BUD MCGAREY'S HOUSE BURNS

Saturday night Bud McGarrey's three-room house and all contents burned on his farm about three miles south of Cottonwood, origin of fire supposed to be from a lamp. He carried no insurance. The loss is heavy, being about $1,000 in extent. We understand that assistance has been given by neighbors and others. We are sorry to learn of his loss.

SECONDHAND GOODS.

I have charge of the Second-hand Store. See me at the Candy Shop when you want to buy or sell secondhand goods.

1 3-4 INCH RAIN FALLS

BREAKS LONG DROUGHT. GIVES PLENTY STOCK WATER.

The country was getting dry and stock water scarce enough, the town being out of water, when everybody was made to rejoice and the whole country to smile because of 1 3-4 inches of rain Monday afternoon. The rain is reported to be good at Burkett, Cross Cut, Cottonwood, Pioneer, Rising Star, Sabanno, etc., but was very light west, little or no rain falling west of Dressy. Wherever the rain fell there is plenty of stock and cistern water, and a season that will almost insure good late crops. It is generally believed that the rain will be of great benefit to cotton, although a little late, the effect of the rain on the boll weevil a factor to be determined by the ensuing weather. The city lake was out of water, the Hill boys who run the water works having pumped the last time Sunday. We are now assured of water for six weeks to two months time. Of course, we cannot say just to what advantage this will be to cotton, but it is a "cinch" we can't make much cotton without some rain, weevil or no weevil, and feed crops cannot but be helped. Everybody is wearing the smile that "won't off" whether justifiably or not.

The rain was accompanied by a hard wind that did some damage and sent some people to the cellars. A panel of the plate glass front of Higginbotham's store on the south was broken, a part of the ball park fence blown down again, and Tom Cross's barn slightly wrecked. Lightning struck Uncle Jim Coffman's house, tearing off the comb of the roof on the north end for about ten feet, doing but little damage, however. There was nobody at home and it is fortunate that the house was not ignited from the lightning.

HOLDS TO A DOLLAR.

Do you hold to a dollar? To those who do not take The Review because of the cost, we want to say that if you'll look over this issue's advertising you cannot but be convinced that this issue alone can be worth, and will be to many, the pitiful one dollar a year. Be honest with yourself and figure what your home paper is worth to you. Then tell us what you decide. C. B. Beeler only lately subscribed for The Review, giving as his reason the fact that he could save money on the advertising. It pays strictly as a matter of dollars and cents.

This Issue.

On page one you will find the two standing ads. of the banks, both changed this week. Also good live locals of The Racket Store and others. Write-ups of the rain, fire at Cottonwood, town improving, etc., and on page two local news, and ads. of Shackelford, Mercantile Co., Forbes & Adams, Boyles, etc. Pages three and four carry the "Exploits of Elaine," Tyler Commercial College matter, etc. Page five has Brazelton-Pryor & Co. and Bennett ads. and country correspondence from Burkett, Cottonwood, Pioneer, etc. On page 6 you will find Higginbotham's big ad. and other local ads. and quite a deal of local news, this being one of the very best pages in the paper.

Read all of it. It is not dead stuff nor plate.

AMBITIOUS SONS AND DAUGHTERS

Let Those Who Know Advise You As To The Kind Of An Education You Should Have. Men At The Head Of The Affairs Of Our State And Nation.

Following are extracts from letters from some of America's greatest men on the value of a business education. Hon. Champ Clark, Speaker of the House of Representatives, Washington, D. C. says: "Since I have been elected Speaker I have had it more thoroughly impressed on me than ever before that a thorough business college training is of exceeding importance." O. M. Dickinson, former Secretary of War, Washington, D. C. "Contemporaneously with taking my general education, I took a course in a business college and found it of value to me, not only generally, but in the practice of law." R. B. Glenn, ex-Governor of North Carolina: "I cheerfully recommend to every one a practical education for their children." Oswald West, ex-Governor of Oregon: "The modern business school plays a large part in fitting young men and women for their entrance into the business world." T. C. Pickett, Representative from Iowa: "The value-even necessity of a practical education to young people today is so obvious that no argument should be required in support of it." E. F. Noel, ex-Governor of Mississippi: "I take pleasure in testifying to the importance of a practical business education, and to the efficiency of a properly conducted business school in imparting such knowledge." C. M. Haskell, ex-Governor of Oklahoma: "consider practical business education of the greatest importance." John W. Kern, United States Senator: "Everybody ought by this time to understand that business men and business women need business education on the same principle that a doctor must have a medical education." Joseph M. Carsy, Governor of Wyoming: "Too much cannot be said in behalf of a good commercial education." "I do not believe that such an education can be too highly commended."

Shouldn't the above evidence settle the question with you as to what kind of an education is needed? Write for catalogue of America's largest commercial school, the one giving the most extensive course of study, the one placing its graduates in positions, the one that has more than 2000 enrollments annually from over half the states of the Union, the school with a National reputation, the Tyler Commercial College, Tyler, Texas. Some Golf Statistics.

Golf is only 24 years old in America, but already the statisticians estimate that it costs us $50,000,000 annually, caddies alone accounting for $12,500,000. Makers of armaments are evidently not the only manufacturers who derive their profits from encouraging rivalry. But, then, the only losses incurred by excessive golf are time, money and temper. One university professor also charges it with encouraging large numbers of boys to fritter away the time they might have used in learning a useful trade, but the caddy with his ears open can learn a lot more than bad language, and if careful, can save enough to start in business, that is if he does not become rich enough to retire. Many caddies make more than some university professors.

Persistence of Early Habits.

Prof. Ernest Haeckel, whose life has been an almost continuous series of great achievements, attributes his activity to his early training. "My mother," he says, "would never permit me to be idle for a moment. If I stood at the window day-dreaming, she would always urge me to be up and doing. 'Work or play,' she would urge, 'but do not stand idle.' Through this reiterated admonition, physical activity became a lifelong habit with me, and work almost a necessity of my being. If I have been able to accomplish my full share of labors, this is the reason. I am never idle, and I scarcely know the meaning of ennui."

The Kind You Have Always Bought

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

SYNOPSIS.

The New York police are mystified by a series of murders and other crimes. The principal clue to the criminal is the warning letter which is sent the victims, signed with a "clutching hand." The latest victim of the mysterious assassin is Taylor Dodge, the insurance president. His daughter, Elaine, employs Craig Kennedy, the famous scientific detective, to try to unravel the mystery. What Kennedy accomplishes is told by his friend Jameson, a newspaper man. After many fruitless attempts to put Elaine and Craig Kennedy out of the way the Clutching Hand is at last found to be none other than Perry Bennett, Elaine's lawyer and the man who is engaged to marry. Bennett goes to the den of one of his Chinese criminals. The Chinaman forces from Bennett the secret of the whereabouts of $300,000. Then he gives the lawyer a potion which will suspend animation for months. Kennedy reaches Bennett's side just after he has lost consciousness. He puts on his clothes with a decided effort and went out.

The nearest doctor was about half a block away and we scarcely knew him, for neither Kennedy nor I are exactly sickly.

He sounded me and pounded me, talked a little while on generalities, diet and exercise, then walked over to a cabinet, and emptied out a few pills into a little paper box.

"Take one every hour," he said. "Cut your cigarettes to three a day, and don't drink coffee. Four dollars, please."

I paid him and went back to the apartment, my head soon in a whirl from a new onset of the fever.

I managed to get back into my bathrobe, and threw myself down on the divan, propped up with pillows. I had taken the pills, but they had no more effect than sugar or milk. By this time I was much more delirious and was crying out.

I saw faces about me, but I did not see the faces which were actually out by our hall door. Wu Fang and Long Sin had waited patiently for their revenge. Now that they thought sufficient time had elapsed, they had stolen silently to the apartment door. While Ling Sin watched, Wu listened. "The white devil has it," whispered Wu Fang, as he rejoined his fellow conspirator.

How long I should have remained in this state, and in fact how long I did remain, I don't know. Vaguely, I recall that our acquaintance, Johnson, who had the apartment across the hall, at last heard my cries and came in.

Somehow or other I knew the state I was in. I knew it was Johnson, yet it all seemed unreal to me. With a great effort I gathered all my scattered wits and managed to shout out, "Telegraph Kennedy—Rockledge."

At about the same time, up at Rockledge, Kennedy and Elaine, with her cousin, Mary Brown, were starting out for a horseback ride through the hills. They were chatting gayly, but Kennedy was forcing himself to do so.

In fact, they had scarcely gone half a mile when Kennedy, who was riding between the two and fighting off by sheer nerve the illness he felt, suddenly fell over in half a faint on the horse's neck. Elaine and Mary reined up their horses.

"Why, Craig," cried Elaine, startled, "what's the matter?"

The sound of her voice seemed to arouse him. He braced up. "Oh, nothing, I guess," he said with a forced smile. "I'm all right."

It was no use, however. They had to cut short the ride, and Kennedy returned to the house glad to drop down in an easy chair on the porch, while Elaine hovered about him solicitously.

They summoned the country doctor, but it took him some time to get out to the house. Suddenly a messenger boy rode up on his bicycle and mounted the porch steps. "Telegram for Mr. Kennedy," he announced, looking about and picking out Craig naturally as the person he wanted.

Kennedy nodded and took the yellow envelope while Elaine signed for it. Listlessly he tore it open. It read:

Craig Kennedy,
Care Wellington Brown,
Rockledge, N. Y.
Jameson very ill. Wants you. Better come. Johnson.

The message seemed to rouse Kennedy in spite of his fever. His face showed keen alarm, which he endeavored to conceal from Elaine. But her quick eye had caught the look.

"I must see Walter," he exclaimed, rising rather weakly and going into the house.

How he ever did it is still, I think, a mystery to him, but he managed to pack up and, in spite of the alternating fever and chills, make the journey back to the city.

When at last Craig arrived at our apartment, it must have seemed to him that he found me almost at death's door.

Ill himself, Kennedy threw himself down for a moment, exhausted. "When did this thing come on, Walter?" he asked of Johnson.

"Yesterday, I think, as nearly as I can find out," replied our friend.

Craig was decidedly worried.

There was only one person in New York to call on," he murmured, pulling himself out of bed and getting into the living room as best he could.

"Is that you, Godowski?" he asked over the telephone. "Well, doctor, this is Kennedy. Come over to my apartment, quick. I've a case—two cases, for you."

Godowski was a world-famous scientist in his line and had specialized in bacteriology, mainly in tropical diseases.

As Kennedy hung up the receiver he made his way back again to the bedroom, scratching his ear. He noticed that I was doing the same in my delirium.

"Has Walter been scratching his ear?" he asked of Johnson.

Johnson nodded. "That's strange," considered Craig, thoughtfully. "I've been doing the same."

He turned back into the living room and for a moment looked about. Finally his eye happened to fall on the telephone and an idea seemed to occur to him.

He went over to the instrument and unscrewed the receiver. Carefully he looked inside. Then he looked closer. There was something peculiar about it and he picked up a blank sheet of white paper, dusting off the diaphragm on it. There, on the paper, were innumerable little black specks.

Just then, outside, Doctor Godowski's car drew up and he jumped out, swinging his black bag. Not being acquainted with what we were going through, Godowski did not notice the almond-eyed Chinaman who was watching down the street.

"How do you do, doctor?" greeted Craig faintly, at the door.

"What seems to be the difficulty?" inquired the doctor eagerly.

"I don't know," returned Craig, "but I have my suspicions. I'm too ill to verify them myself, so I've called on you. Look at Jameson first," he added.

While Godowski was examining me, Craig managed to get out his microscope and was looking through it at the strange black specks on the paper. There, under the lens, he could see the most remarkable, almost microscopic creature, all legs and feelers, a most vicious object.

Weak though he was, he could not help an exclamation of exultation at his discovery, just as Godowski had finished with me.

"Look!" he cried, calling the doctor. "I know what the trouble is, Godowski."

He had started to tell, but the excitement of the journey and the exertion were so great that he could hardly mumble.

"Here look—on this paper," he cried. "From the telephone—"

He had risen and was handing the paper to the scientist when his weakness overcame him. He fell flat on his face on the floor and dropped the paper, spilling the contents.

Godowski, now thoroughly alarmed, bent over Craig. But the delirium had overcome Kennedy, too.

Unable to make any sense out of Craig's broken wanderings, Godowski lost no time in taking samples of our blood.

Then he hurried away to his laboratory in his car. As he did so, however, Long Sin leaped into a taxicab which was waiting, and followed.

In Godowski's laboratory, where he was studying tropical diseases, the bacteriologist set to work at once to confirm his own growing suspicions.

From a monkey which he had there for experimental purposes, he drew off some blood samples. Then, with the aid of his assistant, he took the blood samples he had obtained from us. The monkey's blood, under the microscope, seemed full of rather elongated, wriggling germs, of a peculiar species. In and out they made their way among the blood corpuscles, each like a dart aimed at life itself.

Then he took the samples of our blood. In them were the same germs—carried by that gruesome tick!

"The spirillum!" he muttered. "They are infected with African recurrent fever. The only remedy is atoxyl, administered intravenously, after the manner of Professor Ehrlich's famous '696.'"

Godowski had rung the call box hastily for a messenger, when Long Sin, who had managed stealthily to creep up to the doctor's laboratory window, scowled through at the action—then moved away.

While his assistant gathered the apparatus, the doctor wrote: Miss Anne Septix, 301 W. —th St.

Please go at once to the apartment of Craig Kennedy, — Claremont Ave. Surgical case.

GODOWSKI, M. D.

The boy arrived finally and the doctor gave him a generous tip, to hurry with the note.

He had turned the corner, however, when Long Sin appeared. Subtly he played on the boy's cupidity to get him to deliver a note of his own—even offered to deliver the boy's note for him. The flash of a five dollar bill made the rest easy.

As the boy disappeared on a fake errand, Long Sin, with the real note, hurried downtown, smiling wickedly.

"They have discovered the fever, master," he reported in the den.

Wu was beside himself with rage. Before he could speak, however, Long Sin spread out Godowski's message. "But I have this," he added.

It took merely a glance to suggest to Wu a new plan of action. He rose and moved quickly into the back room. "Come," he ordered Weepy Mary. "You must dress up as a nurse—immediately. Quickly she donned one of the numerous disguises, while Wu planned his campaign.

"Here," he directed when she was ready, handing her a little vial. "You must infect every instrument the doctor uses on Kennedy and Jameson—see?"

She nodded, and a moment later was on her way uptown.

Meanwhile Godowski himself had arrived at our apartment, much to the relief of our friend Johnson, and was unpacking his instruments.

Quickly he improvised two operating tables and placed one of us on each. Then, with his assistant, he put on his white robe, mask, gloves and other precautions for asepsis, setting out the apparatus for the intravenous administration of the drug that would kill the spirillum.

They had finished their preparations and were waiting for Miss Septix. "She ought to be here now," muttered Godowski impatiently, looking at his watch.

Just then a cab drove up outside.

"Perhaps that is she!" he exclaimed. "It must be."

A few moments later the door of the apartment opened. His face showed his disappointment. It was a stranger.

"Miss Septix is ill," she introduced, "and sent me to take her place."

The doctor looked about. "Very well, then," he said briskly, seeing his preparations. "Are you ready to go ahead?"

She nodded and threw off the coat that covered her immaculate white uniform.

The specialist plunged whole-heartedly into his work of saving us now. "Hand me that needle, please," he directed the false nurse.

She moved over to the table near by and took it up, pausing only long enough to dip it secretly into a vial she carried with her.

"Please hurry," repeated the doctor. She turned from the table and handed it to him. He adjusted it and already held it poised for the thrust which was not to cure but to poison us further.

"Weepy Mary!" cried a frightened voice at our door.

Elaine had been deeply alarmed by the sudden illness of Kennedy and the message from Jameson. No sooner had Kennedy gone than it flashed over her that Wu Fang had predicted something like this.

"The threat!" she exclaimed, seeking her cousin. "Mary, I must go to the city—right away."

On the next train, then, she had been speeding back to New York.

One glance at the improvised hospital was enough to alarm her. But the sight that had transfixed her was of a woman whose face she remembered well, though Kennedy and I had never seen her.

"Please, Miss," began Godowski's assistant, trying to quiet Elaine, while Godowski turned in vexation to his work.

"No, no!" repeated Elaine. "This woman is no nurse. She is a criminal!"

Godowski paused. It was true he did not know the woman. He gazed from Elaine to Weepy Mary in doubt.

The game was up. Weepy Mary dropped a piece of gauze which she had soaked in the solution from the vial which Wu had given her and booted for the door.

So sudden was her flight that no one was quick enough to stop her.

The excitement, more than ever, alarmed Elaine now. "Tell me," she appealed to Doctor Godowski, "what is the matter?"

"In some way," he replied quickly, "they have become infected with the bite of an African tick which carries spirillum fever."

Godowski raised his hands in despair. "I was just about to start," he cried. "Everything is ready. I can't send for another nurse. Every minute counts."

Elaine had thrown off her coat and hat. Her sleeves were up in a moment, and before the doctor knew what she was about she was scrubbing her hands in the antiseptic wash.

"Only—show me—what to do," she cried. "I will be the nurse!"

Several days later, when he had recovered sufficiently from the diabolical plot which had been made upon us, Kennedy was again at work in the laboratory, while I was writing. Our speaking tube sounded, and I knew that it was Elaine and Aunt Josephine.

"How do you feel?" inquired Elaine anxiously, as she almost ran across the laboratory to Craig.

"Fine!" he exaggerated, brightly. "Really?" she repeated anxiously. "Look!" he said, turning to his microscope.

He turned some blood from a test tube in our electric incubator and placed a drop on a slide. It was some of the blood infected by the germs carried by the tick.

"That is how our blood looked—before the new nurse arrived," he smiled, while Elaine looked at it in horror.

Then he pricked his arm and let a drop smear on another slide.

"Now look at that—perfectly normal," he added. "Oh, I'm so glad," she exclaimed faintly.

"Normal—thanks to you. You saved us. You were just in time," cried Craig, taking both her hands in his.

He was about to kiss her, when she broke away. "Craig," she whispered, blushing and looking hastily at us.

Aunt Josephine and I could only smile at the disgusted glance Craig gave us, as he thrust his hands in his pockets and wished us a thousand miles away at that moment.

When We Would All Be Missionaries.

A well known agnostic was present at one of Henry Ward Beecher's lectures, and after the address the man presented one of his daughters—a beautiful girl—to Mr. Beecher, saying, "Mr. Beecher, here is a girl who, according to your ideas, is a heathen."

"Well, my dear," said Mr. Beecher, "if all heathens were as pretty as you are we would all become missionaries."

Knowledge and timber shouldn't be much used till they are seasoned.—Holmes.

Owing to the demands of the war office there is such a dearth of horses for harvest purposes in the north of England that farmers are training oxen for the reapers and the plows, and it is not an unusual sight to see an old horse, long past the stage when he would attract the eye of a remount officer, yoked with a steer. There are many who would be glad to see a revival of the use of oxen for certain draft purposes, since it would probably lead to an increased raising of cattle for beef purposes.

HUSBAND RESCUED DESPAIRING WIFE

After Four Years of Discouraging Conditions, Mrs. Bullock Gave Up in Despair. Husband Came to Rescue.

Catron, Ky.—In an interesting letter from this place, Mrs. Bettie Bullock writes as follows: "I suffered for four years, with womanly troubles, and during this time, I could only sit up for a little while, and could not walk anywhere at all. At times, I would have severe pains in my left side.

The doctor was called in, and his treatment relieved me for a while, but I was soon confined to my bed again. After that, nothing seemed to do me any good.

I had gotten so weak I could not stand, and I gave up in despair.

At last, my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I commenced taking it. From the very first dose, I could tell it was helping me. I can now walk two miles without its tiring me, and am doing all my work."

If you are all run down from womanly troubles, don't give up in despair. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic. It has helped more than a million women, in its 50 years of continuous success, and should surely help you, too. Your druggist has sold Cardui for years. He knows what it will do. Ask him. He will recommend it. Begin taking Cardui today.
