines, my boy."

THAT'S NOT THE SAME. Hubby: I've told you time and again that your extravagance will drive me crazy.

Musings of a Motor Cop. "Hortense Magee, please marry me!" said I. But she protested.

An Indiscreet Remark. "I'll never tell another man that I'd rather dance than eat."

Better Field. "Where did you get that sledge of fine furs?" "My lecture on the pole didn't go in New York."

CROSS PLAINS, TEXAS

It had been suggested that we set a day for Clean-up day in Cross Plains and it is hoped that interest will be shown in such a move. Ours is a pretty town any way, and it will not take much effort to make it come up to the standard. It is surprising what a difference it will make to trim the edges, cut the weeds and fix up the fences. Civic pride is like measles—it spreads rapidly. Fix up your place and your neighbor will be ashamed to leave his place unkept.

The citizens living in the northeast part of Cross Plains are pleased to see the vacant lots owned by Mr. Geo. Garter of Abilene, being cleaned up and the brush removed. The place looks like a little park, with the trees all trimmed and Mr. Carter should be thanked for this show of civic pride. Mr. John Westerman is looking after the job for Mr. Carter and says he hopes to see other vacant lots cleaned up. Why can't we all show more pride in our town and follow Mr. Carter's example?

Ross Wagner and wife will leave about the first of May for their home near Magdalena, N. M. They have a "claim" there. Their many friends here will regret to see them go, however they will all join in wishing much happiness and prosperity as they go.

Mr. Wagner is favorably known here, as he was reared in this community. He served as bookkeeper for the Guaranty State Bank and later for Higginbotham Bros. & Co. and at present he is employed as bookkeeper for the Junior Oil Co. He and his splendid young wife are very popular and will have warm friends where ever they may go.

COMMUNIST REVOLT IN GERMANY FEARED

SIMULTANEOUS OUTBREAKS IN FOUR RUHR CITIES AROUSES FEARS.

NEW EMBLEM IS DISPLAYED

Black Flag Surmounted by Torch Is Insignia Worn by Jobless Planning Attack on City

Berlin.—Simultaneous outbreaks in four Ruhr cities have led to unconfirmed reports that a huge communist revolution is under way in the occupied district.

Riots at Mulheim, Essen, Recklinghausen and Oberhausen, in which a half score were killed and many wounded, culminated in plans for a concerted Communist attack on Mulheim City.

Many of the rioters at Mulheim bore a new emblem, consisting of a black flag surmounted by a torch. The outbreak at Oberhausen, resulting in several persons being injured with bricks and bullets, was significant chiefly as being a part of the general revolt.

The Government has ordered police from other cities to enforce the authorities at Mulheim in an effort to prevent a recurrence of riots. The French military authorities, who thus far have refused to interfere in the fights between the German municipal government and the German Communist and the German Communist are criticized by officials here for holding up reinforcements of Green Security Police from other parts.

Factories in the Ruhr region still continue to work part time despite the protests of idle workers for full-time work or full pay for part-time work. Among the plants still operating are those owned by Hugo Stinnes, the richest man in Germany.

Socialists condemn the uprising, saying it is suicidal for Ruhr labor's united front against the French. They characterize the so-called "unemployed mobs" as syndicalists, working for their own interests. The Communist press here denigrates the revolters as "Dedoviste's auxiliary troops," saying the disturbances were encouraged by the French General to create a split in German resistance.

Several Berlin papers, claiming the agitation to have been fomented by the Reds, declare Communist leaders were seen beside the French examining passes at the Mulheim City gateways.

DAVIS INSPECTING RIO GRANDE IRRIGATION SITES

Says Reclamation Projects Hinge on Restoration of U. S.-Mexico Relations

El Paso, Texas.—The full utilization of the reclamation possibilities of the Rio Grande depends largely upon the restoration of friendly relations between the United States and Mexico. This was the declaration of D. W. Davis, Assistant Secretary of the Department of the Interior, who is here inspecting irrigation and reclamation projects under the Elephant Butte dam.

"When a full and frank understanding has been reached between this country and its southern neighbor," Mr. Davis said, "I am confident that it will be an easy matter to conclude an agreement that will make it possible to use all the water of the Rio Grande from its source in Colorado to Gulf, which will pave the way for other large enterprises of international importance in the lower valley.

"Our rigid observance during the last ten years of the solemn covenant between the United States and Mexico apportioning the stored waters of the Rio Grande is irrefutable proof of our friendship and just dealings toward our neighbors on the south.

"The Rio Grande project, by reason of its importance and complex international and interstate problems, occupies a position unique in the history of American reclamation history," Mr. Davis declared.

"Its completion was a notable event in the history of the Southwest," he continued. "It brought to a close a protracted period of strife between the citizens of neighboring States and made possible an amicable adjustment of a controversy nearly a half century old between the two Republics."

Mr. Davis spent the day inspecting the lower valley. He will visit the upper valley soon. He is accompanied by Arthur P. Davis, director of the Reclamation Service, and Miles Cannon, Reclamation Commissioner. Their trip is part of the plans of Secretary Hubert Work for bringing his department into closer touch with the practical side of reclamation. Mr. Davis said.

POLICE GET $2,000,000 OF BANDITS LOOT

All But $30,000 of Bonds and Securities Stolen in April 2 Holdup Are Found

St. Louis.—Nine men have been arrested and more than $2,000,000 in securities stolen in the daring robbery of a mail truck here April 2, was recovered in spectacular raids by detectives, postoffice inspectors and deputy sheriffs, in St. Louis county, west of this city.

The loot was found in a luxurious bungalow at Richmond Heights, occupied by William F. Doering, 29 years old, a tire salesman and alleged gangster who was taken into custody with Theodor Weisman, 28 years old, proprietor of a shoe store in Johnston City, Ill., and William D. Williamson, 49, who said he was employed as a yardman by Doering.

In addition, six other men were arrested on suspicion at Clayton, the county seat, in connection with the holdup. In the attic, in an old suitcase, the officers discovered most of the loot taken from the mail truck. Some of it was negotiable security, while the majority consisted of unsigned notes of the Federal Land Bank.

Further search of the house revealed a small arsenal. Saved-off shotguns, dynamite caps, fuses, revolvers and automatic shotguns were taken from hiding places by the officers, who declared these were the type of weapons that victims of the robbery told the police the bandits carried.

Two of the nine men arrested, Doering and Williamson, are believed to have been participants in the holdup in which six bandits took part, according to the police, who said their descriptions fitted descriptions given by the holdup victims. According to Inspector Reuter, whose men are busy checking up the recovered bonds, all but $30,000 of the $2,000,000 loot taken in the robbery has been recovered. Among the list of the stolen securities was $4,500 of Liberty bonds, a large number of stock certificates and other bonds and notes, and a small amount of cash.

TERM IN PRISON FACES THE SUGAR GOUGERS

Government's Drastic Move to Protect the Public Is Surprise to Washington

Washington.—Criminal prosecutions may follow an injunction suit filed in New York by the Federal Government to protect the public against exorbitant sugar prices.

The first phase of the Government's action against the alleged sugar conspiracy was completed with institution of the civil injunction proceedings to prevent speculative trading on the New York sugar exchange. The criminal phase was held in abeyance, but acting Attorney General Seymour announced that it was under serious consideration.

Final decision regarding criminal action was said officially to be before Attorney General Daugherty who is now at Asheville, N. C. He was personally active in drafting the injunction suit based on the Sherman anti-trust law and anti-trust provisions of the Wilson tariff act and was said to be considering a request upon the Federal grand jury in New York for criminal indictment, under the conspiracy provisions of the Sherman act, of defendants named in the civil suit.

Another development in the sugar situation was a report to President Harding by the Tariff Commission which found that duties of the new Fordney-McCumber tariff act were not a factor in the recent increase in sugar prices.

The commission declared the increase was due to other causes and that if the tariff was reduced or removed the tendency would be to decrease production of American beet sugar and increase imports of the foreign products.

The attackers imprisoned one official turning him over to a French military official who refused to intervene.

Following the disturbance all business houses were closed.

Brock's automobile killed Mrs. Aljen O'Donnell; her son, Leo, and Miss Mary Murphy a friend of the O'Donnells late on the night of March 2 as they alighted from a trolley car.

Rimrock Trail by J. Allan Dunn Author of A Man To His Mate, Etc. Illustrations by Irwin Myer

JIM PLIMSSOLL SYNOPSIS—To the Three-Bar ranch, Arizona, owned jointly by Sandy Bourke, "Mormon" Peters and "Soda-Water" Sam. Manning, a fine colic makes its way in the last stages of exhaustion. Inscription on its collar says its name is "Molly," property of P. Casey. Grit, "property of P. Casey," sent a Sam mount and let the dog lead them. The two find a dying man, Patrick Casey, pinned under an overturned wagon. Kneeling beside the wagon is his young daughter Molly, fifteen. They extricate the old prospector, who dies repeating, "Molly—mine!" "I'll repeat," "Molly—mine!" says Grit. It is agreed that Molly stays as mascot of the ranch, she and "Three to the Mines" being the "Three to the Mines." Sandy insists upon an education for Molly.

CHAPTER III—Continued. "I don't sabb the eddication part of it," she answered. "Jest what does that mean? I don't want to go to school with a lot of kids who'll lar at me."

"Sandy went on earnestly, 'I don't mind tellin' you that the Three Bar has put all its chips into the kitty an', while we figger sure to win, we can't cash in until the increase of the herds starts to make a showin'."

"Not till after the fall round-up, anyway. So your eddication'll have to be put off a bit. Meantime you'll learn to ride an' rope an' mebbe break a colt or two, between meals an' ridin' hard on the dirt. When you start in, I'll be at one of them schools in the East where they make a specialty of western hesslers. How's that sound?"

"Sounds fine. Only, you've picked up Daddy's hand to gamble with. Mebbe it ain't yore game, nor the one you'd choose to play if it wasn't forced on you."

"Sister," said Sam, "yore skinnin' yore hides too close. Sandy 'll gamble on which way a horn-toad 'll spit. It's meat an' drink to him. We won this ranch on a gamble—him playin'." He gambled as he breathes. An' whatever hand he plays, me an' Mormon backs. Why, if we win on this moin's deal, we're way ahead of the game, seen' we don't put up anythin' in cold collateral. It's a sure-fire chinch."

"Sam says it," backed Sandy. "One good gamble!" Molly tumbled at the waistband of her one-piece gown, working at it with her fingers, producing a golden eagle which she handed to Sandy. "That's my luck-piece," she said. "Dad give it to me one time he cleaned up good on a placer claim. Nex' time you gamble, will you play that—for me? Half an' half on the winners. I sure need some clothes."

The glint of the born gambler's superstition showed in Sandy's eyes as he took the ten dollars. "I sure will do that," he said. "An' mighty soon. Now, then, talk's over, all agreed. Sam an' me has got some work to do outside. Won't be back much before sun-down. Mormon, he's goin' to be middlin' busy, too. Molly, you jest acquaint yoreself with the Three Star. Riders won't be back till dark. No one about but Mormon, Pedro the cook, an' Joe. Rest up all you can. I'm goin' to bring yore dad in."

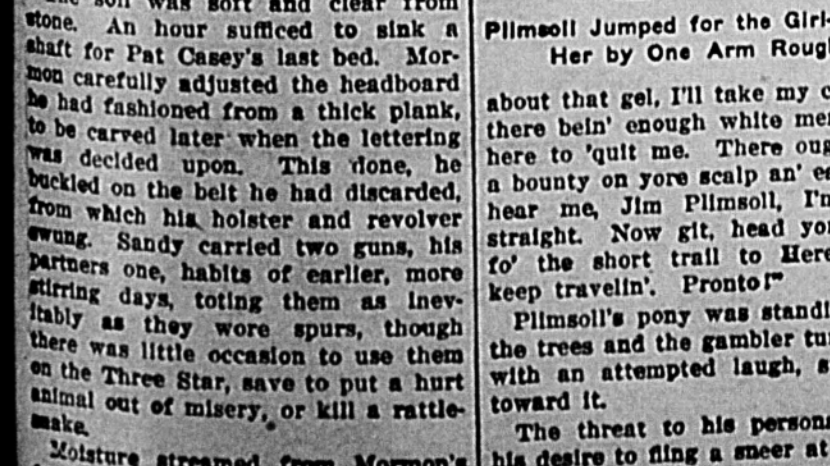

Tears welled in Molly's eyes as she thanked him. Again Sandy saw the girlish frankness change to the gratefulness of a woman's spirit, looking out at him between her lids. It made him a little uneasy. The men went out together, walking toward the corral.

"Sam an' me's goin' to bring in what's left of Pat Casey, Mormon. We'll take the buckboard, with a tarp' to stow him under. Up to you to knock together a coffin an' dig a grave under the cottonwoods an' below the spring. Git Joe to help you. No sense in lettin' the gel see you, of course." Mormon rounded up the half-breed Joe, to help him dig the grave, first locating Molly in a hammock he had slung for her in the shade of the trees by the cistern.

The soil was soft and clear from stone. An hour sufficed to sink a shaft for Pat Casey's last bed. Mormon carefully adjusted the headboard, he had fashioned from a thick plank, to be carried later when the lettering was decided upon. This done, he buckled on the belt he had discarded, from which his holster and revolver swung. Sandy carried two guns, his partners one, habits of earlier, more stirring days, toting them as inevitably as they wore spurs, though there was little occasion to use them on the Three Star, save to put a rattling animal out of misery, or kill a huckle-maka.

Moisture streamed from Mormon's face, pached his clothes as the heat and his exertions temporarily melted some of his superfluous adiposity. He wiped his face with his bandanna. Suddenly his big body stiffened. He heard Molly's voice from the cistern, frightened, then storming in anger. Mormon ran at a sprinter's gait from the cottonwoods, along a side of the corral, through the trees bordering the cistern. The girl was out of the hammock, facing a man in riding breeches and puttees, his face concealed for the moment by his hands. A sleeve of the girl's frock was torn away, the outworn fabric in streamers and Mormon recognized him for Jim Plimssoll, owner of the Good Luck pool parlors, in the little cattle town of Hereford, where furo, chuckaluck and craps were played in the back room, owner also of a nearby horse ranch. There was blood on his face, the marks of finger nails.

Plimssoll jumped for the girl, caught her by one arm roughly. She struggled fiercely, silently, striking at him with her free fist. Mormon's gun flashed from his sheath as he shouted at the man. Plimssoll wheeled, releasing Molly. His dark face was livid with rage, a pistol gleamed as he plucked it from beneath the waistband of his riding breeches. The turf spat between his feet as Mormon fired. "Got the drop on ye, Jim! Nex' shot'll be higher. Showe that gun back. Now, then," as Plimssoll sullenly obeyed, "what in h—l do you dicker yore doin'?" Mormon's jovial face was tense, his voice stern and cold. "Keep still," he ordered, walking toward the pair, his gun covering Plimssoll, the cheery blue of his eyes changed to the color of ice in the shade, the pupils mere pin-pricks. Molly glanced at him once, fingers caressing her bruised arm. "He kissed me while I was asleep, the d-d skunk!" she flared. "I'd sooner hev rattlesnake-pizen on my lips!" She stopped rubbing the arm to scrub fiercely at her mouth with the back of her hand. "It ain't the first time I've kissed you," said Plimssoll. "Yore dad didn't stop me from doin' it. I didn't notice you scratchin' like a wildcat, either. Where's yore dad? And where do you come in on this deal between old friends?" he demanded of Mormon. "Her dad's dead," said Mormon simply. "Molly is stayin' for a spell at the Three Star. Sandy Bourke, Sam Manning an' me is lookin' out for her an' we aim to do a good job of it. Sabe?" Plimssoll's thin-lipped mouth sneered with his eyes. "Gone in for baby-farmin', have you, or robbin' the cradle? Who's playin' the king in this deal? I—!" The leer suddenly vanished from his face, the tip of his tongue licked his lips. Mormon's gun was slowly coming up level with his heart, steady as Mormon's gaze, finger compressing the trigger. "The law reckons you a man—s fur," said Mormon. "Yore pala 'ud pack a jury to hang me for shootin' the dirty heart out of you, but—ef you ever let out a foul word or a loo-

SUN REVOLVES AROUND EARTH SAYS SCIENTIST

Professor Charles Nordmann, famous french astronomer, has just published a book called the "Kingdom of Heaven" in which he asserts that the old argument of the earths rotation about the sun is absurd. And he adds that it is far more possible to say that the sun revolves about the earth than the earth revolves about the sun. After centuries of belief in Galileo's dictum that the earth revolves about the sun, the fact that this famous scientist and astronomer has declared the theory absurd, was like throwing a bomb in the machinery.

Cottonwood News.

"Rain" of late it seems that old Jupiter Pluvius has been a little too liberal toward us. We all in Gallegan county really count ourselves within the vast domain called "West Texas" where some times it becomes awfully dry, so now it would be a little like the poet song:

"Lay on, lay on McDuff," and we hope that later on in the summer no man may realize to his regrets that he said "erough."

Mrs. Jim Hembree who has been visiting her son, John Hembree and family, of Abilene, for several weeks has returned home. While there, we understand, she took treatment from specialist at the sanitarium and now her health is greatly improved.

On Sunday morning and night preaching services were held at the Church of Christ, the sermons being preached by Rev. Morgan Harlow of Cross Plain.

Several people from Admiral have been in Cottonwood lately, Tom Anderson, J. A. Derberry, Buck Gary, Clark Smith, Jr.

Oil? why yes! We share the same "glorious" hopes that most of our towns and communities have had, and now prospects appear good for us soon perhaps to have a few drilling contracts closed, and thibit pounding a way to loosen the "golden fluid."

Our community was given a splendid address and moving picture exhibit Friday night by Mr. W. M. Whitaker, special representative of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Arch Gensley, Miss Mary Robertson and Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Durringer of Cross Plains visited S. E. Settle and family Sunday afternoon.

M. H. Ray was in Clyde on business last Saturday.
