Oilers Defeat Coyotes Again Sunday at Baird

The Oilers defeated the Baird Coyotes again Sunday afternoon, in a fast game, by score of 6 to 4. The Coyotes are a fast team, but they don't have much luck with the Oilers.

It is reported that the Coyotes will come here for a game next Sunday. Cross Plains has one of the strongest teams in this section.

Good Preaching and Singing At Methodist Revival

The revival meeting now in progress at the Baptist Church under the direction of Rev. Tom W. Brabham, pastor of the Methodist Church at this place, continues to grow in interest. Ross G. Smith of Meridian, Texas, arrived Monday afternoon to take charge of the music. Mr. Smith comes highly endorsed. In fact he is among the best in his field of work in the state. His work with the children is wonderful. His music ability is upto the very best. You are missing a real treat if you are not attending the services.

Rev. Brabham is still at the same old game fighting sin and unrighteousness. His messages are backed by the Holy Scriptures, powerful and helpful. We predict great results from the services. The Christian people in all churches are urged to give a helping hand in this hour. We need to enthroned christianity in our homes as never before.

Let's turn out and put the Devil out of business in Cross Plains, Texas.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Harris of Greenville were here last week visiting in the Davis Montgomery home.

Miss Melba Mitchell is visiting with her sister in Brownwood, this week.

Peace, Goodwill

Columbia, Peace and the Spirit of Brotherly love have been joined in one person, a beautiful woman. Big Cade Family Reunion And Barbecue

Friday, Aug. 20, a reunion was staged at Sabanno that about 500 people will always remember as a most enjoyable event. It was a reunion of the Cade family, descendants of Mrs. M. E. Cade, 86 years of age.

There were 177 children, grandchildren and great grandchildren with about 300 friends to enjoy the occasion. The affair was held in big grove under brush arbor, where a big barbecue was enjoyed, with lemonade, coffee, cake, pies and etc.

The celebration took place at the old Cade home where Clay Cade now resides.

Rev Collins of this city made an interesting address, reciting history of the Cade family as pioneers in march of progress and community welfare in that community and others, where they lived.

Ye editor had an invitation to attend as a friend of the family, and we regret that we could not be present on account of the rush of business, for we are sure we missed a great treat in mixing with those splendid people—and we could have done justice to the big barbecue. Next time, we are going if we get an invitation. We congratulate Mrs. M. E. Cade and other members of the family, who made such an enjoyable event possible.

Work On Sewer System To Start Monday

Work on the sewer system did not start this week as was expected, due to the fact that some of the material did not arrive, but the work will begin Monday, it is stated.

Many are signing up for sewer service. They are signing up better than was anticipated. If you are ready to sign up, see mayor Gwin, or any of the Council men or committeemen. It is hoped to have the system operating within sixty days. The sooner the better.

Dr. Howard states that he is equipping his office with the best electrical equipment that can be bought, for treating chronic and acute diseases.

The equipment consists of Quartz lights and Deothermy machine, the most modern and up-to-date in use, and when installed will represent an expenditure of approximately one thousand dollars.

Dr. Howard is enlarging his offices preparatory for installation of this machinery in the near future.

"You mean Mr. Baxter? Yes, I saw him. He has gone down to Coyote." The repression of his tone drew Maria's attention. She turned and looked at him, the lamp, unshaded, in her hand, its light full on Caleb's face. She gasped and then a sort of baleful joy flitted over her swarthy face.

"Madre de Dios! You met heem. Seguro! An' you fought weeth heem. Bueno! I hope you spoiled for heem that han'some face. May he never return—that Baxter! Eef he does, eet is better for heem that he does not meet Padilla. Si, for Padilla weel not use his feests. An' now you mus' wash that blood from your face, senor. I weel breeng warm water to the room where you sleep before. After you eat, you weel find all ready."

Her speech, fierce at the start, had softened. She bestowed a nod of approval on Caleb, her eyes kindly, and swept out. It was plain that Baxter had lost favor at El Nido. It was equally plain that Maria had meant to convey that much to Caleb, together with her emphatic indorsement of the fight that he had not contradicted.

The coffee and sandwiches finished, Caleb went through the patio to the room, finding a lamp, warm water and towels. He made himself more presentable, though the bruises and abrasions where the steel wire had marked his flesh still persisted. Cleansed and refreshed, he lit his pipe and strolled through the patio to where the three cars were parked, Kennedy's, Baxter's roadster and Conklin's machine. Conklin had a chauffeur, his practice was evidently larger and more profitable than that of the physician from Coyote. The man spoke to him civilly. He was examining Baxter's car.

"Anything wrong with it?" asked Caleb.

"Nothing wrong with the car. Only with the bean of the guy that owns it. Let his battery run down. No juice. The Spanish dame says he cussed it up and down when he tried to start it. Nothin' doin' an' he has to hoof it way down the canyon."

It seemed to piece up now—the idea that Baxter had offended Betty Clinton and had been summarily dismissed. So summarily, that, finding his car batteries useless, he had decided to leave the car to be sent for and stalked off down canyon in a mood that Caleb had been ready to match.

"Mr. Warner?"

Doctor Conklin had come out of the house. Caleb joined him.

"There's nothing more that I can do. I must get back to Paloma. I've suggested that you go with me. There's a nurse needed. It would be a good idea to get Burton, though Kennedy will stay, and is doing all that can be done. The trouble culminates rapidly, but Miss Clinton naturally wants Burton."

"He may not be able to get here in time. It's touch and go. Clinton is not a strong man. He got caught in the hills in the storm. Dropped! Then his horse wrenched a fetlock in fording the swollen stream and Clinton led it home. D—d foolishness! I have suggested that you can get in touch with Burton as soon as you reach a phone. I can get you to Paloma in time for the ten o'clock train—last one tonight. And you may be able to arrange about a nurse. She'll have to come back with Burton in his car."

"Of course," Caleb replied, "I'll see that a nurse arrives. If you'll give me some addresses and names to round up if I can't get one through Burton."

"Good. I knew you'd tackle it, Warner. Told her so. Hop in. We haven't too much time."

They started without a chance for Caleb to see the girl again. But he was in her service and she would know that.

At Paloma station with a few minutes to spare, the doctor wrote down the address of a nurses' home and the names of the women he preferred on such a case.

"If you can't get any of these, try the second address," he said. "Mention Burton's name with the case. Carries more weight than mine. And get that nurse over here tonight. If you can't raise Burton here's a note that will get you oxygen—two tanks—that must come with the nurse. It may make all the difference. Here comes your train. Good luck to you."

Caleb got a working wire to Golden at the Oakville Ferry and he let the boat go, putting in the twenty minutes before the next one to making arrangements. He got a nurse and told her to hold herself in readiness. He also got the oxygen. Burton was on a case and could not leave.

Arrived across the bay he found car and nurse awaiting him. Fifteen minutes saw the oxygen loaded in the car and they caught the midnight ferry for the return. They slid off the boat to the apron at Oakville Estuary at the first moment and went rocketing through the night to Paloma and onto the sideroad, plowing up that with the full energy of the high-powered car, rushing across the valley and sounding the strident klaxon to let the ranch know that they were coming.

Kennedy stood waiting to meet them. "It's touch and go," he said. "Where's the oxygen? Did you get it? Thank God! It may save him. Come, nurse."

Maria came out for the nurse's grip. "She stay here tonight," she said. "Of course. I am going back for Doctor Burton. How is Mr. Clinton?" "Ah, he is seek—seek! I pray—but I do not know, senor. I am 'fraid." Her face worked with the emotion expressed in her voice, the car lamps showed her eyes red with weeping.

At four o'clock Caleb got in touch with Doctor Burton, sleepless from long vigil.

"A cup of coffee and I'm off," he said. "It's over one way or another by this but I'll go, of course. Clinton and his girl are old friends as well as patients. As for you, young man," he added suddenly bending his gaze on Caleb, "you're all in. What the devil have you been up to? A hot bath and bed for you. Instantly. You look as if as you had been taking part in a riot."

Caleb felt like it. Despite his anxiety, he succumbed to sleep in the cab. He dropped into unconsciousness the moment he stretched out between the sheets. The sun was flooding the room when he awakened. It was a glorious morning, vital, hopeful. Caleb went immediately to his telephone.

"Are there any messages for me?" he asked the operator. The girl gave him the office number of Doctor Burton, that had been left with her and, on his request, got him the connection. The doctor's office nurse spoke briefly. Caleb hung up the hook softly. Betty Clinton's father was dead.

CHAPTER XIII

Baxter Strikes

Caleb did not feel that his present relations admitted of his writing a letter of condolence to Betty Clinton and he would have been at loss how to word it. To send flowers, much as he desired to do something to express the sympathy that he felt for her supreme sorrow, was the function of relatives and friends more intimate than he. But Mrs. Carquinez helped him out of his quandary. He met her on the street, on her way to the Veddars. Betty, she told him, was almost prostrated, but was now bearing up bravely.

"You've Had a Falling Out With Baxter?" He Said Abruptly.

"She takes things standing up," said the artist's wife. "She told me of all you did for them the night her father was taken ill. She is very grateful. I shall tell her that I have seen you," she ended, as she shook hands. "Is there any message you would like me to give her?"

"My sympathy, my wish that I could do something. That is all."

Hinckley had a suite of offices in the building of the Crystal Springs Water company. He turned over to Caleb one of these rooms with its draughting equipment, and there Caleb worked hard over his plans while Hinckley, with the engineering staff, was making fuller investigation across the bay with a view to confirmation of the project. Options were already

Some Facts About Washington Shaft

Now that the Washington monument is temporarily closed to the public, for the installation of a new elevator, it is but natural, perhaps, that some of the facts that are associated with it and which have been taken for granted should interestingly be recalled. For instance, not everyone knows that the number going up the monument in a single day has often exceeded 10,000, or that there is not an officially inscribed line anywhere on the monument indicative even of the fact that the structure is in honor of George Washington. The shaft, by the way, was started in 1848, but after 150 feet or so of the total 555 were completed, there was a long period of suspension, due largely to the fact that the movement to finance it by popular subscription collapsed. The present simplicity of the structure was not originally contemplated, for around the being carefully negotiated. A few days should see the deal assured and actual work commenced in the field.

Caleb caught only a glimpse or two of Mary Morgan. Cox's offices where she worked in her capacity of assistant to the president's secretary were on another floor from Caleb's room. He knew, through his bank, that she had received the money, he imagined that she had given notice to the company and was waiting for its expiration before going away.

Baxter had seemingly dropped out of sight. Caleb had changed his living quarters at the beginning of the month, which was a week after the meeting in the canyon, and he had not met him, though he had occasionally heard him leaving or entering his room, or moving about it. He knew that Baxter was "posted" on the delinquency board at the Altruists for dues and dining-room chits. It was plain that the sale of Hermanos valley had fallen through.

Cox came one morning into Caleb's office and discussed general progress for a few moments before he took a seat across from the high stool on which Caleb worked at his drawings.

"You've had a falling out with Baxter?" he said abruptly. "He's after your scalp and seems to be tolerably cocksure he's going to get it," he went on, not waiting for comment. "He came to me this morning with a proposition that involved, with our acceptance of it, your dismissal, or at least the relegation of you to a subordinate position, so far as your identification with the project is concerned. I was busy and I made an appointment for three o'clock. I should like you to be present."

"Thanks," said Caleb. "I'll be very glad of the opportunity."

He did not offer and Cox did not seem to expect any explanations. He could not tell exactly what Baxter had for weapons but he rather fancied he knew the principal one that would be employed—and he was ready with a parry that would prove a bit disconcerting. This weapon was a boomerang he had long known the existence of and looked forward to seeing it launched only to return, and strike the thrower. It was only since his talk with Mary Morgan at Haight's that he had considered Baxter as likely to use it.

Baxter was the type of man who would never blame himself under any conditions. To the score against Caleb he would undoubtedly set the denial of the loan, the loss of the Hermanos valley sale, his dismissal by Betty Clinton on the night of her father's sickness and death, and the fight on the bridge in which he had been first worsted and then rescued by Caleb. The rescue would be an ignominy. It was doubtful whether Baxter had been normal since his mother's marriage. His brain had been under stimulation or depression of alcohol—practically continually. He had brooded over his reverses and now Caleb was placed as sole author of all his troubles, the target of his vindictiveness against conditions.

Prepared as he was in a measure for the interview, it struck him that here was a test to see how far he could depend upon Cox where the company's best interests were at stake. Cox knew about the boomerang. It was the decent thing for Cox to do to ask him to be present. Mighty decent.

Caleb's face was grim when he entered Cox's office at three o'clock, his eyes were narrowed and his lean jaw jutted, bossed with tense muscles. Cox pushed over cigars with a greeting gently modulated as usual. There was a difference, though; Cox's eyes were cold as shadow ice. As Caleb lit his cigar in his chair the buzzer sounded and Cox took up his desk phone with a little nod at Caleb. The nod was confidential—warning, despite the frosty eyes.

"All right, show him in," he said. Baxter entered, jaunty, well-dressed, his head held confidently. But he looked the worse for wear, for all his money. He smelled of the barber shop, but massage had not changed the flabbiness of his putty-colored flesh nor taken the rings from beneath slightly bloodshot eyes. He stared hard at Caleb and then sneered.

Again Caleb recollected Field's prediction. It looked as if it was swiftly coming to pass. Baxter's eyes had lost humanity; there was no more soul in them than there would have been in artificial orbs of transparent glass back of which crimson light was burning. The sneer was more of a snarl, that of a beast. His whole face was animal.

"I understood this was to be a confidential interview," he said. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE TWO WALKERS

This is the story of two walkers. You might think it was going to result in two stories.

But you will see that it results in only one story about one walker, even though it starts in with two walkers.

There were two little girls and they lived in different houses.

They had not gone out walking together.

In fact, they hardly knew each other at all.

One came home from a walk and her family asked her what she had seen.

"Oh, nothing," she said.

"Didn't you see anything interesting at all?" she was asked.

"No, nothing interesting at all," she replied. "Everything looked the same as it always does. I just took the usual walk down the meadow and beyond the woods and then came home."

"I didn't see anything worth seeing." So, you see, that is really the end of her story.

But the other little girl came home and her family said to her:

"What did you see on your walk?"

"Oh," she said, "I had the most beautiful walk. You know I took that beautiful walk down the road and through the patch of woods and along the side of the brook."

"I really do think that is almost my favorite walk."

"Did you see anything interesting?" she was asked.

"Oh, yes," she exclaimed, "I saw any number of interesting things."

"I saw any amount of the most beautiful goldenrod and I saw lots of butterflies—one most beautiful one flying gorgeously about.

"I Saw Lots of Butterflies."

"That was the Monarch butterfly. I love that one."

"Then I heard a thrush sing his sweet songs and I saw some members of the goldfinch family getting their meal."

"I saw a beautiful oriole, too, and any number of the most heavenly bluebirds."

"Down by the brook I saw some pretty ferns, and growing in the pond were two big white water lilies—and four yellow ones."

"Then I saw a robin listening for worms and he brought up some great, long ones."

"I heard a woodpecker pounding on a tree, and then I saw him."

"I heard a Maryland warbler, too."

"I found some ox-eyed daisies and I saw the funniest, dirtiest little sparrow taking a dust bath."

"Then I saw the sun dancing in between the trees in the woods, and oh, it was so pretty!"

"The shadows were so beautiful and the sun shone on some white birches and they were just too lovely."

"Then I passed the farm where the funny old pig lives."

"He was grunting away and he looked at me out of the corner of his eye and waved his little twisted, tall and I am quite sure he winked at me!"

"I stopped and scratched his back with a nice stick I found and he did seem so pleased."

"Oh, I had a beautiful walk."

So you see it is really her story after all. For one child, even though her eyesight and hearing were perfect, could not see how wonderful even the usual sights are, and the other saw them all and had a splendid time as a result.

Eyes are given for use. The second little girl knew that.

Too Strong for a Baby

Bobbie was playing on the lawn with his little brother, Harold. His mother, looking through the window, saw him give Harold a hard push and said: "Don't be so rough with your brother, Bobbie! Remember he is only a baby."

"If you had seen the sock he gave me in the eye," Bobbie said, "you wouldn't call him a baby."

Great Personages of the Bible

By REV. LEONARD A. BARRETT

Mary

THE home life of Mary, Martha, and Lazarus was ideal. A remarkable bond of affection knit their hearts together. Each lived and worked for the happiness and comfort of the other. The true spirit of "home" is possible only upon the basis of mutual sharefulness. When that spirit is absent one may possess a beautiful house in which he lives but it is not likely to be a home.

In this wonderful home of the two sisters and their brother, Jesus is entertained. Martha taxes her ingenuity to the utmost in preparing a banquet in honor of their guest. It was Martha's way of expressing her love and loyalty. Mary expressed the same spirit of love and loyalty in a very different way. She sat at the feet of Jesus and talked with him very sympathetically regarding those interests in which Jesus was most concerned. When Martha complained that she had been left alone in her task of preparing the banquet, Jesus reminded her that Mary had chosen the better way of service. This was a commendation of Mary, but not necessarily a rebuke to Martha. The explanation of this incident has been the subject of much controversy. Perhaps one way of arriving at a satisfactory explanation is to understand the different points of view of these two sisters. Martha felt that what Jesus needed most was that which would satisfy the physical, for he doubtless was very tired and hungry. Mary, on the other hand, felt that what Jesus needed most was satisfaction and sympathy for the out-reachings and sufferings of the heart.

At another banquet which occurred later in the career of Mary this same trait of her character is seen. The little home circle had been broken by the death of her brother Lazarus. After his restoration to life, Jesus is again entertained in this same home. The occasion is a celebration of Lazarus' return and an expression of the great gratitude of the two sisters. After the banquet Mary took a box of very precious ointment, which she doubtless purchased out of savings which it took her a long time to accumulate, and anointed the feet of Jesus, and wiped his feet with her hair.

A study of the biography of Mary convinces one that she understood the Master. She knew what he needed most. It is the matter of being understood that eases one's pathway through many a difficult struggle. Much of the pain and heartache of the world comes through misunderstandings. The following poem is significant:

If I knew you and you knew me,
If both of us could plainly see
With an inner sight divine
The meaning of your heart and mine,
I'm sure that we would differ less
And clasp our hands in friendliness,
Our thought would pleasantly agree,
If I knew you and you knew me.

If I knew you and you knew me,
As each one knows his own self, we Could look each other in the face
And see therein a truer grace.
Life has so many hidden woes,
So many thorns for every rose;
The "why" of things our hearts would see.

If I knew you and you knew me,

Easy to Misconstrue

Mrs. Jones' Observations

It was the day of the golf championship, and Jones was starting his first round.

Jones was a good golfer, but on occasions like this he became terribly nervous. Today he was no exception, especially as a large crowd had assembled to watch the players drive off.

Mrs. Jones stood among the spectators, and she was filled with pride as Jones took his stand at the first tee. After a little wobble he swung his club and missed. Dead silence reigned.

Another swing and he missed again. For the third time he tried, but missed again. This time the crowd broke into a burst of laughter.

Jones' wife was furious at their derision.

"It's no laughing matter," she said angrily. "Nobody hates his misses more than my husband!"—London Tit-Bits.

Mythological Hero

Enceladus was a son of Tartarus and Gaea, and was numbered as one of the hundred-handed giants that made war on the gods and tried to scale Olympus. For his impiety, he was overwhelmed by the thunderbolts of Jupiter and buried under Mount Etna, in Sicily. According to tradition, the flames of the volcano are said to proceed from his fiery breath, and whenever he shifts his position under his oppressive load the whole island feels the movement and is shaken to its inmost depths.—Kansas City Star.

Harnessing Fundy

Dexter P. Cooper, the engineer who has worked out the plan for utilizing the tides in the Bay of Fundy for power purposes, is quoted as having said that the project will require the labor of 5,000 men for five years to build the dams and gates and cost about $75,000,000. It will develop at least 500,000 horsepower, it is said, and eventually this can be increased to 700,000.

How many people do you know who, through neglect or overindulgence, have poisoned their systems, thus developing serious stomach, liver or kidney troubles? The first symptoms are headaches, backaches and an all-over tired feeling. Usually people in this condition proceed to load their systems with drugs and patent medicines, which aggravate rather than relieve the situation.

When drugs fail, as they usually do, many of these people come to Mineral Wells and find complete relief in drinking Crazy Water. Nature's certain remedy for stomach, liver and kidney disorders.

If you are run down, but unable to come to Mineral Wells, here is an opportunity to obtain the same splendid results without leaving your home.

Saturday, Aug. 28 is second primary election date. A large vote is expected—but not as large as in the first primary. However the Ferguson—Moody battle is still raging and every effort is being made to get out a big vote.

Moody is expected to defeat Ferguson 2 to 1 but Ferguson may not understand the results, and try the "American Party" or some other route. We must concede that he is a fighter, resourceful and a politician—but Moody is riding a winning horse in this race and he knows how to ride, too. And writing on the wall is plain. Ferguson can't understand it.

There are a few things that must be done before the Cross Plains people—until we take favorable sewer system has been favorably passed on and work has begun. The next item on the program is paved streets—then an adequate school building must be constructed and ready for the 192-28 term of school. We are going to have these things and we believe our citizenship realizes it. So let's put over a street paving program at once—then take a rest, and go after the school building.

Mike H. Thomas says "hold your cotton for twenty cents". But Mike, how long must we hold it? Mike also says cotton will sell for 30cents before Feb. well let's hope he knows—but we would not advise our friends to hold their cotton expecting it to go to 30 cents, with the supply now on hand and the estimated production, yet, as we said let's hope it goes to 30 cents.

One writer enumerates many kinds of pests, including the "back seat driver". The wife is singled out as the usual offender. He offers a remedy. Well that might work on his wife, but all wives are not alike. He suggests that when you start out on a drive, first go by the candy shop and buy her a nice box of all-day suckers. Can't fool us. It wouldn't work.

A chicken thief operating near Coleman, took 100 nice pullets recently. The party from whom they were stolen has offered one hundred dollars reward for arrest and conviction of the thief.

Cross Plains poultry raisers, especially those farms most accessible, should be on guard—the thief may visit this section. A chicken thief is a character that should be handled without gloves on—a contemptible piece of humanity, despised by every human. It is bad enough for a boy to swipe a chicken for a "big fry," but when men enter the business in a commercial way, that's much worse. They should be hunted down and dealt with severely.

The Review's subscriptions continue to increase, we are pleased to report. Many oil operators and field men are subscribing, as well as old timers. We appreciate it.

And as soon as we get our linotype going good, we plan to increase our home print pages. And carry more reading matter as well as more advertising. Review advertisers get results—and it naturally follows that we are having a greater demand for advertising space.

Our job business is very gratifying with new customers being added each week—and much of this work formerly went to mail order houses. When you need job printing, if we do not see you, phone us. Thanks.

TO ALL THE FRIENDS AND PATRONS OF THE CROSS PLAINS PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The 1926-27 term of the Cross Plains Public Schools will open September 6th, and every patron and friend of the school is urged to be present at the opening exercise to be held in the school auditorium Monday morning at 9:00 o'clock, September 6th.

It is the desire of the school board and faculty to make this year the best school year that Cross Plains schools have ever had, but this desire cannot be fully realized without the full cooperation and hearty sympathy of the entire community. Therefore we earnestly ask that you give us the encouragement that we so surely need, by being present on this occasion. As individuals you may feel that your presence or absence can neither add to nor detract from the success of the school, but who knows what influence your mere presence might have on some teacher or student. Your influence is what you make it, and your school is what your influence makes it. Are you going to show your child that you are interested in his future enough to come out and publicly show your approval of the task that he is entering upon? If you do not have a child in school are you going to show that same consideration to some boy or girl or the child of a friend.

The public school is an organized institution, but back of that institution is the individual whose intellect and ideals form the basic foundation upon which that institution must rest and function. The ideals of the institution can never be greater than the ideals of the individuals who patronize, support, and operate it. Consequently it is imperative that the patrons, pupils, and teachers thoroughly understand their respective duties, responsibilities, and privileges and after this understanding, then, cooperation is necessary and can be effective.

With many, perhaps we may say, with most parents, there is a ready inclination to render to the instructor of their children cheerful and prompt cooperation in every desirable particular; but it is not so with all. In most communities may be found those perverse disposition which know not what it is to lend aid in any good work. Capricious, captious, and uneasy, they can find nothing to their liking. They view all objects and operations with jaundice eye. With such, the only desirable thing about schools is that they are standing objects about which they may daily vent their bitterness. The children of these parents never hear their teachers eluded to, except it be in language the most derogatory and abusive; consequently they enter the class room not only without a single prepossession in its favor, but with heads full of distorted views and ill-conceived prejudices.

There is another class of parents who are perfectly willing to throw all the responsibility upon the teacher, with little or no interest in the result. They are ready to furnish funds to maintain the school, and to supply all the external school-wants of their children; but beyond this, manifest no interest. In employing a teacher, and sending their children to school, they feel that their entire obligation ceases; and if things go to destruction, it is no concern of theirs and they feel no interest in preventing it. These parents seem to say, by their actions, "We have sent our children to school, and if the teachers do not take care of them, and educate them, it is no concern of ours". It is their indifference that hinders the school work of their children.

Again; there are parents who are sometimes too ready to listen, approvingly, to the complaints of their children, and often censure the teacher without sufficient reason. Parents are often guilty of causing much injury to their children's school work, by manifesting an interest in all the little antipathies which their children may have contracted and by sympathizing with them in all their little wrongs, real or imaginary, to which they have been subjected.

Among all the hindrances, few are as far-reaching as unreasonable attendance. If the children are often absent, they will fall behind their classmates in their studies, and consequently lose much of their interest in them, and perhaps acquire an actual dislike for school and all its exercises. It is a duty the most imperative, on the part of the parents, to train up their sons and daughters to regard the school and its work, for the time being, as paramount to all things else. By being allowed to absent themselves at first by permission of parents, for some inconsiderable purpose or reason, they will soon be tempted to let some favorite amusement draw them from the school-room, and that, too, without the consent or knowledge of their parents—as truants.

Closely related to unreasonable attendance is tardiness. Children who enter the school-room at a late hour, interrupt the order of the school, and interfere with some passing exercise of which, perhaps, they should have had a part. Likewise, children frequently bring notes from parents, requesting their dismissal from school at an early hour; and if all such requests should be complied with, the work of the last hour would be constantly interrupted by those who would thus leave.

Many a failure is due to the lack of encouragement. Parents sometimes neglect to inspire their children with a love of knowledge, as a source of gratification and improvement. Parents should do all they can to cause them to feel the great advantage of education and the necessity of patient application to obtain it. They will thus increase the interest of their children and cause them to regard with pleasure exercises that would, otherwise, appear dull and unimportant. Much of the unhappiness and trouble of life comes from a spirit of selfishness,—a feeling that every thing must yield to one's own desires, regardless of time or circumstances. It is sometimes the case that children are indulged in every real and imaginary want while at home, and when they go to school, they feel sadly injured and abused if they cannot have the same indulgences. Such ones will find trouble and disappointment at every step. Parents may increase the happiness of their children by leading them to feel an interest in the desires and rights of their associates, and, at times to give up their own wishes in order to gratify or oblige their schoolmates. Costly buildings and equipment, and efficiency of system, atmosphere, enthusiasm, and the goal of the goal.

THE NEW SOUTHWESTERN SYSTEM

A union of three great railway systems of the South
THE KANSAS CITY SOUTHERN, the MISSOURI-KANSAS-TEXAS and the ST. LOUIS SOUTHWESTERN RAILWAYS

APPPLICATION has been made to the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to weld the lines of The Kansas City Southern Railway Company, the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad Company and the St. Louis Southwestern Railway Company into a transportation system in conformity with the general plan previously announced. Approval of this application will be a distinct advantage to all interests of the Great Southwest and to the public generally.

The proposed new Southwestern System extends from Kansas City, St. Louis and Memphis, south, gridironing the extensive territory between these cities and the Gulf. Entrance is provided to all the principal cities of the Southwest and to the ports of Houston, Galveston, Texas City and the Sabine District, including Port Arthur, Beaumont, Lake Charles, Orange, Neches and Sabine. At Kansas City, St. Louis and Memphis, it affords connections with the major trunk lines from the east, west and north.

Only by combining could these companies meet effectively the competition of the other consolidated systems in this region, while strength is given by continuing the active interest of men who have long operated the properties. A unified system, specifically adapted to the transportation requirements of the Southwestern territories, can better serve the need of its communities than could several independent and disconnected railways. The operation of these three lines as a transportation system means improved and expedited service.

Because the trade territories tributary to the three lines overlap and supplement each other, opportunity for savings in transportation charges and in the operation of terminals is afforded. Problems of rate regulation may be simplified, freight routes shortened in time and in distance, and the efficient movement of both passengers and freight expedited.

The Southwestern territory, extending roughly from the Mississippi River to the foothills of the Rocky Mountains and from the Gulf of Mexico to St. Louis and Kansas City, is rapidly growing in population and wealth, and in all forms of agricultural, mineral, industrial and commercial activities. This wide-spreading territory, an empire in itself, nearly as large as all of Europe without Russia, needs at least one transportation system whose interests are its own and whose commercial and civic objectives are unreservedly identical. To this end, the bringing together of these three properties has been deemed amply justified, after much thought and study.

The Kansas City Southern-Katy-Cotton Belt combination forms a strictly Southwestern system, keeping within the general limits as defined by the map shown above and putting forth constantly increasing efforts to meet adequately the growing transportation requirements of the Southwest. Lastly, the unified system will be a determining factor in the preservation of the identity of the Southwestern territory as an integral trade area, and in the protection and enlargement of existing channels of trade and commerce.

Many of these advantages you will recognize at a glance. But you will have higher appreciation of their meaning when you know that a plant of 18 acres which with equipment approximated a cost of $10,000,000, was first built and that special machinery had to be designed, to make possible the New Coach your dealer is now showing.

It is all steel, bolted and riveted, and so rigid that squeaks, rattles and distortions, are as unlikely as in a steel building. Doors are so hung that a man may hang on an open door while the car is being driven over rough roads, without springing it out of true.

And it is so designed and constructed as to permit the use in a totally new manner of a high baked enamel, most lustrous and lasting finish.

There has been constant improvement in the chassis from the first Essex shipped. And only by the accumulation of the resources, the information, experience, and the skill that have resulted from the building of 350,000 Essex "Sixes" was it possible to create this car which we ask you to inspect and to drive as the best looking, best value, best Essex ever built.

EL PASO TEXAS CHALLENGES THE STATE TO A CONTEST ON AUGUST 28TH TO SEE IF ANY TOWN IN THE STATE CAN VOTE A GREATER MAJORITY FOR DAN MOODY ACCORDING TO POPULATION THAN THEY CAN LET'S TAKE THEM ON

WE have all had the opportunity to see the Fergusons in their acts since the first primary; how they have kept their promise to resign and many other things; how they have cut the school appropriation to $11.50, in order to make good their boast that they would reduce taxes. It does not take a smart person to cut expenses if we do it this way. The Banks in our town could cut expenses if they would close up and let off all their help. But really do you think this would help their business.

Mr. Ferguson is raising sand about a gasoline tax and trying to lead the people who have not given it a thought to think that this tax would be paid by the oil companies when we all know that it is paid by each person as they buy the gasoline to go onto their cars. Do you remember who paid the tax on picture show tickets and cold drinks, etc., until this tax was removed. So it is with this tax.

The Fergusons are also hollowing about the klan. Everyone knows what Dan Moody has done with this kind of things when they have come up. He sent five men to the penitentiary for flogging a man in Williamson County—and Ferguson pardoned one out right away—said he was innocent, put his judgment up against the twelve men, the court, attorneys and citizens of that county, so he can't get away with that.

Mrs. Ferguson promised when she was running two years ago that she would not be a candidate any more but she is. She promised that she would resign if Moody lead her but she has not, so why try them further? We have given them a fair trial it seems.

Ferguson says they have put the penitentiary on paying basis. It now owes more than it did at the time they went into office, according to the treasurer's financial statement. The treasurer borrowed the money, paid the bills, but they now owe the bank the money, so where is the difference in owing bills one way or another? So they can't poke that down the people's throat.

It has been a custom from time immemorial that democratic meetings of all kinds when it came to a show-down that one side saw they were in the minority they would withdraw their side and join and make it unanimous. So we have had an opportunity to see how the majority of the people in the first primary were against Fergusonism, now let's make it unanimous for Dan Moody on August 28th, don't stay at home and say "well I will not vote I guess." Go out and vote; you will feel better when you do this.

Did you ever do a good thing in your life that you were not glad for having done it?

Let's take El Paso's challenge and vote more votes for Dan Moody according to our population than they do, and thereby show to the world that we stand four square for honesty in government, and against waste of tax money, rewarding political friends, against the governor domineering all the state offices,

The letting of highway contracts without requiring a bond at prices which are held by the courts to be unconceivable, against a woman holding office for her husband to run and who can not be held responsible for the acts done because he has taken no oath, is not in reality the governor, although he is the ruling power in the governor's office.

Let's elect one who has proven himself worthy of this high office who realizes that the office is one of public right and a desire to render a service to his state; who right and a desire to render a service to his state; who has fought graft in the state since the people elected him to serve them as their Attorney General and for a time did it almost single handed as the Fergusons had their bluff in so strong that there was not many who dared cross them in anything which they desired to do, but Dan Moody knowing that he was right and believing that right would win in the end went forward without fear or favor and did his duty as he saw it and the people are going to show him Saturday the 28th, that his works shall be rewarded.

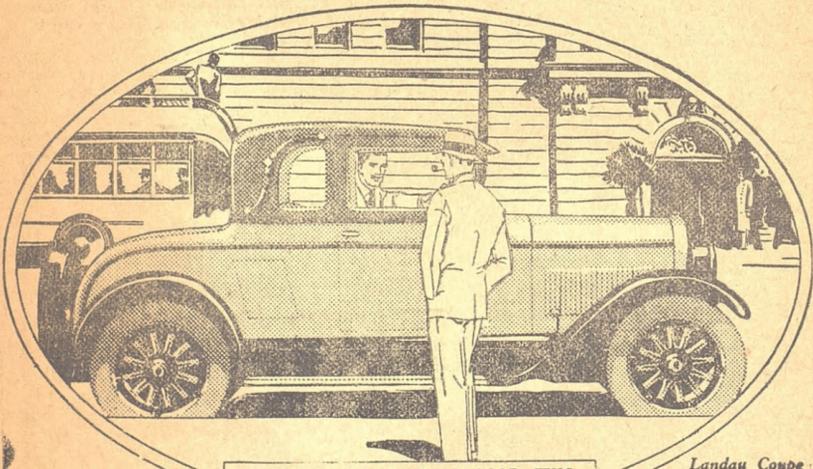

He who has a true courage, unshakeable bravery, undisturbed tranquility, who is the champion of right, knows where cometh his strength, like the apostle, he says I know in whom I have believed and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day. He knows that his courage comes from the inexhaustible source above yielded to us through prayer and service.

When the righteous is backed by obedience, when loing kindness impels and wisdom directs, success is sure. It is practically impossible to defeat one who has a righteous cause and a determined and persistent will to triumph.

Again we say let's get out and vote for Dan Moody for governor of Texas, the greatest state in the union, and all eyes are on us to see how great a majority we will give Mr. Moody in the name of honesty, uprightness and clean government.

Again we say let's beat El Paso in votes for Moody according to our voting population.

HUSBAND DID THE WASHING

His Wife Confined to Her Bed by Ill Health

Because of his wife's frequent ill health, Mr. J. F. Gage was obliged to do the washing and cooking for the family.

From Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I'll try it," she decided. Her husband brought home a bottle and only a few days after she had begun to take it she felt well enough to be up around the house. Gradually her general health improved until she is now able to do her own work.

In a letter which Mrs. Gage recently wrote, she said, "I have taken twelve bottles and feel like a new woman." She has told many women about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and one of her friends is now taking it. Her address is Mrs. J. F. Gage, Route 5, Brownwood, Texas.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been taken by women for more than half a century with very satisfactory results.

MOSQUITO FOUND TO BE AID TO DOCTOR

British Experts Use It in Treating Paralysis.

London—"Can you lend us some mosquitoes—about 80? We've got a patient we want bitten."

Startling as this query sounds, it is the sort of thing the British ministry of health is getting used to as a result of the latest researches at the Royal Society of Tropical Medicine and Hygiene, London, for the venemous little insect pest has its uses in the sacred cause of healing.

The mosquito in fact is, in certain cases, a "doctor," and he has been able to do, in cases of general paralysis and mental diseases, what human doctors have been unable to accomplish alone. So that the patient need not feel too grateful to the little pest, it must be said at once that "healing" is no part of the mosquito's intentions, for when he inserts his needle-like proboscis in the flesh of the patient selected for biting-treatment, he fondly imagines he is pursuing his old trade of "infecting." And this, in a way, he is doing—although his energies are now being directed by modern science.

Produces Malaria.

It has been found excellent results have been obtained in otherwise "incurable" mental and general paralysis cases where the patient has become infected with malaria, for when the malaria germs have been conquered recovery from paralysis follows in the majority of cases. "Doctor Mosquito" is, therefore, being called in to supply the malaria. The ordinary doctors will do the rest.

At the Horton Mental hospital at Epsom Surrey there is a "mosquito room," where Prof. P. G. Shute, gold medalist of the College of Pestology, rears, with tender care, from 300 to 500 fine healthy mosquitoes, all guaranteed to bite ferociously, and able to infect you with any disease desired. Details of the case, for which a "loan" of good biting mosquitoes is required, are sent to Professor Shute, and he proceeds to prepare his "pets" for the ordeal.

In normal paralysis cases, about 80 will do, though sometimes 200 are required. Shute sees his "pets" get a good feed from a person suffering from malaria (this may be a bit painful for the malaria patient, but it helps to remove the virus, so is curative even in his case). When Shute is satisfied his mosquitoes have become thoroughly infected with malaria he sends them to the institution which has asked for them.

Feed on the Patient.

On arrival they are allowed to enjoy themselves biting a person suffering from paralysis, though the bites are carefully regulated by the doctors in charge of the case. One day, perhaps 80 mosquitoes are loosed on the patient, the next day perhaps only 60. On the fourth or fifth day he may only have to entertain 30 or 40.

When the patient is first bitten his temperature rises as high as 105 degrees Fahrenheit, and it is allowed to remain at that until ten readings have been taken. Quinine is then administered, the malaria is treated normally, and when it disappears the symptoms of paralysis disappear with it. In the majority of cases, at any rate.

Lieut. Col. S. P. James, advisor to the ministry of health on tropical diseases, declares that as a result of giving malaria to patients suffering from general paralysis, a new field has been found for research into the terrors of malaria in the tropics.

Paris Now Wearing Jewelry of Rubber

Paris.—Rubber jewelry is the abstraction of the moment. Designed for wear at the beaches, its popularity has caused it to appear even on the boulevards in the form of multi-colored bracelets. For beach wear imitated pearls of rubber composition or wood, bracelets and anklets are chosen.

Buttonhole bouquets of rubber for wear with beach costumes are also in high favor.

Earrings are a conspicuous part of the Parisian woman's scheme of self-decoration this summer. The long pendants which disappeared for a time are back in more exaggerated form than ever. Long drops of chased crystal, jade or coral, nearly touching the shoulders, are much seen at the race courses where Paris' smartest women congregate.

Jet earrings the size of bracelets were worn recently at Auteuil. Their size and weight made suspension in the ears impossible.

ST. THOMAS FREED FROM ALL CRIME

Police Commissioner Applied New York Methods.

New York.—The only crime to be found today on St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, is the salary paid to the police commissioner. At least when he arrived here on the Colombian liner Haiti, he said "it was a crime to take the money."

The commissioner of police for St. Thomas is M. J. Nolan, former captain in the New York police department, in charge of the West Thirtieth street station. New York methods have put the damper on St. Thomas' intentions to support home industries and have its own little crime wave.

"There isn't a crook of any kind in St. Thomas," Commissioner Nolan said upon his arrival. "It has become so quiet down there that I'm ashamed to go around and collect my salary."

In order not to feel guilty of a holdup, Commissioner Nolan said he waits for them to send his salary to him.

On a visit to the Virgin Islands six years ago to see his son, Dr. Roger Nolan of St. Croix, he told St. Thomas officials of New York's methods of cleaning up the underworld. At the time pickpockets, thieves and holdup men had an open season all year round. The officials extended an invitation to Captain Nolan to apply these methods.

He came, he saw, he established a dead-line, bought new uniforms for the 40 members of the police force and in two weeks the crime wave disappeared like a marcel in hot weather.

The only trouble left to the police, Commissioner Nolan said, "is that neither my force nor I have anything to do."

Crop Area Falls Off as Population Gains

Washington.—For the first time in history there has been a decrease in the crop area of the United States.

Despite a marked increase in population, there was a reduction in the last five years of 19,000,000 acres in the area of harvested crops, the Department of Agriculture has disclosed in an analysis of the agricultural census statistics. Notwithstanding the decrease, the crop area still is sufficient, in the opinion of department experts, to maintain a large volume of agricultural exports.

The 19,000,000 acres have reverted to pasture or have been allowed to lie idle, the cause being attributed chiefly to the agricultural depression of the last five years.

Largely as a result of the war-time prices, about 40,000,000 acres of pasture land were plowed up and put into crops between 1909 and 1919, and about 5,000,000 acres of forest land cleared for crops. Nearly half of this total, experts believe, was used to meet the increased European demand for foodstuffs. Owing to the extraordinary demands of the war period, the acreage of crop land in 1919 was nearly ten years ahead of what had been the previous rate of expansion relative to increase of population.

Plotted Path of the Hurricane by Radio

Washington.—The use of the radio compass in plotting the course of a storm has been revealed by an experiment made during the recent hurricane which swept the West Indies and the coast of Florida, according to a statement from the Navy department.

Lieut. E. H. Kincaid, navigator of the navy transport, Kittery, plotted the hurricane by taking bearings while the ship was on the way from Port Au Prince, Haiti, to St. Thomas, Virgin Islands. He took the bearings of the point of heaviest static and from this data computed the center of the sweeping storm. Checking this with later weather reports, he found he had accurately plotted the path of the hurricane.

SEARCH OF FOURTEEN YEARS BRINGS GOLD

Prospector Stakes Out the Stanislaus River Bed.

Oakland, Calif.—Lee Silver and Bert Warrington hold the secret. Lee is a hard-bitten prospector who wandered around 14 years before he could get anyone to listen to his story. Old legends clustered about him. The tale of the Mexicans' mine was ascribed to him. Chinese cooks in the gold country who had walked with Bret Harte and fed Mark Twain shook their ancient heads in honorable disdain.

Bert Warrington of this city took a chance. Craftily, cannily, he and Silver made their survey. Now the whole region of Brightman's flats bristles with their claim stakes. They believe there is gold in the Stanislaus river gravel. They have posted their notices and filed their papers. Even now the shafts are being sunk that will tell them if their dreams are to come true.

How He Discovered It.

Silver says it all started 14 years ago. He was wandering around in the High Sierra of Tuolumne county when there came a call for help from his brother in San Jose. Silver and his partner started out immediately.

Down the Stanislaus river they went, along the trail that leads over Sonora pass, to Brightman's flats, 50 miles east of Sonora. Here they camped for the night. While the partner was saddling the pack mules in the morning Silver, in true prospector fashion, panned a little gravel in the river bed. Tiny and scattered but unmistakable was the gleam of gold. Silver's great dream was born.

He pushed on to San Jose, helped his brother and started back for the gold country. To his dismay, there was none to believe him. He knew that gold could be wrested from that river bed, but the experts smiled.

Engineer Takes a Chance.

Warrington, a civil engineer with some knowledge of mining, finally decided to risk it. Painfully, almost inch by inch, they went over the territory, digging and panning. They prospected the side streams, Eagle creek, Cow creek, Niagara creek, and others, but found no gold. It existed only in the main valley of the Stanislaus. After months of labor, they filed their claims in Sonora.

Graybeards of the gold country link their venture with the legend of the Mexicans' mine. The story comes down from the days when the jumping frog of Calaveras was still a gay young blade and had never tasted buckshot in his life.

Two lowly Mexican sheep herders wandered into Sonora one morning with nuggets valued at $15,000. People tried to vain to solve the mystery of where they had discovered them.

French Women Sail Boat 1,700 Miles

Paris.—Two noted French archeologists, both women, have just published a book on a remarkable voyage they have made. Alone on board a little 24-foot sailing boat, the Perlette, of the same type as that in which their fellow-countryman, Alain Gerbault, crossed the Atlantic, Martha Ouie and Herminie de Soussure have covered some 1,700 miles in the Aegean sea.

The two women started from Piraeus in Greece, and visited Asia Minor, doing all the work themselves, in part as on the high seas.

Mlle. Ouie has just obtained her degree at the Sorbonne and is well known for her excavation work in Crete, where she has discovered the ancient city of Mailla, which had disappeared. Her comrade, Mlle. De Soussure, is also a noted archeologist, who has worked in Greece.

Postmaster General Out to "Teach" Addressing

Washington.—Lack of street and number addresses on letters has become such a drag on the postal service that Assistant Postmaster General Bartlett has begun a general campaign to educate the business public in the necessity of giving complete addresses on all letters. Postmasters have been requested to take up the subject with advertisers in their cities with a view to having a complete address appear in all advertisements in newspapers and magazines.

$200 in Will for Cat; Relatives Get Rest

New York.—"I give and bequeath unto the New York Women's League for Animals $200 for the sole purpose of taking care of my cat, Bunny," read a provision in the will filed for probate in the Surrogate's court of Miss Cecelia Romain Stinson, who died in Belleaire, L. I.

Miss Stinson, whose estate is estimated to be worth more than $11,000, made bequests to the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, the Bide-A-Wee Home for Poor Cats and Animals, and an additional legacy of $500 for the Women's League for Animals. Caroline Virginia Moyle, "daughter of my dear friend Seth Moyle," receives $1,000. The residue is divided among relatives.

It is estimated that there are still in the three prairie provinces some 30,000,000 acres of cultivable land, within 15 miles of existing railways, which is as yet unsettled. THE TEN COMMANDMENTS—DUTIES TO MAN

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:12-21.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Commandments About Men.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How to Serve Men.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Loving and Helping Others.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Ideal Human Relationships.

I. The Fifth Commandment (v. 12).

1. How this commandment may be broken.

(1) By showing disrespect to parents. Disrespect is shown to parents—

(a) By speaking of them as "the old man" and "the old woman."

(b) By being ashamed to be seen in their company.

(2) By disobedience.

(3) By not supporting them in their old age.

2. Promises annexed to this commandment.

(1) "That it may be well with thee" (Eph. 6:3).

(2) That thou mayest live long upon the earth.

II. The Sixth Commandment (v. 13).

This is a bulwark thrown around human life. Man was created in God's image. Every attempt to take human life is a thrust at God. This commandment may be broken:

1. By sinful anger (Matt. 5:22).

2. By hatred (I Jno. 3:15).

3. By immoderate recreation.

4. By employers having unsafe surroundings, thereby causing the death of their employees.

5. By sending children to toil in shops and factories before maturity.

6. By suicide.

7. By infanticide.

8. By wars.

III. The Seventh Commandment (v. 14).

This is a bulwark thrown around the home. This commandment may be broken:

1. By unclean thoughts, affections, purposes and imaginations (Matt. 5:27, 28; 15:19).

2. By unchaste conversation.

3. By wanton looks (Isa. 3:16; II Peter 2:14).

4. By immodest apparel.

5. By actual adultery.

6. By divorce.

IV. The Eighth Commandment (v. 15).

This commandment strikes at the sin of theft. This commandment may be broken:

1. By taking that which actually belongs to another.

2. By false weights and measures.

3. By extortion.

4. By employers defrauding employees and the employee failing to do honest work or put in full time.

5. By borrowing and not returning.

6. By going into debt, knowing that payment is impossible.

7. By usury.

8. By graft.

9. By lying advertisements.

10. By making assignments to escape payment of debts.

11. By strong nations oppressing the weaker ones.

V. The Ninth Commandment (v. 16).

The sin aimed at by this command is a most deadly one—that of lying. This commandment may be broken:

1. By actual open lying.

2. By perjury—swearing to falsehoods by the name of God.

3. By slander.

4. By tale-bearing (Lev. 19:16). This is commonly done by repeating a report without investigating its truthfulness.

5. By creating a false impression (Ex. 23:1).

6. By a breach of promise.

7. By withholding the truth.

8. By exaggeration.

9. By flattery.

10. By recommending a man for a position of honor and trust who is unfitted for it.

VI. The Tenth Commandment (v. 17).

This commandment strikes at the desire for that which is unlawful for one to have. The sin does not lie in the desire to possess things, but in the desire to possess that which belongs to another. It is not wrong to have lands and personal property which one may have acquired honestly, but it is wrong to have the lands which belong to another. It is right for a man to have a wife, but it is sinful to have another's wife. This commandment goes back of all the rest. It deals not only with the open violation, but with the inner desires and motives. It strikes at the very purposes of the heart.

CHIC STYLES FOR SCHOOL; EARLY FALL MILLINERY

RIGHT in the midst of the long vacation mother wakes up on some placid summer morning with something weighing on her mind. It is the fact that Marguerite, Frances, Mary and the rest must soon be answering the roll call at school and thereby hangs a tale of new clothes for fast growing youngsters. Where-withal shall they be clothed for the fall season? Is there anything new in fabrics that is worth considering? If not, which of the old reliables is favored? It goes without saying that school frocks must be simple—but how shall they be varied and what ered in the list. High, snug collars and full sleeves with varied treatments of the shoulder line are liked for girls up to their middle teens.

In August fashion sounds the retreat of summer millinery from shops and departments to make way for between-seasons and fall hats. These begin to arrive in late July and soon replace their more fragile sisters, however lovely they are, with sturdier stuff. This year the advance guard of fall headwear was made up of light-colored felt and velours hats, many of them having medium wide brims and high dented crowns. They

Beginning with wool fabrics, jersey seems to stand at the head of a dependable class which includes twills, wool crepes and various novelty weaves for dresses. In silks, crepe de chine, canton crepe and other wash silks are as practical as wool or cotton for school frocks, while the smaller fry will still wear everyday clothes of sturdy cotton weaves. In wool and silk materials the favored colors are channel red, navy blue, peony, deep green, brighter reds and some black, but beige, rose, brown and various

These were soon followed by felt blocked shapes and draped hats of antelope and foudard felts in darker colors. Hats of moire, satin, ribbon, velvet and combinations of fabrics are popular items for fall wear.

As for style points, bloused waistlines, small collars, Jabots, bolero jackets, smocking and embroidery (in cross-stitch or other simple effects) are approved and recurrent in the new displays. Leather belts with metallic buckles, metallic buttons and little buckles placed at the collar, all contribute decorative touches.

GET YOURSELF A BRAND NEW LIVER

How Dodson's Liver Tone Makes You Feel the Old Liver Is Born Again.

Just off the slant of Old Piedmont where it rolls away into the foot-hills of South Georgia Bud Evans makes a good stand of cotton. A year ago he was too sick to even follow a plow. His right side seemed hard, felt as if his liver had turned to stone; belched gas all the time; couldn't hold up his head for the pain; calomel just turned him inside out. You couldn't imagine anyone sicker than Bud Evans. It just happened that an egg buyer dropped in on him one day and says: "What you need, Bud, is a dose of Dodson's Liver Tone—your liver is baked and full up so it doesn't work." And so Bud got a bottle at the town drug store for a few cents. The very first night it loosened up so much sour bile and fermenting food that the swelling went down, his whole system righted itself and he was a new man entirely before noon.

There is no question but that Dodson's Liver Tone will do more for bilious people than anything else ever known. It works easily and smoothly, without gripe or distress, and cleans out all the sour bile and sickening stuff that gives you headache, nausea, vomiting, bilious fever and all the other distresses due to obstinate constipation.

Get one bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, and if it doesn't make you feel like you had traded your old, worn-out liver for a new one full of pep, go to the druggist and he will refund the price.

Avocado, chayote, dasheen, pebbaye and telfaeria are words that mean nothing to most of the people in the United States, says the Hudson Star. They are, however, worth knowing about and may become familiar ones in the market-place. They are new fruits and vegetables that have been introduced into the United States by a group of agricultural explorers employed by the government to search the world over for new farm and garden products for America. Among other advantages possessed by the United States is the remarkable one that somewhere within its borders are conditions of climate and soil in which any plant which grows anywhere in the world may be grown. In the last twenty-five years they (the agricultural explorers) have introduced into the United States more than 51,000 new grains, fruits, forage crops, vegetables and other plants.

When you have rooms for rent, please call the Review office. This service is free. We are having an average of 3 or 4 inquiries each day, and we regret to turn them away, without some clue to a room or house. There are more people wanting rooms and rent houses here now than for many months. Why not build a house to rent? But please call us when you have vacant rooms.

Don't forget to watch for our Magazine Section next week. A number of selected articles will appear in this section of the paper.

When you have a family reunion or any special event at your home, please report it to the Review.

School starts a week from Monday. Keep this in mind and be prepared. This year is going to go down in history as the best school term recorded here—if the trustees, faculty, pupils and parents will co-operate to that end. Let's do it!

Mayor Gwin, with other leading citizens with some 30 members of the senior and junior bands, are in Cisco, to see, hear and boost for Moody. Unfortunately, Aubry Dodson, one of Moody's most enthusiastic supporters was called to West Texas on business, and was not able to attend. Aubry is becoming strong on politics and the first thing we know he will be running for some state office. Well, when he does, we'll vote for him, and many Ferguson supporters would to that but we are just passing our flowers now. He's a live wire—known and appreciated by all who come this way.

W. M. McElroy of Waxachie, was in town Thursday, driving a Royal-Mail Chevrolet fifteen years old, bought in 1911. It still runs good and is in regular use. Who can beat that for length of service. If we get that much out of our Ford, we will be satisfied, yes.

Kyanize

And Now the Chair!

I'VE just finished the bed with KYANIZE CELOID FINISH, the beautiful tinting enamel. Celoid gives that satiny tinted effect that is now so popular in furniture, walls and woodwork. Flows smoothly and easily from the brush without leaving ridges or laps and dries overnight. And I've decorated it with KYANIZE Decals, those lovely "minute decorations." And now the chair! I'm going to tint it to match the bed.

A new book, "The Charm of Painted Things", tells how you, too, can tint things with this new and popular medium-gloss enamel. Ask for a copy.
